National Council Act of Congress

Intended to Prepare United States for Great War.

The Council of National Defense, created by an act of the United States Congress, in August, 1916, was intended for the purpose of carrying out the recommendations of the Naval Consulting Board which had, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, made a study of the important scientific, technical and engineering problems as developed by the world wars. President Woodrow Wilson expressed his idea of the Council of National Defense in the following language:

"The Council of National Defense has been created because Congress has realized that the country is best prepared for war when thoroughly prepared for peace. From an economic point of view there is very little difference between the machinery required for economical efficiency and that required for military purposes. The Council is organized for the creation of relations which will render possible in time of need the immediate concentration and utilization of the resources of the Nation."

Congress provided that the Council should consist of the following members: Secretary of War, Newton Baker; Secretary of the Navy, Josephus Daniels; Secretary of Agriculture, David P. Houston; Secretary of the Interior, Franklin Lane; Secretary of Commerce, William Redfield; and Secretary of Labor, William B. Wilson; plus an advisory commission of seven members to be named by the president, "who must have special knowledge of some industry, public utility or the development of some natural resource or be otherwise especially qualified."

CIVILIAN MEMBERS OF COUNCIL.

President Wilson, accordingly, named the following:

Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, chairman of the Committee on Communication and Transportation.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, chairman of the Committee on Labor.

Howard E. Coffin, Vice-president of the Hudson Motor Company, chairman of the Committee on Munitions and Manufactures.

Julius Rosenwald, President Sears, Roebuck and Co., chairman of the Committee on Supplies.

Bernard M. Baruch, an expert in commerce and finance, chairman of the Committee on Raw Materials.

Dr. Franklin Martin, representing the medical fraternity, chairman of the Committee on Medicine and Sanitation.

Dr. Hollis Godfrey, President of Drexel Institute, chairman of the Committee on Science, Research and Engineering.

Woman Fills Gap

The Reflector lost its efficient linotype operator, Russell Wickizer, brother of the editor, when Company I was called last Sunday. Russell joined Company I a month or more ago and since that time Miss Grace Rhoads has been learning to operate the machine. In these few weeks she has become quite efficient and is now able to handle all the linotype composition for the Reflector. Miss Grace is probably the first girl in the county to fill one of the vacancies caused by these boys who were called to serve their country's colors.—The Argos, Ind., Reflector.

Indiana Follows Lead of Nation

Governor Goodrich Had Begun Work Before Call Came.

Pursuant to the request of the Council of National Defense, that each of the several states organize a Council of Defense, a meeting was held in the office of the Hon. James P. Goodrich, governor of Indiana, on May 19th, 1917. Here an organization was effected by the election of Will H. Hays as chairman and Frank Wampler, of Indianapolis, secretary.

A published account of the initial meeting says: "It was found that many of the steps urged on the states by the war department already had been taken by the state, under the leadership of Governor Goodrich."

Governor Goodrich's commission to the council was that it "co-operate with the federal government in all matters relating to preparedness and the conduct of the war, and Indiana's participation in the struggle."

Word came from the war department at Washington that "these state councils of defense are urged to co-operate with each other and the federal government in organizing and directing the resources of the state in men and materials, to make them effective for national use, and are asked to recommend changes in state laws which may become expedient."

"While we can make no forecast as to the length of the war, yet every consideration of intelligence and prudence directs us to enter it as though it were going to be long, and to equip ourselves to do our task from the very beginning in the largest and most effective way; that the means of mobilization of the energy and strength of the country in an industrial as well as a military way and to preserve as far as possible the country from unnecessary dislocation of its industrial, commercial, agricultural and community life; that the maximum of co-operation is the essential measure of the efficiency of the whole matter."

PURPOSE OF THE COUNCIL.

The council epitomized its purpose as follows: To promote a patriotic spirit in the people. To educate the public as to the magnitude of the war task.

To aid in recruiting for the army and navy, including conscription and exemption.

To maintain standards of living for labor, including conservation of the health and welfare of all workers.

To maintain a clearing house for labor.

To encourage increased production of food crops, fuel, etc.

To assist in the floatation of Liberty bonds; encourage the Red Cross.

To conserve food and natural resources by properly directing their use and seeking to eliminate waste.

To co-operate all civic and social activities looking to the greatest possible human efficiency.

On account of the press of business obligations Frank Wampler was relieved from the duties of the secretaryship of the council, at his request, May 27. On the same date the council opened headquarters in room 83 State house, where it has since held forth. Frank C. Dailey accepted the office of secretary May 29th and the work of organizing the state proceeded directly to the counties.

Old Shoes Sent to Needy in Europe

Mt. Vernon—

Job Oliver made an appeal to our citizens for old shoes to be sent to the poor in France and Belgium, millions of whom are without footwear.

Mr. Oliver had no trouble in getting the Boy Scouts of Mt. Vernon interested in this benevolent work, and in a few hours they gathered up 167 pairs, and from this number but seventy-two needed repairing. The Camp Fire Girls were next called upon to solicit funds to pay for the repairing and in a short time they returned with $72.10—more money than was needed. As soon as these shoes are repaired they will at once be shipped to the New York branch who will forward them to their destination.

The Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls have but recently been organized in this city, but from the manner in which they tackled their first job is conclusive evidence that one and all are hustlers and will do their full share in this great world war.

Let it be borne on the flag under which we rally in every exigency, that we have one Country, one Constitution, one Destiny—Webster.

Food Production is Being Stimulated

More Than $75,000 Has Been Spent to Secure Greater Crops.

More than $75,000 has been spent by the Indiana Food Production and Conservation committee in an effort to stimulate production and secure the greatest possible benefit therefrom to the community. It is in this feature of war preparedness work that Indiana is making a special effort which promises splendid returns not only for the purposes of the war, but for all time to come.

The members of the Food Production and Conservation Committee are:

Prof. G. I. Christie, Director, Lafayette.
W. W. Bonner, Secretary, Greensburg.
Hon. Ralph W. Moss, Chairman, Centerpoint.
W. A. Guthrie, Lemcke Bldg., Indianapolis.
C. B. Riley, Board of Trade, Indianapolis.
Ralph Polk, Greenwood.
F. J. Heacock, Salem.
W. J. Hogan, Indianapolis.
Will S. Robbins, Horace.
L. H. Wright, Irvington.
H. E. Barnard, Indianapolis.
Warren T. McCray, Kentland.
Samuel Schlosser, Plymouth.

The personnel of the various sub-committees is as follows:

Dairy Committee—

Samuel Schlosser, Plymouth.
John Rish, Vincennes.
P. H. Crane, Lebanon.
C. R. George, Lafayette.
R. E. Caldwell, Lafayette.

Silo Committee—

DAIRY CAMPAIGN.

The object of the dairy campaign in Indiana was to increase the dairy production and to encourage an increased consumption of dairy products. A report and program was submitted to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation on May 3, 1917, by a committee representing the Indiana State Dairy Association, Indiana Manufacturers of Dairy Products and Purdue University. A copy of this report was published by the university.

In order to stimulate the greater production in dairy products it is proposed to use all available men now employed in the dairy department at Purdue, together with extension forces engaged by private allied industries, county agents and various county agricultural organizations. Professor R. E. Caldwell has been placed in immediate charge of the campaign and through him specific duties are being assigned each month to the various agencies. In forty-four counties of Indiana there are county agents to carry on this work and in the other counties the work is carried on through agricultural organizations and prominent farmers.

As a result of the work lecture tours have been conducted in practically all of the dairy counties. Many excellent posters have been put up in prominent places in rural districts and monthly informational bulletins are being mailed out to some 73,000 dairymen of the State. In a few communities pure-bred dairy cattle have been secured and introduced through the county agent in an effort to increase the character of the breeding stock.

SILO CAMPAIGN.

Plans for a silo campaign were presented to the food committee by the sub-committee on silos. The silos of the State are only sufficient to meet the needs of 10 per cent. of the farmers. An increase of 10,000 silos in 1917, or one-third the number in the State, is hoped for. The campaign was put in charge of Maurice Douglas, Flat Rock, Ind. An attractive poster has been mailed out to 10,000 individuals and the food committee, in conjunction with Purdue, have issued special bulletins on "Silo and the Sheep Man," "Silo and the Beef Cattle Breeder," "Silo and the Cattle Feeder" and "Silo for the General Farmer." In addition to these publications and publicity through the press a silo campaign has either been conducted or will be conducted in each county in the State.

WHEAT CAMPAIGN.

In a similar way to the other campaign a special report was prepared by the wheat committee on increasing wheat production. The wheat crop in Indiana for 1917 is something over 2,000,000 acres. In order for Indiana to do her part in supplying this much-needed cereal close to 3,000,000 acres must be seeded this fall. This means a larger demand than ever before will be made for seed this fall. The selection of wheat fields was accomplished through the co-operation of the grain dealers, millers, agricultural organizations with the county agents and representatives of the State Food Committee. From ten to forty fields have been selected for seed in each county.

Farmers have agreed to sell their wheat to farmers direct or arrange for its sale through local organizations. It is estimated that more than 1,000,000 bushels of high-class seed wheat has been located. The necessity of buying fall fertilizers early in carload lots has been urged upon each community.

MARKETING AND DISTRIBUTION.

At a meeting of the food committee, July 25, an outline for a marketing and distribution campaign was presented through the horticultural interests of the State and accepted by the food committee. The work will be carried on under the direction of the Indiana Food Production and Conservation Committee, co-operating with the Indiana Horticultural Society. The first step of the work will be to bring the producer and consumer into closer union. Mr. Anderson of the horticultural department of Purdue has been placed in immediate charge of the work. The co-operation of all the agricultural organizations of the State, garden organizations and vocational instructors will be necessary in order to carry the program to success.

A municipal market has been established at Lafayette with considerable success. The producers on certain days of the week bring their products in to the central point. Similar markets are being established in a number of other cities of the State.

CONSERVATION COMMITTEE.

An active campaign for food conservation is being waged. There is a big surplus of vegetables and fruits. In order that these may be saved for winter every encouragement must be given to the women in order that they will can or dry the surplus or try to save it in some other way.

A central committee on food conservation was organized with Mrs. Carl G. Fisher chairman. Canning and drying demonstrations are being given twice each day. Arrangements are about completed for demonstrations in the kitchens and dining rooms of a number of churches.

Secretary Houston of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has offered additional help to the State food committee and a state-wide campaign is under way.

To assist in the work the extension department of Purdue University has published an extension bulletin on "Home Canning by the Cold Pack Process," "Home Drying of Vegetables and Fruits" and "Appetizing Dishes Made from Corn." A food conservation school for women was held at Purdue, July 9 to 14.

CORN PRODUCTION.

Immediately following the appointment of the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation it was determined to do everything possible to forward the planting of a large area of corn in Indiana. It was also the aim of the committee to secure the best possible seed. The implement dealers of the State gave special demonstrations in every hardware store and implement shop throughout Indiana on the adjusting of a planter and grading of corn in order that a first-class stand might be secured. This work did much to interest farmers in implements and high-class machinery. There was also a need of men to go into various communities of the State, call the people in and present to them the need for grain and attention in selecting and testing seed corn.

During the period of April 19 to April 30 forty-four extra men were sent into corn-growing counties not having county agents to assist the local organizations in seed corn testing and other emergency food production work. Of these men forty were selected from the Senior class in agriculture from the university and four were from the extension and station staffs. These men were able to induce farmers during their stay in these counties to test the seed for 114,926 acres of corn. This work was carried on under the direction of the local emergency food committees. Demonstrations and meetings were held throughout the county in each instance. Statistics show that the average stand in fields planted with untested seed is 70 per cent., while fields planted with tested seed averaged from 85 to 90 per cent. Fifteen per cent. increase in the yield of fields planted with tested seed can be safely expected. A safe estimate would show an increase due to the efforts of these men in the several counties of 620,600 bushels of corn. In addition to the work with corn through the efforts of these men the acreage of potatoes was increased by 1,104 acres, and soy beans 132 acres. Four thousand six hundred acres of oats were sown with treated seed on suggestion of these men. Estimating the amount of smut in untreated fields at 10 per cent., the resultant increase in the yield of this crop was 16,400 bushels.

The emergency food production work speeded up the work of county agents rather than checked it. County agents were this spring responsible for the testing of sufficient seed corn to plant 193,674 acres. Estimating the increase in yield at 15 per cent. above, the resultant increase would be 1,045,889 bushels. County agents were responsible for the treating for disease of sufficient seed potatoes to plant 7,046 acres. The acreage of soy beans was increased through county agents' efforts by 12,476 acres. County agents were responsible for the treatment for smut of sufficient seed oats to sow 163,295 acres. A low estimate of the increase in yield due to this treatment would place it at 653,180 bushels.

Following the floods early in June, which destroyed many thousands of acres of the newly planted corn crop, five special agents were sent from the extension department to assist the local authorities in replanting the devastated areas. Sources of corn were listed both local and foreign and organization of the communities which enabled the farmers from different flood levels to assist each other and help in locating emergency labor were the chief duties of these men. In counties having county agents this work was carried on through the county agents' offices and the Better Farming Associations. By prompt efficient action most of this area has been replanted with early maturing corn. In Gibson county alone forty thousand acres were replanted.

HOME GARDENS.

At the suggestion of Mr. E. I. Lewis, then of the Indianapolis News, Governor Goodrich called the mayors of all Indiana cities to consider ways and means of encouraging planting of more gardens in Indiana. The result of this conference was that provision was made for the hiring of large numbers of supervisors for directing the campaign in every city and town in the State and planting of thousands of gardens. It is estimated as a result of this campaign Indiana planted more than 200,000 gardens.

The season has been an unusually good one and the product from these gardens has amounted to many thousands of tons of foodstuffs. This has been one direct contribution to the food supply.

The work this year has given people an insight into what can be accomplished and there is no doubt that much more can be done along this line another year.

FARM LABOR.

The campaign for increased production immediately brought to light the question of farm labor. Farmers were willing to increase their acreage of crops, but were in need of assistance.

In order that this movement might be organized the Secretary of Agriculture, U. S. Department, authorized the use of three men in the farm management division operating in this State. These men visited various counties and assisted in the organization of local bureaus. Sixty-five thousand cards were placed in banks, mills, elevators, county agents' offices and other points so that farmers might apply direct to the committee for help. A central office then supplied labor to counties which were deficient. In this way a large amount of assistance was given.

It is hoped now to install a special man who will give his entire time to farm labor and who will assist the counties in organizing to meet the situation, which will grow more acute as men are called for the army.

Copies of a resolution passed by the State Council, asking that seven members be named to constitute county councils of defense, were addressed to the judges of the circuit courts of Indiana. Responses were prompt, for the most part, and the county councils have followed the suggestions of the state council, in furthering their organization by seeking to co-ordinate all local activities through committees, after the style of the state and national organizations.

Substitute for National Guard

Indiana Troops Being Organized Under Authority of Federal Law.

Anticipating the need of state troops when the National Guard units were mustered into the national army, the United States Congress enacted a law providing for the organizing of substitute military companies. This work is progressing satisfactorily in Indiana, although there is evidently lacking in some instances a full knowledge of the members' liability to service.

Following is a report of the Military section of the State Council:

A. The chairman of each county council of defense has been authorized to appoint some one in his county to superintend the organization of local units of the new State militia. The duties of the county organizers of State militia will be for the most part supervisory, the work of organizing being under their direct supervision. Three letters have been sent to the county councils relative to the appointing of a county organizer of State militia, and at the time of writing sixty-one counties have forwarded the names of the parties selected for this work. The men appointed are as follows:

White ..... Wright Hinkle ..... Monon.
Whitley ..... Jas. E. Adams ..... Columbia City.

With sixty-one counties ready to begin active organization and other counties daily sending us the names of parties appointed as county organizers of the State militia, it is reasonable to conclude that all counties will be ready for active work in the near future.

B. A definite plan of organization has been adopted, copy of which is attached hereto. Copies of this plan have been sent to all county organizers appointed along with a letter of explanation and as rapidly as other county organizers are appointed similar information will be placed in their hands.

C. The work of organizing units of State militia has been delayed somewhat in some counties because of a lack of information as to the legal status of the movement. From other counties we have received reports of delay on account of a lack of funds for the work. Upon the whole, however, the work is progressing satisfactorily, a number of counties now being engaged in the actual work of organizing local units. From South Bend comes the report that a movement is well under way to organize a local unit in each ward in South Bend and Mishawaka, and also to organize local units in the various rural communities of St. Joseph county. The work is progressing equally well in other counties and there is no question but that every county in the State will enter into this work enthusiastically just as soon as the legal status of the movement is cleared up.

A PLAN FOR ORGANIZATION OF STATE MILITIA.

I. General Plan—

1. Local units may be organized in any community where the manifested interest seems to justify such an organization.
2. Various local units will be mustered in as regular units of the State militia as soon as qualified according to adopted regulations.

A. Regulations—

1. Strength of fifty enlisted men and three officers.
2. Officers and men must pass a fairly rigid mental and physical examination.
3. Enlistment to be for duration of war and for service within the State only.
4. No financial compensation will be given except in case of active duty, said compensation to not exceed that of national guard members.
5. Best of units mustered into State militia to be equipped as rapidly as possible. Equipped units to be distributed as generally as possible throughout the State.
6. After being mustered in, State militia units must drill at least once each week and must maintain an average attendance of at least 60 per cent., otherwise they will be subject to dismissal.
7. State militia to be subject to call of Governor at all times.
8. Age qualifications will be 18 to 45 years. Men of conscription age must be exempt from federal service to be eligible for State militia.
9. Number of units mustered in will probably have to be limited.
10. Units will be assigned to battalions and regiments as rapidly as possible.

II. Primary Steps—

1. Secure services of press in campaign. Such information as now available will be sent to county organizers and disseminated throughout the county by him through the medium of the press.
2. Any town so desiring may begin organizing at once with the understanding that the local unit will eventually become a part of the State militia, provided it meets specified requirements.
3. The requirements will be explained through the press.
4. As soon as the requirements have been met by local units, applications for mustering in as regular units of the State militia may be made to the State Council of Defense.

The National Safety Council

Indiana Men Named to Assist in this Important Work.

The National Safety Council is a body formed to aid in the conservation of Man-Power and manufacturing and producing capacity, and to that end four men have been named to the heads of divisions by N. E. Squibbs, State director:

J. J. Walsh, State Factory Inspector, Division of Accident Prevention.

H. H. Friedley, State Fire Marshal, Division of Fire Prevention.

Clarence Martindale, Architect and Engineer, Division of Structural Safety.

Dr. Wm. H. King, Division of Dust and Fumes, assisted by Michael Scollard, State Mine Inspector.

At any time required by the National Safety Council, these men stand ready to help in the establishment of any additional standards of safety that may be found advisable. Indiana's statutes governing Accident and Fire Prevention have been sent to the National Safety Council Headquarters, and we await further commands from said headquarters. Mr. Walsh is making extraordinary efforts with the aid of deputies furnished by accident and liability insurance companies, in addition to the regular state factory field inspectors, to get all Indiana industries in the safest possible condition to prevent accidents. The same condition prevails in State Fire Marshal Friedley's office, and both these officials report that plant owners generally are lending every aid toward better, safer conditions although it should be understood that Indiana has always been in the forefront in this movement. Certainly the State will never take a backward step in this regard and when the war is ended, Labor and Capital alike will be the gainers for every additional practical safety standard that it is found possible to establish.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 1

In publishing the INDIANA BULLETIN the State Council of Defense desires to be clearly understood as in no sense seeking to usurp the prerogatives of the daily newspaper. It were presumption indeed to consider for a moment that such thing could be possible, in Indiana, where the enterprise of the press is one of our justly boasted institutions. The Bulletin is intended purely as a disseminator of such information as would be of so general interest from a patriotic viewpoint as to be worthy of more emphasis than might be available in the columns of the crowded daily newspaper.

It is to the editors of the State that the Indiana Council of Defense owes a large measure of gratitude for the success that has attended its various activities in enlisting an intelligent, sympathetic public interest. The Bulletin would be grossly incomplete without this acknowledgment.

If it should happen that the busy molders of public opinion in the State should find anything herein available for "copy" for the daily or weekly edition, they should remember that there is no copyright to be considered and that the Council does not ask that any credit be given. This is a public service and we want to make its effectiveness as far reaching as the opportunity permits.

Expenses of County Councils.

Appropriations have been made by a number of Indiana county councils, for the expenses of the County Councils of Defense. In many other instances the county councils at their regular September meeting will be asked to set aside such sums as the Defense councils estimate will meet their requirements for necessary office expenses. In other cases private subscriptions have covered the initial necessary expenses of the defense work. Carroll county has already appropriated $300 from the county treasury funds; Huntington county $3,000; Johnson $50; Laporte $500; Rush $200; St. Joseph $2,500; Vigo $1,000. Boone county council of defense has asked $500, as has also Tippecanoe county and both appropriations are expected next month. Although there is no specific legal authority for these appropriations, the state board of accounts has indicated to the finance committee of the State Council of Defense that it will approve the expenditure of necessary funds for defense purposes. The Attorney-General of Indiana also has submitted an opinion to the effect that the counties have a right to appropriate funds for the emergency. It would appear, therefore, that no good reason exists for the failure of local county councils of defense to push their work because of a lack of money.

Conserving the Fruit Crop.

Mrs. Carl G. Fisher has completed an organization that has for its object the saving of fruits and vegetables that threaten to go to waste except that prompt action be taken to conserve them. Mrs. Maud McOuat is secretary and Mrs. Harry Miesse treasurer and chairman of the finance committee. The other members are Mrs. Ada Watts, Mrs. John N. Carey, Mrs. Lydia Teasdale, Mrs. Isaac Born, Mrs. L. F. Blaker, Miss Helen Wallack, Mrs. N. A. Potter, Mrs. B. F. Gadd, Mrs. H. E. Barnard, Miss Martha Criley, Mrs. George Dickson, Mrs. Fred Clark and Mrs. Ritter. The primary purpose of Mrs. Fisher and her assistants is to instruct housewives how to get full benefit of the hundreds of thousands of war gardens cultivated this year. Accordingly demonstrations were arranged and held in all parts of the state, where it is estimated thousands of tons of foodstuffs have been saved.

The Price of Coal.

In an effort to effect a reduction in the price of coal, the State Council, after a discussion of conditions in the state as applied to the industry, commissioned a special committee to co-operate with state and federal officials. This committee consisted of William G. Irwin, chairman; Evans Woollen, Charles Fox, E. M. Wilson and H. N. Kurrie. This committee was discharged, at its own request, August 8th, having reported as follows:

"The Special Coal Committee reports that effort continued since June 20th to arrive at an understanding with Indiana operators for reduced prices of coal, has failed, and that in its opinion there is no prospect of success by further effort, and that the consumers of the state should be advised of these facts, to the end that they be under no misapprehension in delaying longer to supply themselves, while transportation facilities are better than they are likely to be later."

Close Co-operation Provided For.

Following a conference with Mr. H. F. Miles, of Wisconsin, representing the Council of National Defense committee on Labor, Mr. Samuel Gompers chairman, a committee consisting of Charles A. Greathouse, J. G. Collicott, H. C. Atkins and Charles Fox was appointed to bring about a closer co-operation between the state and federal forces looking to a more intensive industrial and vocational education. This committee will organize the state to prevent the terrorization of women and unskilled youth by their too precipitate introduction into new and untried fields of industry, and their increased efficiency by proper preliminary training, as occasion requires.

Patriotism or Business?

The food committee of the State Council of Defense is making an effort to have 5,000 new silos put up by the farmers of Indiana this season, and the chairman of the committee, Professor Christie of Purdue states that the installation of a silo on his place is the finest display of patriotism a farmer can make at present. The News fails to see the patriotic side of such an action. It isn't patriotism at all but good business sense, and that every farmer in the State who can possibly afford a silo hasn't one already is a reflection on his knowledge of his own affairs. A good silo properly attended to is one of the most profitable institutions on the farm today and instead of designating a move to have the farmers of Indiana set up 5,000 new ones this summer an appeal to patriotism, it should be designated an appeal to ordinary horse sense. To be sure, the object of the council of defense is to have these silos erected in order that a greater supply of stock food may be conserved but inasmuch as all such conservation will pay the farmer large dividends it is difficult to get the patriotic angle. As the News understands it, real patriotism involves a sacrifice, and, bless you, there's nothing that even suggests sacrifice in installing a silo on a farm. Why, it's a dollar trap.—Ft. Wayne News.

Change in Council.

Finding the demands of the State Council of Defense too pressing, Mrs. Carolyn Fairbank, of Ft. Wayne, president of the Indiana Federation of Women's clubs, resigned and in her place Governor Goodrich named Anne Studebaker Carlisle, of South Bend, Ind. Mrs. Carlisle, whose husband, the Hon. Charles A. Carlisle, also is well known in public affairs, will in future direct the activities of the women of the state in reference to the war.

Ready for Emergency.

"The committee on shipping interests ** stands in the attitude of preparedness for emergencies which arise," reports Mr. A. E. Reynolds of Crawfordsville, chairman of the committee on shipping interests.

No State Funds for Council's Use

Governor Authorized to Borrow $100,000 to Defray Cost of Work.

There being no State funds available for the expenses of the State Council of Defense, the Finance Committee has arranged for borrowing whatever may be necessary. At the Committee's suggestion the Attorney-General prepared a form of preamble and resolution requesting the Governor to use the credit of the State in borrowing not to exceed one hundred thousand dollars for the purpose. This was signed by members of the State Council of Defense and by party leaders in the General Assembly. The Governor has borrowed $7,000 at 4 per cent. Of this amount there remained, on August 1, a balance on hand of $4,181.39 after disbursements for May, June and July. Disbursements from the State Treasury are made only on the warrant of the Auditor of State after vouchers have been approved by both the Chairman and Secretary of the State Council of Defense.

The matter of appropriations of public funds for the use of county councils of defense has been under consideration by the Committee in conference with the Attorney-General and the State Examiner. There does not seem to be any express statutory authority for such appropriations. It is the Committee's opinion, however, that the administrative officers of the State will review liberally and considerably any expenditures that may be made from public funds on account of the work of the County Councils of Defense. Appropriations have been made in several counties.

Indianapolis, July 31, 1917.

To the State Council of Defense:

We submit the following statement of receipts and disbursements for the months of May, June and July, 1917:

Respectfully,

(Signed) EVANS WOOLLEN,
WILLIAM G. IRWIN,
ISAAC D. STRAUS,
Finance Committee.

Mr. Brady moved the approval of the report in form and substance. The motion was seconded by Mr. Keach and Mr. Wilson, and prevailed unanimously.

On Scientific Research.

President Cleo Mees, of Rose Polytechnic Institute, Terre Haute, has been appointed chairman of a committee on scientific research, under the direction of the State Council of Defense. It will be the duty of this committee to investigate all scientific questions that arise during the progress of the war, encourage inventions and otherwise administer technical matters that may be directed toward the more successful prosecution of the struggle.

"America holds out an example a thousand times more encouraging than was ever presented before to those nine-tenths of the human race who are born without hereditary fortune or hereditary rank."—Daniel Webster at Bunker Hill Monument, June 17, 1843.

Boys' Reserve to Replace Workers

Federal Organization is Effective in Nearly Every County.

Under the auspices of the State Council of Defense, the United States Boys' Working Reserve, under the leadership of the Federal State Director, Isaac D. Straus, and his assistant, Carl B. Fritsche, has effected a working organization in eighty-eight out of the ninety-two counties in the State of Indiana.

Through each local County Council of Defense a capable man, usually an educator, has been appointed county director, who in turn has appointed as many assistant enrolling officers as local conditions justify.

The enrolling officers are directly responsible to the county directors, who in turn are directly responsible to the State director. Hence, in the State of Indiana the Reserve has eighty-eight county directors and something over 1,000 assistant directors and enrolling officers. All of the work is being done voluntarily and by people of the type who, as a rule, are leaders in the community in which they reside. Of course, in all cities a city director is appointed, but, with the exception of the four largest cities in the State, these city directors report to the county directors, retaining the county as a unit.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

The State director has appointed an advisory committee consisting of the following:

Meredith Nicholson, author, Indianapolis.
Geo. C. Ball, manufacturer, Muncie.
Martin A. Morrison, former congressman, Frankfort.

Joseph M. Cravens, attorney, Madison.
L. B. Clore, agriculturist, Laporte.
Fred Hunting, Gen. Electric Co., Ft. Wayne.
E. E. Stacey, State sec'y, Y. M. C. A., Ind'pls.
L. K. Babcock, attorney, Indianapolis.
W. H. Latta, attorney, Indianapolis.
Wm. A. Wirt, educator, of Gary and New York City, Gary.

J. G. Collicott, State Director Vocational Education, Indianapolis.

Clarence B. Kessinger, former president Y. M. C. A., Vincennes.

Rev. Geo. W. MacIntosh, president Wabash College, Crawfordsville.

Dr. Carl Stoltz, physician, South Bend.
Frank Wilson, banker, Evansville.
Sol Kiser, banker, Indianapolis.
Wm. P. Haggood, conservator of food products, Indianapolis.

S. O. Betzer, scout executive, Boy Scouts of America, Indianapolis.

The function of this committee is to advise with the State director in determining the policy of the Reserve and also in making recommendations to the State Council of Defense and through it to the Governor for such expenditures as will further the work of the Reserve.

SPECIAL ENROLLMENT WEEK—AUGUST 6TH TO 12TH.

This week, by proclamation of Governor James P. Goodrich, was set aside as Special Enrollment Week for the Boys' Working Reserve and the reports to date are that a large percentage of the boys eligible were enrolled.

PUBLICITY.

To offset the marked apathy which exists in certain sections of the State and also to impress people with the necessity for this Reserve organization, a whirlwind publicity campaign was conducted that week under the State Council of Defense, by means of which every county in the State had at least a one day's automobile speaking tour. Chautauqua platforms and moving picture shows also were used in this publicity campaign.

Forty college presidents and professors, representing every college and university in the State of Indiana, have, after sacrificing a part of their vacation, enthusiastically entered upon this campaign and it can be truthfully said that the best brains of Indiana were busy that week putting before the public intimate facts relating to this important method of organization and mobilization of reserved man-power.

ADDITIONAL MAN-POWER.

These speakers all laid particular emphasis on the necessity for increased food production and on the additional man-power needed for this increased production, and called on all young college men under 21 years of age and all high school boys over 16 and all other boys who want to do their "bit", to come forward and enroll in the Reserve whether they are employed or not.

COLLEGE MEN UNDER MILITARY AGE.

It is pointed out to the college man that by means of this Reserve, as soon as vacation begins next Spring, he will be directly connected with a job for which he is best suited and in which capacity he can produce something that will be conducive to increased efficiency of the Nation's aim and its prosecution of the war.

INCREASED FOOD PRODUCTION.

As many as 75,000 boys are already at work on farms this summer in Indiana and inasmuch as this State is an agricultural State, and its rural population highly intelligent, it is not anticipated that the warning from Washington demanding increased production of food and persistent active employment of every able-bodied boy, will go unheeded and that the Government can safely count on a material increase in surplus food production from this State.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The United States Boys' Working Reserve is deeply indebted to Mr. George Ade and his assistant, Mr. E. F. Warfel, for the enthusiastic support they have secured from the newspapers of the State in affording this movement very effective publicity. Mr. Ade's article, "Town Boys Fall In," was published in every newspaper of the State and impressed both the parent and the boy with the necessity for the Reserve organization and has done much to stimulate a full enrollment.

Morals of Public Being Conserved

Rev. Storms Heads Organization That Has Important Duties.

Social, moral and religious forces of the state are under the supervision of the committee on Public Morals, headed by the Rev. Albert B. Storms, of Indianapolis. This committee has sought to conserve the spiritual strength of the state and its activities have met with encouragement. Following is a brief summary of what it has undertaken and accomplished:

First—An appeal to the churches to plan for church and community exercises on Independence Day of such a character as to foster patriotism and seriousness in view of the task which the nation has undertaken.

Second—An appeal on the basis of public service and moral obligation to respond to the suggestions of the Federal authorities and the state agencies in their effort to prevent waste and extravagance, to encourage food production and to inculcate frugality and saving as a patriotic duty.

Third—An appeal through the County Councils of Defense to provide through their committees on Religious, Moral and Social Forces for community meetings in churches or public buildings in the interest of the boys who are called to the country's service for the purpose of heartening them to their sacrificial and patriotic task.

More locally the committee have addressed themselves to the moral conditions of the city of Indianapolis and have secured the co-operation of the city and government authorities in an effort to make Indianapolis so far as possible clean and safe for the soldiers when off duty. In this effort and work the committee is in close communication and co-operation with the various agencies—state and national—that are aiming to conserve the moral welfare of the men in training.

A form letter to be sent to all chairmen of County Councils through the State Defense Council office has been sent to each member of this committee for consideration, criticism or approval, urging the necessity of arousing the moral conscience of our people and emphasizing the ideals for which we as a nation now stand by appealing to the loyalty of our citizens, especially on the ground of moral obligations, by taking leadership in the mobilization of the spiritual forces of the state and nation. Upon receipt of letters from the committee Dr. Storms will present the matter in person to the State Council August 22.

Barnard Active in Food Supply

Women Being Enrolled to Help Carry Out Plans for Saving.

Food Conservation and all the activities of the women of the state which help to increase the available food supply and to release for use abroad the non-perishable foods for which they may substitute the perishable products of our gardens and orchards, is essentially a subject of paramount interest to the state council of defense. Dr. Harry E. Barnard, chairman of the committee on food supply and conservation and Indiana volunteer representative of the food administrator, has directed the inspectors and chemists of the department to give special attention to the food conservation problems of the State Council of Defense. In brief these activities may be summarized as follows:

First—The Elimination of Stale Bread.

Immediately following the issuance of an order to bakers to accept no stale loaves, the industry throughout the state revised its method of doing business. When the order of the Commercial Economy Board of the National Council of Defense was issued some time later, Indiana bakers were already saving waste. A poll of the bakers undertaken the first of July shows that the Indiana bakers almost unanimously approved the campaign to prevent the waste of unsold bread. Many thousand barrels of flour which would otherwise used as an animal food or wasted has by their patriotic action been conserved.

Second—Canning Is Conservation.

In order to stimulate the canning and drying of foods we have sent out under the auspices of the Committee on Food Supply and Conservation, a card devised for the purpose of giving the housewife an easy way of listing her canning activities in 1916 and 1917. The card bears this pertinent comment: "The increase this year is my contribution to the movement for more food for our country, our soldiers and our allies."

Twenty thousand of these cards have been distributed to canning clubs and interested women. The newspapers have also printed the card with instructions to cut out the blank and use it in the kitchen. The cards which at the end of the season are to be returned to the Committee on Supply and Conservation will show how greatly the interest in conservation has stimulated the canning and drying of perishable foods.

Third—Federal Food Pledge Card.

The world as a whole is faced with a definite and growing food shortage which will have a most important bearing on our National life, not only as it affects our task of supporting our allies in the war but in its ultimate reactions upon our entire range of food industries and the life of our people. We can only increase the production of food and reduce our waste and unnecessary consumption by bringing clearly before the whole people the necessity for intelligent effort. Today the American housewife is practicing thrift as earnestly and successfully as it has been practiced in years past in the carefully regulated homes of the French. It can be proven almost with mathematical accuracy that we have so changed our food habits that by cutting out waste we are saving day by day enough money to pay our expenses in the war. In Russia women are joining regiments of death. The women of America are enlisting in regiments of life.

The women of Indiana will have completed their pledge for full service on Enrollment Day, August 15th. One million Food Pledge Cards have been forwarded to the women members of the County Council of Defense who has been made Chairman of the County Committee to enroll the women under the Federal Food Administration plans. In nearly every county an excellent organization has been perfected with chairmen in each township and precinct. An unusual interest has been aroused in the work. The newspapers have given freely of their space. The pulpit has called the women to service. Four minute men are speaking to crowds whenever the opportunity presents itself. Every moving picture house in the State is carrying special slides prepared and donated by the Indiana Association. When Enrollment Day is over we hope to be able to say to Mr. Hoover that the Indiana women have not failed to offer full service to the food administration.

Fourth—Instruction in Food Conservation and Nutritional Problems.

It is not an easy matter to change dietary habits. The only way to convince the people that it is their patriotic duty to refrain from eating wheat is to tell them what else they can eat which is equally good. We cannot substitute vegetable oils and fats for butter unless the consumer is first convinced that he will be as well fed with one food as the other. It is impossible to substitute rice for potatoes when potatoes are scarce, or stimulate a great increase in the use of vegetables instead of bread unless every member seated around the common dining table knows that he will still be as well nourished after following the advice of food experts, as when he followed the dictates of habit and personal choice. We have therefore given much thought to our publicity work. We have prepared a series of daily stories which the press associations are sending to all the newspapers of the state. We hope in this way to create an interest in the subject of nutrition which will not only be helpful in the present crisis but of material benefit in years to come.

Fifth—Farmyard Merchants.

The feeling that much of the high cost of food is due to the expense of getting it from the farmer to consumer is general. Many plans have been suggested for cutting down this cost but so far as we know none have been more than partially successful. The best plan yet suggested is that the farmer be encouraged to sell his produce at his door to the thousands of autoists who travel through the country when roads and weather conditions are favorable.

There are almost 150,000 automobiles in Indiana. Most of them, some time during the week, make a trip to the country. They return home empty when they should be filled with country produce. Every dozen of eggs, or bushel of apples, peaches or potatoes that is sold the consumer by the purchaser saves every charge for packing, transportation and handling. It is therefore suggested to the farmer to nail up a board by the side of the road and chalk there the kinds and prices of the produce that he has to sell. Such a plan when perfected will do much to furnish a market for fruit and other farm produce which at the present time wastes for want of a ready market.

On Coal Production

The committee on coal production has been organized and had several meetings at which plans were proposed and discussed for stimulating production of coal in Indiana.

The committee is composed of coal operators and miners, and it is hoped that it will help to bring about closer co-operation between the employers and the employees.

It is felt that this committee will be quite a factor in helping settle labor disputes, which are quite serious at this time when they result in mine stoppages.

Plans along other lines also will be laid out at once which should be helpful in increasing the supply of coal that is going to be short the coming winter.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident—that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."—Declaration of Independence, adopted by Continental Congress, July 4, 1776.

Every State Has Council of Defense

Character of Bodies Varies as Does Extent of Their Power.

All the 48 states and the District of Columbia, in compliance with a circular letter sent out by the Council of National Defense, April 9th, 1917, have since organized State Councils of Defense. Some of these are with legislative authority and are supported by large grants of power and appropriations sufficient to carry out their purpose. The appropriations range from $25,000 to $5,000,000 and the range of activities are proportionately extensive.

Councils are wholly non-partisan in character. Their tenure in most instances is to cover the period of the existing emergency.

States wherein the legislatures created the Councils of Defense have provided for special taxes to support the extraordinary activities of the war; have delegated power to initiate legislation, investigate any matter relating to the general welfare, prescribe and enforce relief measures; create sub-committees and act through them; condemn property needed for war purpose; suppress insurrections or insubordination; seize store and distribute foodstuffs.

States wherein no authority has been vested by virtue of legislative enactment vary in size and ability. Their activity is controlled largely by state departments and their function is principally inquisitorial and advisory.

HAVE COUNTIES AS UNITS.

Most of the states have organized, as has Indiana, with the counties as units.

California, Illinois and Wisconsin have created sub-committees on research and invention.

In Wisconsin any person disqualified or exempt from military service is entitled to enlist in the Civilian Reserve. The Colorado Volunteers is composed of men who are not called to the colors.

Councils of Massachusetts and Illinois are particularly active in all matters incident to the prevention and adjustment of labor disputes.

California, Ohio and Wisconsin have specialized in the organization of employment exchanges, for the special benefit of large employers of labor.

Rhode Island is especially active in reference to the registration and identification of aliens.

South Carolina, Rhode Island and Utah are making extensive investigations of their transportation facilities.

Massachusetts, Maryland, New Hampshire, New York and Vermont have made industrial surveys, including a man-power census, in addition and supplemental to that made by the federal government.

Connecticut, Maryland, New York and Vermont have undertaken or completed a general man-power census; the enrollment of all engineers with the purpose of forming an Engineering Emergency Corps, similar in organization to that of the home guards.

Massachusetts is ready to supply in any emergency laborers, mechanics, foremen or superintendents.

Practically every state has availed itself of the willingness and patriotism of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Women's Relief Corps and the State Federation of Women's clubs.

Almost every state has a military council, whose principal function is to assist with recruiting. New Hampshire provides a free examination for all men who may be inclined to enlist in any branch of the service.

New York and Massachusetts have nautical schools and these with Illinois have organized naval training classes of volunteers.

Some of the states have provided adequate facilities for transporting men across or through the state in emergencies.

"He who loves the bristle of bayonets only sees in the glitter what beforehand he feels in his heart. It is avarice and hatred."—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Medical Section Has Great Task

Indiana Must Be Aroused to Pressing Need of Doctors.

The Medical Section of the state council organized and named a Committee representing the State Medical Society and requested Governor Goodrich to accept this Committee of enrollment of doctors throughout the State.

This enrollment was made and included the name, age, address and availability of every doctor in the State under 55 years of age and other facts touching his availability for war service.

After a rather active correspondence with the War Department by Drs. Clark and Wells, the matter of an Examining Board for Indiana was deferred and the following resolution adopted by the State Council:

"We, the Indiana State Council of National Defense, respectfully would urge a regularly appointed board in Indianapolis convened by orders from the War Department for the examination of applicants for the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army and other duties required."

This resolution was sent by telegram to Washington.

TO INCREASE ENLISTMENTS.

A special effort was made to increase the enlistment of Medical men in the State, the imperative need of immediate action being apparent after investigation in Canada. The problems confronting the profession in belligerent countries are so stupendous as to be almost appalling.

It is true that the Medical Committee has one of the hardest problems of this war. The army is being raised and doctors are needed. The doctors, who are such a small minority of the public, will have to be drafted either by special or by other proceeding. Just now they are starting a special effort at Washington to arouse the interest of the doctors in joining the medical corps of the army. An army must be provided with one per cent. of medical men.

In Marion County 82 of the 516 doctors, who are residents of the county, have volunteered, and 60 have been accepted.

There are in the state of Indiana 4,773 physicians, 3,100 of whom are eligible for service. Of this number only 210 have been accepted. Indiana's quota for the army, alone, is 630, to say nothing of the navy and of the state defense. We will, therefore, need at least 800 doctors. Now, how are we going to raise that number? The committee is working very hard on this problem, but it is very difficult. We have 210, and we know that that number will be increased about 50, by the recent draft—that is, the draft will draw about 50 more doctors into service. Some of those may have already enlisted. If ten of them have enlisted, that adds only 40, at the most. That means that we have at present 260.

INJURIOUS TO EFFICIENCY.

It has been shown that in France and in England one of the greatest injuries to the soldiers' efficiency is venereal disease. In one army in France they did have ten per cent. of venereal cases, and now they have thirty-five per cent. In one of the Canadian hospitals in England there were 7,000 boys who had not seen the front, who were out of service because of venereal diseases, and 5,000 were sent home.

The question of venereal diseases is of as much importance and deserves the same attention as smallpox and other communicable diseases. The committee, therefore, unanimously recommended to this Council the following resolution:

"BE IT RESOLVED, that the Indiana State Council of Defense recommended to Governor Goodrich that he confer with the Indiana State Board of Health concerning the problem of enforcing in the case of venereal diseases among our civil population, the Act of March 4, 1903, Sec. 2 and other sections governing the control of infectious and transmissible diseases, in the interest of the health and therefore the future military efficiency of the soldiers stationed in Indiana."

Now, of course this is a big problem. It is really a bigger problem than it seems. Why? The problem is this: You see, the law of 1903 of Indiana gives the State Board of Health sufficient power to control communicable diseases, of which gonorrhea and syphilis are two of the very worst. Although the law has been on the books of this state for fourteen years, yet there has not been that public sentiment which would allow the enforcement of that law, and the Board of Health cannot enforce a law which is too unpopular. This situation is a little different now. You will remember that the law was unpopular because the young men were the ones who were the most interested and the girls were made to suffer. We now have a different state of affairs. The army says, "Look for the men and punish them." Syphilis is transmitted in the same way that scarlet fever is, and like diseases.

TO ASK LAW ENFORCEMENT.

If the civil population would ask the State Board of Health to enforce the law, so far as the women who come in contact with the soldiers are concerned, that, of course, would be an entering wedge to the reporting of these transmissible diseases. Of course, all doctors feel that Indiana would set an example to the country which would be looked upon with admiration by other states, if this step were taken. Of course, it would be very unpopular and allows a good deal of criticism.

Now, the question of the partially trained nurse is a difficult one. The problem is that we haven't nearly enough trained nurses for the army that is being raised. We haven't nearly enough nurses for our Red Cross units—trained nurses. Indiana has already been stripped of all the trained nurses, and they have been sent to the front, and yet our own army is yet to be raised. It has been shown in the armies abroad that so far as practical results are concerned, you can get a great deal of efficient service from a woman who has had about three months training. In view of this situation the following resolution was adopted by the Medical Section:

"RESOLVED, That in view of the probable future need of nurses, it is the sense of this committee that training schools of the state of Indiana should admit young women who have that degree of preparation which the training school thinks is necessary, for a preparatory course of three or six months, and that these young women should be admitted to the base hospitals which are to be sent abroad, as pupil nurses, or assistants."

Such a course as this would not disturb the graduate nurse proposition. These young women would be admitted as pupil nurses, just as they are now, to hospitals. We will need these women later on. This will be unpopular with the trained nurses. They don't want this done, but we propose, now, for the sake of national defense, to ask as many of our hospitals as we can to admit these young women who are trained enough to do some of this work.

The Eastern Hospital for the Insane, and the Southeastern Hospital for the Insane have a total capacity of 5,780 patients, and there are now 5,723 beds, filled, and there are in the state of Indiana 6,454 insane persons already committed. In times of peace cases of mental diseases increase nine to a thousand each year. In times of war the increase will be at a much more rapid rate. The Committee, therefore, recommends to the State that there be added to each of these hospital units at least one hundred beds, in order to take care of the increase of the insane population that will very certainly arise.

DRAFT FOR PHYSICIANS.

We must not be surprised that at Washington there has been suggested a law to have a selective draft of physicians—that is, taking physicians up to fifty-five years of age, and draft a sufficient number for the army and other war purposes. The Surgeon General asserts that he must have 50,000 physicians for this call alone.

Now, with a doctor it is different from the situation in which a business man finds himself. If a business man enlists, his business can be carried on, in some cases by his sons, or by the firm. If a doctor leaves town, his income from his practice stops at once. Not only that, but when he leaves town and his income stops at once, those doctors staying at home will have to have his practice, and when he comes back, therefore, he will have to start over again. Therefore, it is only human that whatever draft is made of the doctors, it must be done just as fairly as possible. No profession will suffer as greatly as that of the doctor.

In this connection another problem presents itself to this special committee of the Council of Defense: The question of the Red Cross unit. I have gone into that very much, but the question of the Red Cross unit is one of these problems which is particularly unfortunate, and it is not decisively understood just what is necessary. When they began the campaign, they raised a division of several hundred units, in accordance with the former method of raising Red Cross units. Then the word began to come from the front that those units were undesirable in that way; that men over fifty-five could not go. Therefore, men like Dr. Oliver, whom they begged to head a unit, was the very man who, because of his age, could not go. Then they began to organize the units differently, and they are finding that those units are a white elephant on foreign soil. They are talking about having 250 members in a unit, and they would prefer to have a lot of younger men who would act as assistants to the men already over there. They have a great many good surgeons, and they desire assistants. We are now sending 200 a month, of our American doctors, who go entirely into the English and French service, being distributed to this and that hospital. Some of the units already abroad have been broken up into small units and sent to the front, and there is no one suffering over there more than the members of those very units.

But remember, gentlemen, that when the American service is well under way, we will have to have more than 800 doctors go from the State of Indiana. The problem is a great one. The report of the sub-committee covers 80 pages, giving the details of every man in the different counties.

The problem is, as yet, so much in the air that it is hard to say what to advise, and it is very hard to get any very definite advice as to what ought to be done.

Labor Committee Representative

Selected from Various Organizations and Parts of the State

"This committee was picked carefully with the idea in view of distributing the representation into the various parts of the State and among the different organizations active in the labor movement. The members are recognized as conservative but firm citizens of the State."

Chairman Charles Fox of the committee on labor, made the above announcement in connection with giving out the personnel of his committee of the State council. The membership of the committee follows:

Charles Fox, chairman, Terre Haute.

Mrs. Mary E. Davis of the garment workers' union, Indianapolis.

Louis Schwartz, business agent, machinists' union, Indianapolis.

William A. Greene, International Typographical union, Indianapolis.

Charles Schaefer, president, plumbers' association of Indiana, Anderson.

George Schwab, business agent, molders' union, Indianapolis.

William Nue, organizer, brewery workers' union, Indianapolis.

George Goetz, International Typographical Union, South Bend.

T. N. Taylor, president, central labor council, Terre Haute.

William Connolly, Sr., vice-president, Glass Bottle Blowers' International Association, Muncie.

W. F. Wilson, president, State carpenters' board, Indianapolis.

Guy Morris, barbers' union, Logansport.

Henry Hoeltje, cigarmakers' union, Ft. Wayne.

Andrew Zeber, Jr., molders' union, Evansville.

Ray Abbott, president, Indiana building trades, Gary.

Ed. Stewart, President Indiana mine workers' union, Terre Haute.

Joel Messick, vice-president, Indiana State Federation of Labor, Marion.

J. C. Skemp, International secretary-treasurer, painters' and paper hangers' union, Lafayette.

Public Schools to Assist Cause

Educational Forces are Mobilized to Serve the State.

On May 4, 1917, Governor Goodrich and State Superintendent Ellis called a conference of representatives of all the public and private schools of Indiana to consider plans for mobilizing the educational forces of the state. At this meeting a state committee was appointed and the following executive committee named to direct the organization of the educational mobilization program: Chairman, J. G. Collicott; Secretary, J. J. Pettijohn; Chairman University Section, Geo. L. Roberts; Chairman College and Normal School Section, Wm. A. Millis; Chairman County Superintendents' Section, Theodore F. Martin; Chairman City Superintendents' Section, T. F. Fitzgibbon; and Chairman High School Section, Anna Wilson.

The special committees prepared detailed recommendations and suggestions concerning the steps to be taken in utilizing the educational resources of the state for war service work.

On the basis of these reports, the state educational executive committee, prepared a comprehensive program or guide for educational activities during war times. Copies of the program were put into the hands of every school official in the state, including the presidents of normal schools, colleges and universities.

The program is a carefully considered statement of what war time service should be performed by teachers and pupils and of what should be done to utilize the school plants and equipment for war purposes. Not only are important modifications in the courses of study and curricula of the common schools and institutions of higher learning proposed, but special emphasis is given to definite measures for increasing production and conservation of food and clothing and to other measures which will effectively extend the work of the school into the community and make it a part of the life of the people, a part of the complex machinery and the vital energy which is to give the nation power and success in fighting for the freedom of Democracy. The program was approved by the Governor and the State Board of Education.

Immediately after the publication of the program for educational mobilization, the State Committee was made the Educational Section of the State Council of Defense and steps were taken to carry out several definite undertakings.

Under the direction of the State Committee on educational mobilization instructions were sent to County and City Superintendents of schools directing them to organize county committees to co-ordinate school war service within the county and to put into operation the provisions of the program adopted by the State Committee. These County Committees were formed in many cases before the close of the schools and consisted of the superintendents, principals and teachers in the county. Reports were made showing the work done by the schools in each county. This material was collected and systematized and digests were sent to all school officials in the state. Weekly letters were included giving information concerning methods of developing school resources for war service. Data has been compiled on foreign schools and universities in war time as well as on school problems in the United States.

A Speakers' Bureau has been organized and several members of the faculties of every college, normal school, and university in Indiana have volunteered to speak on war problems when calls come for their services. Prominent lawyers and ministers have also enrolled as speakers. The object of the bureau is to clarify and direct public opinion in the interest of unity and enthusiasm in the support of the nation at war. The bureau provided speakers for the Red Cross campaign, for the United States Boys' Working Reserve Corps and for patriotic meetings of various kinds. In all the Speakers' Bureau has arranged for about 200 speaking dates.

At present speakers on war service are adressing every county and city institute in the state. By this campaign every one of the 19,000 teachers and professors in Indiana will hear this patriotic appeal for war service work presented by someone who has made a special study of this important question. The teachers of Indiana in turn will be urged, at the opening of schools in September, to carry this important patriotic message to each of the 600,000 pupils in the public schools and colleges of Indiana and through the pupils to the Indiana homes.

The State Educational Committee has also arranged with Prof. McCullough, head of the Music Department of DePauw University, with the assistance of the Extension Department of Indiana University, to organize the state for the singing of patriotic songs. Special teachers of music are volunteering their services without pay under the direction of Prof. McCullough, and an earnest effort is being made to reach every county and city in the state.

At the opening of the schools and colleges in September, a special effort will be made to have all schools, Sunday schools and patriotic organizations join in this important campaign of patriotic speaking and singing, in order to arouse the whole people of Indiana to an appreciation of the terrible world war conditions now confronting us, and to stir them to enthusiastic support of all war service work in the State and Nation during the war.

The Indiana State Department of Education is taking up industrial training with a particular view to the needs of the war.

All of the work in the Vocational Division of the State Department of Education is being planned with a view of rendering the greatest possible patriotic service to the State and Nation during the present crisis.

In planning the Home Economics work for girls in the public schools special attention is being given to the production and conservation of food and clothing; the necessity of eliminating waste; the teaching of economy and pointing out the opportunity for special patriotic service in working for the Red Cross.

The vocational work for women is being organized in the various communities throughout the state for practical war service training in gardening, marketing, canning, ways and means of eliminating waste and practicing economy, and the teaching of practical patriotism.

In the agricultural work more than forty thousand boys and girls have been enrolled for home project work, such as corn growing, marketing, canning and preservation of vegetables, the care and feeding of poultry, pigs, calves and sheep.

In co-operation with the State Committee for the mobilization of the educational forces of the state, the city and county superintendents and the vocational teachers have been enlisted in the work of supervising all vocational work in home economics and agriculture in their counties during the vacation period. At the present time definite plans are under way for organizing and extending this work on a much larger scale during the regular school year which begins in September.

The vocational work in training for trade and industry is being organized in co-operation with the National Vocational Society and the National Vocational Commission recently appointed by President Wilson. We believe that our manual training, trade and technical schools can render a great service in training and mobilizing boys and men with technical knowledge and skill for important service to the Government during the war.

The program approved at the recent national meeting of the State Vocational Directors provides special vocational training in many important lines of government service on account of the great need which the Government has for trained mechanics and technicians of almost every kind in large numbers. Special vocational training can be given to the following important groups of workers:

Radio operators
Aviators
Chauffeurs
Auto repair men
Bakers
Draftsmen

Telegraphers
Gas Engine men Truck Drivers
Machinists
Photographers
Carpenters.

The vocational teachers throughout the state are keeping in touch with the developments of the opportunities for war service work which they can render. The State Vocational Department is in close touch with the committee representing the National Vocational Society and the National Vocational Committee being organized this week, which will undertake at once, in co-operation with the various state vocational departments, to work out a comprehensive program for mobilizing the vocational resources of the State and Nation in order to aid our Government in every possible way in winning the present war.

This work is in charge of J. G. Collicott, State Director of Vocational Education.

Uniforms Planned for State Militia

War Department,
Washington, August 4, 1917.

Various communications have come from organizations throughout the country relative to a uniform which would not conflict with Section 125 of the national defense act approved June 3, 1916, with regard to the protection of the Federal uniform. While the War Department may make no official ruling on what constitutes an observance or a violation of that section of the law, the Secretary of War does, informally, suggest the following uniform, which may be used without variation, or with any changes which do not bring it into conflict with the above-cited section of the national defense act.

RALPH A. HAYES, Private Secretary.

Description of Uniform.

A description of a uniform which, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, is considered suitable for wear by Home Guard and which would not be in conflict with Section 125, act of Congress, approved June 3, 1916:

Coat—A single-breasted, straight-front, four-button sack coat, with lapels, having two outside hip bellows pockets and one outside breast bellows pocket. White-metal buttons with State coat of arms and shoulder loops.

Trousers—Of same material as coat.

Cap—Of same material as coat, vizor and chin strap to be black enameled leather, buttons of white metal, with State coat of arms.

Cap ornament—The letters "H. G." of white metal, of suitable height, inclosed in white metal wreath in front.

Collar ornament—The letters "H. G." of white metal, of suitable height in each side of collar of coat.

Rank insignia—Same as illustrated in General Orders, No. 49, War Department, 1916, Pages 43 and 44.

Chevrons—To be placed on sleeves midway between shoulder and elbow. First sergeant, a shield with three horizontal bars; sergeant, a circle with three white horizontal bars; corporal, a circle with two white horizontal bars.

Shirt and collar—Of white material.

Cravat—A black four-in-hand.

Material—For coat, trousers and cap it is tentatively suggested that the material be part wool and part cotton, of suitable weight, of either forestry green or blue gray.

Straus Offers Farm.

Isaac D. Straus, of Ligonier, a member of the state council of defense, federal state director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve and one of a federal commission to locate concentration and training camps for the Reserve, has offered for the purpose the use of a fine farm of 640 acres, for a period of two years, absolutely free of charge. The boys who are first to enroll in the reserve will be eligible candidates for places at the Straus training camp farm.

"That this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."—Abraham Lincoln at Gettysburg, November 19, 1863.

Publicity Service Outlined in Full

Attention of National Council Attracted to This Work.

"Nothing can be accomplished by this council without a sympathetic popular interest. We need the support of all the people and the only way we can enlist this support is through a widespread publicity. It's up to you."

It was with this very concise statement of purpose and assignment, the Publicity committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense began its work. It has persisted on the theory that this is the people's most important business, at this time, and what measure of success has attended its efforts is as much due to the generous and whole-hearted support of the newspaper press of Indiana, as any other agency.

Indiana editors, with practical unanimity, responded to the requests made of them for material assistance. At extraordinary expense, due to the cost of labor and material, they have generously donated unstintingly of their space, giving preferred position in all editions day after day, to the promotion of the diversified efforts to organize the men and women and materials of the great Hoosier commonwealth for the most effective prosecution of the war. That they will continue so to do is the most reassuring and encouraging feature of the work of this committee, and the one thing that holds out the largest promise of ultimate triumph.

The preliminary work of organizing the Publicity bureau was entrusted to Edward F. Warfel, of Richmond, Ind., who has since been in charge of the copy desk. Mr. Warfel has maintained a daily and weekly news service and propaganda to the newspapers of the state, under the general direction of Mr. Ade, and the council, which by resolution regularly outlines the policies that govern this committee.

Attention of Mr. George F. Porter, of the Council of National Defense, chief of the section on co-operation with the state councils, was directed to the Indiana publicity committee's work, and at Mr. Porter's request a comprehensive statement of what has been done and what is contemplated as the developments require, was forwarded to the national capital. Following is an extract from this statement:

"We began operations just when the drive was being made to place the Liberty Loan bond. With the approval of the Council we sent copy for brief appeals to both weekly and daily newspapers. We varied the service and, toward the end of the drive, we sent out daily releases to daily papers and, so far as we were able to check up, found that our stuff was being quite generally used.

"As soon as the Liberty Loan was subscribed we jumped in to help the Red Cross, taking care to keep our copy very concise and localizing it, as we learned that all of the newspapers were being bombarded with press matters from various Red Cross headquarters. At present we are devoting ourselves principally to the topic of food conservation."

"Some weeks ago the State Council named a general publicity committee for the State. It consisted of the President of the State Republican Association, the President of the State Democratic Association, two representatives of the newspaper unions and a number of well-known editors. The committee numbers fifteen. This committee had held one meeting which was well attended. The meeting was called for the purpose of finding out what kind of publicity service would be most acceptable to the dailies, the weeklies, the plate matter unions and the printers of "patent insides."

"I have long insisted that most of the copy issued by publicity departments is heaved into the waste basket simply because it is not readable stuff which will add value to the next issue of the paper. The editors present at our meeting agreed with me most heartily. They said that nearly any editor would be glad to print stuff received from the State Council of Defense if the matter came in brief, concise and fairly entertaining form.

Nearly all of them made a point of urging brevity. They said the sure way of getting copy printed was to make it good, bright, readable copy that would appeal to the editorial sense of the man on the desk.

"It was agreed at this meeting that a publicity department should not send out broadcast a lot of copy in the hope that some of it might land, including both dailies and weeklies in the same list, but should arrange its service into departments even though extra trouble is involved, so as to get the best results. For instance, the following plan of service is the one we hope to put into effect after a consultation with the editors. The matter to be sent out from the publicity department we hope to divide into the following classes:

A—News bulletins, special articles, signed editorials and appeals by well-known men and general items of information to be sent to the morning daily papers of the state or to any daily which is the only one published in that town.

"B—A service similar to the above but somewhat varied as to form and the use of material so that, in the case of special articles and editorials, at least, no daily paper will be compelled to duplicate or reprint the stuff used in some other daily in the same town. Publicity departments often overlook the fact that an editor does not like to feature any stuff which is appearing in other newspapers and usually he refuses to print any matter which has already appeared in a rival newspaper in his own town. During the war the editors will make allowances and, for a time at least, print a good deal of the stuff sent to them by the Councils of Defense, but the way to get continued good service is to give the editor copy with a definite release date marked on it and a definite guarantee that the subject matter or at least the exact form of the subject matter will not be duplicated to any other paper in his town.

"C—Plate matter to be sent out by the newspaper unions, of which there are two doing business in Indiana. Most of their customers are the weekly newspapers, although some of these smaller dailies use plate matter and some of the smaller weeklies use the "patent insides." A more willing service will be rendered by these plate and ready print houses and more space will be granted if we give them stuff which has not grown cold by reason of its previous publication in the daily papers.

"D—News, bulletins, appeals, signed articles and signed editorials to be mailed to the weekly newspapers each week so as to arrive in the hands of the editor not later than Monday to insure publication the following Thursday or Friday.

"E—Practically the same class of service as above but varied to take care of the second newspaper in each town so that the editor will not have to print stuff that is being used by his hated rival across the street. Much of the matter we send out is in a form which does not advertise itself as being stereotyped publicity matter. We try to put it in a form which will be acceptable to the editor as live original matter. He will gladly use it if he knows that he has a monopoly of it for his field. This matter of duplicating service to competing newspapers is, in my opinion, a very important consideration in building up a volunteer service that can be depended upon.

"We have not included in our lists trade papers or magazines and we have made no definite plans for securing publicity except through the newspapers. I do not wish to mislead you into believing that we have gone very far in putting into effect this rather complicated service, but I am sending you the outline of what we shall attempt. I believe that publicity committees everywhere should be advised to make their communications as brief and simple and popular in expression as possible, and I think that every publicity chairman should be reminded of the necessity of not repeating the same matter to daily papers and weekly papers and that he should be advised to have an A and B service for every town in which there are two newspapers. I venture to make this suggestion because I handled copy in a newspaper office for many years and I have consulted our Indiana editors as to their wishes."

The more recent efforts of the Publicity committee have been in assisting the registration of the women of the state, both in the Hoover food conservation movement and the league for service. In this connection the committee has issued a series of "Back Yard Talks," being fanciful dialogues between a certain uninformed Mrs. Smith and her enlightened neighbor Mrs. Jones, of which W. B. Pitkin, of the Council of National Defense was kind enough to say "is just about the best publicity work we have had anywhere."

Industrial Survey and Preparedness

Dr. Barnard's Survey Answers Purpose of National Authorities.

This committee finds that no survey of industries in Indiana is desired by the authorities at Washington, because of the fact that in July, 1916, such a survey was made by Dr. Barnard, State Pure Food Commissioner, at the request of the Advisory Council for National Defense, and this survey was most comprehensive. It shows Indiana to be in shape to render wonderful help to the United States insofar as all kinds of manufacturing of articles useful in the war are concerned.

The committee, therefore, is awaiting orders to conduct any further survey that may be found necessary, and to take part in any movement that will help win the war.

The chairman of this committee, N. E. Squibb, of Lawrenceburg, has appointed the following Indiana manufacturers to membership on the committee.

J. S. McQuinn, Newcastle, Indiana.
J. E. Frederick, Kokomo, Indiana.
W. B. Bragt, Brookville, Indiana.
Jno. E. Fitzgerald, Hammond, Indiana.
Henry J. Karges, Evansville, Indiana.
Frank M. Smith, Indianapolis, Indiana.
Harvey Bates, American Hominy Co., Indianapolis, Indiana.
George H. Lewis, Lawrenceburg, Indiana.
H. C. Rockhill, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

Auto Owners May Help Save Fuel Oil

After a careful investigation of the present gasoline situation Mr. Van H. Manning, director of the Bureau of Mines of the Department of the Interior, has issued the following statement:

One-half of the gasoline used in the United States (1,250,000,000 gallons) is used in pleasure riding.

It is estimated that the United States army will need 350,000,000 gallons for aeroplanes, trucks, automobile tractors and other machines. There is no way of obtaining this in this country except by saving from the existing supply, and this economy may be effected by voluntary cutting down of pleasure riding (for instance, the man who takes his family out on Sunday for a fifty-mile ride can cut this in half).

It has been estimated that by economical use enough gasoline can be saved to supply not only the United States, but also its allies for war purposes.

The following suggestions should be observed by automobile owners:

1. Do not allow your gasoline engine to run idle.
2. Use kerosene, not gasoline, for cleaning purposes in the garage.
3. See to it that the carburetor does not leak. Form the habit of shutting off the gasoline at the tank.
4. By judicious regulation of the mixture of gasoline and air in the motor both greater power and economy of fuel may be obtained.

Automobile owners need not lay up cars, but should use them either for trade or pleasure purposes thoughtfully and judiciously. If this advice is followed there will be no undue scarcity, for the United States possesses an abundant supply for ordinary purposes.

Indiana's Proud Military Record

Hoosier State Has Always Been First in Patriotic Activity.

The people of Indiana have a right to feel proud of the record their own State has made since the United States entered the present world struggle. While Indiana has never been addicted to jingoism, it has never failed to answer the country's call, and its military record from the time of George Rogers Clark and the wonderful campaign of Vincennes down to the present day has been one of which no Hoosier need be ashamed.

Hoosiers as a rule are remarkably cool headed. In a crisis they always have the very desirable faculty of "keeping their feet on the ground," of holding the present well in hand and at the same time keeping one eye to the future.

In certain eastern sections of the country, before the United States entered the war, and at a time when excitement was at fever heat, it was intimated that because they did not make a lot of noise the people of the Central States were not as patriotic as they should be. It is true that a majority of the people of Indiana are not in favor of war for the sake of fighting or to expound any vague and uncertain principles, but when the rights of the nation have been assailed they have ever preferred war to dishonorable peace and have never shirked when the time for action came. The present instance only bears out past history in this respect.

STATE FIRST IN RECRUITS.

No sooner were diplomatic relations with Germany actually broken off and the prospect of real fighting brought near than recruiting in Indiana received a great impetus. So far as the regular army was concerned Indiana ranked first in number of recruits, population considered, and third in actual number, though many States are larger and more populous. The State's quota in the regular army and the national guard was soon filled, and no Hoosier doubts if it had been seen fit by the national administration to raise an army on the volunteer plan, that Indiana would soon have come through with its quota, and with colors flying.

In this particular Indiana has but followed its example in previous wars. The glorious record achieved by the Indiana soldiers in the civil war and in the Spanish-American conflict form many bright pages of Hoosier history.

But it is not alone in the raising of troops that Indiana has responded to the call since America has been plunged into war. The State has practically made itself a unit in the furtherance of the cause of American rights. Politics has been cast aside, racial and religious lines have been forgotten. Every patriotic movement brought to Indiana or originated within the State has succeeded. The State's record in the Liberty loan and Red Cross campaigns is one of which every Hoosier may justly feel proud.

But it is not only in the matter of completeness, but in promptness, that Indiana's present war record deserves consideration. Immediately after war was declared the problem of food production for the United States and its allies was pushed to the forefront. The fact was emphasized that if the friends of Democracy are to win the war the armies of the allies must be amply provisioned. The general crop shortage and the havoc wrought by the German U-boats made this a vital question. It was quickly impressed upon the American mind by our friends across the sea that the problem is one which must be solved by the United States, and by the United States practically alone.

OTHERS TALK—INDIANA ACTS.

Meetings were called in the various States and communities for the discussion of these problems. While people generally discussed food, Indiana acted. Governor Goodrich, realizing that time meant nearly everything, immediately provided for a State food director with an office in the State House. Prof. G. I. Christie of Purdue University was put in charge. Meetings were held in practically every county of the State under the direction of the county agricultural agents or other experts. The people were made to see that the time to act was in 1917, not in 1918, when it might be too late.

All of this was done before the winter had broken, and when spring came the response of the people was almost unbelievable. Waste land which had laid idle for years was put under cultivation. Even the city dweller caught the spirit of the times and vegetables were planted on every vacant lot in cities all over the State.

As a result crops in Indiana this year are a great deal better than was deemed possible when the year opened and the production of garden stuff is about three times as great as that of ordinary years.

Now that the problem of production has been solved, attention has been centered on the preservation of the crop and the problem of distribution will be met too in due time.

But not only have the food producers been organized. All classes of men have been brought to a personal interest in the great struggle. College and high school instructors have organized to teach food preservation and economy and the ministers, too, have joined to render every aid possible to their State and country. The women of the State have set about to do their part. The boys' working reserve takes in youngsters from sixteen to twenty who can render valiant service to their country at home—another Hoosier idea, which is making great progress, although it is but a few weeks old.

In short, the State of Indiana is now on a war basis and is willing to see things through, no matter how long it takes. Hoosier stamina and fortitude has been tried again and found as good as in the days gone by. The people of the State have always known there was nothing the matter with Indiana. Now the whole world knows it.

Nation Notices Indiana

A special bulletin issued by the United States Department of Labor and signed by William E. Hall, director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, calls attention to the proclamation issued by Governor James P. Goodrich of Indiana, setting aside August 6-12 as special enrollment week, says: "It is hoped that similar action will be taken in other States." A large portion of Governor Goodrich's proclamation is reprinted as a suggestion to other States not so progressive in organizing the Boys' Reserve.

War Recreational Service Bureau

Doing Unique Work With Uncle Sam's Army at Fort.

The War Recreational Social Service Bureau, which is a section of the committee on Moral, Religious and Social Forces, and which is affiliated with the War Department Commission on Training Camp activity, is doing a unique work with the men at Ft. Benjamin Harrison. Following is a statement of the recent work of this bureau:

1. Establishment of seven classes of French at the Y. M. C. A. Bldg.
  2. Regular week-end receptions at the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. for the men at the Camp.
  3. Compiled lists for the universities, of Harvard, Yale, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, W. Virginia, of the university men at this Camp.
  4. Reception to the Kentucky men by the Kentucky women at the Oriental Hall.
  5. Reception to a large number of Doctors from the Camp at the Country Club, July 13.
  6. The Canadian Scotch Kilties Band gave a free concert at Camp Sunday, July 22nd and two concerts for the Recreation Fund for the men at the Fort.
  7. Lieut. Harold Peat, British Army Officer, who has seen active service abroad and won distinguished honors through bravery, gave a talk before the Brigade of Regulars.
  8. A minstrel show presented by the Indianapolis News Glee Club, Saturday night, July 22nd.
  9. H. N. Sanborn, Secretary of the State Library Commission, is accumulating a permanent library for Fort Benjamin Harrison of about 10,000 volumes. Many of these books have already been received and listed.
  10. Visiting families of officers and soldiers at the Camp have been placed in recommended homes and boarding houses.
- Ohio people of Indianapolis got together and held a reception for the Ohio men Saturday, July 14th, at the Palm Room, Claypool Hotel.
- This Bureau acts as a clearing house, having the key representative men and women on its committees and works through existing organizations, such as the city and school authorities, church federations, federations of women's clubs, Y. M. C. A., fraternal groups, benevolent societies.

DIVIDED INTO FOUR PARTS.

The work of the bureau divides itself into four parts:

1. To act as a clearing house to centralize, to co-ordinate, and to stimulate, and to direct.
  2. To keep the community sane and wholesome and to keep boys and girls busy.
  3. To provide wholesome amusement and recreation for the men in khaki stationed at Fort Benjamin Harrison.
  4. To act as an information and social-service bureau to the soldiers and visitors and relatives.
- Some of the distinctive things that this Bureau is doing are:
1. Providing General Glenn with talent for Saturday and Sunday night entertainments at the camp.
  2. Taking care of visiting families, especially providing recommended boarding houses for the families of commissioned officers.
  3. Aiding in the establishment of travelers' aids and information bureaus at the railroad stations for relatives, friends and visitors of the men at the camp.
  4. The holding of military athletic carnivals at the Camp and State Fair Grounds.
  5. Providing Library facilities, especially for the Regulars and the militia men.
  6. The mobilization of the swimming facilities of Indianapolis that have been placed at the disposal of the men at the camp.
  7. Getting the churches, fraternal, college and social affiliations of the men connected with them.
  8. Providing a down town rest room and central headquarters, especially for the Regulars and militia men.

9. Saturday afternoon automobile rides over the boulevards and to the main points of interest about Indianapolis.

10. Providing prominent speakers, such as Ex-President Taft and Ex-Secretary of State Bryan for talks to the men at the Camp.

The work of this Bureau is based on the thesis that the morale of a community does much to determine the morale of the men at the Camp. If the community's morale is high, it aids in the discipline and contentment of the men at the Camp. If it be low, it hinders and lowers. Indianapolis is giving its best and not its worst to the men. Cities in the past have often given their worst to the men in khaki. Indianapolis is performing its solemn trust of caring for the men at Fort Harrison by standing ready to offer to General Glenn and the military authorities all of its resources and facilities.

"The God who gave us life gave us liberty at the same time."—Thomas Jefferson.

What the Counties Say

Clinton—

"All committees suggested have been selected and doing what they can. Everything active and in full sympathy."

Huntington—

"All instructions and the bulletins have been complied with and the committees have been appointed to take care of the work."

Gibson—

"Have found it difficult to get the councils to attend meetings and otherwise get interested, but am glad to report an improvement in that regard."

White—

"Any work you send will be taken care of just as fast as possible."

Blackford—

"We are prepared to look after Blackford county in most any emergency."

Hamilton—

"Any suggestions gratefully received."

Wabash—

"We are pushing all lines of endeavor as directed in various notes received from the State Council of Defense."

Montgomery—

"We are all willing and anxious to do our part in this great crisis."

Orange—

"Everything that can be done will be done by us."

Carroll—

"We feel gratified to know that the people of Carroll county are waking up to the situation and are doing their 'bit.'"

Knox—

"Our county defense council is fully up to date on everything requested."

Slackers Denounced

Appropriate resolutions denouncing idlers as "slackers" have been adopted by the Morgan County Council of Defense. One of the most dangerous practices in that community since the demand for workers has grown so extensive is to appear publicly with apparently nothing to do. The Indiana State Council of Defense has commended the resolution and action upon it to other county organizations.

"Let us have faith that right makes might and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it."—Abraham Lincoln.

Soldiers Aid Plan

Financial Assistance Will Be Rendered Wayne County Men in the Army

A Soldiers' Business Aid Committee has been promulgated by the Wayne County Council of Defense for the purpose of rendering assistance to United States soldiers, sailors and marines in managing the details of their private business while they are away from home and to render them assistance in obtaining employment when they return.

Hereafter the word "soldier" shall be construed to include all persons in the military or naval service of the United States. The details of the business especially to be looked after upon the request of a soldier are:

- (a) To render, without charge, any legal service desired from the time of call to the colors until the end of the war.
- (b) To see that during the absence of the soldier there shall be no lapse in his insurance policies when same is not vitiated by war service; no failure to pay taxes on property nor interest on mortgage indebtedness, and to make such legal transfers as the soldier or his family may desire.
- (c) To see that no advantage shall be taken of any soldier in legal proceedings in which he may be a party or in which he may have an interest.
- (d) To look after and assist in caring for all persons who may be, or who may hereafter become, dependent upon a soldier for support.
- (e) To aid soldiers in securing employment when they return.
- (f) To arrange for special training or education of soldiers partially disabled by wounds or disease.
- (g) To see that all soldiers who are called to the colors are properly registered, so that they may vote during their absence.
- (h) To perform any other service for soldiers when necessity therefor arises during their absence at the front.

Organization—

The unit for service shall be Wayne county, and the committee shall serve such county exclusively, and shall have the right to constitute branch or township committees in such numbers as they deem proper.

Personnel—

The committee for Wayne county is as follows: Paul A. Beckett, lawyer. Gath Freeman, lawyer. Lawrence Handley, banker. W. H. Roney, merchant. J. F. Hornaday, merchant.

Finances—

This committee shall depend upon voluntary contributions, an accurate account of which shall be kept, and whatever shall be left over of the contributions shall be returned pro rata when the work of the committee shall have been completed after peace.

Whenever soldiers are able to do so they shall be expected, after the war, to repay any money that shall be advanced for them in keeping in force their life insurance policies and in paying taxes, interest, etc., and the total sums returned, as well as the amount left over from donations, shall be distributed pro rata after the end of the war to those who shall have contributed.

No officer of this committee, or member thereof, shall be paid for any service, no rents shall be paid, and only such necessary expenses as printing, postage, etc., shall be deducted from the sum received, and strict account shall be kept, subject to inspection at any time by any person interested.

After the war is over and all business has been concluded, the books and accounts shall be turned over to the Indiana Council of Defense for audit and preservation.

"The law of humanity must reign over the assertion of all human rights."—William Ellery Channing.

The Hoover Pledge

We are hearing so much about economy of food nowadays that some of us are getting a little touchy. And yet, it seems, there are still many of us who do not understand the present meaning of the word. We think of it, as we always thought of economy—in terms of dollars, and Mr. Hoover is asking us to think of it in terms of food. It is not for the sake of our pocketbooks that he is making his campaign, but for the sake of making the food go around.

When we sit down to the family dinner, we do not expect the head of the house, because he does the carving, to help himself abundantly and skimp the rest of us. Uncle Sam now sits at the head of the World Dinner Table—and the table is not too well filled. Mr. Hoover is asking him to apportion the dishes so that all his children shall get a square meal.

There is not enough meat and wheat in the world for everybody, if we waste a bit or if we eat more than our share. So don't be selfish—not on account of your bank account, but because you want the boys at the front, our boys, and the brave men of brave France, almost bled white and fighting our battles, to be well fed. There is the same necessity with fats and sugars.

So eat perishable foods here at home in order that the grains and meats that will bear transporting may go where they are more needed. And eat the things that grow near you, because trains are needed to carry men and war materials and we have no right to ask them to bring us luxuries from afar when the very safety of the world depends on efficiency in other directions.

Food conservation, then, is not a matter of personal choice. It's a world matter, in which every one ought to do team work.

Is it fair to our men at the front, who are offering their lives for world democracy, that women should fail in helping to feed the world democracy?

But it is not only a woman's problem. Although 90 per cent. of the food eaten is served in homes, remember that while mother prepares it, father and the children eat it. Women must keep in mind the world necessity and the world program while they are getting dinner, but the rest of the family must cheerfully accept the changed menu and learn to like war breads.

ALICE AMES WINTER, Chairman,
National Council of Defense, Woman's Committee,
Minnesota Division.

State Organization for Women's Service

Becomes a Co-operating Part of the State Council in April.

The Indiana League for Women's Service was organized in April, 1917, and the service of this league was offered to Governor Goodrich. At the suggestion of the Governor the league became a co-operating part of the State Council of Defense at its first meeting, and is now operating as a committee in the department of women's activities of which Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle is general chairman.

The league consists of five State officers, a chairman in each congressional district of the State and a chairman in each county. The woman selected for the county chairman was the woman member of the County Council of Defense in each county. The league has an executive committee of the State officers and fifteen women who are the heads of great State organizations of women.

The first work of the league has been the enrollment of women so that the State might have a register of the woman power of the State. For this purpose the league has placed 325,000 service cards in the ninety-two counties of Indiana and has called upon the county chairman of each county to place a woman in each precinct of her county to distribute these cards. The league will call in the cards between August 15 and September 1. The league offered its organization to Dr. Harry E. Barnard and its women will place the Hoover food cards in the State.

The league will distribute the cards of the National Defense Committee of women and see that they are held in each county of Indiana, so that Indiana women may be ready to respond by counties if an appeal for their aid comes from President Wilson.

The league passed the enclosed resolution and sent it to our Congressmen, Senators, Herbert Hoover and President Wilson, to show that we are standing squarely by the President and his plans for the war.

The league responded to the call from Jeffersonville for aid in making shirts for our army and we are co-operating with Colonel Wood, the quartermaster. Through its efforts fifty counties responded to the call from Jeffersonville and many of the 15,000 Indiana women now making shirts for the army were mobilized through the league. Next week the league expects to open a larger shop for army shirts in Indianapolis, in the Wulschner building, to share with the Red Cross and bring work to five hundred women.

The services of this league have been offered to the Indiana cannery and when the service cards come in it expects to help them secure women to work in canneries on shifts of hours that will enable the housewife to help there certain hours in the day if she is needed.

The league believes in this war and the great war message of President Wilson and wishes to render practical aid to Governor Goodrich and give every woman in Indiana a chance to do her bit.

Patriotism and Profits

"Patriotism leaves profits out of the question. In these days of our supreme trial, when we are sending hundreds of thousands of our young men across the seas to serve a great cause, no true man who stays behind to work for them and sustain them by his labor will ask himself what he is personally going to make out of that labor."—President Wilson's address of July 11.

Boys Working Reserve

Quota of Counties as Fixed by United States Department of Labor.

Indiana is asked by the United States Department of Labor to enroll 50,000 boys in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which is intended to replace the man-power about to be withdrawn from the farms, the mills and the mines for service in the army. There is every reason to believe the State will far surpass its quota, which follows, by counties:

Adams .....	430	Lawrence .....	500
Allen .....	1,660	Madison .....	1,500

The quota for Indianapolis, worked out on a population basis, will be 5,300 boys. Marion county outside of the city will be expected to provide 500 more, making a total for the county of 5,800 boys. Evansville and Fort Wayne have a quota of 1,450 each. Terre Haute will be called on for 1,400 and South Bend for 1,200. Gary's quota is 700 and East Chicago's 550. Hammond, Muncie and Richmond are each expected to provide 500. The quota for Anderson is 470, and that of Elkhart 430. Michigan City and Lafayette will provide 420 each, while the cities of Kokomo, Logansport, New Albany and Marion have a quota of 410 each.

Three Basic Reasons.

Dr. Shailer Matthews, dean of the University of Chicago, has enumerated the three basic reasons why America is in the war. They are:

1. By plots and outrages and destruction of property here in the United States, and by wanton sinking of our ships at sea, Germany has invaded America as unmistakably as if a German army had landed on our coasts.
2. This invading army must be whipped on European soil or he will have to be fought on our own soil.
3. Failure to beat him down over there will expose our own people, here in the United States, to outrages and atrocities probably worse than those which have been perpetrated in Belgium, in northern France and on the seas, "acts," as one speaker put it, "that would make Satan shudder in hell."

"They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety."—Benjamin Franklin.

"Four-Minute Men" Publicity Campaign

They Form What has been Aptly Called "The President's Telephone."

While movie audiences totalling more than 2,000,000 were reading conservation messages, and illustrations of the horrors of waste, "Four-Minute Men" were telling them why America went to war with Germany, how essential it is that the war be won, and the best methods of helping Uncle Sam win it. The "Four-Minute Men," who talk the time indicated, in the movie houses of the State, have been a very effective publicity agency. They have contributed to every propaganda the State Council of Defense has put forth, and under the direction of Philip T. White of Indianapolis bid fair to continue one of the best result-getters in the work of organizing the men and materials of Indiana for war. Mr. White has the assistance of effective speakers in most of the counties of the State who have been supplied with material, and slides for illustrating their talks. The other counties of the State are being organized and it is believed the organization will stand 100 per cent. complete within a few weeks. This organization has been very appropriately designated "The President's Telephone."

Following are the men in service:

Adams—Avon Burk, Decatur.
Bartholomew—Jesse Newsom, Columbus.
Boone—Rev. Chas. A. Parkin, Lebanon.
Carroll—Judge Jas. P. Wason, Delphi.

Will Say Good-bye to Soldier Boys

Six Military Bands Will Provide Patriotic
Music for Parade.

Citizens by the thousands are expected to pour into Indianapolis next Sunday, August 26, to join in a demonstration in honor of the Indiana men who soon are to go to the battle front in France to fight for the glory of the State and Nation.

The demonstration will be both for all National Guard organizations now mobilized in Indianapolis and the men who have been called to the new national army.

In the honor position of the monster parade, scheduled to move promptly at 2:30 o'clock, will be the First Indiana Artillery Regiment, commanded by Col. Robert H. Tyndall, which already is under orders to go to France at an early date. This regiment is one of the units chosen for the first Rainbow Division of guardsmen selected for early foreign service. Eighteen hundred men are in this organization. The regiment includes a battery from Lafayette, two batteries from Fort Wayne, a battery from Bloomington and two batteries from Indianapolis. The artillery band is largely made up of Indiana, DePauw and Purdue students.

The infantry units in the parade will include ten Indianapolis companies of the First and Fourth Regiments and the Anderson company of the Fourth Infantry, and there also will be two Indianapolis troops of cavalry, a signal company and a company of engineers. In all there will be about 3,200 national guardsmen, and in addition there will be between 1,000 and 2,000 men called for the new national army.

Six military bands will provide patriotic music and a feature of the parade, which will pass on Meridian and Washington streets and around the Monument, will be singing by the crowd of spectators as well as the soldiers themselves. Governor Goodrich, the former governors of Indiana, former Vice-President Fairbanks and others will be reviewing officers. The traction lines are planning to run special cars to accommodate the crowds which will be attracted to Indianapolis.

The Doctors Problem

On Page 8 of this edition of the Indiana Bulletin is a chart of the State which gives a very definite suggestion of the great problem that confronts the medical section of the State Council of Defense. The United States government is asking for doctors for the army and it is not getting them. A pitifully small proportion of the doctors are volunteering; fewer are being drafted, and the result is that unless the situation is very materially changed it will be necessary to conscript physicians for service in the army. Indiana must furnish for the service about 800 doctors, of whom only about 260 have been provided by voluntary enlistment and conscription of those of military age.

The chart gives on top, in each county, the population, the second figure the number of doctors in the county, the third the number of doctors under 55 years of age (only such are available for military service), the fourth the doctors who have applied for service and fifth those who have been accepted.

The situation is so serious, according to Dr. Charles P. Emerson, head of the medical section and a member of the State Council, "that something must be done, and done quickly."

More and Better Live Stock Asked

Food Production and Conservation Committee is Active.

The following were present at the ninth meeting of the Food Production and Conservation Committee at the club house, Hazelden farm, Brook, Ind.:

L. H. Wright, Acting Chairman.
Professor G. I. Christie, Director.
W. W. Bonner, Secretary.
W. Q. Fitch, Assistant Secretary.
C. B. Riley.
H. E. Barnard.
Warren T. McCray.
Will S. Robbins.
W. A. Guthrie.
Maurice Douglas.
Professor J. H. Skinner.
Professor R. E. Caldwell.

At a previous meeting some time was devoted to a discussion of the sheep-raising problems. Mr. Schwab of Purdue presented some interesting data on the subject at that time. The committee asked Mr. Schwab to secure additional information on the dog menace and sources of sheep-breeding stock. A report prepared by Mr. Schwab concerning the sources of sheep in the United States was read by the secretary. Following the reading of this a discussion was entered into by various members of the committee concerning live stock clubs which might be formed in Indiana. It was suggested by Professor Christie that Mr. Bonner, as chairman of the agricultural committee of the State Bankers' Association call a meeting of his committee with the live stock division of the State food committee. Mr. Bonner agreed that he would be glad to do this and have Professor Skinner and Professor Christie and Mr. McCray confer with them at the time of the meeting, which would probably be within a week.

As a result of the sheep and dog discussion Professor Christie suggested the appointing of a committee to investigate the situation. Mr. Riley moved that the live stock committee, consisting of Messrs. McCray, Robbins and Skinner, make the proper investigation and present the matter to both State and national authorities. The motion carried.

SOURCES OF SEED STOCKS.

A letter concerning the sources of seed stocks from Dr. A. C. True, United States Department of Agriculture, was presented. Mr. Bonner moved that a committee of five be appointed to carry out the provisions of the letter. This was seconded by Mr. Riley and the motion carried. Mr. Bonner nominated Professor G. I. Christie, George E. Bryant, J. N. McMahan, Marshall Vogler and C. B. Riley. The nomination was seconded by Dr. Barnard. Mr. C. B. Riley asked that his name be withdrawn and suggested in his place Mr. P. E. Goodrich of Winchester. This the committee agreed to. A vote was called for and the motion carried. It was taken by consent that Professor Christie should act as chairman of this committee.

A telegram was then presented from D. F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, relative to the wheat and rye situation in Indiana. It called for a meeting of six States, to be participated in by the interested organizations on August 20 and 21, at Indianapolis. The Claypool Hotel has been selected as the meeting place. Mr. Riley moved that the entire wheat committee be present at this meeting and that the secretary notify the members of the meeting. This was seconded by Mr. McCray and the motion carried.

Mr. Riley moved that a communication offering the services of the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation be presented to Mr. Hoover, National Food Administrator. The motion was seconded by Mr. Guthrie and carried.

The meeting adjourned at 12:30, to convene after dinner.

AFTERNOON SESSION—2:30 P. M.

The question of agricultural exemptions for military service was discussed. It was the consensus of opinion that a definite plan of policy should be given out by the government. It was moved by Mr. Guthrie, and seconded by Mr. McCray, that a committee be appointed to take up with the federal authorities and determine, if possible, a definite policy concerning the exemptions of agricultural men. The motion carried. It was taken by consent that the chair appoint this committee. Mr. Wright appointed Professor Christie as chairman, Mr. Guthrie, Mr. McCray, Dr. Barnard, Mr. Robbins and Mr. Bonner. Mr. Riley moved that Mr. Wright be added to the committee. This was seconded by Dr. Barnard and was taken by consent.

A discussion of the live stock situation was taken up. It is evident that a large number of live stock feeders of the country are feeding or expect to feed fewer animals than usual this season. After some discussion of the situation Mr. Riley moved that this phase of the live stock question be referred to the live stock committee appointed in the morning. The motion was seconded and carried.

Mr. Wright called attention to the fact that ample publicity to all actions of the various committees should be given to the press.

Dr. Barnard moved that a letter of appreciation of the hospitality of Mr. George Ade and Mr. Warren T. McCray in furnishing the day's entertainment and outing be sent to them on behalf of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. Mr. Bonner and Dr. Barnard were asked by the committee to prepare this letter.

The meeting adjourned to the call of the director.

Newton County to Watch for Enemies

Protection Committee Directed to Keep Lookout for All Slackers.

R. R. Cummings, secretary, gives the following report of the activities of the Newton County Council of Defense:

Little has been heard of the activity of the Newton County Council of Defense, but the council is holding regular meetings and perfecting an organization in Newton county along the lines that are being suggested by the State Council of Defense.

Among the important branches of the work for the various councils of defense which have been suggested by the State Council is a protection committee. The function of this committee is to secure what information is available concerning those who are talking antagonistic to the government and to the prosecution of the war, and who are talking and acting in sympathy with some of the well-known sects who are now getting some undesirable publicity because of their antagonism to the prosecution of the war.

The local council has appointed a chairman of the protection committee for Newton county, and given him power to select as many assistants in each township as he deems expedient. The members of this committee will be unknown to the public, but we are given to understand that this organization is going to be perfected to the last detail, and that every act of disloyalty which comes to the knowledge of this committee will be reported to the federal authorities for such action as Uncle Sam sees fit to take, and we firmly believe that it will behoove all of our citizens who are not in sympathy with the war or with the government to keep their ideas strictly to themselves, as any pro-German sympathizer who becomes active will be severely dealt with. And we are given to understand that the protection committee is going to be a very vigilant organization.

"The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and to alter the constitutions of government."—George Washington, in his Farewell Address.

No Salaries Paid to Council Members

They Also Pay Their Own Expenses to Meetings Held Weekly.

Members of the State Council of Defense receive no financial compensation whatever for their services. They pay their own expenses. Meetings are held every Wednesday, and inasmuch as many of them live at considerable distance from Indianapolis, the cost of traveling is no small item.

The average of attendance at each regular meeting of the Council has been high. Although any number constitutes a quorum, under the rules of the organization there has not been a meeting at which less than a majority of the members has been present.

Meetings are held at 10:30 o'clock every Wednesday. In not a few instances it has been necessary to continue the session until late in the afternoon, on account of the multiplicity of matters demanding attention.

It has been the custom to hear first at each meeting persons who desire the attention or assistance in some patriotic matter. This is followed by the consideration of pending matters and then by committee reports and communications, either from individuals, other State councils or the Council of National Defense.

Reports of the proceedings of the Council are kept in stenographic form. These translated notes are bound and will become a part of the permanent records of the State.

Members of the Council receive memoranda of the proceedings following each meeting, and upon important matters that develop between meetings a referendum by mail or telegraph is conducted, in order that the sense of a majority may be ascertained before any action is taken.

Sending the Boys Away

The State Council of Defense believes that every community in Indiana should give a hearty sendoff to the boys about to be mustered into the army.

When a boy leaves his home town for an indefinite somewhere to fight for his country, he should carry with him the cheering knowledge that all of his old friends and neighbors are pulling for him and wishing him well.

To the County Councils of Defense, to local clubs, to Chambers of Commerce, Business Men's Associations, churches and all organizations of helpful purpose, the State Council sends the following message:

Get your boys together and give them a friendly slap on the back before they start for the training camps.

If it is not convenient to assemble at one point all of the men from your county, let each township or corporate town have a separate celebration.

Get the boys together and let them do their first parade or "hike" in the presence of their own townsmen.

Let the good-bye exercises be of a public character and encourage all the people to turn out.

Provide a program which will be of real interest and entertainment. Remember that one good speech of reasonable length is better than two or three drowsy efforts by gentlemen whom nature never intended to be orators.

If possible, have the celebration just a day or two before the boys are departing.

A suggested plan is to have churches and clubs unite in serving a dinner or supper to follow the band concert, the parade and other public exercises. The boys will be the guests of honor but all other persons will pay a fair price for the repast and the receipts will go into a fund for sending home comforts and necessities to the boys later on.

Say to every Hoosier boy marching away, "Good-bye, Jim; take keer of yourself," and say it so that he will know that his home folks are with him until the war is won.

Marshall Hacker Appeals to Women

Urges That They Lend Assistance in Hoover Food Plans.

Judge Marshall Hacker, chairman of the Bartholomew County Council of Defense, has issued a call to the patriotic women of Bartholomew county, asking them to aid in the food conservation plans under the general direction of Herbert C. Hoover, national food administrator. Judge Hacker's appeal follows:

To the Patriotic Women of Bartholomew County:

You have done splendidly in assisting to raise the Red Cross fund and in providing for the comfort of the soldiers in knitting socks and making comfort kits and other necessary things. Congress has passed the food conservation bill and it has been signed by the President and Mr. Hoover has been appointed director. The government, through the agency of the State and county councils of defense, is now calling for the enrollment of all the women of the country for the purpose of food conservation and service. They are asked to sign a card giving certain information in order that the authorities may have their names and be in touch with them. The signing of the cards involves no obligation of any kind whatever, but will be of a direct benefit to the signers who will, in return, receive much useful information concerning food conservation and other necessary and important things. Mrs. Harriet Overstreet, the lady member of the County Council of Defense, has charge of the enrollment for Bartholomew county, and her success in this will depend upon the patriotism of the women of the county whom she may ask to help her. It will be necessary for her to have helpers in each voting precinct in the county to make this enrollment as the women will have to be seen personally in order to get them to sign the cards. Now if the women whom she may ask to assist her shall make excuses, trivial or otherwise, and refuse to "do their bit" then the undertaking will be a failure on account of slackers. Governor Goodrich in a proclamation published in the newspapers only a day or two ago urged the necessity of this work, and I have direct information that in many of the counties the women are taking hold of the work with an enthusiasm that entitles them to all honor and credit. Some of us cannot go to war, and some cannot be Red Cross nurses, but all can lend a hand in one way or another. And I appeal to the patriotic women of the county to lay other duties aside and cordially and patriotically give their assistance to Mrs. Overstreet in this enrollment of the women of the county and they will have rendered a service as loyal and as patriotic as others do in any other line of service.

MARSHALL HACKER,

Chairman of the County Council of Defense.

Investigation of Reserve is Urged

County Councils Asked to Appoint Committee of Five for Purpose.

County councils of the State have been asked to appoint a committee of five reputable citizens to make a full and complete investigation of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, with a view to setting at rest all false and misleading statements that the reserve is of a military character. The State Council feels that the mothers and fathers of the young men who are being asked to enroll in this important organization have a right to a full and complete unprejudiced statement of the facts, and to this end urges each local defense body to act promptly, so that the work, which is under the direction of the United States Department of Labor, may proceed uninterruptedly. This matter is the subject of Bulletin No. 30, just issued by the State Council.

Harry Cecil Awarded First Reserve Medal

In recognition of the patriotic spirit represented in his working in the Gary steel mills during his summer vacation, Harry J. Cecil, age 19, has been awarded the first bronze medal as a member of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. Young Cecil is a student in the engineering department at Purdue. He willingly gave up all the usual summer recreation when he learned of the shortage of men at the Gary mill, due to war orders and the withdrawal of many men for service in the army.

In Economy Campaign.

Farmers and merchants of New Albany will hold a big fall jubilee at Glenwood park, September 27. At that time it is expected every merchant in Floyd county will have enlisted in the national economy campaign, which is directed against the unnecessary delivery of merchandise, the exchange of goods purchased, the elimination of C. O. D. charges and other forms of waste.

Shortest Road to Peace

"No matter how short or how long the war, the shortest road to peace is the road straight ahead, with no division in the American people. Any division would make the war much more costly in money and in men. The one overshadowing fact that we must make the world understand is that the nation stands as one man and that no matter how long the war lasts we shall oppose the enemy with one solid and indissoluble front. In great America one of our cherished rights is freedom of speech, but freedom of speech ends when the nation once has made up its mind and reached its decision. Our nation is one. The man who in this hour of trial raises a discordant voice, that man's heart is not with his country, let me say."—William J. Bryan at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Potatoes Will Be Cheaper

The office of information of the Department of Agriculture authorizes the following:

"The huge potato crop, which the forecast made by the Department of Agriculture indicates will be produced in the United States this year, means that this important food staple will be cheaper and makes it possible for American families that had to cut down on potato consumption because of high prices to restore the tuber to a prominent place on their bill of fare.

"The department forecast, based on reliable estimates from all parts of the country, places the total potato yield at more than 467,000,000 bushels, as compared with 285,000,000 in 1916 and 360,000,000 in 1915. Potatoes of the current season are already in the market in large quantities, and since the early harvested tubers cannot be kept easily, should be eaten more abundantly now if spoilage is to be avoided."

Increased Acreage for Wheat and Rye

Government Agents Confer with Representatives of Six Producing States.

Agricultural leaders of Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky, Michigan and Wisconsin held a conference in Indianapolis, August 20 and 21. The conference was called by David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, and was opened by his assistant, R. A. Pearson, who outlined the wheat situation of the world and the United States in particular, calling attention to the existing shortage. Mr. Pearson then spoke of the work of Congress and the Department of Agriculture to increase production to meet the present shortage.

Four large questions that must be settled in the government plan for next year's crops developed at the conference. They are:

- The labor problem as affected by the draft.
- Transportation facilities.
- Sufficient supply of seed.
- Adequate fertilizer for poor land.

The question of farm labor seemed to be the most serious problem before the agricultural people. This question was first introduced by G. I. Christie, State Food Director for Indiana. One speaker declared he believed all farmers should be exempted on the first call. In answer another speaker expressed the belief that the farmers' problem in this respect would be settled without great difficulty. It was suggested that men engaged in some industries, considering that they do not work the year around, would be available and that the school year would be arranged so that young men could go directly to the farm at the close of school terms. Professor Christie said the increase of wheat acreage for this State of 25 per cent. was not impossible, but that a number of the existing difficulties must be overcome, and this question of labor shortage due largely to the call of the government for soldiers stood out as the largest one.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES.

The transportation facilities are thought to be well taken care of through the National Car Service Commission of which Fairfax Harrison is chairman. This branch of the federal organization is one of the most efficient divisions of the government and transportation difficulties need only be referred to this commission to receive proper attention.

A committee of experts from the United States department have been studying the food problems in consultation with specialists in the several States with the view of recommending to the producers of the nation what they should now prepare to produce another year in order to care for home and foreign demands. To supply the estimated needs of the United States, of the allies and in part of the neutral countries of Europe next year it will be necessary to plant in the United States for 1918 about 48.7 million acres of winter wheat, 19 million acres of spring wheat and 5.6 million acres of rye. To sow the best seed on this vast area is one of the problems before the several States. Indiana is asked to produce 2,800,000 acres of wheat or an increase over 1916 of over a half million acres.

George N. Coffey of Illinois expressed the opinion that the high price which wheat can be expected to bring next year would in itself result in an increase of at least 20 per cent. in the acreage seeded. The sowing of wheat he said would actually help the labor situation, since less labor is required on an acre of wheat than on an acre of corn. Dean Davenport of the Illinois Agricultural college, however, declared that in his State no absolute increase in acreage can be expected and that if the wheat acreage is increased it must be at the expense of some other crop.

TO SECURE INCREASED ACREAGE.

Professor Christie suggested that it would be to the interest of the farmers and would facilitate an increased acreage seeded if the price to be fixed by the government for wheat could be expressed as the price actually to be obtained by the farmers at the nearest elevator rather than the price at some one market.

The extremely high price of commercial fertilizers is making it very difficult for the farmers to obtain what they should use on the poor land. The price of nitrogen and potash at the present time is prohibitive. This means that a large demand is being made upon the supply of acid phosphate and raw rock phosphate. A large number of fertilizer concerns have various amounts of ready mixed fertilizers on hand and in many cases the farmers are forced to accept this material or do without. The price of these ready mixed fertilizers is too high to be profitable even at the extremely high price of grain.

In discussing the conference at the close of the session the opinion was expressed that the draft would seriously interfere with the campaign to encourage an increased wheat and rye acreage, as many young farmers would not plan next year's crops until they know definitely whether the government considers their services more valuable in the trenches than on the farm.

Purposes of Food Control Set Out

To Stabilize and Not Disturb Conditions and Defend Honesty.

President Wilson has approved the appointment of Dr. H. E. Barnard, State Food Commissioner and a member of the Committee of Food Supply and Conservation of the State Council of Defense, to represent the United States Food Administration as Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana.

This appointment was made under the Act commonly known as the Hoover Food Bill, which was approved by President Wilson on August 10. In writing Dr. Barnard, Mr. Hoover says:

"The hopes of the Food Administration are threefold: First, to so guide the trade in the fundamental food commodities as to eliminate vicious speculation, extortion and wasteful practices and to guard our exports so that against the world's shortage we retain sufficient supplies for our own people; second, to co-operate with the Allies to prevent inflation of prices; and, third, to stimulate in every manner within our power the saving of our food in order that we may increase exports to our Allies to a point which will enable them to properly provision their armies and to feed their peoples during the coming winter.

"The Food Administration is called into being to stabilize and not to disturb conditions and to defend honest enterprise against illegitimate competition. It has been devised to correct the abnormalities and abuses that have crept into trade by reason of the world disturbance and to restore business as far as may be to a reasonable basis."

Franchise League Enrolling Women

Mrs. Edwards Says Fine Responses are Being Received From Over State.

Excellent responses are being received by the more than sixty branches of the Indiana Franchise League, according to Mrs. Richard Edwards, who is directing the organization's activities in securing enrollments of Indiana women in the Hoover food movement and the service league. Mrs. Edwards says her organization is complete by counties, townships, precinct and city blocks and that she is confident of its ability to secure a full representation of the women of the State in these important patriotic activities.

Evans Heads Committee.

Edgar H. Evans of Indianapolis is chairman of the wheat sub-committee of the Food Production and Conservation Committee of the State Council of Defense. Mr. Evans' name was inadvertently omitted from the list printed in the first edition of the Bulletin.

People Are Urged to Join in Singing

Teachers Will Encourage the Idea of Community Music.

Since the United States has entered the world war there has come again and again the cry throughout the country that we as a nation need something that will give expression to all classes of people; something that is within the reach of us all; some one thing that is a sort of inherent method of releasing pent-up feelings of sorrow or joy. The trite old phrase, "Music hath charm to soothe the savage breast," has been taken in earnest, has been brushed up, modernized, dressed in new clothes and, in the typical American way, has been made a practical thing. Since the beginning of time musical expression has been attendant upon almost every kind of ceremony that has entered the chronicles of history and has always played an important part.

With this in mind W. S. Bittner of the extension division of Indiana University has taken up the movement for community singing. This has assumed great significance, for it is recognized as a powerful force, making for unity and devotion, two characteristics of prime necessity in time of war.

The State Council of Defense calls all Indiana to raise her voice in song. Let's begin now!

There is no greater inspiration in all the world than that of music. It is the great welder and harmonizer of the spirit of communities, States and nations.

Marching men forget the wearisome hours of marching and step out with new life to the strains of martial music. Prisoners and the men in the concentration camps unite their voices in song and take fresh courage.

The time of strife is here. The fighting men are getting ready to go to France. Many are already there. We need not only public entertainment and general amusement for relief from thoughts of war, but something to take to our homes for comfort.

Music is the answer.

The State Council of Defense, realizing the power of music in mental and moral preparedness, urges you to do your utmost to set Indiana singing this winter.

Working in connection with the extension division of Indiana University, R. G. McCutchan, dean of the School of Music of DePauw University, will undertake the organization of this work. In co-operation with G. E. Schlafer of Indiana University extension division and others he will attempt to bring the matter of singing as a patriotic measure before all the teachers of public schools of Indiana at the various county institutes during August and September. It is ardently hoped that the teachers, after having this matter presented to them, will in turn do much with patriotic singing in the school rooms of the State. It is also part of the plan to help and encourage the organization of community singing wherever and whenever possible.

Law Enforcement an Official Duty.

Law enforcement stands upon the same basis on which it has rested from time immemorial among a free people.

Enforcement of law, as it has ever been, is the duty of the proper authorities—the United States marshal, the sheriff, the police.

It is the duty of every citizen, as it has always been, to aid and sustain the officers who should enforce the law.

The State cannot and ought not to interfere in any community until the resources of its own people are exhausted and their best efforts have proved futile.

The duty of the county protection committee begins only where the laws fail, because citizenship is feeble; or local officials are wrong, whether from wilfulness or weakness; or because the enemies of public order are stronger than its supporters; or because new conditions are created out of military exigency.

Let civic sense and official fidelity see to enforcement of the law.

Will Release Men From Minor Duties

Merchants Organize to Effect Economies by Stopping Useless Deliveries.

The committee appointed by the State Council of Defense to put into operation the recommendations of the National and State Councils of Defense looking to the release of men and capital employed in the delivery of merchandise throughout the State of Indiana in order that such men and capital may be released for other duties more vital to the welfare of the nation, held its first meeting at 2 p. m. Friday, August 10, in Room 84 of the State House. The following members of the committee were present:

Frederic M. Ayres, Chairman, Indianapolis.
H. W. Eldridge, South Bend.
J. E. Karns, Indianapolis.
David Meyer, Anderson.
C. M. Mills, Fort Wayne.
S. W. Newberger, New Albany.
Lee B. Nusbaum, Richmond.
Carl S. Wise, Logansport.

R. A. Andres was represented by Mr. Shepman and Mr. Milton Herz by H. W. Cohen—Mr. Myer Heller of Newcastle, Mr. J. C. O'Hara of Muncie and Mr. J. H. Schuessler of Lafayette being absent.

The committee elected Mr. W. E. Balch of Indianapolis secretary.

It was voted by the committee that with the approval of the State Council of Defense the committee be known as the Merchants' Economy Committee of the State Council of Defense. That the committee recommend to the State Council of Defense that it request of the merchants throughout Indiana that they conform with the rules and regulations regarding the delivery and return of merchandise that were adopted by the merchants of the United States at the meeting held in Washington, D. C., July 10, 1917, this meeting being called at the request of the Economy Board of the National Council of Defense, and which rules and regulations were approved by the Economy Board, which met with the merchants at this meeting.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

The following are the rules and regulations which were adopted at the Washington meeting:

"1. That the number of package deliveries be reduced to two a day in all cities of the United States, with the exception of Christmas and during periods of distress; and, further, that the package deliveries be reduced to one a day in all cities and towns where it is possible and will work out economies in men and capital.

"2. That a charge be made for special deliveries. A special delivery to be defined as a parcel ordered sent by a special messenger by a customer who is unwilling to wait for the regular delivery, but not including, however, so-called specials caused through the operation of a store's alteration department, and also specials caused through errors of store's employees. The amount of the charge to be decided by the local retail stores, or organizations, and based on the exact or approximate average cost of handling."

That in compliance with the request of the government, as expressed by the Commercial Economy Board, this committee go on record as favoring the immediate adoption in every city and town in the United States of stringent rules to regulate the return of merchandise. The committee suggests for the consideration of each community the rule now in successful operation in the city of Cleveland, which is as follows, with the recommendation that the limit for returns be forty-eight (48) hours:

CLEVELAND PLAN REGARDING RETURN OF MERCHANDISE.

1. Non-Returnable Articles—

The following articles for legal, sanitary or other reasons cannot be accepted for return:

- (a) Bedding and mattresses.

- (b) Garments that have been altered for the purchaser.
- (c) Shoes which have been altered.
- (d) Combs, hair brushes and tooth brushes.
- (e) Hair goods, hair ornaments and veils.
- (f) Rubber goods, sundries.
- (g) Women's hats which have been made specially to the customer's order, or which have been worn.
- (h) All goods cut from the piece at the customer's request.
- (i) All merchandise which has been made to order or specially ordered and which is not regularly carried in stock.

II. Returnable Goods—

Any article of merchandise which for some good reason is to be returned to a store must be returned within a reasonable time—two business days.

III. Condition—Sales Checks—

- (a) No article will be accepted for return unless it is in its original condition.
- (b) No merchandise of any kind which has been used will be accepted for return.
- (c) The sales check must accompany all returned merchandise.

IV. Gifts—

- (a) Gifts of all kinds (Christmas, wedding, birthday, etc.), if returned, will be accepted only in exchange for other merchandise and will not be credited on the account of the person receiving the gift.
- (b) Gifts may be returned for exchange at current prices only.

V. Unjust Demands—

The names of all customers who continually make unjust claims upon the merchant, or who return C. O. D. merchandise, will be reported to a central clearing house. Such information will eventually become part of the credit information supplied every merchant.

VI. Deposits on "Will Call" Purchases—

A deposit of not less than 25 per cent. of the purchase price will be required on all "Will Call" purchases.

If the State Council of Defense approves these rules and requests that the merchants in Indiana follow them, your committee adopted the following plan in order to carry them into effect:

1. That each member of the committee would undertake to have the above rules or similar ones adopted by the merchants of his own community.
2. That the State be divided into districts, the chairman of each district to be the member of the committee from that district. It shall be the duty of the chairman of each district to see that the merchants of his district put into operation as soon as possible the above rules and report from time to time the progress made.

The following is a list of the districts and the chairman thereof:

MERCHANTS' ECONOMY COMMITTEE.

Frederic M. Ayres, Chairman, Indianapolis, Ind., representing Hamilton, Hendricks, Marion, Hancock, Morgan, Johnson, Shelby, Monroe, Brown, Bartholomew, Lawrence and Jackson counties.

R. A. Andres, Evansville, Ind., representing Posey, Vanderburg, Warrick, Spencer, Perry, Crawford, Dubois, Pike, Gibson and Orange counties.

H. W. Eldridge, South Bend, Ind., representing Lake, Porter, Laporte, Starke, Pulaski, Fulton, Marshall, St. Joseph, Elkhart and Kosciusko counties.

Myer Heller, Newcastle, Ind., president Indiana Retail Dry Goods Association, representing Henry, Rush and Decatur counties.

Milton Herz, Terre Haute, Ind., representing Vermilion, Parke, Vigo, Clay, Owen, Sullivan, Greene, Knox, Daviess and Martin counties.

J. E. Karns, Indianapolis, Ind., president Indianapolis Business Men's Association, representing Indianapolis retail grocers.

David Meyer, Anderson, Ind., president Indiana Retail Grocers' Association, representing Indiana retail grocers and Madison county.

C. M. Mills, Fort Wayne, Ind., president Indiana Retail Merchants' Association, representing Lagrange, Steuben, Noble, DeKalb, Whitley, Allen, Wells and Adams counties.

S. W. Newberger, New Albany, Ind., representing Harrison, Floyd, Clark, Jefferson, Switzerland, Dearborn, Ripley, Scott, Ohio, Washington and Jennings counties.

Lee B. Nusbaum, Richmond, Ind., representing Wayne, Fayette, Union and Franklin counties.

J. C. O'Hara, Muncie, Ind., representing Delaware, Grant, Blackford, Jay and Randolph counties.

John H. Schuessler, Lafayette, Ind., representing Benton, Tippecanoe, Carroll, Clinton, Tipton and Newton counties.

Carl S. Wise, Logansport, Ind., representing White, Cass, Howard, Miami, Wabash, Huntington and Jasper counties.

F. A. Turner, Crawfordsville, Ind., representing Putnam, Boone, Montgomery, Fountain and Warren counties.

W. E. Balch, Secretary, Indianapolis, Ind.

Libraries Needed for Training Camps

American Association Starts Raising Fund of $1,000,000.

Plans to provide libraries, both buildings and books, for the soldiers at the cantonments and training camps were discussed at a series of meetings of representatives of the American Library Association from the East and South, and a campaign was started to raise at least $1,000,000 for the camp library fund. The work was entrusted to the American Library Association by the committee on training camp activities, in co-operation with the War Department, and will be in direct charge of the committee on camp libraries, of which J. I. Wyer, Jr., director of the New York State library, is chairman.

From reports presented at the various sessions it appeared that books had been proved to be the best antidotes or preventives for the evils of drinking and gambling, and also that approximately 99 per cent. of the men prefer a good book to cards or dice or drink in their off hours.

One dollar, it is figured, will furnish a book, keep it in circulation until it is worn out, and replace it when retired for physical disability.

The field to be covered by the libraries embraces the widest range, including service for recruits, for men in training, for men in mobilization, garrisons, outposts, for the men in their rest periods while on the march, and even for the men at the front.

For its very minimum contribution, each city and town and village will be asked by the association to transmute 2 per cent. of its population into dollars—that is, a city of 10,000 residents will be asked to give a minimum of $200, and so on, up and down the scale, but no limit is set on a maximum.

Hope and belief were expressed at the meetings that the press of the country would lend its help in raising this fund.

Women and Boys Enroll.

Montpelier.—The ladies in this city and in the whole county who are looking after the signatures to the Hoover food conservation cards and the State Defense Council cards are reporting good success.

The Montpelier end of the work has been very satisfactory, although a number have not yet signed the cards. Some have signified their willingness, but wanted time to look them over, while a few did not sign.

Through some misunderstanding the word has got out that the women will be drafted into some kind of service, but such is not the case. The work the women volunteers are to do by signing the cards is stated plainly on the cards and then they will not be required to do it if it is impossible at the time they are needed.

Our boys have enrolled themselves for duty on the battlefields if needed and now the mothers, wives and sisters should enroll to help in the great work that will be needed at home.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the
Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 2

The Zimmermann Note.

The famous "Zimmermann note," exposed by our Government March 1, is a document that should stick in the memories of all Americans. Remember, it was composed on January 19, 1917, at a time when Germany and America were officially very good friends, and the date was just three days before Mr. Wilson appeared in the Senate with his scheme for a league to assure peace and justice to the world.

Zimmermann admitted the authenticity of the note, and only deplored that it had been discovered. The significant parts were these:

"Berlin, January 19, 1917.

"On February 1 we intend to begin submarine warfare unrestricted. In spite of this, it is our intention to keep neutral the United States of America.

"If this attempt is not successful, we propose an alliance on the following basis with Mexico: That we shall make war together and together make peace. We shall give general financial support, and it is understood that Mexico is to reconquer the lost territory in New Mexico, Texas and Arizona. The details are left to you for settlement."

The rest of the dispatch tells the German minister in Mexico to open secret negotiations with Carranza the moment war with us is certain, and to get Carranza to draw in Japan.

Germany has attempted to apologize for this note by saying that they did not intend to do anything unless we first declared war. It is a complete retort that decent nations do not go around preparing schemes for the dismemberment of other nations with which they are at peace, and that Zimmermann's whole proposal sprang out of an evil conscience, because he realized that the submarine policy projected was so vile that the United States could not submit to it without utter loss of self-respect, and he did us the justice of believing we were not such extreme cravens as to refuse to fight.

The whole dispatch was so gross a revelation of international immorality that German-American papers immediately denounced it as a forgery, only to have its genuineness brazenly acknowledged and defended by Berlin.

When the Indiana Council of Defense appealed to the Council of National Defense for assistance in securing the privilege of franking the Indiana Bulletin through the mails, George F. Porter, chief of the section on co-operation with States, replied that it is impossible to secure free mail service for such publications at this time. To remedy this situation Congressman Esch of Wisconsin, in House Bill 5716, seeks to grant to State councils the freedom of the mails for such patriotic purposes.

The headquarters of the Indiana State Council of Defense is Room 83, State House. The council can be reached on either the Central Union or Automatic telephones. The Central Union numbers are 6020 and 6021 and the Automatic 26-718.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 31.

August 22, 1917.

Storage—County Councils of Defense:

It is quite necessary that the State Council have at the earliest moment exact information as to the storage space available in each county for the storing of the surplus produce. All foodstuffs must be carefully protected through the winter.

In many States the canning factories have offered their warehouses to the County Councils of Defense for storage purposes and arrangements have been made for heating these buildings during cold weather.

Will you, therefore, immediately make a survey of all available emergency storage space in your county?

In making this survey you should take into consideration the adaptability of the space to the purposes intended.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 32.

August 22, 1917.

Reports—County Councils of Defense:

We are anxious to chronicle each week the important activities of every council in the State. The value of such reports lies as much in their suggestive value to other councils as for the purpose of information to the State Council. We urge you to refer to the secretary, or if you have one, to your publicity committee, the request that we be supplied promptly with an account of your proceedings. Certainly every County Council has sufficient pride in its accomplishments to desire that they receive such fitting recognition as their publication in the Bulletin guarantees.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

INFORMATION BULLETIN NO. 33.

August 23, 1917.

Food Administration—County Councils of Defense:

Dr. Harry E. Barnard of Indianapolis has been appointed by Mr. Hoover, U. S. Food Administrator, as Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana. The appointment has been approved by the President.

We desire at this time to emphasize the importance of the closest co-operation between the Food Commissioner and his agents and the several County Councils of Defense. We, therefore, ask for Dr. Barnard and his agents your hearty support and assistance whenever you are called upon to co-operate with that department.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

No Fair Exhibit is Possible This Year.

War Department,

Washington, August 10, 1917.

Mr. George Creel, Chairman Committee on Public Information, Washington, D. C.:

My Dear Mr. Creel—With reference to your letter of August 2, recommending the approval of Mr. W. B. Pitkin's plan for a standard government exhibit at State and interstate fairs, I have the honor to inform you that this question has received most careful consideration and it has been decided that it would be inadvisable and impracticable at this time to accept the invitation to arrange for the desired exhibit.

It is realized that the matter is of the highest importance, and while fully appreciating that the suggested plan would stimulate patriotism, increase popular interest in military affairs, and encourage a spirit in support of the war, it is nevertheless believed that right now every effort of the department should be devoted to the organization, equipment and training of our new forces in preparation for active service in the field.

I thank you for your interest and greatly regret that favorable action cannot be taken.

Very sincerely,

H. P. McCAIN,

For and in the absence of the Secretary of War.

The Rally of the Housewives

Moll Pitcher, swabbing out the smoking muzzle of the cannon her wounded husband could no longer serve, remains an inspiring picture of heroic service. She was "doing her bit" in the vital moments of battle, and doing it well.

And today in quite the same spirit, though in a very different way, women are filled with the desire to serve. The opportunity to handle a gun in the front rank can come to but few men and women. But the equally necessary work of producing and saving food—even 3,000 miles from the battle line—must go on, and this is the woman's opportunity. The rallying call for careful saving sent out by the National Federation of Women's Clubs reached every member of this great organization. Food Administrator Hoover's appeal to women to save food at home that our Allies may not starve went to women willing to do their part. The splendid advice sent broadcast by the Department of Agriculture, with its suggestions for cutting down the waste of bread and fat and the use of other cereals for the all-essential wheat, has been especially valuable in promoting thrift and changing fixed habits of eating.

Women need no urging in this time of universal service. They do need helpful direction. The great mass of housewives who have no club affiliations, who have little time to read and less time to apply the really excellent suggestions for changing their methods of cookery, detailed in the technical magazines for the home, or supplied by experts at Washington in the form of government bulletins, are especially in need of specific instructions. They are ready to enlist, but they are "rookies" and they cannot hope to become efficient soldiers until they have been taught how. And here is where the daily paper becomes the drill sergeant and gives instructions that make it possible for every woman to bake corn bread instead of wheat; to prepare cheap meats instead of expensive cuts; to use new kinds of vegetables and new fats and oils, and with all these changes in foods and cookery to keep her family well nourished.

Any attempt at food economy that is not so wisely planned that the children continue to grow strong and healthy and the efficiency of the workers of the family is kept at its maximum, is wasted effort and an injury instead of a help.

But this result is little to be feared and the army of women mobilized for special and important service in every home stands ready for service.

War Bulletin Boards

Every town in Connecticut is being urged by the Connecticut State Council of Defense to erect in the most conspicuous public place available a bulletin board for the posting of war information. The council has worked out a uniform plan for the boards and urges that it be followed, to the end that there will be opportunity for the most effective posting of matter sent out. The boards proposed are sixty-four inches square and are intended to supplement the service of the bulletin boards in postoffices, which by executive order have been turned over to local defense agencies for the dissemination of war information.

America's Cause for War.

"The military masters of Germany denied us the right to be neutral. They filled our communities with vicious spies and conspirators. They sought to corrupt our citizens. They sought by violence to destroy our industries and arrest our commerce. They tried to incite Mexico to take up arms against us and to draw Japan into hostile alliance with her. They impudently denied us the use of the high seas and repeatedly executed their threat that they would send to their death any of our people who ventured to approach the coasts of Europe.

"This flag under which we serve would have been dishonored had we withheld our hand."—Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States.

Hard to Interest Certain Women

Hoover Food Movement Obstructed by Two Classes of Slackers.

The work of organizing the women of the State for service in the Hoover food conservation army has undoubtedly been handicapped by the difficulty of making it plain to women just what it is about. Volunteer assistants have been discouraged by the apparent indifference of the women upon whom they have called. Some have reported definite opposition. This opposition is, no doubt, stimulated by those who are more interested in a food shortage than they are in an adequate supply.

Women who have not responded to efforts to interest them in food conservation may be divided into two classes—one, slackers who say they are not interested because they do not care to make any effort and who are so selfish that after they have satisfied their own needs, they have no interest in their neighbors, in this country or in our Allies. Many such women belittle the work of the food administration. There is a surprisingly large number of women who refuse to sign the pledge cards, because, as they put it, "I don't see any use in it." "All this work is foolishness." "There is plenty of food for everybody." "We are saving all we can." These women are both slackers and egotists. Because they have all the food they can use and more, because they, in their conceit, feel that they are fully competent housewives, they set up their judgment against the judgment of Mr. Hoover. They do not understand the deep obligation that is upon us to feed the Allies and peoples associated with us in this struggle. They do not realize that forty million men who are fighting, the millions of women who are drafted to do the work of their husbands and brothers and the toll of the submarine all have conspired to reduce production so that the harvests of our Allies will fall this year 500,000,000 bushels short of their normal production. They do not know that whereas before the war that we exported but 80,000,000 bushels of wheat per year, this year, by one means or other we must find for them 225,000,000 bushels and this in the face of a short crop. And even with this assistance our Allies must eat war bread. Is it possible that the women of this country will complacently sit back, eat their white bread and refuse to work with the food administration? The second class includes those who are deliberately antagonistic to the food administration and to every effort that is made to win the war. They are un-American to the last degree. Many are definitely pro-German. They are in the same class with the soldiers who desert on the eve of battle.

There is no royal road to food conservation. It cannot be done by edict. It can only be accomplished through the sincere and earnest daily co-operation in the 20,000,000 kitchens and at the 20,000,000 dinner tables of the American people. Every American woman should be proud to enlist for service under Mr. Hoover's flag. Even if she is doing all she can to cut down waste, even if she does not agree with the methods put forth for saving food, she should sign the pledge.

Indiana women are signing the pledge by thousands and hundreds of thousands. They are not to be dissuaded from joining the Hoover army by silly rumors and false reports.

On Securing Breeding Ewes.

August 13, 1917.

Prof. G. I. Christie, Agricultural Extension Department:

Dear Sir—In compliance with your request at the committee meeting on food production and conservation work on July 25, 1917, I have secured the following information relative to securing ewes for distribution to Indiana farmers, wishing to increase their flock of sheep or start new flocks this fall.

Clay, Robinson & Company, Livestock Commission, Stock Yards, Chicago, write on August 1 as follows:

"We would be glad to undertake to fill an order for you for distribution among the farmers of Indiana wishing breeding ewes. The present market quotations are as follows: yearlings, around $14.00 to $15.00 per cwt.; two and three year olds, around $12.50 to $13.00. We question very much whether there will be very many western ewes shipped from the range this season, owing to the fact that if they wish to do so they can dispose of them right on the range at considerable more money than they would net them by shipping to market."

A market quotation from Clay, Robinson & Company on date of August 10 gives the following news relative to western breeding ewes:

"No western breeding ewes are available and few natives. The demand is insistent, with light native yearling ewes bringing from $14.00 to $15.00 and others selling from $11.50 to $13.00, according to weight and quality. Good qualified western lamb ewes of 65 to 70 pounds quoted at $14.75 to $15.00. Western lambs bought at the present time cannot be used for breeding purposes at least for one year."

The Nowlin Sheep Company, Stock Yards, Chicago, also desires to supply us with breeding ewes if it is possible for them to get them from the ranges. They also said that the supply is very much limited and the demand is much better than usual. They believe that the month of September is the best time to make inquiries relative to securing breeding ewes for distribution among farmers of the Corn Belt.

Mr. F. R. Marshall of the Bureau of Animal Industry writes in part as follows:

"I may say that the number of western ewes which will be available is very uncertain. Prices have been rising very rapidly on the range, and sheep men are likely to hold all the stock they can carry over.

"Of course, the live stock commission firms and the larger stock yards are filling such orders as they receive, and you people are doubtless familiar with these firms.

"I might also refer you to the Interstate Live Stock Corporation, managed by Mr. A. C. Bigelow, 147 South Front street, Philadelphia. When I last talked with Mr. Bigelow it was the plan of that corporation to purchase western ewes outright and lay them down in farm States where needed. This plan has the advantage of enabling farmers to see stock before purchase. If Mr. Bigelow's people decide to operate this plan, I think it should prove highly satisfactory, and I would suggest that you communicate with him. "I shall be glad to keep you posted as to any more definite provisions for using the information obtained from western States as to the location of surplus stock."

During my travels in connection with the work in the State, I have been endeavoring to find out where breeding ewes could be bought for distribution, but I find that there are very few and rather difficult to get. While I was in Lagrange county and also Steuben county I endeavored to secure enough sheep to make a car load for distribution at Paoli. I find that local demands for breeding ewes in these counties will take all ewes available at the present time.

Trusting that this will give you the information you desire, I am, Very truly yours,

J. W. SCHWAB,

Asst. in Animal Husbandry Extension.

"Pershing" Town's Name

There is no longer an "East Germantown" in Indiana. On petition of the citizens of the village, the United States Postoffice Department issued an order to Frank Gipe, postmaster, changing the name of the place to "Pershing." Thus is the name of the commander of the first American troops in France perpetuated and the loyalty of the inhabitants of the place attested. "East Germantown" was originally settled by Pennsylvania Dutch, most of whom have since moved elsewhere. It is said that there is not a single user of the German language in the community.

Kokomo has named a street after General Pershing, and other cities and towns of the country have taken similar action to honor the name of the general.

Meeting of Council

Shippers of Indiana have absolutely no complaint to make the way their consignments are handled at this time, according to the report of A. E. Reynolds of Crawfordsville, Ind., chairman of the shippers' committee to the State Council of Defense.

Mr. Reynolds stated that all classes of business are represented on his committee and an expression had been received from each member before the report was made. He added that the car supply at this time apparently is adequate to meet all demands.

Road building material, needed for the completion of certain large contracts in the State, is being given priority in certain cases, it was reported, but the material in transit is far less than ordinarily at this time of the year.

H. N. Kurrie reported that efforts to secure free transportation from interstate points for members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve had been unsuccessful, but that the railroads had agreed to avail themselves of practically all the labor available without the necessity of transporting the laborers long distances from home.

FAVORS FAREWELL RECEPTIONS.

The council gave its unqualified endorsement to local farewell receptions for soldier boys who will shortly be called away for training in big military camps.

The entire absence of any law, State or federal, under which Indiana can provide for the protection of public and private property, after the State troops are taken away for federal service, was pointed out by E. M. Wilson, who has had direction of the organization of a substitute armed force for policing the State. Mr. Wilson reports the situation is extremely critical and that its importance is known to the Governor, who is giving it very serious thought.

Chambers of Commerce have taken up the promotion of the "Four-Minute Men" movement and according to Chairman Philip T. White there are now more than 1,500 organizations in the country, including forty-five counties in Indiana, with about one hundred local bureaus.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, State Food Administrator, reported that of 173 Indiana towns reporting, for a population of about 891,113, forty told of waste of fruits and vegetables. Seventeen communities in the State have farmers' or curb markets in successful operation.

But two cities of the State are now exacting license fees for the sale of vegetables and produce. Cities generally are rescinding their license fees in order to encourage more direct marketing.

A Veteran Knits.

Wabash.—Mrs. Eva Rohbock, chairman of the district socks for soldiers unit, has shipped twenty-five more pair of finished socks to headquarters. Almost 100 pair have been made by Wabash county knitters.

The headquarters of the local sock making unit has been moved from the Commercial club to the Memorial hall, which place is considered more convenient and centrally located.

Mrs. Rohbock today commended an old civil war veteran of an Indiana town who was not "too proud to fight" but couldn't fight so he contented himself with knitting socks and has already knit seven pair.

Belgium and Germany.

Angola.—Calvin Ramsey and Professor Fred M. Starr have received from English sources a book entitled, "Belgium and Germany," compiled by Henri Davignon, which gives a complete recital of Germany's dealings with Belgium, translations of the conduct of Belgium citizens, photographs of ruin and cruelties perpetrated. The conduct of Germany towards Belgium alone constitutes an act which justifies the nations of the world in uniting against Germany or any nation guilty of such insolent and terrible violation of all laws of civilization and human rights.

Must Call Men in Their Order

Provost Marshal General Sends Telegram to All Governors.

The Provost Marshal General has sent the following telegram to the governors of all States:

Reports received concerning a few local boards are to the effect that these boards are proceeding to call throughout the whole list of persons registered, then to certify up only those who claim no exemption regardless of whether their order of obligation places them within the quota, leaving the claims of exemption undecided or merely formally allowing all of them without discrimination.

In effect this course permits volunteering among registrants. This method is illegal and unauthorized. All registrants stand in an equality before the law except as the law decrees an inequality. The law decrees an inequality only where exemption boards, after properly exercising their functions, have granted exemptions or discharges. Furthermore, the method results in calling men for military service out of their order.

Local boards should certify those who claim no exemption rapidly, but they should also act on claims for exemption rapidly and within the time prescribed by regulations and certify the cases at once. District boards should also certify promptly to local boards those who claim no exemption, but they should also act promptly on the cases of those who do claim exemption, and especially on the cases of persons whose order of obligation is early. The first 30 per cent. of the quota may be composed of men whose cases are decided, although the case of persons of prior obligation are still pending in the district board, but great care must be taken by the local board to send no one to military duty whose order of obligation is so late as to make it improbable that he will be within the total quota.

By September 19, when the second call is made, there will be enough appealed cases and cases within the exclusive jurisdiction of the district board decided to make up the second 30 per cent. from men whose order of obligation is early, and who are hence sure to be within the quota. The same will be true of the 30 per cent. to be furnished on October 3. The last 10 per cent. must be selected with great care to be sure that no one in the whole quota is sent for military duty while a selected person with an earlier order of obligation for military service is allowed to remain at home.

Responsible to God

Former Ambassador Gerard, whose book upon Germany's part in the inauguration of war is running as a serial in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, discloses to the American reader the following picture:

"I found the Emperor seated at a green iron table under a large canvas garden umbrella. Telegraph forms were scattered on the table in front of him, and basking in the gravel were two small dachshunds. I explained to the Emperor the object of my visit and we had a general conversation about the war and the state of affairs. The Emperor took some of the large telegraph blanks and wrote out in pencil his reply to the President's offer.

"The Kaiser's reply," says the publisher's announcement, "settled the fate of Belgium. It was the death warrant of millions of men. It will stand as one of the most memorable utterances in all history. In it the Kaiser reveals himself—proudly admitting a purpose and an attitude that all other Germans have frantically denied. It was too inflammatory for publication by a neutral power—too damning an indictment of its imperial author."

Here we have the testimony of an eye witness, backed by documentary evidence itself just given out at Washington as to the Kaiser's response to President Wilson's first offer of mediation, made in early August, 1914, before Belgium had been devastated. It knocks into a cocked hat the familiar contention that the Kaiser was persuaded, managed or coerced by the military ring. It reveals him as the man who shoved Bismarck aside, "dropping the pilot," as it was called at the time, and made it plain to the world at the beginning of his reign that he would, to paraphrase a Kentucky feud leader, reign as he damned pleased. It shows the Kaiser in his famous and familiar attitude as the leading modern exponent of the divine right of kings; as the Emperor who has said time and again that he is responsible to God Almighty alone. It discovers the Kaiser, without further discussion, as the enemy of peace and of civilization; as the twentieth century Attila waging a personal aggrandizement; the Alexander ambitions for world conquest; the Hohenzollern striving to keep himself and his house in power by vindicating imperialism. It proves, if proof were needed, that Wilhelm II must be defeated, finally and forever, if there is to be a real and lasting peace.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Soldier's Father Is Victim of Faker

Harvey Crawford received a roll of honor for his son, Charles, from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station at Chicago. Mr. Crawford became suspicious after he had paid $1.25 charges at the express office and wrote a letter to the commander of the station and received the following letter, which explains the swindle:

"August 3, 1917.

"Mr. H. J. Crawford, Care Indian Refining Co., Fowler, Ind.:

"My Dear Sir—The Commandant has received your letter of August 2, 1917, with reference to the receipt of a copy of an alleged 'Roll of Honor' upon which you were required to pay charges amounting to $1.25, and has requested me to inform you in reply thereto that he deeply regrets that you have been victimized by the operations of an unscrupulous concern which is apparently operating the most conscienceless form of swindle. The issue and sale of these documents have been accomplished without the official knowledge or sanction of the authorities of this station and upon the receipt of the first complaints they were referred to the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice at Chicago, Ill., for investigation and appropriate action, with the result that the publishers have been taken into custody and are now held under five thousand dollar bonds for trial on charges of operating a confidence game and impersonating Government officers.

"It is unfortunate that you were victimized, but the action instituted by the authorities of this institution is believed to have been prompt and effective and will undoubtedly result in the perpetrators of this fraud being convicted and punished with the utmost severity.

"Your letter is being referred to the Bureau of Investigation for use as evidence in the prosecution of the offenders.

"Very truly yours,

"C. S. ROBERTS,
"Lieutenant, U. S. Navy."

Wide Awake Council.

One wide-awake county council of defense in Indiana is that of Wabash county. The patriotic activity of Wabash county has been marked, interest and support being very general. To the excellent publicity secured through the Wabash papers is attributable a large measure of the success of the council. The Wabash county publicity committee consists of the following: James E. Almond, Wabash Times-Star, chairman; Russell H. Coate, Wabash Plain Dealer; Paul Moore, Service Motor Truck Company, Wabash; E. W. Gummert, Lagro Press; Harry Palmer, North Manchester Journal; Mrs. Florence Neal, Lafontaine Herald; W. E. Billings, North Manchester News; Miss Warren Roann, Clarion; Mark Ogden, Laketon; Glen Fox, Urbana, and Clarence Drook, Somerset.

Dogs Kill $100,000 Worth of Sheep

Annual Loss in Indiana so Great as to Demand Relief.

Statistics being compiled by the Food Production and Conservation Committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense indicate that approximately $100,000 is lost to the farmers and stock raisers of the State each year through the depredations of sheep-killing dogs.

Although it was believed the loss from this source was very great, members of the food committee were surprised that it reached such startling figures until after they had received reports from many counties of the State. In some instances the auditors of the counties have paid out, under the law on the subject, more than $2,000 a year to the owners of the sheep killed.

Director Christie has addressed a request to the county councilmen of the State asking that they at once report the number of sheep killed in 1915 and 1916 and the sums paid out on this account. The figures are wanted for the information of a committee that probably will undertake the preparation of relief measures.

"Under the present food situation it is likely that some action will be taken by the State and national governments to reduce this loss," says Mr. Christie.

Some states have considered legislation requiring the killing of all dogs except such as are listed as personal property and taxed accordingly. In other words, all dogs that have existed by mere right of a license tax have been condemned to death. It is argued in support of the latter course that if the dogs are valuable enough to keep they should be subject to more than a mere license tax. The elimination of many so-called pets will result in the saving of great quantities of foodstuffs that are practically wasted now.

The listing of dogs in these States puts a liability for all the damage they do upon the owner. This relieves the public treasuries of the burden of paying out large sums each year for stock killed.

Judge Collins Endorses Reserve.

"The United States Boys' Working Reserve," said Judge James A. Collins of the Marion County Criminal Court, "is one of the great civic movements growing out of the war. It reaches the boy who has been most shamefully neglected. The appeal to him to do his bit meets with a greater response than it does with the adults for the very simple reason that nobody has had a kind word for the idle boy.

"He has lived in the atmosphere of killing time, and successfully keeping out of the way of the police officer. The pool room and the drug store has been his stamping ground. This patriotic appeal in eight cases out of ten meets with a ready response.

"It goes out to thousands of boys who have become forced wage earners, and through loss of employment or other distress have deteriorated into the loafer. With the odium attached to him because of his lack of occupation, he loses his grip and interest, and it is anything 'to get by.' Recognized by the government as a force, he is instantly transformed into a willing worker.

"I predict that out of this employment will grow a lessening in juvenile crime and truancy that will stamp it as the forward juvenile movement of the times."

George Ade Says:

"No matter how long the war lasts, the farmers will be short of help during the rushed season. When the drafted men go away the call for 'hands' will be louder than ever before. The boys are the only reserve workers to be found in the State. Most of them are fairly intelligent, only a small percentage are down-right lazy. The question is, can they be utilized on the farms? The answer is YES, because the RESERVE is being tried out in several States and the reports are encouraging."

Dangers Are Real, Says Anna H. Shaw

Noted Woman Declares Hoover Would Prevent Great Distress.

"It is an error for women to feel as they do in some localities that unnecessary stress has been laid upon the necessary economy and elimination of waste in household management. The dangers depicted are not imaginary, but real; more real than people imagine, and Mr. Hoover, who in Belgium was in the midst of and witnessed the horrors of hunger which cost thousands of lives, especially of the aged and children who were unable to bear the physical strain of undernourishment, is seeking with the zeal of one who knows to prevent similar disasters from overtaking us.

"Let the women of this country refuse to indulge in the spirit of criticism, too rife among the people. Let us set an example of loyal confidence in the men whom the President selected for the special purpose of preventing suffering from hunger among either the people at home or the army abroad.

"It is our privilege and duty to uphold the food administration in every helpful way by urging women everywhere to prove their oft-repeated claim that they are ready to serve their country whenever called upon, that we may do our part in bringing a speedy victory to the cause of justice and democracy."

CAMPAIGN TO END SEPTEMBER 5.

The above paragraphs are from an address by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw to the Chairmen of the State Councils of Defense, urging that they round up the present food pledge campaign not later than September 5. Dr. Shaw, who is one of the foremost women of the nation and of the world, asks that the organization, which has worked so effectively in the several States, be continued for the purpose of extending the work already started, and which holds so much of promise in preventing a food shortage in America and among her allies.

The Indiana Hoover campaign, having been extended to September 1, is expected to be 100 per cent. complete before the time limit set by Dr. Shaw.

Every woman member of every County Council in the State owes this most important work her first attention, to the end that there be absolutely no slacker community in Indiana. The State Council of Defense desires that special emphasis be laid upon the significance of this work, and that all other activities be adjusted so as to contribute to its fullest accomplishment.

Milo Meredith in Effective Appeal

Evidence is accumulating in the office of the State Council of Defense of an aroused patriotic appreciation of the work that is to be done in organizing Indiana's men and materials for the successful prosecution of the war with Germany.

Steps have been taken by many of the county councils to finance their activities and the important requests that come to the State council from Washington are being received by the county organizations in a spirit of willingness to co-operate in whatever manner and degree is necessary.

Committees are being completed by county councils in line with the proposed plan of organization submitted some time ago by the State council, and the avenues of accomplishment soon will be open all the way from the highest executive officer of the national government to the humblest home in the most remote community of the commonwealth.

Such stirring appeals as that of Milo Meredith, chairman of the Council of Defense of Wabash county, are having their effect. Mr. Meredith, addressing the members of one of his important committees, said in part:

"There has never been a time in the history of our nation when a free offering of service by its citizens was in greater need than at this hour. While our boys are being selected for military duty we civilians are being conscripted for work that is aimed to back them up in their military operations against a murderous autocracy. Our work is merely a sacrifice of time while theirs is a sacrifice of patriotic lives, if necessary. Each kind of service is for the duration of the war, whether it be for one year or ten years.

"You have been selected as a member of the committee on food supply and conservation * * * and I want you to hold yourself in readiness for any service * * the council, of which you are now an active and responsible member, may assign you. It will be a small service at best and I feel sure in advance of any word I may have from you that you will give it cheerfully and efficiently as becomes one who desires to see the institutions of democratic government preserved for ourselves and our children.

"Be ready at a moment's call, for it will be your country calling you."

Federal Advice Sought for Home Guard Organizations.

The national committee of patriotic and defense societies has issued the following:

"The national committee of patriotic and defense societies is making an extensive survey of the home-guard organizations throughout the United States which have military organizations. It estimates that there are now over 150,000 men beyond military age who are drilling regularly.

"In view of this large force the national committee feels that the federal government should make some survey of the situation and should issue advice as to the type of drill, uniforms, and equipment.

"The desire for better organization is manifest in the letters from the State Councils of Defense. South Carolina reports: 'Many committees of the State are forming the home guards, but we will first have to establish a local status for these guards before we can go ahead on a large scale.' A member of the Connecticut State Council of Defense says: 'My opinion is that it would be useful and therefore advisable to have all of the defense organizations of the country registered in some way.' Virginia says: 'We are waiting for action by the Governor and word from the War Department as to what we may expect from the federal government.'

"Some of the States which have already passed definite legislation in regard to home guards are the following: Maryland, whose law provides that the new State guard shall be organized under the adjutant-general's office and that the adjutant-general may be detailed by the Governor to command it; New Hampshire has passed an act creating the State guard, and in the act authorizes the Governor of the State to establish a military emergency board which should have power to create a State guard; and New York.

Why We're in the War.

German war plans are admitted by German authorities themselves to have included levying on the United States heavily enough to pay the entire cost of the war, and collecting by ruthless pillaging if pillaging became necessary. Ambassador Gerard is authority for the statement, and further proof is not hard to find. The following editorial comment appeared in the Kleinische Volkszeitung:

"Certainly the heads of our army and navy weighed the possibilities carefully before deciding upon ruthless submarine warfare. We are entitled to a thumping indemnity and WE DO NOT CARE WHO PAYS IT. Those states which have already sacrificed immense sums will be unable to pay it, therefore America will have to unbutton its pockets."

It Might Happen Here.

"The city of Wavre will be burned and destroyed if the levy, 3,000,000 francs, is not paid in due time, without regard for anyone; the innocent will suffer with the guilty."—Notice by Herr von Bulow to the Belgian City of Wavre after notice had been given inhabitants that they must pay a "levy" to aid in carrying war against their own people.

States Forced to Protect Property

Secretary Baker Says Federal Government Has no Such Duty.

"It is up to the States to furnish their own protection."

The above statement represents the attitude of the United States War Department. It was set forth in a communication from Secretary Newton D. Baker to Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington.

Secretary Baker has been deluged with inquiries on the subject of providing troops for the protection of property, including public works, bridges, storage houses, elevators, etc. The need of an armed force is felt everywhere in the nation, now that the State militia companies have been mustered into the national army.

Few States have made provision for the enlistment of a new army. The importance of a reserve force was not generally realized until the State militia had been withdrawn. In a few cases, too, the federal law, which authorizes the formation of substitute military organizations by States, was misinterpreted. It was taken to mean, by some, that the federal government would organize the reserve.

Secretary Baker's statement to Senator Jones emphasizes the point that the new troops, to be organized to replace the State militia, become altogether a State force and in no sense subject to federal call.

Glorious Deeds.

Listen to the Kaiser!

"They" (the foes) "have slandered the German name, but they cannot extinguish the glory of German deeds."

Yes. The ineffable glory of the execution of Edith Cavell. That will never die.

Yes. The moving finger has writ on the roll of honor the story of the murder of women and children on the Lusitania. They are dead, but yet they speak. That glorious deed, too, never will be expunged from the record.

Yes. The rape and rapine of Belgium. The foul, slanderous tongues of young girls, crying for mercy as they were dragged into captivity, will echo through history, but they cannot dim the luster of German kultur. Its reputation is made for time and eternity.

Yes. The lying subterfuge of Germany's relations with America, the plots, the political devilments of all kinds against a friendly nation—these, too, are deeds the unperishable glory of which is a precious Teutonic possession and cannot be taken away.

Yes. The slaughter from the air of school children and non-combatants. Let us not overlook this achievement, of which even a modest fiend might be proud. Nothing, not even the most malignant tongue of an unscrupulous enemy, can rob the German nation of this glorious deed.

Let the kaiser not disturb himself. The "glorious deeds" of Germany will live and in living will damn eternally their author.

Idlers Too Numerous.

"We have too many men who work one or two days and then lay off and loaf for a week," said Chief of Police Hoffman of Columbus, Ind. Columbus factories are calling for men and the police chief says loafing must come to an end. Idlers will be arrested and given their choice between a job at good wages and work at the State penal farm at no wages at all.

Open Fire in St. Joseph.

South Bend.—The "four-minute men" have opened fire in St. Joseph county. The first battery of speakers was composed of the following: G. A. Farabaugh, William Happ, Floyd A. Deahl, Gaylord H. Case, A. E. Martin and F. L. Sims.

R. M. Hutchinson is chairman of the committee, which is composed of the following in addition: S. A. Winchell, C. R. Montgomery, W. W. Dodge and Donald P. Drummond.

To Stimulate Constructive Patriotism

Chief Object of Speakers' Bureau of Educational Section.

At an early meeting of members of the State committee for educational mobilization it was planned to initiate a campaign or movement to stimulate constructive patriotism in Indiana. Committees were appointed to study and define patriotism in terms of service by all. The immediate step taken after the plans were outlined in May was to instruct the city and county superintendents to arrange for flag raising and other patriotic ceremonies in the schools and to work with local committees in planning Independence Day exercises. Practically every town and city in the State conducted Fourth of July celebrations in accord with the spirit of the time. At many of the meetings addresses on constructive patriotism were delivered by speakers furnished through the agency of the State committee.

The chief object of the speakers bureau conducted by the educational section of the State Council of Defense is to continue the work planned by the State committee. Its aim is to conduct a systematic campaign of instruction in the elements of patriotism; to inform the public of the causes, the aims, and the issues of the war; to teach how every citizen, every individual may serve the nation in the great crisis of war, and to stimulate public opinion and keep it alert and informed, so that Indiana may play its full part in support of the nation at war.

Reserve Formed for Public Service

The Council of National Defense has sent a circular to the State Councils of Defense telling of the formation by the Department of Labor of the United States Public Service Reserve.

"This organization," the circular says, "has already begun its activities. The offers of service which have come, and still are coming, to the Council of National Defense will be furnished, as usual, in duplicate to the States, but will also be referred to the Public Service Reserve, which will render them available to the government in conjunction with similar offers received by the various departments of the government.

"The Secretary of Labor has appointed Mr. William B. Hall as national director of the United States Public Service Reserve. Mr. Hall is also director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which is now well established. Director Hall is assisted by a council of men expert in industry and in labor, including delegates from various professional and technical societies.

"The United States Public Service Reserve will, for the present, be developed at the national headquarters in Washington, where all offers of services received by government departments will be assembled, classified and made readily available for emergent government service.

"Whenever the need appears the organization will be extended to the several States by the appointment of State directors. It will be desired at that time that the State director be appointed by the Secretary of Labor on the nomination of the State Council of Defense, and that each director, when so appointed, will act as a representative of the State Council of Defense in this field. As it appears advisable to take up this matter in any particular State, the national director will communicate with you, asking suggestions as to a director to represent your State."

"I urge every man in public life to persistently warn the farmer that the success of the present war depends on how much surplus food he can raise; that to raise this food he must have additional labor; that the only source of supply of this labor is from the ranks of the boys of the ages sixteen to twenty inclusive."

Older Men Brought Back to Condition

(By Walter Camp of the Vigilantes, Famous Yale Coach.)

Many men past military age are these days anxiously and conscientiously inquiring, "What can I do in this time of stress for my country?" Such men know the folly of offering themselves for intensive training alongside the men of thirty, because such training would take too much out of the older man.

One of the best methods of utilizing the enthusiasm of these older men is the establishment of a senior service corps in each community. This corps is designed to put men of forty-five to sixty in physical condition to do a certain amount of active military work if necessary, but at least to put them in such a state of physical fitness that they will be more effective even in the ordinary work they are pursuing.

Some men over military age are in such shape as to be able to withstand a certain amount of physical exercise, but a great many, owing to the fact that the motor car has become their chief means of transit from place to place, have deteriorated physically more than even they themselves realize.

Most of these men can be brought back into condition by a very carefully graded system of training, beginning easily and gradually working up to a condition where a march of ten miles, even with some equipment, will be possible and practicable.

Men thus trained would, in case of emergency, act as guards to release the younger men for more active and arduous work.

Say What You Please where No One Hears.

We have heard the expression often, "I'll say what I please about the war and the government." Sure you can, and we have devised a way that will allow you to do this in spite of all government officials. All you have to have is a well or a cistern, even a rain barrel will do. When you feel one of these brain storms coming on, hunt the cistern, and stick your head in and say anything that you have on your mind. Take your time to it. Get all this bile out of your system. Stop for meals or you will be helping the food conservation club. Don't be afraid of falling in. Anything filled with hot air will float.

When you can't think of anything more to say go into the house and read a little American history. It won't hurt you. It's a regular disinfectant. Read about what George Washington, Commodore Perry, Isaac Hull and Nathan Hale thought of this country before you took charge of it. Give a little time to what Abe Lincoln thought of this republic and its future. Then look around and see what every big American, regardless of his politics, or business, is doing for his country, cut out repeating what the little politicians of every party in Washington are doing to get votes and you may be able to say something that your children won't be ashamed of when the war is mentioned ten or twenty years from now.

Why it Takes Wheat to Win the War.

Many people wonder why the government urges a larger production of wheat in preference to corn and other foodstuffs. Wheat is the food staple of Europe. Europeans know nothing of corn. They have no mills in which to grind it. Cornmeal will not keep for long periods, and even if it would, European soldiers would have to learn to use corn products.

A loaf of heavy, black wheat bread is a day's ration for a Serb soldier. Given that, he will fight. No substitute will be accepted. Neither chocolate nor extract of beef nor a dozen other things the American Sammy eats in an emergency can take the place of wheat bread. The soldier MUST have bread if he is to be kept in the trenches. And wheat is almost as vitally necessary to the other soldiers of Europe.

That is the reason why America is asked to raise more wheat and eat less of it.

Think on These Things:

(From Indiana Editors.)

"Can it," is no longer slang.

Lick the plate and lick the Kaiser.

By saving food we save the world; by wasting food we dissipate health and happiness.

Let's all help, do what we know we must do, to overcome Kaiserism.

The time to eat is when you are hungry and at no other time.

If we could rid this nation of the meal-time slavery the amount of food that could be saved would feed all the soldiers now engaged in this terrific war.

The awful question, "What shall I have for dinner?" is easily answered if your shelves are full of home-canned products.

The war can be won, and will be, by unified effort—by the straining of every muscle in the great national body, by each line of endeavor concentrating its work to the same end.

One roundabout and expensive way to help a good cause is to spend $5 for candy or cigars because the seller has agreed to give 10 per cent. of his gross receipts for the day to the charity selected.

The seed going to waste in the garden this week would provide first means for the feeding of many children next spring. If you have already gathered all you need, let your neighbors have the rest.

Register every jar for service; make them do their duty.

There is no age limit for a glass jar so long as it can pass the physical examination.

Wasting food is one of the surest and most direct methods of helping the Kaiser.

Work for Woman in Her Own Line.

So many letters have been received by the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense from women asking for "man-sized" jobs in the war work of the nation that Mrs. Joseph R. Lamar authorizes the following statement:

"There is plenty of work for the women to do in their own field of labor; that is, in the field in which they have been working up to the present time.

The woman from Pennsylvania who tells us of her ability to be a soldier as valiant as any of the women who compose the Russian Legion of Death shows remarkable bravery, but there is really just as much courage to be found in the woman who is willing to conserve food at this particular crisis in the history of the war. She will be helping the women of France and England to stand up under the terrific strain imposed upon them. The most heroic thing we can do is to help these women who have come to the point of exhaustion, to help safeguard the devotion of those workers over there, lest irreparable harm come to the next generation.

UNDRAMATIC BUT IMPORTANT.

"It is not so dramatic or inspiring or appealing, perhaps, to conserve food, but it is quite as important, and if we feel our responsibility as keenly as the men who are daring to do the actual fighting we will do our bit here at home with all our strength and make it possible to keep the men in the trenches.

"Don't scorn the clipping, the knitting, and the canning. It is a noble duty. If you are strong as a man, get out in the orchards of your own valleys and help pick the fruit. There is a scarcity of labor, and the farmers want the strong women to help. If you are in the city, cook attractive dishes for your family, using all your intelligence in the use of food materials which are not needed by the allies.

"In all democracies there is one serious defect, and that is the difficulty of arousing the people promptly in cases of emergency to the dangers of the situation. The chief danger confronting us today is the fact that in this great Republic of 100,000,000 population it may be difficult to get the people aroused quickly enough to enable them to strike the initial blows effectively enough to end this war as quickly as it ought to be ended and as it can be ended if the right sort of organization can be effected."—William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury.

College Men Under Military Age Wanted

Leaders of Training and Service Camps to be Chosen From Student Body.

College men under military age are earnestly urged to enroll in this work, in order that complete and workable plans for the utilization of their labor may be prepared, so that as soon as their vacations begin next year, they can at once be intelligently placed in such productive work as they are best fitted for.

It is from among these young college men that leaders will be chosen for training camps and for farmers' service camps.

Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York report thousands of college men have already been enrolled in the reserve and their attitude is best expressed by one fellow who said: "Why this is just the thing that every college boy needs. Most of us when we get out of school in June have a vague idea of doing something somewhere, but owing to lack of intelligent leadership and distribution, most of us knock around all summer without accomplishing much of anything. Enrollment in the reserve means a good job for us as soon as school is out, which enable us to help Uncle Sam win this war."

Yale University in recognizing the Boys' Working Reserve has announced that any boy who serves in the reserve in a capable manner will be permitted to enter Yale University with full standing in his freshman year provided that he passes only seven of the fourteen subjects usually required.

Purpose Still Vague.

Notwithstanding the hundreds, even thousands of authoritative articles that have been printed in the daily newspapers, explaining that the Hoover food organization, the Canning Club and the League for Service are all purely voluntary in their nature, such letters as the following are constantly coming to the attention of the authorities and call for persistent effort in educating the women of Indiana as to just what is wanted of them, and why:

"August 21, 1917.

"H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Commissioner, Indianapolis, Ind.:

"Dear Sir—I have had splendid help among the workers for the food pledge campaign, but the results are rather disappointing. While some have responded readily, others have shown suspicion and distrust, others have been rude even to closing doors in faces of aides, and in a certain German community set the dogs on them. There seems to be some sinister influence at work, for many women have signed the cards and afterward withdrawn their names. Many think it is a scheme for drafting them and taking them from their homes, or for confiscating their stores.

"Sincerely yours."

Fraternities Helping.

Captain Graves of Kokomo is endeavoring to enroll members of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, and other semi-military fraternal organizations in the reserve militia. On account of the nature of these organizations it is impossible to secure their official co-operation. However, there is nothing to prevent the individual members enrolling and assisting with their knowledge of drilling, military formations, etc.

What Would Happen?

If Russia should collapse?
If the British fleet should be overcome?
If the food situation should yet bring the Allies to their knees?

If great reversals should be met on the western front?

If the submarine menace be not checked?

Other things less unexpected have already happened many times in this war. America will be in danger of invasion by Prussia until the Prussian military power is broken.

Rush Tobacco to Troops in France, Says Appeal by Cable to Red Cross.

The Red Cross has just received the following cablegram from its French commission in Paris: "Please arrange ship 10 tons tobacco earliest date; 60 per cent. cigarette mixtures; 20 per cent. pipe tobacco; 20 per cent. chewing tobacco. For use of troops. No suitable tobacco obtainable here. Supply American tobacco exhausted. Y. M. C. A. shipment lost. Prompt shipment important."

The war council plans, therefore, to avail itself immediately of a very generous offer of Messrs. Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., to donate through the Red Cross for the use of American troops abroad 1,500,000 cigarettes, twenty thousand 5-cent packages of smoking tobacco and ten thousand 10-cent cuts of chewing tobacco.

A large consignment of tobacco is accordingly to be forwarded immediately, the French government having arranged to admit free of duty all articles consigned to American troops. This allows free entry for chocolate, tobacco, cigarettes, games, playing cards, and other "comforts."

The Devil Resigns His Job.

The devil sat by a lake of fire on a pile of sulphur kegs, his head was bowed upon his breast, his tail between his legs; a look of shame was on his face, the sparks dripped from his eyes—he had sent up his resignation to the throne up in the skies. "I'm down and out," the devil said—he said it with a sob—"there are others that outclass me and I want to quit the job. Hell isn't in it with the land that lies along the Rhine; I'm a has-been and a piker and therefore I resign; one ammunition maker with his bloody shot and shell knows more about damnation than all theimps of hell. Give my job to Kaiser William, the author of this war; he understands it better a million times by far. I hate to leave the old home, the spot I love so well, but I feel that I'm not up to date in the art of running hell."—Bicknell News-Herald.

Mr. McAdoo Again Warns of Liberty Loan Rumors.

Secretary McAdoo has issued the following statement:

"Some time ago I warned the public against recurring unreliable reports with regard to the next liberty loan. These reports, purporting to give information as to the date, amount and other details relative to the next issue, continue to appear. I take occasion again to state that these publications are unauthorized and untrue. They are merely speculative, and the public should not be misled by them. These matters have not been determined. As soon as they are I shall make official announcement of the plans. Reports in the meantime may be regarded as unfounded."

"The home guard organizations throughout the country are recruited from the best type of business men who are eager to give patriotic service to the country. The companies will be effective not only for police work, but the members may be used later as drill masters and could be of much service in recruiting work, in aiding the Department of Justice, and in promoting many other departmental activities.

"It is with a realization of what a power the home guard could be if properly organized that the national committee of patriotic and defense societies is carrying on its campaign with the State Councils of Defense and the War Department to secure better co-ordination."

Lessons of the War.

Whether or not we shall have to see long-continued service in the trenches, the fact remains that our people have during the present war excitement mastered valuable lessons in industry, efficiency and economy. Men and women who never worked before have a realizing sense of what it means to be up and doing. Life has had a new meaning for the idlers who have been ashamed to refuse to be up and doing. In one way the thought of war is a nightmare. In another it has been a valuable national stimulus, leading to enforced industry, with perhaps sobriety to follow in its wake.—Alexandria Press.

The Market Basket.

Your great-grandfather carried the market basket on his arm and your great-grandmother never saw a delivery wagon from any store. There were none. Today, one Philadelphia merchant will pay over $10,000 to carry home his customers' packages. It costs us not more than one cent to package an orange more than 3,000 miles from California, but your fruit dealer, two blocks away, will charge you double that commission to bring it to your house. Three busy tax-gatherers who dip into your pocket every day are, "Have it charged," "Have it exchanged," "Have it delivered." Pay cash. Keep what you buy and carry your package home, and the price of every commodity will fall.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Thorough Cultivation.

The housewife who wonders "where it will all end" will find her answer in continental Europe. There, long before the war, thrift had become an imperative necessity and every available acre, door yard and fence corner was cultivated intensively. We will never be a spendthrift nation again. Our agitation for bigger crops this year will be renewed each succeeding year until we have learned our lesson. Prices will not return to the old level even when we have eliminated the speculator, the unnecessary middleman and rendered transportation more efficient.—Indiana Times.

Too Much of the Best is Bad.

Food Dictator Hoover said at a Washington reception:

"We mustn't have too many food rules. They're a good thing in moderation, but too much of the best of things is bad. A war profiteer visited a sculptor's and said:

"What's the very finest statue in the universe?"

"The Venus de Medici, undoubtedly," the sculptor answered.

"Well, put me down for five dozen Venus de Medicis, then," said the millionaire. "I want 'em to trim up the front lawn of that there eighty-room marble cottage I'm buildin' in Newport."

Things You Can Do for the Country.

The fighting man can die for it.
The saving man can buy for it.
The aviator can fly for it.
The thrifty cook can fry for it.
The thirsty can go dry for it.
The daring man can spy for it.
The egotist can "I" for it.
The diplomat can lie for it.
The farmer can grow rye for it.
The workman can ply for it.
The very babies cry for it.
And all of us can try for it—New York Sun.

Patriotic Economy.

Patriotic economy does not mean the lowering of America's standard of living, which would make us less efficient physically and mentally, nationally and individually, and would kill the spirit and the will to do the truly self-sacrificing things to be done.

Patriotic economy means the elimination of waste and extravagance. It means the conservation of our food products, our natural wealth, our health, our energies, our labor, our very lives. It means putting more efficiency in everything we do so that each unit of money, energy and intelligence may accomplish the utmost.

The Straus Farm Offer.

In announcing the offer of one of the Straus farms for a concentration and training camp for the United States Boys' Working Reserve, the Bulletin should have made it clear that the proposed gift is indicative of the generosity of Isaac D. Straus of Ligonier, Ind., Federal State Director of the Reserve, and his associates, S. J. Straus of Ligonier, and A. Ackerman of Fort Wayne.

Mr. Straus and his assistant, C. B. Fritzsche, went to Washington this week to attend a special council of Reserve leaders and organizers, called by Federal Director W. E. Hall.

State Council Is With President

Message of Congratulation Sent Chief Executive on Reply to Pope.

"The President, Washington, D. C.:

"The Indiana State Council of Defense extends its congratulations on your answer to the Pope and expresses its gratitude that you have ended all danger of an inconclusive peace."

The above telegram, presented by Evans Woollen, was enthusiastically endorsed by the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting August 29, and by unanimous vote dispatched to Washington.

State Senator Aaron Wolfson appeared before the council and stated that recently the county commissioners of Marion county had projected a road between Indianapolis and Ft. Benjamin Harrison, had considered it a military necessity, advertised specifications for bids, made a contract and issued bonds to pay for the road. It was then found that there had been some irregularity about the process and the bond issue had been held invalid. He said public-spirited citizens had arranged to buy or underwrite these bonds in the expectation that the next session of the General Assembly would validate them. He asked that the council make an investigation and if the construction of the road be found a military necessity, give the project its endorsement and moral support.

Mr. Brady said he was familiar with conditions described and regarded it as imperative that the work be done.

COMMITTEE FAVORS PROJECT.

On motion of Mr. Keach the matter was referred to a special committee, which on an amendment offered by Mr. Woollen was requested to act with all possible dispatch. The committee, consisting of Mr. Brady, A. E. Reynolds and James L. Keach met immediately following the session and their report took the form of a communication as follows:

"Mr. Charles F. Coffin, Vice-President, Chamber of Commerce; Mr. Albert Glossbrenner, President, Board of Trade; Mr. Robt. Lieber, President, Merchants Association:

"Dear Sirs—Referring to the matter of the issue and sale of two hundred thousand dollars of bonds, by the authorities of Marion county, for the construction of hard-surfaced roads between Indianapolis and Ft. Benjamin Harrison, we beg to say that the Indiana State Council of Defense endorses the statements and recommendations of Governor Goodrich in his letter to the Board of Commissioners of Marion county, dated May 25, 1917, and will favor and work for the validation of such bonds by the legislature at the next session.

Respectfully,
"INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.
"Arthur W. Brady, A. E. Reynolds, J. L. Keach, Committee."

A. E. Reynolds reported that he had been visited by a committee representing the dairymen of his home city, Crawfordsville, who informed him that they had been operating at a loss, and many of them are quitting business. He says they report that they cannot afford to fill their silos and feed their stock and are afraid to raise prices for their product unless properly endorsed, and will not continue in business facing financial ruin.

E. M. Wilson said that definite figures are available on the cost of producing milk and that the cost of raw material has advanced to a point where a milkman is "either a philanthropist or else doesn't know his business." He said that bran, which cost $20 per ton two years ago, is now selling at $40 per ton; patent feed, formerly $22 per ton, is now $55; hay has doubled in price and labor is so scarce that the dairyman is forced to work himself and his family day and night and then cannot make a fair profit.

IN HANDS OF AUTHORITIES.

Dr. H. E. Barnard said that this matter is serious—even more serious than the discussion would indicate. He said, however, that it is being given consideration by the authorities, including a special dairy committee of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation, and that it is likely the State council will be asked to make an appeal to the farmer to keep his dairy cattle, the same as it had appealed to the farmer to increase production by increased acreage and more intensive cultivation.

Mr. Keach stated that he understood Herbert Hoover, national food administrator, has a plan whereby producer, distributor and consumer will be brought closer together, which may be of assistance in solving this problem.

Mr. Fox called attention to the impossibility of laborers to pay constantly increasing prices for necessities and urged that their claims be given consideration along with those of the producers.

Dr. Storms said the dairy supply question was more than local, that statistics show that from 20 to 60 per cent. of the cows in Europe have been slaughtered since the war began. He urged that a committee represent the State council in conference on the subject that must be called with other councils. He said milk is retailing at 15 cents per quart in Texas and that Indiana may face a similar situation unless steps were taken to prevent.

NEW FOOD COMMITTEE NAMED.

The special committee consisting of A. W. Brady, E. M. Wilson and Evans Woollen appointed to consider the reorganization of the council's activity on the subject of food production and conservation reported as follows:

"Indianapolis, August 29, 1917.

"State Council of Defense:

"The committee appointed to consider a reorganization of the council's activity with reference to food recommends the discontinuance of the committees on food supply and conservation under Messrs. Keach, Barnard and Christie as chairmen, and the substitution in their place of a committee on food, composed of W. H. Hays, chairman, H. E. Barnard, G. I. Christie, Charles W. Fairbanks, Charles Fox, James L. Keach and Frank Stockton."

The report of the committee was ratified and the new committee inaugurated as proposed.

It was pointed out by Mr. Brady, who presented the report, that Mr. Stockton, the new committeeman, is a member of the faculty of Indiana University and is recognized as a leading economist.

The committee appointed to consider the recommendations of Albert Lieber, secretary of the State Park Board, that members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve be assigned to the gathering of waste wood on State lands, reported that this feature of the work might well be left to the administration of the reserve. The report was approved.

Exemption Rule On Farm Labor

Provost Marshal Crowder Assists in Solving Question of Interest.

The difficulty of getting farm labor has suggested that crop workers should have some sort of exemption from the draft and various bodies interested in war food conservation, including the Committee on Food Supply and Conservation of the Indiana State Council of Defense, have urged the step. Provost Marshal-General E. H. Crowder has settled the question in the following manner: The mobilization of the drafted army to cantonment camps is to take place by groups from each district, say 20 per cent. of the quota at intervals of two weeks. Those men who are needed in the district for harvesting are to file claims for temporary discharge on this basis with the district exemption boards, which will send the claim on to the local boards with a note saying that the claim has been made and disallowed. This will furnish the local boards with information as to what men are needed for farm labor. The local boards will then refuse the claim for temporary discharge (unless in exceptional cases) but will postpone sending these men until the later calls, which probably will not come until the second or third week in September, when the most urgent need of harvesters is over.

Market Advisors Fight High Prices

Twenty-two Have Established Curbstones
Which Are Proving Effective.

The State marketing division of the Food Production and Conservation Committee has been doing some active work. Twenty-two marketing advisors have been appointed by the various county councils. The principal feature of the work has been the establishing of curb-stone markets and providing a local exchange for those having food products to sell and those wishing same.

Two of these markets, which have been unusually successful are the ones established at Bedford and at Lafayette. At a recent market day in Lafayette more than forty farmers had sold out their entire wagon load of provisions by ten o'clock in the morning.

The Bureau of Markets of the United States Department of Agriculture will provide two men about September 1 to assist in carrying forward this work.

Lecture on War Subject.

One special lecture on a timely war subject will be included in every lyceum program offered during the season starting September 17 and continuing until the middle of April, 1918, by the Dennis Lyceum Bureau of Wabash, Ind. Leroy Dennis, the manager of the bureau, has assigned the following well known platform orators to war themes: Rev. Frank E. Jaynes of Wabash, Rev. Stewart I. Long of Sullivan and Rev. E. M. Kounen of Ambia, Ind. The services of these orators have been placed at the command of the Federal and State Defense Councils and their patriotic offers have been met with an appreciative response.

A few pecks of fall crop potatoes will provide seed for next spring.

OBSERVANCE OF THE FOLLOWING DIRECTIONS WILL REDUCE YOUR CHANCES OF FIRE MORE THAN 50%

LIGHTNING If this property is not properly rodged it can be protected temporarily, but quite effectively, by running a wire (No. 8 galvanized is preferred, but a wire clothes line will do) from the highest point in the roof, along the ridge and down the corner posts to metal rods at least 1/4 inch in diameter, driven into the ground deep enough to reach permanent moisture (at least four feet). Insulation is not necessary but be certain the connection is continuous. Understand this is simply an emergency arrangement, as the wire will soon rust out, when it must be immediately replaced, or a standard system of rodging substituted for it. Hay lofts are less likely to be struck by lightning if well ventilated. Baled hay attracts lightning on account of large quantity of baling wire.

SMOKING should not be done about farm outbuildings. It is the cause of innumerable fires in farm barns and warehouses, and SUCH A FIRE this year particularly IS A CRIME.

MATCHES should not be lighted in a barn or warehouse, nor kept there. Use only safe lanterns and light them at safe distances.

LANTERNS Discard the old lantern or the suspicious lantern. Provide perfectly safe and convenient places to hang or place them in the barn and never hang or place them elsewhere.

Automobiles and Gasoline Tractors must not be housed in or adjoining a building where grain or stock is kept. Keep your gasoline supply at an absolutely safe distance.

Thrashing, Hay-baling, Shredding and Silo Filling times are times of danger when the farmer must be all vigilance if he wishes to be safe.

Remember— We are at war. Your country needs the product of every man's labor, whether at the front or at home in civil pursuits, and although not under martial control, the civilian bears the same responsibility to support his government as does the soldier. The farmer will be largely excused from military service because he can be more valuable to his country upon the farm. He is doing his "bit" if he produces to the best of his ability and then conserves the product as long as it is in his possession.

Tippecanoe County Council of Defense

Be a Soldier of Uncle Sam—upon your own premises to protect the food stuffs in your control, that our beloved Nation, with the co-operation of all, may be victorious

Tippecanoe County Council of Defense has extended its conservation work to every farm in the county and has placed posters like the above illustration on farm barns and warehouses throughout the county. It is thought that farmers will be moved by patriotism and practical self-interest to give universal observance to the various directions. The plan, which has been devised by J. O. Beck, chairman of the Tippecanoe Council of Defense, has many important features. "In estimating its far-reaching importance, consideration should be given to the fact that the quantity of meat in the packing-house storage of the nation is small, when compared with that on the hoof; that at certain seasons of the year, far more grain is held on the farm than in the grain elevators, and that in the fall and winter an enormous quantity of feed consisting largely of silage, hay, straw and corn fodder, convertible into beef, pork, mutton, milk, butter, eggs, wool and leather, also finds storage there. Thus it is probably proper to say that during a large part of the year the supply of foodstuffs on the farm exceeds that in the city and town."

As the township trustees in Indiana are, by virtue of their office, assistant fire marshals, they co-operate with the county council in making this particular movement effective. The plan is now regarded as so important that other State Councils have made arrangements to follow it in detail.

How Indiana May Save Five Millions

Food Conservation Meeting of 12,000 at Seymour Told How to Win the War.

Food Conservation was the main topic discussed at a mammoth meeting held August 25 at Seymour, Ind., under the auspices of the County Food Conservation Association and the business men of Seymour. Twelve thousand people attended the meeting. Through the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation and the assistance of J. Kirby Risk of Lafayette, William Jennings Bryan was secured to give a talk on food conservation. Mr. Bryan is discussing this subject at the request of President Wilson and Secretary Houston and was able to give the people some first-hand facts.

Mr. Bryan in his address stated that he had been urged by Secretary Houston to make clear two words—"Minimum Price" and "Maximum Price." He stated that a minimum price was being set for wheat in order that the farmer might be protected and encouraged in crop production.

MAXIMUM PRICE NECESSARY.

It is just as necessary that a maximum price be established in order that food gamblers may be eliminated and that the public may receive the product of the soil at a price they can afford to pay.

Mr. Bryan also urged the saving of foodstuffs by refusing to allow any grains to be used in the manufacture of whisky and beer. Under the Lever law no foodstuffs can be used for the manufacture of whisky after September 9. Large quantities will be used in the manufacture of beer. Mr. Bryan showed in a conclusive way that the drinking of beer by the people is most harmful and does not make for efficiency, and at the same time it robs thousands of women and men, boys and girls, of necessary bread and other staple foodstuffs.

Mr. Bryan complimented the State on the prohibition law passed by the last Legislature and on the stand and active work of Governor Goodrich. He also urged the people to work for a new constitution in order that they might run their own business and so regulate the enterprises of the State that the people and their welfare might be protected.

HOW TO SAVE $5,000,000.

The afternoon session was addressed by Professor G. I. Christie, State Food Director, who urged the people to use every effort in conserving the food supply of the State. He stated that if during the next year each home in Indiana would save through meatless and wheatless days and other mediums of conservation, only ten pounds of meat, ten pounds of butter and twenty loaves of bread, the value of the food saved would amount to more than $5,000,000. If each home will save by canning or drying one dozen quarts each of peas, beans, tomatoes and corn which would otherwise be wasted, the saving will exceed $4,000,000. Large quantities of apples, pears and other fruits can be preserved and saved for winter's use and thus conserve the staple foods. All this and more is possible. Indiana people are in a position to make a large and worth while contribution to the necessary food supply.

Professor Christie also discussed the need for larger production another year on Indiana farms. The United States Department of Agriculture is asking now that the wheat crop of Indiana for 1918 be increased by 25 per cent., or approximately 2,800,000 acres, and that the rye crop be increased 35 per cent., and in addition the acreage of corn, which is now about 6,000,000 acres, be maintained. Indiana this year has had more than 500,000 gardens. These have produced immense quantities of foodstuffs and the number must be maintained and increased another year.

With the demands made by the government comes the call for men for the national army. The farmers are expected to furnish their quota. Therefore, the farmers are faced with the problem of increased production with a less amount of labor than they have had this year. The State food committee has recognized this situation and has urged upon the war department and the district exemption boards the absolute necessity of keeping on the farm the strong, efficient farm managers.

President On Boys' Reserve

The White House,
Washington, D. C., August 21, 1917.

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

Permit me to express my great appreciation of the work undertaken by the United States Boys' Working Reserve of the Employment Service of the Department of Labor. To give to the young men between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one the privilege of spending their spare time in productive enterprise without interrupting their studies at school, while their older brothers are battling in the trenches and on the seas, must greatly increase the means of providing for the forces at the front and the maintenance of those whose services are needed here. It is a high privilege, no less than a patriotic duty, to help support the nation by devoted and intelligent work in this great crisis.

Let me express the hope that the young men of the country not now permanently employed may eagerly enter the Boys' Working Reserve to fit themselves by training and study for good citizenship and productive service. In this way they can show themselves worthy of patriotic fathers who have fought for democracy in the past, sustain their patriotic brothers who are fighting for it today, and command the affectionate pride of the brave mothers who are silently bearing the burdens at home.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.
Hon. W. B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor.

To Save Railroad Ties.

Governor James P. Goodrich will be appealed to by the Bartholomew County Council of Defense to assist in an attempt to prevent the wholesale burning of railroad ties. The council thinks the ties ought to be turned over to deserving poor persons, who could use them for fuel. This same council has arranged for the introduction of a course on thrift in the county schools, which open next month.

America's Record Since War Began

London Times Writer Sees Many Results in This Country.

AS THEY SEE US.

Can a real democracy continue and flourish on the earth? This is the question that continental Europe has asked ever since 1776. Her answer came with the Civil War, and she has since received repeated, emphatic responses. And now it is the Allies themselves who praise our democracy and its thoroughgoing methods. We ourselves must gain new confidence in our institutions when we read such an article as "AMERICA'S RECORD SINCE THE WAR BEGAN."—Editor.

The United States has been doing big things since the war started, a fact the American people may not fully appreciate in their frequently manifest impatience that more has not been done.

That appreciation of our enterprise is not altogether lacking abroad, among our allies, is evidenced by the following view of Ian Hay, a writer for the London Times:

"Now that she is at war, what is America going to do about it? * * *

"The United States declared war upon Germany in the first week of April, 1917. Since then, what has been accomplished?

"It would have been a matter of small surprise and but little reproach if nothing had been accomplished at all. Democracy has many advantages over autocracy, but prompt and efficient direction of war is not one of them. It took our country more than two years to realize that sudden emergencies and critical situations can be better handled by a capable and absolute triumvirate than an amiable but academic committee of twenty-three. President Wilson grasped the essential requirements of the situation at once. These were:

- "1. National registration.
- "2. Compulsory military service.
- "3. The raising of money and an immediate and liberal vote of credit.
- "4. Organization of the country's resources, especially in food and munitions.
- "5. The immediate dispatch of an Expeditionary Force to France, first as an incentive to the country at large, and secondly as a guarantee of good faith to the Allies.

"This, admittedly, was a colossal program to lay before an unorganized and unmilitary nation. And no one knew better than the President that it contained measures which would be bitterly opposed. * * *

"Congress on the whole responded nobly. There was a certain amount of opposition to universal service—some tainted, some sincere—but the scheme went through by large majorities. * * *

EXECUTION OF THE CAMPAIGN.

"So much for the inception of the campaign. What of the execution? Pessimists feared, and interested axe-grinders darkly hinted, that there would be a public upheaval throughout the country upon the day when American citizens were called upon to register for national service, and that in any case very few would register.

"Registration Day came. Nearly ten million men registered within the space of twelve hours; there were no disturbances, and defaulters barely comprised one-tenth per cent., or one in a thousand.

"The first War Loan—the Liberty Loan, as it was happily named—was oversubscribed by about a billion dollars.

"Finally, an Expeditionary Force set sail, and landed without a mishap upon the soil of France. It was a mere advance guard of the millions to follow—and its exact strength need not be set down here; but in due course its members will doubtless afford the Kaiser some further (and extremely wholesome) food for thought upon the subject of 'contemptible little armies.'

"Such is America's record for less than three months of war. * * *

"So we are all in it at last. And one thing seems certain: As the war progresses towards its appointed end, the chief burden, which was borne in the first instance with almost superhuman endurance by the people of France—to be subsequently transferred in ever-growing measure to the broadening shoulders of the British Army—will ultimately come to rest, until the finish, upon the shoulders, jointly, of the British Empire and the United States. Their reserves of strength are greater; their soil is not invaded; their industrial resources are unimpaired; and their wealth seems inexhaustible. So upon our two peoples will rest the responsibility of bringing this war to a conclusion which will for all time render the world 'safe for Democracy.'

"Such is the situation today. In the beginning of 1915 we were fighting for existence; in the beginning of 1916 we were fighting for time. Now we are fighting for one thing only—victory."

Farmers Show Why They Need Laborers

Letter Addressed to Secretary of War Sets Out Reasons for Appeal.

In view of the agitation among agricultural people for the exemption of farm boys and laborers, a farm labor committee was appointed by the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation consisting of Director G. I. Christie, W. A. Guthrie, Warren T. McCray, Dr. H. E. Barnard, W. S. Robbins, W. W. Bonner, L. H. Wright.

This committee met in Indianapolis August 20 to discuss the farm labor situation. Governor Goodrich and Dr. R. A. Pearson of the United States Department of Agriculture met with them and as a result of the meeting the following letter was sent to the Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker.

August 21, 1917.

Hon. Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

Dear Sir—The farm labor problem is one which is before our people in a strong way. The situation is becoming more serious as the government is calling many of the agricultural laborers into the national army.

It is a fact that Indiana, located in the Mississippi valley, is one of the important agricultural States of the Union. Indiana is therefore one of the States which must be depended upon to furnish a food surplus to help win the war. Every acre of this State must be tilled to produce a maximum crop.

The estimated production for Indiana August 1, 1917, is as follows:

Crop.	Acreage.	Yield.
Corn .....	5,651,000	214,000,000 bu.
Wheat .....	1,805,000	31,600,000 bu.
Oats .....	1,820,000	73,700,000 bu.
Rye .....	194,000	3,107,000 bu.
Hay .....	200,000	2,870,000 tons
Cow peas and Soy beans	100,000
Potatoes .....	90,000	9,310,000 bu.
Onions .....	6,500	130,000 bu.
Sugar beets .....	9,000
Tomatoes .....	36,300	181,500 tons
Melons .....	12,000	78% Nor. Crop
Apples (Agri. & Com.).		7,699,000 bu.

The United States Department of Agriculture is asking now that the wheat crop of Indiana for 1918 be increased by 25 per cent., or approximately 2,800,000 acres, and that the rye acreage be increased 35 per cent. and in addition the acreage of corn and oats be maintained.

During 1917 over a half million gardens were grown. This number should not only be maintained but increased.

Indiana farmers operate more than 3,000 farm tractors and it is expected 2,000 more will be used next season, the operation of which calls for high-class labor.

The farmers are faced with the problem of increasing production. They are urged to make every acre produce a maximum of foodstuffs.

This can be accomplished only by keeping on the farms efficient, strong farm managers. This is not the time to plead for the farm laborer or farm boy who are not charged with the responsibilities of active management of farms. It may be possible to replace these people. But the man who directs the farm operations and whose absence means reduced production or in many cases forces the farms to lay idle, is a "key man" and necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment and the effective operation of the military forces and should be retained on the farm.

The experiences of Great Britain, Canada and other countries where the farmers have been allowed to enlist in the army should be a warning. In these countries the army was secured at the expense of agricultural production—land remains idle—large areas are operated with inefficient labor—with the result that the cry today is for bread as well as for ammunition and soldiers.

We therefore respectfully request that the district exemption boards of Indiana be instructed to give serious consideration to requests for exemption of men engaged in the active management of farms that the production of foodstuffs may be increased to meet the demands of our own country and those of our allies.

Respectfully submitted,
INDIANA COMMITTEE ON FOOD PRODUCTION AND CONSERVATION.

Big Ideas in War Literature

"As we mobilize we generate a spirit of nationalism that will unify our people, dissipate doubts of foreign-born and pacifist and summon to the colors all the men we need for willing service in a democratic army."—Charles Zueblin.

"That great end and hope," says Walter Lippman, in an article on the war conflict, reprinted by Indiana University, "is nothing less than the Federation of the World. I know it sounds a little old-fashioned to use that phrase because we have abused it so long in empty rhetoric. But no other idea is big enough to describe the alliance. It is no longer an offensive-defensive military agreement among diplomats. That is how it started, to be sure. But it has grown and is growing into a union of peoples determined to end forever that intriguing, adventurous nationalism which has torn the world for three centuries."

"We ought never to lose sight of the fact that the purpose of this war is not aggression, is not punishment; it is not inspired by resentments nor fed by ambitions, but it is loyalty to an ideal, and that ideal is freeing the world from an impossible international philosophy, a philosophy in which, if it should prevail, no freedom is left or is safe."—Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War.

It has taken us all these centuries to learn that as an expressive word "Hell" is quite inadequate.

How about putting a collection box in your home? If you sacrifice a few cigars and a couple of sodas each week you will soon find that you are automatically saving up money for French and Belgian children.

Are you sending your magazines to the army camps? The boys would particularly enjoy selected reading matter. Clip a number of articles that have interested you, place them in a large envelope and send them to the boys.

This is a good time for some one to write, a rousing, new national anthem.

The newspaper cartoon is exercising a great influence over the public mind.

Girls Save Cherry Crop.

The cherry crop near Denver has been handled almost exclusively by girls. Nearly ten tons of fruit has been handled daily, with the girls working in three shifts of eight hours each.

There can be no peace made in Germany.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 3

Editorial Comment

Nearly 5,400 Harvard men are engaged in the war.

A million khaki Bibles have been ordered for American soldiers and sailors.

The extensive manufacture of flying machines promises to result in a reduction of two-thirds of their cost.

Booth Tarkington, the Indiana author, has written a new play with a patriotic appeal called "The Country Cousin."

Orville Wright is said to be perfecting a stabilizer, which automatically balances the flying machine, leaving only the steering to the operator.

Miss Lillian D. Wald, a member of the Committee of Women for National Defense, is occupied in maintaining standards for the protection of the children and the health and welfare of people during the war.

Army Y. M. C. A. work is very comprehensive. It furnishes moving pictures, lectures, reading rooms, writing tables and stationery, and in the South, plenty of ice water, where that liquid is regarded as a luxury. There are Testaments for those who wish them and advice for those who will take it.

The first step has been taken toward settling the constitutionality of the draft. Judge Speer of Georgia, before whom the case came to trial, declares: "The nation has a right to use every man to defeat the migration to its soil of mighty nations or ferocious warriors whose barbarous inhumanity for three years has surpassed all others since the death of Attila, the scourge of God."

The work of restoring devastated France is said to be progressing at a wonderful rate. Trees have been given first-aid treatment by French soldiers working under able generals and with the assistance of Red Cross surgeons and ambulance drivers. The process has been described thus: "The circle where the bark had been cut away was first covered with a special grafting cement, and the entire wound then bandaged up—often with the same bandages that had been prepared for human limbs. When the supply of this cement was exhausted a substitute was found in loamy clay, tar and moss."

It is not strange that the hard-working farmer, pressed to extremities by the war, should feel a certain annoyance at the endless farm talk that is filling the daily papers, the magazines and bulletins. He has gained most of his valuable experience through actual experience and prolonged effort and naturally he feels a certain contempt for a method that would appear to be too easy. But let the farmer not lose patience with the efforts of the novice and the seeming harangue of the press. In reality, both are striving to assist the practical farmer and to further his work. This fact has been brilliantly evidenced by the success of the recent garden campaign, a campaign in which Indiana took first rank, as a State. In this campaign the people learned much more than how to plant a garden. They learned the work, the patience and the energy that are required for even simple farm measures. Their eyes were opened to the beauty of the farmer's work. They have come nearer to a knowledge of the real value of the things which they eat. Let us have more farm literature of the worthy sort, well-edited and pertinent. It makes us conscious of the farmer's daily importance and the significance of his work.

Tippecanoe Has An Active Council

County Has Been Organized Along Lines Suggested by State Body.

Varied and notable has been the work of the Tippecanoe county section of the State Council of Defense. The individual members of the council have been so efficient that they have succeeded in making their local organization one of the strongest in the State. The members include J. O. Beck, insurance agent, Lafayette; Mrs. Charles B. Stuart, Lafayette; William H. Robinson, editor of the Lafayette Journal; Charles H. Murdock, banker, Lafayette; Robert H. Williamson, West Lafayette; Sidney H. Saltzgaber, member of labor union; Jesse Andrew, West Point. The activities of the council have been directed toward the county, as a whole, and toward Lafayette, in particular. Consistent effort has been made to follow the directions of the State council and to regulate local conditions as occasion demands.

Through the efforts of the council, the women of the county have been guided in knitting, cooking and conservation campaigns. The Red Cross holds weekly sewings and representatives of Purdue University give lectures and demonstrations.

ALL VAGRANTS ARE EMPLOYED.

Believing that the city should have no unemployed, the council has made special arrangements for employing vagrants. Under the direction of Carl Dexter, principal of the West Lafayette high school, a branch of the United States Boys' Working Reserves has been organized. The branch catalogues boys of the county. Efforts have also been made to prevent the loss by fire of farm barns and products. To secure effective fire prevention the attention of farmers has been called, by means of the press, special posters and personal interviews, to the danger of loss of farm products by fire and water.

In addition to recommending the conservation of food products, the council has been instrumental in eliminating the merchandise delivery system and in establishing a local curb market that has been unusually successful and popular. It has been instrumental in creating a desire for a local group of Four-Minute Men and a unit of the new military reserves. Through the efforts of Mr. Saltzgaber, the entire uniform rank of the local Knights of Pythias has volunteered to form a unit of the reserves.

The council has been active in furthering patriotic affairs, in suggesting celebrations for Independence Day and in fostering a national spirit in the schools.

Our Present Business.

"Every other thing in the United States today is incidental and secondary to our principal business of winning the war, and the quicker the American people awake to a realization of the task ahead of us the sooner will victory come with everlasting peace and guaranteed safety for democracy throughout the world."—Congressman McKeown.

"EVERY MAN WHO ATTEMPTS TO OBSTRUCT THE WORK OF THE GOVERNMENT IN THIS TIME OF NATIONAL PERIL STANDS WITH A STILETTO AT THE BACK OF EACH LAD WHO IS PREPARING TO FIGHT FOR HIS COUNTRY."—Brigadier-General Roy Hoffman.

Food Authorities Will Enforce Law

Instructions Given Hoover Aides Who Have Power to Execute Law.

Washington.—The food administration authorizes the following:

The federal food administrators for nineteen States, who were in conference with the national food administration for two days, took their oaths of office and left for their respective jurisdictions to take up their duties. These men are agents in their States for the national food administration, whose appointments have been approved by President Wilson, and they are clothed with considerable power to carry out the provisions of the food administration law.

INSTRUCTED AS TO DUTIES.

They were called to Washington for consultation and to receive instructions in their duties. They were told that the purpose of the law which they are to help to enforce and the policy of the food administration, of which they are now agents, is to stabilize and not to disturb conditions, and to defend honest enterprise against illegitimate competition. The object is to correct the abnormalities and abuses that have crept into trade by reason of the world disturbance and to restore business, as far as may be, to a reasonable basis.

NOT TO TOLERATE EXPLOITATION.

They were instructed that the food administration feels justified by its experience so far in counting on the patriotic co-operation of the great bulk of business men, but they were told that if any persons try to exploit the country in this time of war, they should not hesitate to take steps to see that the drastic powers that Congress has conferred on the food administration for such cases are employed.

The men who have been selected as federal food administrators for the various States represent a wide variety of interests, including leading business men, college presidents and educators and farmers.

Teachers May Win Prizes for Essay

Historical Writings Wanted on Why United States Is at War.

"Why the United States is at War" is the subject for the teachers' prize essay competition being carried on in Indiana by the National Board for Historical Service. The competition is open to teachers in high and elementary schools in this State, the prizes being as follows: Group A, for teachers in high schools, five prizes of $75, $30, $20, $15, and $10; Group B, for teachers in public elementary schools, first and second prizes of $75 and $25, with five prizes of $10 each.

The essays are to be primarily historical, to bring out facts of recent or remote history leading up to the present war situation in the United States. The emphasis, however, will be laid on the intelligent use of material rather than on elaborate research. All contributions should be directed to Waldo G. Leland, Secretary, National Board for Historical Service, 1133 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C.

Similar competitions are being held in other States and the first prize essays of both classes in each State will be considered in a national contest for two added prizes of $75 each.

State Farmers' Congress.

The State Farmers' Congress, co-operating with the State Food Committee, are to hold their annual meeting September 19 to 21 at Lafayette. Governor Goodrich will deliver the principal address at the opening of the conference. Will H. Hays, Chairman, State Council of Defense, has been secured to speak before the body on the nineteenth. Professor G. I. Christie, State Food Director, will speak on Thursday, September 20.

No Falling Off In Public School Work

Commissioner Appeals to Labor Unions, Parents, Teachers, Clubs and Others.

Commissioner Claxton of the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, has made the following appeal to leaders of labor unions:

"Dear Sir—For the protection of our boys and girls against unusual temptations to fall into delinquencies of many kinds and that they may be prepared more fully for the work of life and the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, it is of the utmost importance that our schools be maintained in full efficiency, both as to attendance and standards of work, during the continuance of the war, and everything possible should be done to increase their efficiency in both respects. The various labor organizations and their members throughout the country can render most valuable help in this respect. I am therefore appealing to all these organizations to use their influence and to urge their individual members to do all they can to the end that the standards of the schools in their several States and cities shall not be lowered in any way and that no children of school age shall remain out of school except because of absolute necessity.

"For the sake of this great cause, in which I feel sure you are no less interested than I am, I am taking the liberty of requesting you to bring this matter to the attention of all the labor organizations of your city. May I also suggest that, since schools in many cities open very soon after Labor Day, it might be very helpful if special attention should be given to this matter on that day."

MANY UNUSUAL TEMPTATIONS.

The commissioner also has issued the following to parent-teacher associations, mothers' clubs, etc:

"During the present school year, and while the war continues, there will be many unusual temptations for parents and guardians of children to keep their children out of school, and there will be many difficulties in the way of maintaining schools at their full measure of efficiency. On the other hand, it is of the very greatest importance that the efficiency of the schools shall be maintained in every way and that there shall be no falling off in attendance. This is necessary both for the present defense of the country and for the welfare and safety when the war is over. While we are fighting for the maintenance of democracy we must do everything possible to make the democracy strong and efficient in every way. This will depend on the schools more than on any other one agency; and I am therefore taking the liberty of suggesting to all parent-teacher associations and other similar organizations that they immediately use all of their influence in this direction. Of course, each association will know of what is best to do for its particular school and community."

MUST MAINTAIN STANDARDS.

To All Club Women in the United States:

Everywhere there seems to be fear lest our schools of all kinds and grades, and especially the public schools, will suffer this year because of conditions growing out of our entrance into the war. On the other hand, both for the present defense and for the future welfare of our country, as well as for the individual benefit of the children, it is of the greatest importance that the schools shall be maintained in their full efficiency, both as to standards of work and attendance of children.

While the war continues there will be many unusual temptations to many kinds of juvenile delinquencies. Prompt and regular attendance at school and proper employment during out-of-school hours will be the children's surest protection against such temptations.

When the boys and girls now of school age have reached manhood and womanhood there will be need for a higher standard of intelligence, skill, and wisdom for the work of life and for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship than we have ever yet attained. Our schools must now be so sustained and improved as to enable them better to prepare our boys and girls for life and work in the new age which will follow the close of the war and the coming of peace. No boys and girls must now be neglected or exploited for selfish ends.

In all this probably no others can be quite so helpful as the club women of the country, most of whom are also mothers of children. For this reason I am taking the liberty of suggesting to them that in all women's clubs this should be made a subject of discussion at their first meetings this fall and from time to time throughout the year; a suggestion to which they will, I feel quite sure, respond heartily and gladly.

said that Judge Lovett, the new federal transportation director, is sending coal cars to the Northwest in such numbers as to threaten a hardship on Indiana consumers. He said there is an "assumed shortage" in the Northwest, with no actual figures on which to base the claim. "There may be a gap there, but the government is making another gap here in order to fill it," he said. Indiana, Mr. Freeman added, has at all times had a coal car supply lower than that of any other State, with the exception of two weeks, when Ohio was equally short.

Mr. Keach urged that the consumers be educated to eat foodstuff known as "highly perishable," instead of hoarding it. This he said is the Hoover idea of fighting the high cost of living. He pointed out that under the new federal law the farmer is permitted to hold his produce for higher prices, which is conducive of hoarding.

Mr. Reynolds urged that shippers be requested to anticipate their future needs, in order that the military necessities of the next two months limit the available car supply. Mr. Keach said that the most effective work in this connection be done through the agency of county councils.

Dr. Storms presented a communication addressed to Governor Goodrich requesting that the governor appoint a day in the third week of September on which public school children of the State be asked to contribute one cent each for the benefit of French war orphans. The matter was referred to Miss Julia Landers, to be reported back.

SITUATION IS FAVORABLE.

Dr. Storms also presented figures showing more than 200 cases in the Indianapolis city court from June 14 to July 26. He said the records showed the court was handling the cases fairly and vigorously, and that a representative of the federal government had reported that so far as appearances go, Indianapolis ranks favorably with other cities in which military camps are situated.

Miss Julia Landers reported favorable progress in the enrollment of Indiana women in the Hoover food organization and the league for service. She said 300,000 cards had been sent out and that indications are that most of them will be returned, signed, by September 1.

A resolution presented by Dr. Storms expressing the sympathy of the council for Governor James P. Goodrich in his present illness, and hope for his speedy recovery, was unanimously adopted.

Frank Wampler reported that the State council's connection with the State-wide farewell reception for the new national army, conducted under the auspices of the civic organizations and other public spirited citizens of Indianapolis, Sunday, August 26, had been entirely successful.

Chairman Hays reported on the second conference on the coal situation by State councils of defense at Chicago. He said resolutions commending the prompt action of the President had been presented by the Indiana council's representatives and adopted. Mr. Hays reported that a standing committee representing each of thirteen coal-producing States to advise with and cooperate with the Federal Trade Commission in adjusting all questions relative to the production and distribution of coal is contemplated, and the special coal committee of the Indiana council, consisting of Messrs. Fox, Woollen, Kurrie, Wilson and Irwin was asked to select the Indiana committeeman.

Speculators in Car Lots Are Exposed

Bureau of Markets Advises Shippers of Grain, Hay and Feed to Watch.

The Department of Agriculture authorizes the following:

Shippers of grain, hay and feed are advised by the Bureau of Markets, Department of Agriculture, to be on the lookout for what is known as "shipper's order bill of lading" transactions with unknown or irresponsible persons. Shipping car lots to such buyers under no obligation other than to pay for the shipment, if they finally take it out of the car, tends to encourage speculation and is liable to increase freight congestion.

Some of these buyers order products shipped in the hope that the price will go up in the meantime and enable them to sell locally to a dealer who will pay cash. Unless they succeed in selling to others, many of these "shipper's order" consignees have insufficient capital to pay for the goods which sometimes fall back on the shipper.

A TYPICAL CASE.

In a case recently investigated by the department a man, without financial standing, who posed as a commercial company, succeeded in purchasing large shipments of hay and mill feed. As there was no advance in price and as he had no cash with which to meet the drafts, he held the goods for several weeks in the cars on the track. Some of the cars were on the track for over twenty days before unloading. When he succeeded in selling a car, instead of paying his own cash for it, he sent his customer to the bank to release the draft.

The day the department investigator was on the ground this man had thirteen cars of hay and nine cars of mill feed on the track, papers for seventeen more cars en route, and a number more still to be shipped. It was stated locally that in the same kind of transaction in the past a severe decline in the price rendered this individual unable to pay for thirty cars of produce, which the shipper was forced to sell at a material loss.

Gasoline Needed to Save Our Boys

Critic Overlooked Angle of Request That Joy Riding be Curtailed.

"That is one place where they have gone a little too far," remarked someone on reading the request of the Council of National Defense that the use of gasoline for pleasure riding be discontinued. That person didn't think.

Despite the enormous production, America will face a shortage of gasoline and crude oil products for the use of our thousands of airplanes, battleships, torpedo boats, destroyers, etc. If we are to compete with our enemies, it is necessary that these war machines be efficient in the highest degree.

And there is another angle. The more of the struggle that can be borne by iron and steel, the less must be borne by the flesh of American boys. Conservation of gasoline is necessary to the use of machines of war. When you burn a barrel of gasoline for your own selfish pleasure, you are thrusting the lads of your own community just that much closer to the mouths of Prussian cannon.

Teachers' Institutes.

Director G. I. Christie gave two addresses on August 28 before the Marion County Teachers' Institute. His addresses were on the subject of food production and conservation and how this work could be accomplished through agriculture in the schools.

The Vanderburg County Teachers' Institute held a meeting August 29 to 31. Director Christie took part in a three days' program, emphasizing the need for food production and conservation.

Indiana's Success Told by Mr. Straus

State Director of Boys' Working Reserve
Instructs Others in Plan.

Complying with a request from National Director William E. Hall, Isaac D. Straus of Indiana, federal State director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, told a conference of State directors in Washington last week how this State attained leadership in the work of organizing the boys' reserve. Mr. Straus was on the program for a report entitled "Indiana Tells How it Can be Put Over." The conference lasted two days, August 23-24, and was featured by the report of the success of the work in Indiana and the methods pursued to make such success possible.

Mr. Straus, in his report, called attention to the fact that regardless of how low the federal government reduces the prices of coal, the available supply of this commodity will not be increased. On the contrary the physiological effect of regulation by the federal government of prices is to decrease production. Therefore, he suggests that the United States Boys' Working Reserve in co-operation with the field agents of the United States Forestry Department and the forestry departments of the several States can contribute to the material welfare of the country by cutting into stove-wood the fallen timber that lies in wood lots and forests everywhere.

Mr. Straus presented to the conference a letter from Richard Lieber, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Forestry, in which the latter calls attention to the fact that many farmers in Indiana will be glad to have this fallen timber removed from their wood lots for little or no compensation.

Mr. Lieber advises in the letter that the fuel value of one cord of wood is equal to one ton of coal and that an ordinary man can cut a cord of wood in eight hours.

Mr. Lieber suggests that on Friday afternoons and Saturdays, school boys can be successfully employed under intelligent supervision in reducing this fallen timber to stove-wood lengths for home consumption or for sale to municipal wood yards. This suggestion was received very favorably by those who attended the conference.

The new Department of Vocational Education at Washington, of which C. A. Prosser of Indiana is national director, proposes to furnish a man who will devote his full time in co-operating with the United States Boys' Working Reserve in reducing to a practical basis the various plans suggested which propose to give vocational training that will be of important value to boys working in the various industries and on farms.

Mr. Carris, who represented Mr. Prosser at this conference, called attention to the fact that employers are everywhere crying for boys and that educators are insisting that boys should remain in school. Therefore, there must be a compromise of some kind and the only solution that he could see is for the high schools to arrange to meet the demand of the manufacturers by introducing wherever practical and necessary part work and part school programs, wherein a boy is employed part of the day and attends school the balance.

SPEAKERS FOR COUNTY INSTITUTES.

Through the co-operation of State Superintendent Horace Ellis, Chairman of the Educational Section, and Professor J. J. Pettijohn, head of the Speakers' Bureau of the Indiana Council, speakers are being sent to every County Institute in the State for the purpose of securing the permanent active co-operation of every school teacher in the capacity of a permanent enrolling officer of the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

The slogan in Indiana is, "Every Schoolhouse in the State a Permanent Enrollment Office of the Reserve."

Later it is proposed to issue to the pupils of all schools from the eighth grade up a text book for the purpose of teaching the vital necessity of the war measures resorted to by the Federal government. One of the most important subjects of this text book will be the United States Boys' Working Reserve, and therefore it is considered highly important that every school teacher in Indiana should become familiar with the purpose and need of this movement.

The speakers who are volunteering their services for this educational work are:

Professor C. N. Curry, Indiana State Normal School.

Professor Ray Trent, Indiana University.

Benjamin Blumberg, Terre Haute.

Professor Harlow Lindley, Earlham College.

President W. A. Millis, Hanover College.

President H. G. Laurence, Winona College.

Dr. A. H. Backus, Dunkirk, Ind.

Ross Lockridge, Indianapolis, Ind.

Hoover's Six Rules for Food Economy

In an article in the September Woman's Home Companion a writer gives Herbert Hoover's six rules for food economy. They are:

"First—To save the wheat. If we eat as usual from our harvest this year we shall have little more than enough for our own supply, but we can divide with our allies if each individual makes some sacrifice by eating at least one wheatless meal a day.

"Second—We want to save the meat for our cattle and hogs are decreasing, and we must send meat to our allies.

"Third—We wish to save the fats. We wish no butter used in cooking, less served on the table; we want less lard, bacon and other pork products used.

"Fourth—Deficiencies in food supply can be amply covered by increasing the use of fish, potatoes, beans, turnips, cabbages and vegetables generally, corn, buckwheat, rye and rice, of which we will have in abundance this harvest.

"Fifth—We want to save transportation. To meet the war pressure for munitions, men and coal, everyone should consume products of local origin so far as possible.

"Sixth—We want all to preach the 'gospel of the clean plate'; to see that nothing of value goes into the garbage can.

"Aside from eating an increased proportion of these commodities in order to save on the staples, it is extremely important that any surplus of these commodities shall be preserved or well stored for winter use."

You Can't Fool This Man

"I don't get excited nor let my feelings run away with me like some folks I know. Smith and Jones were around last Saturday wantin' me to chip in the Red Cross donation. I made it a rule never to give anything until it is needed and I see it is needed myself; and I ain't ever seen anything of that kind yet. The government ought to look after the soldier boys anyway—and they didn't get a cent out of me—not a dang red cent. I'm willing to admit this much: Maybe my boy will have to go to war, mebbe the surgeon will have to saw off his arm or legs, just because there was no one right there Johnnie-on-the-spot to bind up his wounds on the battlefield. It is true a Red Cross nurse might be the means of savin' his life or limb, but I ain't doing what Uncle Samuel ought to be doing himself. We got through the Civil War without a Red Cross and we can do it ag'in, so Jones and Smith didn't get a cent out of me, not a dang red cent! As I said I always aim to be fair and look at both sides, and I'll admit mebbe my boy will have typhoid fever and have to lay in a hot tent without steady nurse or doctor because there ain't enough to go 'round. And flies will swarm on his face because there ain't any screens or fans and there won't be anyone steady to keep the flies off and like as not he will moan in pain and call for ice water when there ain't any—and cry child-like for his Ma! But there ain't any sense in chippin' in a hundred million dollars to send nurses, helpers, bandages, ointments, fans, ice, speedy aid on the battlefield and the soothing touch of a woman's hand in the hospital when it wasn't done in the Civil War and Uncle Sam ought to do it anyway. So Smith nor Jones never got a red cent out of me—not a dang red cent."—Culver Citizen.

Patriotism in Indiana

Rockport—Charges that the Spencer county exemption board had been influenced to exempt a young man from military service because he "had money" were made in a letter to the Provost Marshal-General by a Rockport young man. The letter was returned to the board and the writer of the letter summoned to explain. He admitted that he had no proof of the charge and was prompted to write the letter because of a personal feeling against a brother-in-law, who had been exempted. The medical record of the case in question showed exemption to have been because of hernia. The writer of the letter was warned of the seriousness of his act and paroled.

South Bend—Thirty merchants of Lake, Porter, Laporte, Starke, Pulaski, Fulton, Marshall, Elkhart, Kosciusko and St. Joseph counties will meet here September 5 to take preliminary steps toward organizing each county to conserve the men and resources of the mercantile business, particularly as concerns delivery of merchandise, as a measure of national defense. The chairmen of the county councils of defense have nominated three representative merchants from each county to attend the meeting.

Kokomo—Earl Graves, who is organizing the local unit of State militia intended to replace the national guard, has distributed blanks for prospective militiamen to sign, as follows:

I, ....., being over eighteen years of age and not subject to service under the selective draft, do hereby present myself to the Governor of Indiana for service in the State militia.

I pledge myself to attend drill at least once a week or offer a reasonable excuse to my superior officer for not doing so.

Name .....

Address .....

Rochester—Mayor Brinkman heads the committee on arrangements that will bid farewell to the local members of the national army who will enter service soon. The exercises will be held at the fair grounds Tuesday, September 4. Cy Davis has been named to organize a company of militia in place of Ralph Richardson, who declined to serve. John Holman is chairman of a committee that will see that home folks are kept in touch with the boys at the front.

Warsaw—Kosciusko county will say good-by to her soldier boys Wednesday, September 5, in a public way. An appropriate program will follow a parade.

Greensburg—Valuable hogs on the Frank R. Robbins farm, a mile south of this place, are dead of a mysterious ailment, believed to have been due to ground glass in their patent tankage feed. A Purdue investigator is making an inquiry into an alleged wholesale plot to kill live stock. Mr. Robbins' loss is said to be near $5,000.

Sergeant E. J. Harbison is drilling twenty-five candidates for places in the State militia.

Gary—Mayor R. O. Johnson ordered the police to prevent an alleged "peace meeting" scheduled for Thursday evening, August 30. The meeting was arranged by the so-called People's Council, which is alleged to have the backing of pro-German influences.

Columbus—Constable Ebert Shaw has opened a recruiting office for a new company of State militia in the office of his brother, Sheriff Matt Shaw.

Knox—A "great patriotic awakening of the people of Starke county" is scheduled for this place about September-15. A speaking program designed to arouse the people to the significance of the present international situation will follow a street demonstration.

Waste in the kitchen means a short bank account and is near treason.

County Councils Urged to Action

Committee's Appeal Seeks to Arouse Public Conscience to the War.

Dr. A. B. Storms, Chairman of the Committee on Public Morals of the State Council of Defense, has addressed the following letter to the chairmen of the various County Councils of the State:

Dear Sir—The general purposes of the Committee on Moral, Religious and Social Forces may be stated briefly as follows. Will you make such reference to this statement as seems best to you in your County Council that there may be an understanding of the functions of this committee both in the State and County Councils, and then refer this letter to your chairman on morals and religion for the guidance of his committee?

PURPOSE OF COMMITTEE.

First, it is the purpose of the Committee on Moral, Religious and Social Forces to bring to the support of the national government in this trying hour the aroused conscience of the people. Our cause is just and righteousness is the keynote of the nation's policies.

IMPORTANCE OF UNITY.

To this end we seek to unite all our people toward this unity, essential to the strength of the nation at this time. The churches and other organizations can contribute by emphasizing the ideals for which we as a nation now stand by appealing to the loyalty of our citizens, especially on grounds of moral obligations, by taking leadership in the mobilization of the spiritual forces of State and Nation. The hour is come when disloyalty is treason, for patriots now "to doubt would be disloyalty, to falter would be sin."

FOLLOW-UP WORK.

Second, suggestions have already gone out through the State Council concerning follow-up work to keep the churches in touch with the young men who have gone out from their own communions and communities. It has also been suggested that special meetings be held in honor of the boys who enter the nation's service, preceding their departure. Also, that committees be appointed in each church, and in all organizations of a social character, to prepare suitable remembrances for the boys who will be in the battle front, at holiday seasons. Such thoughtfulness will wonderfully cheer and hearten them.

NEED OF RELIGIOUS SUPPORT.

Third, the time will come, if this hideous war continues, and continue it must until decision is reached and enduring peace made possible, when the support of religion and the consolation of faith will be sorely needed in ten thousand American homes and communities, as is now and as has been the case in Europe for many terrible months. Every effort must be made to bring to our people the undergirding strength of religious faith and to encourage the sense of national solidarity.

CONSERVATION.

The moral obligation of giving every possible encouragement to policies of conservation of food and other resources advocated by State and Federal authorities should receive conscientious attention and be given all possible emphasis by the councils of defense.

PATRIOTISM IN BUSINESS.

The demand for patriotism in business is increasingly strong. The keenness with which American business seizes opportunities for commercial profits is being justly rebuked when such enterprise leads to a lust for "war profits" in business in disregard of public and national welfare. Business, big and little, as for instance the steel interests in their recent response to the government's appeal, and the equally patriotic attitude of multitudes of smaller concerns and thousands of business men, should receive recognition, appreciation and encouragement. Americans will not fail to respond to the appeal of patriotism when that appeal is directed to their national concerns, and especially when made, as it now is being made in the light of the supreme devotion of life itself which our sons are preparing to offer on the battle fronts of Europe.

PATRIOTISM OF LABOR.

Appeal likewise should be made to labor. Organized labor especially is ready to show patriotism and we believe will do so as the emergencies and tests arise. With its laboring men and women apathetic and indifferent the nation would be hampered at every initial movement. With every possible effort to secure and to insure economic and industrial justice to the workers of America, the appeal to their patriotism will not fail of loyal response. In every industrial center especially this insistence upon fair dealing and this appeal to the patriotism of labor should receive constant emphasis.

Any effort to take advantage of labor in the present emergency would be as mean as it would be unpatriotic. We can, by open fairness of method and spirit, avoid many of the mistakes our European allies have made.

This appeal of patriotism to business and to labor can and should be made by the councils of defense until it reaches the conscience of every business man and every working man in the nation. The tremendous power of this phase of patriotic devotion can scarcely be exaggerated.

Closely akin to the importance of this appeal to business and to labor is the duty and importance of rebuking unpatriotic sentiment wherever it comes to the surface. If necessary, treasonable utterances and propaganda should be brought promptly to the attention of federal authority.

As to organization of the county committees, it seems to the committee of the State council that each county council should be governed largely by local conditions. In general, it seems wise to include in the morals committee, ministers of representative churches, leading laymen and leaders in social and philanthropic organizations.

As to the more negative aspect of the work of the committees on morals and religion, in communities in proximity to training camps, or in counties in which large cities are situated or where soldiers are likely to be in transit, there should be persistent effort made to repress vicious influences preying upon our boys in khaki and to see to the strict enforcement of the law governing these matters.

Every effort should be made to secure effective co-operation of local authorities in law enforcement. It is much better, wherever possible, to secure such enforcement through willing co-operation than by outside coercion. The appeal to patriotism promises to receive hearty and sincere response here as elsewhere. But there should be definite and persistent attempt to keep posted as to the moral conditions surrounding our troops in training and in transit, and care taken not to place too easy confidence in the mere verbal assurance of local police authorities that the law is or will be enforced. Here as elsewhere eternal vigilance is the price of efficiency.

There should also be organized and continuous effort to have thoughtful provision made wherever possible for the comfort of the soldiers and to bring to them the knowledge that good people are caring for them.

The committee of the State council will be very glad to have the co-operation of the corresponding committee of the county councils and particularly:

1. In carrying out the suggestions made from time to time from the State council. The county councils are next to the people and little can be done without their active assistance.

2. By sending to the State council any suggestions or information of importance.

Let us hear from you.

Yours in our country's service,

A. B. STORMS,
Chairman, Committee on Moral, Religious and Social Forces, State Council of Defense.

America Had to Fight.

"Submission to the brute force of Germany by France, by Russia or by England in the last two years would probably have ended the democracies of the world; would have put the United States in the most deadly peril, and for us to submit to her brute force now would put both our present and our future in deadly peril."—Senator R. L. Owen.

Headquarters for Council at Fair

Important Divisions of Food Production Will be Featured Next Week.

The headquarters for the State Council of Defense will be in a large tent just east of the Oliver building at the State fair grounds September 3 to 7. The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation will also have its headquarters in this tent.

Important divisions of the Food Production and Conservation work will be featured. The Food Conservation Headquarters, of which Mrs. Carl G. Fisher is chairman, will conduct its demonstrations at this place. Miss Eleanor Ferris, who has been demonstrating for this committee for some weeks, will have a complete equipment and will be prepared to give demonstrations both on drying and canning.

Maurice Douglas, in charge of the silo campaign in Indiana, will also be established here.

Is It Ignorance or Malice?

Why is it that even now, after the vindication by the Catholic hierarchy of the accusations brought against the Red Cross, some people still insist that the spirit, at least, of that organization is opposed to the doctrine and practices of the Catholic church? I defy anyone in any way familiar with the constitution of the Red Cross and with its doings to prove such assertion.

Will suggest that anyone who still entertains doubts about it will read the last issue of the "Columbiad," the official paper of the Knights of Columbus. Absolute evidence is given in said issue that there is nothing whatever in the constitution of the Red Cross or in the management of the affairs of the Red Cross that is opposed in any way to the Catholic doctrine or Catholic practices.

I hope we are mistaken, but we cannot help feeling that the remarks that are made against the Red Cross by some people are inspired by lack of patriotism more than by zeal for the Catholic church.—Charles Dhe of the Benton County Council of Defense, Fowler, Ind.

New Coal Committee.

Will J. Freeman, Chairman of the Committee on Coal Production of the State Council of Defense, has revised his committee, and its present membership follows:

Will J. Freeman, Chairman;
Frank J. Hayes, Vice-President United Mine Workers of America;

Ed. Stewart, President Indiana Mine Workers;	• M. L. Gould,
James Shill,	• A. M. Ogle,
William Mitch,	• H. M. Ferguson,
John Grange,	• William Johnson,
W. H. Rainey,	• J. Wooley,
Marion Head,	• Dr. T. D. Scales,
Archie Forbes,	• C. G. Hall.
Phil. H. Penna,

Woman's Work Is Clearly Defined.

The woman's committee of the Council of National Defense authorizes the following: "There is no woman's work more clearly marked out just now than getting behind the bill just introduced providing for family allowances, indemnification, re-education, and insurance for our soldiers. This is a great opportunity for women to urge the maintenance of families from the outset, to prevent untold suffering, to bring us through this war with families stronger than they otherwise could be, to keep the mortality of children low and their standard of living reasonably high."

The committee is making a drive to bring about a complete understanding of this measure. Accompanying a letter which is being sent to every State chairman go 50 copies of Secretary McAdoo's digest of the bill, which will be sent to county chairmen. The latter will be urged to write or telegraph congressmen urging prompt passage of the law. Ten thousand messages a day should, according to Dr. Shaw, reach Washington until the bill becomes a law.

Reports on Boys' Reserve Untrue

Investigation Discloses Stories of Traitorous Origin Have Been Spread.

County Councils of the State have been investigating the reports that have been circulated in regard to the United States Boys' Working Reserve and are finding them unfounded, malicious and misleading. The statements, evidently of treasonable origin, have been made in order to keep the boys from joining this organization and to cause the parents to oppose their sons' joining. The State Council has sent a request to each of the County Councils of Defense asking that they appoint in their respective counties five reputable and representative citizens to examine into and make report as to the actual purpose of this organization.

The findings of the Montgomery Council of Defense are, in part, as follows:

"We, the undersigned citizens, having been requested to make such examination for this county, find that there is no connection whatever with this organization and the military matters of the country; that there will be no attempt in any way whatever through this organization to draw members into the army or navy or in any way press them into military service, and that through this organization the boy will in no way take any obligation that will in any way connect him with such service. The Boys' Reserve is an organization made up of the boys of sixteen and twenty-one and the purpose is to see that they are not idle.

"You have the assurance of the President of the United States, of the Governor of the State of Indiana, of the Secretary of Labor, and of your own County Council of Defense, that the organization is in good faith; that no fraud of any kind will be practiced upon the boy or the parent.

"Ex-Auditor of Montgomery County.
"A. D. THOMAS,
"Of the Firm of Thomas, Foley & Lindley."

One of the most important and necessary organizations that the war has brought into existence is the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve. The purposes and aims of this organization are highly significant and involve the careers of those young men of the country not of an age to be called upon to fight. It is these young men who must now conserve and develop the resources of the nation. It is these men who must undertake to fill the places of those who are at the front or in the training camp. It is imperative that those who remain at home and who are between the ages of sixteen and twenty realize, at once, that they have a great and wonderful work to do, and that they can do that work by means of just such organization as the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve provides.

NEED.

The men of the nation are leaving daily to form the national guard and the national army and their places must be filled at once. By next May or June the need will be greater than ever, for by that time we will have to be feeding and clothing our army and providing the necessities for those who remain at home. The task is no easy one, but it is one that will appeal to the patriotic, red-blooded young man.

THE SOLUTION.

The United States government has great confidence in such young men and it recognizes in those who are between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one a potential power for great good and efficiency. It has, therefore, initiated an organization known as the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, not for the purpose of sending boys to the trenches, not with any intention of interfering with their present occupations or retarding their education, but, on the contrary, for the splendid purpose of inspiring young men to a conception of their own power and providing them with a means for exerting that power in a helpful, patriotic way.

A MAN'S JOB.

The truth is, that unless the boys will help us we cannot master the tremendous job that confronts us. We need the boys right now and desperately. They must grow into men at once and they must begin immediately to do a grown man's work. If they are already working they must perfect themselves in their regular duties and become highly efficient. They must regard their school duties with the utmost seriousness. Since the very beginning of the war the government has been asking for trained and educated men. The reserve camps have been filled with college men while skilled mechanics have rushed forward to fill various needs. The young man must not idle away his school hours. He must regard the lesson of each day as a definite implement that will help him to conquer the enemy and to care for those who are at home. The after school hours and the days of vacation must be now employed to the very best advantage. They can be made priceless. It will be the purpose of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve to help the boys to be useful. It will intelligently place these boys in touch with various tasks which would otherwise be left undone. It will enroll the boys in businesslike order and help them to do the work that must be done.

PLACING THE BOYS.

There will be a demand for boys this fall and winter to supply the emigrant labor necessary to replace the men who are in the training camps and at the front. But the great demand will doubtless come next spring when the farmers will need much additional help to aid them in cultivating and harvesting their increased crops.

EARNINGS.

The boys, however, are not to give their services for nothing. They will be paid for their work. Already many Indiana boys on farms have been earning $1.50 to $2.00 a day, without board. Others have been receiving $30.00 per month and board. They have been gaining also something in addition to the actual payment. They have been enjoying the wholesome experiences of farm life. They have learned to see the picturesque in nature. They have become familiar with a new profession. They have become conscious of the beauty of honest toil.

FEDERAL AWARD.

The national government, out of recognition of the work which the boy has rendered, awards him a special mark of distinction or "Award of Merit," known as the "Federal Bronze Badge." The service will have many interesting features in addition that will leave a worthy and memorable impression in the mind of the boy.

Surgeon-General on Flat Feet in Draft.

The Provost Marshal-General has sent the following to the governors of all States:

The following ruling of the Surgeon-General is published for the information of local boards:

The rules governing the matter of flat foot for men subject to the selective draft are fully set forth under the heading, "Lower extremities," paragraph 3 of the Regulations Governing Physical Examinations. In this paragraph it is specifically set forth that a broad, flat sole is common in laboring classes, particularly among negroes, and it is in no way disabling.

In this connection attention is invited to paragraph 4 of the regulations. It would seem, if the provisions of this paragraph are closely observed, that there would be no necessity for asking many of the questions now sent in by members of the local boards. This paragraph is as follows:

"Any of the physical deficiencies mentioned above must be present in such degree as to clearly and unmistakably disqualify the man for military service before he can be found to be physically deficient and not physically qualified for military service."

A just and lasting peace may come high, but it is the only kind worth having.

Roadside Markets Benefit Everyone

Both Producer and Consumer Have Much To Gain, Says Expert.

"The roadside market will benefit both producer and consumer," states Professor C. G. Woodbury, chief in horticulture at Purdue University. "It will tend to increase the consumption of these healthful foods, at the same time reducing the price to the consumer. Much waste will thus be prevented, while the farmer will secure a reasonable profit for his labor. While thus benefiting every American, more staple foods will also be released for needy Europe.

"The simplest plan which will interest the public in roadside market requires a bulletin board in front of the farm home. This bulletin may take the form of a blackboard or poster, on which should be neatly printed a list of the articles for sale. Sales will be increased by displaying a small basket of fruit or vegetables. Make the price as well as the product attractive."

Red Cross Efficiency.

There is misunderstanding in some localities as to how much of the Red Cross funds collected is actually used for relief work and how much is used to pay the expense of collecting, etc. Some misinformed person made the statement that only half of the funds really reached the front.

The cost of collecting the recent vast war fund was less than one per cent. When one donates $10 to the Red Cross he can be assured that at least $9.90 of the amount will remain for the purchase of ambulance wagons, bandages, medicine and other relief materials after all collecting expenses are paid.

France and Her Schools.

The people of France realize that the future of the nation depends upon their educating today's boys and girls. Stories from near the front tell of schools being kept, even in regions where children must be provided with gas masks against possible air attacks. Leaders throughout the country are appealing to American mothers and fathers to keep their children in school, from the grades through college, just as long as it is possible for them to do so.

Objects of Food Control.

1. Full inquiry into available stocks of food.
2. Inquiry into actual costs and practices of producing and distributing.
3. Prevention of hoarding of and speculation in foodstuffs.
4. Requisition of food supplies and equipment for handling them when necessary.
5. Prohibition of wasteful uses of food.—Herbert Hoover.

Germany Must Rule the Earth!

"I dedicate this stone to the youth of Germany, to the future of our German fatherland. May it, in the time to come, by the united action of its princes and its peoples, their armies and their citizens, become as powerful, as unique, as strongly united as the universal Roman empire. Germany is the necessary instructress of the humanity of today and of the humanity to come."
—Emperor William, dedicating Roman museum, Saalburg, Oct. 4, 1900.

Canning and Drying During State Fair.

Canning and drying demonstrations will be conducted under the direction of Purdue University in the Oliver building at the State fair grounds. Miss McNeil of the Home Economics Department will be the principal demonstrator. In connection with this work an educational exhibit will be on display. The principal features of the exhibit will be to show in a graphic way substitutes for wheat and meat, also the ways in which various wastes may be eliminated in the home.

Campaign for Food Production Goes On

Steps Taken to Encourage More and Better Live Stock and Added Acreage of Grain.

"Shall I Fill My Silo With High-Priced Corn?" is the title of a very interesting little pamphlet distributed by the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, live stock division, at the Indiana State Fair this week. The pamphlet was carried away and studied by thousands of interested Indiana farmers and the following "answers" to the query will no doubt be productive of results of a substantial character:

FOR BEEF CATTLE? YES.

The average of eight years' feeding at Purdue shows a profit of $15.24 per head for steers fed silage as compared with $8.85 for those fed no silage, or $6.39 in favor of silage-fed cattle. In 1916-17 steers fed principally on silage returned a profit of $17.80 per head when silage was figured at $6.00 per ton, or approximately $1.20 per bushel for the corn.

With the increased corn acreage and the present crop prospects and the present meat situation, which product is more likely to hold its price upon the market this winter?

The live stock in the United States is barely up to the normal level, while the world is 54,000,000 short. Certainly there was never a time when livestock producers and growers should take courage and produce more live stock than at the present time. Every county in the State where data has been taken shows that more money is made on live stock farming than on grain farming.

It will pay to feed cattle this winter and corn silage will be your cheapest feed.

FOR SHEEP? CERTAINLY!

The average of several years work in lamb feeding at Purdue shows that corn silage reduced the cost of grain from $6.26 to $5.52 when fed in connection with corn, cottonseed meal and clover hay, and that 368 pounds of corn silage replaced 233 pounds of clover hay. With corn at $1.50 per bushel and clover hay at $15.00 per ton, the sheep feeder can make approximately a dollar per ton over and above the cost of the corn silage and the cost of putting the corn into the silo. A fifty-bushel corn crop will make ten tons of silage per acre. Ten dollars per acre from your corn will mean more real money.

Silo your corn. Make more money and retain the farm's fertility.

FOR DAIRY CATTLE? ABSOLUTELY!

Seventeen per cent. more milk and 28 per cent. more butter fat is what the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station obtained from cows fed largely silage as compared with cows fed a heavy grain ration. The silage ration produced butter fat at 13 cents a pound and the grain ration at 22 cents a pound. One hundred pounds of silage more than replaced 20 pounds of grain, and its value as feed would have direct relation to the market price of grain feeds as shown by the following table:

When Grain Costs	Silage is Worth
$1.25 per hundred.....	$5.00 per ton
1.50 per hundred.....	6.00 per ton
1.75 per hundred.....	7.00 per ton
2.00 per hundred.....	8.00 per ton
2.25 per hundred.....	9.00 per ton
2.50 per hundred.....	10.00 per ton

2.75 per hundred.....	11.00 per ton
3.00 per hundred.....	12.00 per ton

Silage should be the dairyman's feed foundation.

WHEAT CAMPAIGN IN INDIANA.

A series of wheat meetings has been held in the various counties of the State. On the 11th and 12th of September meetings will be held in Starke, Cass and Clinton counties. On the 13th and 14th in Miami, Howard, Warren and Dubois counties. This closes the wheat campaign under the direction of the Food Production and Conservation Committee.

The price of $2.20 fixed for the 1918 wheat crop is causing the farmers to prepare a large wheat acreage this fall. Aside from the patriotic standpoint this minimum price will undoubtedly result in Indiana increasing her wheat acreage to 2,800,000 acres, the amount asked for by the United States Department of Agriculture.

IMPROVING OUR FUTURE FARMERS.

Eager to know more about what constitutes a good farm product, thirty-seven boys appeared for the boys' judging contest at the State Fair. They were there to compete for an opportunity to improve their knowledge of agriculture; they were there to fight for an opportunity to attend the school of agriculture of Purdue University; they were there to demonstrate what their agricultural training in the public schools and in the boys' club work has been doing for them. Classes of draft geldings, dairy cattle, beef cattle, sheep, hogs, corn and wheat were judged. Iliff Boaz of Franklin made the high score of 637 out of a possible 800 and won the $100 Purdue scholarship offered by the State Board of Agriculture. H. Harold Hilligoss, Anderson, got second place and a scholarship of $75, Clarence Yoder of Middlebury made third place with a $50 scholarship and John L. Wamsley of Indianapolis was fourth, obtaining a $25 scholarship.

In the special prizes Eugene McCoy, Greensburg, carried off the silver cup offered by the Holstein Friesian Association of America for the best work in dairy cattle, while Iliff Boaz, the winner of first place in the contest, also carried off the special prize of one share of stock in the American Shropshire Registry Association, presented by it for the best sheep judge.

Twenty counties were represented and Professor C. F. Gobble of Purdue University, who had charge of the work, says they were as fine a bunch as one could find. J. A. McCarty, who superintended the corn judging work, said that Indiana had some good corn growers started on the right road.

MARKETING AND DISTRIBUTION.

The United States Bureau of Crop Estimates is planning to give greater assistance than ever to the marketing and distribution committee. Much assistance has already been given through their representative, George C. Bryant, in locating the surplus horticulture crops.

The Indiana Horticulture Society will be in position to give better co-operation than it has since the appointing of their new secretary, Frank Odell of Perry county. The former secretary, M. W. Richards, went into the first officers' reserve camp and has been out of the work since that time. Naturally the society felt a great loss in Mr. Richards.

Women Responding to Call for Service

Enrollment Will Furnish a Record for Workers if Need Should Arise.

Indiana women are responding with enthusiasm to the call of the State Council of Defense for the Woman's War Service Census.

In many European countries it has been the custom to ask women to sign enrollment cards and in times of emergency all of the citizens were registered. It is the first duty of a citizen to be willing to take a part in all movements for the public welfare and the women of Indiana are now ready to be counted among the citizens of our great State.

This registration of women is being made as a part of the plan for State defense on the request and under the general direction of the woman's committee of the National Council of Defense. It is being taken by the Committee on "Enrollment of Women and Women's Service" of the State Council, of which committee Miss Julia Landers is chairman. The work was originally instituted by the Indiana League for Women's Service, which has been merged into the Committee on Enrollment of Women and Women's Service of the State Council. Other lines of important activities will later be undertaken by this committee.

AVAILABLE IF NECESSARY.

This enrollment is simply a record of the work women are already doing as housewives or in business or the professions in order that it may be available should it ever become necessary for the State to ask direct help from its patriotic women. This enrollment does not mean that women are to be drafted into any kind of service for the State or Nation. In an emergency women would be given the opportunity to volunteer their services to the State and Nation in the lines indicated on the Service Card, either in paid or voluntary positions.

The general plan of organization of woman's activities contemplates a general committee of women, of which Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle, a member of the State Council, will be chairman. The work will be divided into several departments, an important one of which will be the Committee on Enrollment and Woman's Service, which has already accomplished a great deal. The entire plan of the organization of the woman's activities will soon be formulated and executed.

Rogers One of Sixty-Six.

In a list of sixty-six representatives engaged in sixty-six communities of the country "to prepare recreation and relaxational facilities for soldiers on leave from the camps, just announced by Raymond B. Fosdick, chairman of the commission on training camp activities of the war department, appears the name of James Edward Rogers of Indianapolis. Mr. Rogers has been very actively and successfully engaged in the work here for some time. In reference to the purpose of his organization, Mr. Fosdick says:

"The instinctive desire of the soldier in camp with an hour of free time is to 'go to town,' if the town is only a crossroads. There is every necessity, therefore, that when the soldier comes to town, there should be no lack of places to go where he will be welcome, and of things to do that will add to his pleasure and entertainment."

Council Will Ask Definition of Policy

In Order That Intelligent Advice May be Given on Public Work.

In order that the Indiana State Council of Defense be the better enabled to patriotically and intelligently advise with citizens of the State, the council at its regular meeting, September 5, adopted a resolution directing the chairman to request of the Council of National Defense a definition of its position in reference to the execution of contracts for public improvements, and the letting of additional contracts for work of this character.

The question was presented by City Attorney John McPhee of Muncie, who asked the attitude of the State Council, and of the National Council, if known here, as to the enforcement of an ordinance passed by the city council of Muncie requiring the elevation of eleven railroad tracks on a street approaching a proposed new public school building. The contract would involve an expenditure of between $75,000 and $100,000.

Mr. McPhee presented correspondence with the officials of the Lake Erie & Western and Big Four railroads, the lines affected, pointing out their instructions from the Federal government and also citing the practical impossibility to secure prompt shipments of fabricated steel and other essential material.

DIFFICULTIES OF THE RAILROADS.

The difficulties of the railroads or others attempting such construction was confirmed by H. R. Kurrie of the council. Mr. Kurrie stated that it had taken a year and a half to secure the steel for a bridge needed on the Monon railroad. He stated, too, that the railroads are postponing all work not related to the traffic that can be postponed.

J. L. Keach commended the attitude of the city officials of Muncie, which he interpreted as exhibiting a high degree of patriotism.

A. E. Reynolds moved the adoption of a resolution that all work of this character that does not interfere with the public necessities be postponed until a more favorable time, which motion was adopted.

Evans Woollen then moved that the chairman secure from the Council of National Defense a definition of its attitude on matters of this kind, which motion was adopted unanimously.

EDUCATION OF TELEGRAPHERS.

The matter of educating the 900 telegraphers wanted from Indiana by the war department for the new national army was referred to the educational section. A letter from the chief of the signal corps reported that many Indiana schools are anticipating this need with courses of teaching. It was suggested by Mr. Reynolds that Indiana University and Purdue, being State schools, ought to make provision for such teaching.

In this connection attention was called to the commendation of the Council of National Defense to the proposed modification of the course of study in the public schools of Indiana, to meet the exigencies of the war and the request from the National Council for further details of the plan, which will be recommended to the State Councils of other States.

Communications relative to the second Liberty loan received by the chairman of the council were referred to the finance committee, to determine how best to carry out the wishes of the treasury department and report a later meeting. The loan will be floated October 1 and subscriptions will close November 1.

PROFESSOR STOCKTON RESIGNS.

A letter was presented to the council conveying the resignation of Prof. Frank Stockton from the food committee of the council. Mr. Stockton has resigned from the department of political economy at Indiana University to accept a similar position in the University of North Dakota. The vacancy will be supplied by the chairman of the committee.

The report of the special committee to investigate the matter of the $200,000 bond issue by the Marion County Council, which endorsed the proposition as a military necessity, and quoting the endorsement given in May, 1917, by Governor Goodrich, was approved. The report was conveyed to the heads of interested Indianapolis commercial organizations.

On motion of Frank Wampler the report of the Merchants' Economy section, received at the previous meeting of the council, was taken up for reconsideration and referred to a special committee consisting of Mr. Wampler, Mr. Keach and Rev. A. B. Storms.

The following resolution was presented by Charles Fox and referred to the Medical section of the council, with power to act, if it sees fit, before the next meeting of the council; if not, to be reported on next week:

"Whereas:

"1. The dental profession is recognized as an important branch of medicine, and particularly of preventive medicine, and is so recognized and accepted by all medical authorities.

"2. The supply of dentists is inadequate to the needs of the population in times of peace.

"3. No person can possibly perform the services of the dentist without adequate training in a four years' college course in a standard dental college, of which there are but forty-six (46) in the United States and Canada.

"4. Under instruction from the Surgeon-General of the Army and the Medical Council of National Defense dental students were discouraged from applying for the officers' reserve corps and, therefore, through no fault of their own, have lost every chance to qualify as officers in that corps.

"5. The first call of the draft for the national army has called over 40 per cent. of the eligibles into the service.

"6. This depletion of the dental college of their raw material (students) is a menace to the entire population, including the army and navy, inasmuch as thousands of dentists are already under commission for service in the army and navy, and there is no other source of supply possible.

"7. The experience of England and France has shown that the maintenance of the military establishment, the effective operation of the military forces and the national interest during the emergency were seriously threatened by permitting the enlistment of ungraduated medical and dental students and the output of physicians and dentists during the three years of war has, for this reason, been seriously reduced.

"Therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the Indiana State Council of Defense, in session in State House, Indianapolis, Ind., September 5, 1917:

"1. That it is the belief of this body that the conservation of the dental student is as necessary to the well-being of the nation as that of the medical student.

"2. That the dental students in the junior and senior classes should be given the same exemption that has been accorded medical students and medical internes.

"3. That this body hereby respectfully requests the President of the United States and the Secretary of War to enter a ruling, putting the dental students of this country on the same footing as the medical students and internes."

SHOULD BE NO DISTINCTION.

In discussing the resolution Mr. Fox said he felt that the government should make no distinction between medical and dental students and the latter ought to be exempted from military service in order to complete their college training. He said five States, including California and Pennsylvania, have exempted dental students, on action by State exemption boards, on their own motion. He said the quota of dentists wanted for the army is short 66 per cent.

Evans Woollen presented the following report for the finance committee, which, on motion of Mr. Wampler, was approved and placed on record:

J. E. REED,

Deputy Auditor.

The council passed a proposal that Governor Goodrich proclaim a day the third week in September on which public school children would be asked to contribute 1 cent each for the benefit of French war orphans, without recommendation.

The committee on public morals was asked to investigate a proposal from James Edward Rogers of the recreational bureau that Indiana women be asked to take up the matter of a foster-mother for each of the soldiers who leave the State. Miss Julia Landers, who presented the proposition, stated that the bureau has a card catalog of soldiers by counties and the enrollment committee of the State Council is cataloging the women in a similar manner, so that there would be no great difficulty in making selections or assignment of women whose business it would be to clip newspapers of matter interesting to the individual, and otherwise cater to his individual tastes, supplementing the work already projected for the men who have enrolled as "Sammy backers," and the family correspondence.

Linton A. Cox, Jr.

Linton A. Cox, Jr., who has been actively associated with the State office of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, has given up his duties in order to enter the service of the United States Army. Mr. Cox, who is nineteen years old, has passed the examinations in the aviation branch of the United States Signal Corps, and is now in training at Columbus, Ohio. Young Cox has completed his sophomore year at the University of Wisconsin. He has been remarkably successful as an organizer and leader for the boys' reserve.

Stockton on Markets.

Indiana University has published a bulletin by Frank T. Stockton, assistant professor of Economics and Sociology, and a member of the food committee of the State Council of Defense, entitled, "City Markets, How to Start and Operate a City Public Retail Market." The bulletin discusses the distribution of food productions, the advantages of public markets to buyers and sellers, the elimination of middlemen and supervision.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams--Decatur is raising $1,000 toward a fund for local guard volunteers.

Bartholomew--Local dealers of Columbus are preparing to fill out schedules of commodities in accordance with the requirements of the recent government food production bill. Dr. Horace E. Ellis is scheduled to talk at the Bartholomew County Teachers' Institute. He will speak also at the Delaware County Teachers' Institute.

Cass--Miss Bema Singer is the new "trouble man" for the Logansport Telephone Company. She replaced a man who has joined the new national army.

Delaware--Henry Lane Wilson, former United States ambassador to European capitals, to Chili and Mexico, was the principal speaker at a big farewell reception held here for departing soldiers, September 3.

Decatur--The Greensburg Delivery Company, operating for the stores of that city, has announced a reduction in the number of deliveries to three daily, in conformity with the suggestion of the Merchants' Economy Committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense. The plan became effective this week.

Knox--Vincennes and Knox county bade farewell to their soldier boys with a dance at the Grand Hotel, Vincennes, August 24. The proceeds were devoted to the purchase of yarn for Red Cross knitters. Mrs. John B. Bayard, Mrs. William Ewing, Jr., and Miss Loretta Bruner were patronesses for the dance, which was featured by the presence of the recently commissioned officers in the national army. Knox county boasts of having had two native sons at the head of the United States navy, Rear Admiral Nathaniel Usher and Rear Admiral Albert P. Niblack, a distinction not approached by any county in the State or Nation.

Lake--Grocers of Michigan City have inaugurated a "Cash and Carry Away" plan of merchandising. The result has been to give the customers the benefit of price reductions ranging from 5 to 15 per cent. on staples. The dealers are enthusiastic over the success of the scheme, declaring that they are profiting more by a prompt payment for their goods and the customers are better satisfied in knowing just what they are getting for their money.

Laporte--In line with the recommendations of the Merchants' Economy Committee, L. M. Vaughn of the Laporte Chamber of Commerce, has presented a plan for a co-operative delivery system that has met with the approval of a large number of retailers of the city and is to be given a trial.

The plan, in a general way, is to have a single system owned by all the merchants. This system delivers for all the grocers. It employs sufficient wagons to deliver for all. A central delivery depot is established. At definite hours during the day--generally 8, 10:30 and 3 o'clock--the several wagons of this system gather up all the groceries and carry them to the depot, where they are quickly loaded into the route wagons. These wagons each have a district in which they deliver. There is no duplication. System is not lacking. The orders are carried promptly. The housewife knows that to get her merchandise on the first delivery she must have her order in before 8 o'clock, and if she fails, it will not be delivered until the 10 o'clock delivery. Generally on Saturday there are more deliveries.

The plan is working out very successfully in a number of cities over the country.

Investigation shows that it costs an average of 7 3/4 cents per order to deliver in Laporte.

Auditor Hausheer of Laporte county, asked the county council for an appropriation of $2,500 at its meeting September 4. The appropriation had the unanimous indorsement of the business and manufacturing interests of the county.

Marshall--The patriotism of the teachers of Marshall county was attested in the unanimous adoption at their regular institute of the following resolutions:

Whereas, The loyalty and patriotism of a part of the Indiana teaching force has been called in question, and

Whereas, In the present crisis our government must be upheld by every citizen; be it

Resolved, That we, the teachers of Marshall county, pledge ourselves to refrain from adverse criticism of the acts or decisions of the authorities, and that we agree to teach patriotism by precept and example; further be it

Resolved, That we express our appreciations for the self-sacrifice of our former co-workers, namely; Vernon Swihart, Adam Mummy, Lester Yarian, Vance Fenstermaker, Wallace Roth and Daniel Bolinger, who have enlisted in military service, and we are united in the wish that all may be well with them; further be it

Resolved, That when the country has no further need of their services, we cherish the hope that they may find places among us in the schools.

Montgomery--One thousand four hundred dollars has already been subscribed by firms and individuals of Crawfordsville as a first quarterly payment to the government sewing fund.

A. S. Pett, florist of Crawfordsville, gave a large donation of cut flowers to the members of the C. H. S. Sunshine Society, who will sell them for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Red Cross work in Montgomery county is under the direction of Mrs. Harry Michael, Mrs. F. A. Turner, Mrs. Jas. Harding and Miss Harriet Harding. The Crawfordsville committee includes Mrs. George W. Graham, Mrs. Clifford Peterson, Mrs. Dumont Kennedy, Mrs. W. W. Goltra and Mrs. W. A. Collins.

Newton--Steps have been taken to employ a county agricultural agent for Newton county. The county council has been asked for a sufficient appropriation. The action is in line with a determination to increase crop production here next season. Four hundred knitters of Newton county have agreed to furnish for the national army 150 sweaters, 150 pairs of socks, 150 wristlets and 150 scarfs. Mrs. Harry Little has charge of the knitting campaign, for which $400 worth of yarn has been purchased.

Posey--T. S. McCulloch, county agent, has interested a local bank in a calf club for the encouragement of breeding registered live stock. Within one week after the contest was announced forty-three calves were promised. The next bank proposed to furnish a pure bred or extra good grade calf to any boy or girl of the county who is prepared to care for a calf. Each boy or girl agrees to sign a note for the calf, the same to cover the cost of calf delivery charges to Mount Vernon and insurance. These notes are to run for ten months, to one year at 6 per cent. interest. In each case the parent or guardians signs the note as security. The boy or girl who feeds the calf for nine months and on a set date all the calves are to be brought to Mount Vernon and put up at public auction. If a member wants the calf he has been raising he may bid for it and retain the calf by paying the cost of the note, otherwise he is to receive what the calf brings after the cost of the note is paid.

St. Joseph--At the initial meeting for the organization of home defense units in South Bend and Mishawaka, Major Charles Calvert, in charge of the organization, enrolled 310 men. The number has been steadily increasing since and these communities promise to furnish a large well-drilled force for any emergency that may arise in the absence of the National Guard.

Shelby--One hundred and forty women have knit 170 pairs of socks for Indiana soldiers in Shelbyville. Most of the work has been done at the homes of Mrs. Sam Kennedy and Miss Nellie Leefer. Every township in Shelby county is being organized for Red Cross work. Following are the chairmen of their respective districts:

Noble Bassett, Morristown; Charles Rhodes, R. 7, Shelbyville; Richard Gallagher, R. R. 21, Needham; J. C. Briley, Rays Crossing; Dr. G. I. Inlow, R. R. 6, Shelbyville; John McCain, R. R. 5, Shelbyville; Dalzell Neibert, St. Paul; Lee Fortner, R. R. 2, Shelbyville; Ira Worland, R. R., Shelbyville; Newton Williams, Fairland; Dr. O. H. McDonald, London; Dr. Clarence Shaw, Flat Rock; Harvey Oltman, R. R. 4, Edinburg.

Vermilion--At a meeting of the Vermilion County Council of Defense it was decided that this county should have a Home Guard and to give the movement for a Home Guard a start H. M. Ferguson of Clinton was appointed chairman or captain of the guards. He is authorized to name helpers.

Four "Four-Minute Men" were also named. It is the duty of these men to appear at the "movies" and make talks between reels about the work of the defense council. Their talks will not be longer than four minutes, hence the name. The following is the copy of the minutes of the council furnished by the secretary:

The Vermilion County Council of Defense met in regular session August 14, 1917, with five members present.

In compliance with instructions from the State Council of Defense the following committees were appointed:

H. M. Ferguson, Clinton, was selected as chairman of the Vermilion County Home Guard, with the privilege of selecting helpers in each township.

Rev. J. S. Brown of Newport was selected county chairman of the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

On the Food Conservation Commission a chairman was selected for each township, as follows:

Miss Edna Benefiel, Highland township; Mrs. M. W. Coffin, Eugene township; Mrs. B. S. Aikman, Vermilion township; Miss Hallie Newton, Helt township; Mrs. F. L. Swinehart and Mrs. H. M. Ferguson, Clinton township.

The following persons were named as "Four-Minute Men":

Mont Padgett, Cayuga; Mark Lyday, Clinton; O. L. Chivington, Dana; H. B. Aikman, Newport.

Council then adjourned to meet the second Tuesday in September.

FRANK R. MILLER, President.

NELLE M. WAIT, Secretary.

Vevay--An unknown man has been traveling through Switzerland county, offering to demonstrate canning of fruits and vegetables for farmers' wives. He called at the home of Mrs. Charles McVey last week and requested that he be permitted to can some tomatoes for her. The request was refused. Officials know of no person having been sent by the defense board to demonstrate canning, and as a precaution, suggestion that all persons refuse to permit any stranger to touch any food stuffs that are to be canned.

Wayne--A parade of fraternal societies, civilians on foot and in automobiles marked the farewell for soldiers held here September 3. A dance on an asphalt pavement at night netted several hundred dollars for the Red Cross. In the parade was a company of Home Guards from Hagers-town.

Editorial Comment

THE NATURE OF FOOD CONTROL.

As a federal law, with H. C. Hoover as food administrator, the food control bill assumes a tremendous and interesting significance. The reasons for the bill are attributed to the abnormal demand for food due to the reduction of producing powers in England; to the isolation of Russia from the world's food market; to the destruction of foodstuffs by submarines; to the inflation of currency; to the competition among our allies on short markets, and to embargoes. The bill will act as a normal economic machine for the regulation and stabilizing of prices, and it will at the same time serve to increase exports and protect our own consuming public as to prices. It will mobilize and systematize the efforts of every woman, and incidentally utilize boys through such an organization as the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

The larger means for making the bill effective will include the following: elevators and mills of over 100 barrels daily capacity must take out a government license and store no wheat for over thirty days without government approval. The government will open agencies for the purchase of wheat at the principal terminals. A committee, under the direction of President H. A. Garfield of Williams College will determine from time to time a fair price for the fall harvests. The co-operation of the leading millers of the country and of hotels and homes will be sought in order that flour may be exported instead of wheat, thereby retaining the employment of our mills and preventing a shortage in feed for dairy cattle.

The bill is to be made effective also through the individual. Co-operation, not compulsion, is its aim, that people be not forced to buy by ticket and eat by governmental edict. They are put on their own responsibility to do that which patriotism demands. To be successful the bill must become a "volunteer movement" for economy. The housewife, and the head of the household, the boy and the girl, each has his own share in making the bill effective. Each person should eat all the food that is served him and avoid unnecessary eating. Whenever possible, local products should be used instead of such as may be exported to our allies. Meals should be prepared according to principles of dietetics. Perishables should be eaten first. Food must be cooked and handled properly.

Instructions of this sort are characteristic of the statements Mr. Hoover is making about his campaign, a campaign in which every woman and girl is an active agent, a campaign in which every male civilian and every youth is an important part.

To understand the food bill is, in a measure, to understand the war, for, as has been said, "this is a conflict of destruction against conservation. The issue depends on the ability of the world to conserve its resources in the presence of the Central Powers running wild in the work of destruction."

"Let every man," says President Wilson, "assume the duty of careful provident use and expenditure as a dictate of patriotism, which no one can now expect ever to be excused or forgiven for ignoring."

Here is the situation as presented in a government pamphlet:

"Half a cup of milk—whole, skimmed or sour—a seemingly trifling matter—hardly worth the trouble to keep or use. Now, if every home—there are 20,000,000 of them—should waste on an average one-half cup daily, it would mean a waste of 2,500,000 quarts daily—9,912,500,000 quarts a year—the total product of more than 400,000 cows. It takes a lot of grass to make that much milk and an army of people to produce and deliver it."

"An ounce of edible meat, lean meat, fat and lean, suet or fat trimmed from steak, chop or roast—seems hardly worth saving. Yet if every one of our 20,000,000 American families on the average wastes each day only one ounce of edible meat or fat, it means a daily waste of 1,250,000 pounds of animal food—456,000,000 pounds of valuable animal food a year."

To understand and appreciate the great significance of Hoover's campaign it is necessary to know some of the following statements that have been made about it and to apply them conscientiously.

"The nearer we approach to the ideal of being self-supporting the safer we shall be."

"One never repents of having eaten too little." (One of Thomas Jefferson's ten rules of living.)

"Every housewife who practices strict economy puts herself in the ranks of those who serve the nation."—The President of the United States.

Why is America at War?

"Why is America at war?" An indictment of the Kaiser by Congressman George Edmond Foss of Illinois follows:

"As a reward for our neutrality what have we received at the hands of William II?

"He has set the torch of the incendiary to our factories, our workshops, our ships, and our wharves.

"He has laid the bomb of the assassin in our munition plants and the holds of our ships.

"He has sought to corrupt our manhood with a selfish dream of peace when there is no peace.

"He has wilfully butchered our citizens on the high seas.

"He has destroyed our commerce.

"He seeks to terrorize us with his devilish policy of frightfulness.

"He has violated every canon of international decency and set at naught every solemn treaty and every precept of international law.

"He has plunged the world into the maddest orgy of blood, rapine and murder which history records.

"He has intrigued against our peace at home and abroad.

"He seeks to destroy our civilization. Patience is no longer a virtue, further endurance is cowardice, submission to Prussian demands is slavery."

An Old Fake Branded

Friends of Editor Dufendach of the Huntingburg, Ind., Independent have been condoling him because of the alleged tragedy that "cost the life" of his son, Mark C. Dufendach, with Company I, 18th U. S. Infantry, now in France. It was reported that Editor Dufendach had received a letter from his son in which it was suggested that the stamp be saved, inasmuch as it "might be the last" they would ever receive from him. Acting on the suggestion, they were supposed to have "steamed off" the stamp and found inscribed thereunder the words, "I am starving." Editor Dufendach has been kept busy explaining, first that the soldiers are not using stamps on their messages home; second, that they received no such letter from Mark; third, the letter they did receive, only recently, says he is well, enjoying good health and eager for the fray. Aside from "these minor non-essentials" Mr. Dufendach admits the story is "probably true."

Suggestion for Men.

A woman has suggested that the men do their "bit" with one smokeless day each week. Another plan is for the smoker to lay aside every other cigarette or cigar and send them to the soldiers in France.

The following uniform is adopted for chauffeurs, messengers and other civilians, except army field clerks and field clerks, quartermaster corps, accompanying expeditionary forces to Europe, and will be sold to them at cost by the quartermaster corps: Campaign hats without cord, woolen service uniform with bronze button insignia, U. S., for both sides of collar, canvas leggings and white brassards, to be sewed around the left arm on blouse and overcoat, half way between the shoulder and the elbow.

Children Must Be Safe From Slavery

Uncle Sam Will Enforce Law in Reference to Young Toilers.

Though the nation is at war and its men and women are being pressed into new lines of service, often arduous and difficult, the American child is to be protected in order that he may grow to healthy maturity. The Official Bulletin states that rules and regulations for the enforcement of the United States child labor law have been approved by the board of secretaries, composed of the Attorney-General, Secretary of Commerce and Secretary of Labor. The act provides that "in any States designated by the board an employment certificate or other similar paper as to the age of the child, issued under the laws of the State and not inconsistent with the provisions of the act, shall have the same force and effect as a Federal certificate." The following States have been conditionally designated for a six months' period by the board: Arkansas, Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut, California, Delaware, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, New Hampshire, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Vermont and Wisconsin. Other States are being considered, and announcements of decisions will soon be made. The rules and regulations having to do with the law are entitled, "An act to prevent interstate commerce in the products of child labor, and for other purposes." The act has to do with certificates of age, the acceptance of State certificates, the revocation of certificates, hours of employment, days of employment, time records, inspection, guaranties, alteration and amendment.

WHAT MUST BE CERTIFIED.

Certificates of age, in order to protect the producer, manufacturer, or dealer from prosecution, shall be either:

1. Federal age certificates issued by persons hereafter to be designated by the board for children between sixteen and seventeen years of age when employment in a mine or quarry is contemplated and for children between fourteen and sixteen years of age when employment in a mill, cannery, factory, workshop or manufacturing establishment is contemplated. Such certificates shall contain the following information: (1) Name of child; (2) place and date of birth of child, together with statement of evidence on which this is based, except when physicians' certificates of physical age are accepted by the issuing officer, in which case physical age shall be shown; (3) sex and color; (4) signature of child; (5) name and address of child's parent, guardian, or custodian; (6) signature of issuing officer; and (7) date and place of issuance.

2. Employment, age, or working certificate, permit, or paper issued under State authority in such States as are hereafter designated by the board.

In determining whether children between fourteen and sixteen years of age have been employed more than eight hours in any day the hours of employment shall be computed from the time the child is required or permitted or suffered to be at the place of employment up to the time when he leaves off work for the day, exclusive of a single continuous period of a definite length of time during which the child is off work and not subject to call.

DAYS OF EMPLOYMENT.

A child may not be employed for more than six consecutive days.

An inspector duly authorized under this act shall have the right to enter and inspect any mine or quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, factory, or manufacturing establishment and other places in which goods are produced or held for interstate commerce; to inspect the certificates of age kept on file, time records, and such other records of the producer or manufacturer as may aid in the enforcement of the act; to have access to freight bills, shippers' receipts, or other records of shipment in interstate or foreign commerce kept by railroads, express companies, steamship lines, or other transportation companies so far as they may aid in the enforcement of the act.

"Send Him Away With a Smile"

Wayne county said farewell to her soldier boys at Richmond, September 3. The slogan of the occasion was "Send him away with a smile," and Strickland W. Gillilan, an Indiana humorist, dedicated the following appropriate verses to the occasion:

They are leaving today on a mission
That rouses our uttermost pride.
They'll soon be in fighting condition
Far over the turbulent tide.
Are there tears in your heart? Kindly keep them
Winked back from your eyes for a while.
In the sight of the boys do not weep them—
Send our soldiers away with a smile.

Let their last sound of home be our laughter;
Their last glimpse of home be a grin,
That through every charge follows after
And nerves them to fight till they win.
Let the home-thought be glad; it will cheer them
O'er many a shell-ridden mile,
Till the butcherly foeman shall fear them—
Let us send them away with a smile.

"But," you say, "for the never-returning"—
We smile all the more; that their way
Shall be bright while their candle's still burning.
Smile, smile with them now, while you may!
Let us save all our grief till 'tis needed—
God make it a merciful while!
Only pride in them now should be heeded;
We will send them away with a smile!

Committee at the Indiana State Fair was a very great success. The food conservation headquarters held a series of canning and drying demonstrations supplemented by short talks by various prominent speakers. Practically all of the speakers appealed to the audience to conserve the food in some way as a patriotic duty. These talks aided much in drawing the crowd and aroused considerable interest.

The object of the Boys' Working Reserve and the Hoover cards were explained and everyone interested was given an opportunity to pledge their assistance in winning the war.

FOOD CONSERVATION WORK.

The food conservation work was further featured by Purdue University in the Oliver building. Misses McNeill, Gaddis, Garvin and Beal conducted the demonstrations. The educational exhibit which supplemented this work was of considerable interest by showing actual rations which were meatless and wheatless. A graphic display of the common wastes and means of avoiding these were also featured.

The other exhibits by Purdue were especially good this year in that they were simple, attractive and educational.

The county agent work was unique in that no products were placed on display. All of the exhibit was composed of actual demonstrational work which had been done by the various county agents. The major part of the demonstrational work was confined to the problems affecting the soils and the principal farm crops, and were self-explanatory. An automatic lantern was used to assist in setting out the results of these demonstrations, in which fifty lantern slides were used.

The boys' and girls' club work in Indiana plays a very important part in the future of our State. In 1917 40,000 boys and girls were enrolled from sixty-three counties in the State, doing work in corn, pig, calf, poultry, dairy, sheep, potato, tomato, garden, canning, bread making and sewing clubs. These young people are making the future farmers and home keepers and a worthy class of citizens for our commonwealth.

Brazil's first appropriation for armament for fighting Germany is $26,000,000. Not much, it is true, but pretty ambitious for Brazil.

Milk Question Is More Than Local

Entire Nation is Affected and a Federal Inquiry is Planned.

Crawfordsville is not the only city in Indiana where the question of a milk supply is causing public concern. South Bend recently experienced a "milk strike" because of differences on the wholesale supply, between producers and distributors. As to conditions in Logansport, the Pharos-Reporter says editorially:

What will happen to the milk, butter and general dairy interests of the country is difficult to forecast. War conditions seem to have upset all the orderly processes of the days of peace, and today sends no message to tomorrow of what may be expected.

Last Saturday two of the old established dairies, which delivered milk to the people of Logansport, quit the retail milk business, and it is rumored that others are contemplating the same move.

The food administration has issued a bulletin on the subject in which the statement is made that milk and butter supplies are decreasing in the United States, while our population is increasing. The dairy herds of Europe are diminishing rapidly because of the conditions created by war, and there is no probability of improvement in these conditions. The dairy problem in this country, therefore, is not only a war emergency problem, but one that will continue after the war.

The world's dairy supplies are decreasing rapidly for two important reasons. First, the dairy cattle of Europe are diminishing, for Europe is being driven to eat its cattle for meat; second, the diversion of labor to war has decreased the fodder supplies, and the shortage of shipping has limited the amount of imported fodder, and therefore the cattle which can be supported and productivity of the individual cow have been reduced. Even our own dairy supplies are not keeping pace with our growth of population, for our per capita milk supply has fallen from 90 to 75 gallons annually in the past fifteen years. Yet today we must ship increasing amounts of dairy products to our allies.

The dairy situation resolves itself into several phases. First, it is to be hoped that the forthcoming abundant harvest will result in lower prices of food and diminish the impetus to sell the cattle for meat. Second, the industry needs encouragement, so as to increase the dairy herd, and thus our dairy supplies, for the sake first of our own people and second of the allies. The people must realize the vital dependence of the well-being of their children, and thus of the nation, upon the encouragement and upbuilding of the industry. Third, we must save the wastes in milk and butter if we are to provide milk supplies to all, especially including the children of the crowded districts of our cities.

Since the matter first came to the attention of the Indiana State Council of Defense, through the statement of A. E. Reynolds of Crawfordsville, the announcement has been made that a nationwide investigation into the business is contemplated at once under the new federal food administration.

Two Educational Days.

The Rush County Fair Association, acting on the suggestion of State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Horace Ellis, who is head of the educational section of the Indiana State Council of Defense, the Rush County Fair Association set aside two days of the fair, to be held the week of September 11, for educational purposes and patriotic gatherings. The Hon. Charles Warren Fairbanks of the Indiana Council has been asked to make an address September 12, when a demonstration will be held for the men drafted for service in the new national army. Features of the demonstration will be a big free dinner for the soldiers and a patriotic musical program. Frank Dailey, also of the State Council, has been invited to make an address September 14 at the fair grounds.

Barnard Calls on Indiana Officials

New Food Commissioner Sends Orders to Inspectors of the State.

Federal Food Commissioner H. E. Barnard has addressed the following notice to inspectors of weights and measures, food inspectors, meat inspectors and deputy health commissioners of Indiana:

"The President has appointed me Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana and Mr. Hoover expects me to see that the Food Administration Law is enforced in this State. If you have read the law you know that it is the most drastic measure ever enacted. It prohibits food hoarding and food wasting. In your capacity as a city or county official and a deputy of my department, advise me immediately of all authoritative information which comes to you concerning the wastage of food in the fields, orchards or markets, or the hoarding of food in violation of the law. Get the facts in all such cases so that if the law is violated we can take quick action in the Federal Court to punish the offender.

"This is a vitally important matter. I am asking you to help me because you are on the ground and know what is going on in your community. I shall frequently call upon you for special service."

Dr. Barnard has sent the following communication to the women of Indiana in reference to enrollment in the Hoover food conservation movement:

"I am advised that many aides have found women unresponsive. You will remember that I have asked you to save the names of these women. While I do not believe there are many women in Indiana who are so pro-German that they will deliberately work to injure the food conservation movement, we ought to know where such sentiment exists. I shall be glad to have you report to me just how your work has gone. If you have met definite opposition please tell me what form it has taken. It is quite as important to know those who are against us as those who are with us and if any opposition has developed in your county I shall be glad to have you make a record of it there and advise me fully concerning the facts.

"Herbert Hoover, Federal Food Administrator, wires me: 'Congratulate the women of Indiana for their splendid work in the food pledge campaign. Women are everywhere proving their claims that they are ready to serve their country and do their part in bringing a speedy victory to the cause of justice and democracy.'"

Governor Thanks Civil War Veteran.

W. R. Gibbons of West Baden, Ind., has received a personal letter from Governor James P. Goodrich thanking him for his interest in the organization of a Home Guard Company. Mr. Gibbons is a veteran of the Civil War and the first man in Orangeville township to offer himself for this service. Commenting on the incident the Orleans, Ind., Progressive-Examiner says:

At the close of the great Civil War of 1861-65, a veteran of that conflict returned to his rural home in Northwest township, and in the years after, at the close of many winter days, this veteran father sat near the glow of the open fire and amid cracking of beech wood and hickory off and again he told to the then small lad, and his younger brothers, the story of victory and defeat, and how amid the canons' roar the rain of shot and shell—the Stars and Stripes in final triumph waved. And this, the lad of long years ago, is the man who was first from Orangeville township to tender services to his State and nation. Would that all men were thus inspired with the spirit of patriotism. Sooner would we know of peace on earth and the name "slacker" be unknown.

Indiana is First.

Government reports give Indiana first rank for her gardening campaign, under the direction of Professor G. I. Christie.

News of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

Great activity has been manifested during the past week by the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve. The importance of this splendid organization is now being recognized and as a result the membership has increased noticeably. Many county organizations are sending in reports and endorsements of the organization.

The report of the Rush County Investigating Committee concludes as follows:

"We most heartily endorse the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve and urge every boy in Rush county, who is eligible, to enroll as soon as opportunity offers and thus show the true spirit of patriotism which should repose in the breast of every Rush county boy." The report is signed by Arie M. Taylor, chairman; Carl E. Webb, secretary, Scoutmaster Troup No. 2, Rushville, Ind.; M. W. Lyons, W. E. Wagoner and J. T. Arbuckle.

The Lawrence county report is signed by W. E. McCormick, chairman; W. C. Roberts, superintendent of schools of Bedford and Lawrence county; R. M. Tirey, superintendent of Mitchell public schools; John A. Rowe and George E. Lary. The report is very interesting and contains the following important passages:

"We find that the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve is absolutely necessary to take the place of the millions of men who have been and will be called into the military service of the country. The parents should encourage their boys to enroll immediately and should feel special pride to have a boy patriotic enough to respond to the call of his country."

* * * *

In speaking of the working reserve, Superintendent Sharp of Bartholomew county says: "The boys who enroll will not be taken away from home to fight. They will not be even taken away to work, unless they want to go."

* * * *

Major Fred L. Dennis of the St. Joseph county section of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve has resigned from the chairmanship in order to accept the assistant chairmanship of the Home Guard organization. J. G. Yeagley was appointed to take his place.

* * * *

Mr. H. W. McDowell of Winamac, Pulaski county director of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, has resigned his position to serve his country. He has joined the Officers' Reserve Training Camp at Fort Harrison. His work for the Boys' Reserve was efficient and successful.

* * * *

The United States Department of Agriculture advises that rabbits be raised more extensively in America, by way of reducing the demand on the ordinary meat supply. Here is new work for the members of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve. Rabbits are raised easily. They eat grass, hay, lawn cuttings and green vegetation of many kinds.

Red Cross Activities.

Charles R. Gardner, secretary of the Newport Red Cross, is urging active co-operation with the local organization. Edith A. Conley is chairman of the sewing committee.

* * * *

The Plymouth Red Cross is making a study of bandaging under the direction of a Chicago instructor.

* * * *

The Red Cross Sewing Circle of East Chicago is under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Funkey, president, and Mrs. G. W. Lewis, secretary.

Bank Finances Calf Club.

T. S. McCulloch, county agent of Posey county, reports how a local bank is co-operating with the young people in the surrounding country in encouraging them to raise stock. The bank referred to is financing a calf club.

Girls Serve Best Going to School

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw Advises Patriotic Young Women of America.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, chairman of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, is acting in the capacity of adviser to the school girl of the country at present. Every day letters appear in the files of the committee headquarters from school girls in every part of the United States begging to be of service to their country in the world war crisis. They offer to do patriotic duty of every kind, from driving motor trucks to stenography.

"I hope your ardor for patriotic duty will not be dampened," writes the chairman of the woman's committee in response to these appeals, which show the greatest and sincerest feeling of patriotism, "when I tell you that the very best service you can perform for your country is to remain at school this year.

"If our young people grow restless and leave their schools the crying need of the country, when the war is over, will be for educated and trained young men and women, and there will be none to answer the call. By remaining in school you are not a slacker. It is not heroic nor spectacular work, but it is sane and reasonable work and the kind of work that is most needed by your country from girls of your age."

How to Harvest Apples

National Food Administrator Hoover says:

This year's apple crop will be harvested in most sections with volunteer pickers, men and women, boys and girls, who will be intelligent and interested, but very likely quite unfamiliar with fruit picking. The crews are now being recruited all over the country by State councils of defense, chambers of commerce, women's organizations and other people anxious to help with the apple crop.

Each grower should now get in touch with the chamber of commerce, or some other representative business organization in his nearest town, tell how many pickers he will need, when he will need them, for how long and what arrangements he can make for housing or boarding them.

MUST OPEN SCHOOL FOR PICKERS.

When his crew of volunteer pickers reports for duty he must open a little school for a day or two, and give them practical instruction in their new work. Many of them perhaps never climbed into an apple tree, and even those who have may not understand that apple picking is a kind of work that requires as much delicacy as gathering eggs.

Let the grower tell his pickers how the skin of an apple, or any other kind of fruit or vegetable, is like the tin that protects canned goods. As the tin that incloses a can of tomatoes guards the sterilized contents from the air, and as even a slight pin hole in this tin would allow the air to enter and carry germs of decay, so the skin of an apple protects its flesh, which is perfectly sterile, and the least cut, even a dent made by a finger nail, allows germs to enter and start decay.

This year's crop will have to be managed along somewhat different lines in many sections. With a crew of trained pickers and packers it is customary to grade and pack much of the fruit as fast as it comes from the trees. There will probably be a shortage of packers, and many growers will have to devote all their efforts to picking the crop and getting it into temporary storage first, and then packing it later.

Blackberries for Troops.

The United States Department of Agriculture authorizes the following: Wild blackberries picked by children will help the army and navy to get the 11,000,000 pounds of blackberry jam they must have. In view of the shortage of cultivated blackberries the United States Department of Agriculture urges the women and girls and boys to gather all the wild blackberries they can find, to supply commercial canning establishments.

Babies Croon in Midst of Horror

Pierson Gives Cable Reply to Question
Why We Are at War.

ARE THE BABIES WORTH IT?

No more convincing evidence of the great justice of this war can be secured than the single picture presented in this article. The treatment herein described brings tears to the eyes and makes red blood rise in righteous wrath. How different has been the American treatment of the babies! For months and years physicians, nurses and social workers have worked faithfully in the slums and settlements to save the health and lives of the babies. They have sacrificed their personal comfort and given up more ambitious work in order to devote their time to experimentation, study and service. The results of their efforts have been notable. Mortuary lists have been cut down; disease has been conquered, and babies have been saved. They have happier homes; they have healthier homes; they have ice, milk and medicine. Last year the whole nation was concerned over the infantile paralysis plague. During an entire lifetime Jane Addams has devoted herself to the problems of Hull House and the city streets. In the heart of America there is a great and beautiful love for the babies.

Joseph Pierson, in a special cable to the Chicago Tribune, tells of a visit of officials of the American Red Cross to a village in France which had been retaken from the Germans. Before the Germans came it was a happy town of 3,000 souls. When they left it was a ruin beneath which burrowed the women and the children. American women were there to take the children further behind the line. Mr. Pierson says:

"A low crooning, strange, pitiful, penetrating—like winds in a cave—filled the air.

"What's that?" cried an American woman, leaning forward to speak to an English chauffeur who for two years had looked on the most horrible of wars.

"A tear rolled down the driver's cheeks.

"The children of France."

"Why are they crooning like that?"

"Because they've been in caves all day. They are happy because with the French back in this town they don't have to stay in the caves all night, too. When you see the caves where the babies, boys, girls and women have been compelled to live for two years and a half while the Germans were here, you'll understand. * * *

"Many little children have lost their lives in the gas attacks." * * *

"The captain halted the party. A poilu lifted his lantern.

"An aged woman, lying on a cot, her hair disheveled, her face lined with care, looked at the party—stared with startled eyes of flaming coals. She crawled back into the darkness. Two children lay at her feet, not yet asleep.

"The Germans took her two daughters," the captain said. "One was nineteen and the other twenty-two. They kept them prisoners in a cave on the other side of the town. The girls endured living torture until children were about to be born to them, when they died * * * Whether by disease, this dirty wretchedness, or by their own hand, I do not know.

"But don't wonder at that, madame. More than a hundred girls had like experiences. Others were killed by bayonets, because they refused the advances of German soldiers.

"You'll not see any baby boys. The Germans sent the baby boys to Germany, although some of them have French fathers. The mothers were allowed only to keep the girl babies."

"The party found some babies two years old and less who had never been out of their subterranean birthplaces. They were covered with scales, their skin was red with constant rash.

"Their eyes were caked. Their nurses feared to bring them suddenly into the sunlight, because of the danger of blindness.

"Everywhere there was vermin, skin and intestinal diseases, malnutrition, and wide opened eyes of months of horror.

"Some had lost their minds through shell-shock and wandered about in isolated spots. Others, maimed by explosions and splinters, or by convulsions caused by inhaled gases, limped about or lay on the banks. Some were startled by strangers. Others seemed dumb to all impressions."

America is in this war to make certain that conditions described in the foregoing shall not be repeated in this country.

Mr. Hoover Told Them To.

They are bottling juice to beat the deuce, and beans to beat the Dutch. You growl and chew, they'll can you, too—you don't amount to much. While on the floor in streaks of gore, the ketchup paints a frieze from leaky pans, for she who cans must mind her q's and p's. Oh, the penetrating, palpitating, pungent sauerkraut brings back memories of the days before we turned the rascals out! But the missus and the hired girl are proud to boil and stew, and keep on canning cabbage—Mister Hoover told them to.

But when all this canning's over and you think you've had enough, you're just beginning, for next spring you have to eat the stuff. You'll have picked beets for breakfast eats and chow-chow for desert; you'll feed yourself from pantry shelves until your tummies hurt. Oh, the long and cruel winter, with its surplus of preserves! Oh, the fast expanding waistcoat and its ever-widening curves! But the missus and the hired girl are bound to see it through. They'll eat until they burst—Mister Hoover told them to.

Daddy, dear, and did you hear the stuff that's going roun'? The house is crammed with jelly and jam—there's no place to sit down. The parlor chairs are full of pears, the floor is strewn with pits, and other stuff—it is enough to give a body fits. Oh, the sickening, boiling sugar and the pungent smell of spice, fill our noses till we holler, "Give us peace at any price!" But the missus and the hired girl come back with this at you: "We're canning corn and onions—Mister Hoover told us to!"

They are cutting corn in early morn, and shelling peas at noon; and if the night is very bright, they'll dry them by the moon. The walls are sprayed with marmalade, the ceiling drips with steam. You can not sleep, the demons keep on teasing while you dream. Oh, the smelly mustard pickle and the odoriferous clove, and the surplus syrup scorching as it spills upon the stove! But the missus and the hired girl don't give a hang for you they're canning grapes and apples—Mister Hoover told them to.—Anonymous.

Symphony of the Can

Can, lady, can with care,
So there may be food to spare;
While your knight adjusts his visor
And goes forth to can the Kaiser.

—B. L. T." in Chicago Tribune.

Telephone Publicity.

In North Carolina and in one of the counties of Wisconsin the rural telephone exchange has been utilized as a means of disseminating information. At a certain hour every day the local central rings all the branches on the circuit and, when they are all connected, gives them news of the war, questions of national and international importance and activities of central and local defense organizations. This is not only useful as a source of news, but most effective as a means of spreading propaganda. It is economical of time and enables the community to receive fresh and dependable information in place of stale news or uncertain rumors. It is just these less accessible rural districts which are most in need of sound publicity and which welcomes it most.

"It is around the cause of civilization that today, in the gigantic struggle, above all grouping of nations, of all treaties, of all hopes of self-interest, rages the supreme battle."—Arnaldo Cervasato.

Hangers Admonish Against Wasting

Cardboards designed to hang in the kitchen have been sent broadcast by the Department of Home Economics and Thrift of the Pennsylvania Women's Council of National Defense. The cards have the approval of the committee of public safety, department of food supply, for the State of Pennsylvania. The cards follow:

WATCH YOUR KITCHEN WASTE.

A large part of the $700,000,000 estimated food waste in this country is good food which is allowed to get into the garbage pails and kitchen sinks.

—Ask Yourself—"Can It Be Eaten?"—

Don't throw out any left-overs that can be reheated or combined with other foods to make palatable and nourishing dishes.

—Do You Know—

That every bit of uneaten cereals can be used to thicken soups, stews or gravies?

That stale bread can be used as a basis for many attractive meat dishes, hot breads and desserts?

That every ounce of skim milk or whole milk contains valuable nourishment? Use every drop of milk to drink or to add nourishment to cereals, soups, sauces and other foods. If you do not want milk to sour, keep it cool, clean and covered continually. Remember, too, that sour milk, buttermilk and sour cream are valuable in cookery; so do not waste any. Sour milk and buttermilk can be used with soda in making hot breads, or sour milk can be turned easily into cottage cheese or clabber.

That every bit of meat and fish can be combined with cereals or vegetables for making meat cakes, meat or fish pies and so on, and to add flavor and food value to many dishes?

That when meat is boiled the water dissolves out some valuable food and flavoring materials? Save such water for soup or for use in stews or gravies, or for cooking vegetables.

That the outside leaves of lettuce and the tops of many vegetables make desirable cooked "greens" or even "salads"?

LET NOTHING SPOIL.

—Heat, Dirt, Flies, Insects and Rats Are Greatest Food Wasters—

Keep Perishable Food Cold.

The moment meat, fish, milk and eggs are allowed to get warm they begin to spoil.

Germs multiply rapidly in slightly warm food and quickly make it dangerous and unfit to eat.

Keep perishable food in the cleanest places and in covered vessels in the coolest place possible.

Do not keep perishable food in the hot kitchen a moment longer than necessary.

Keep Food Covered and Clean.

The dust in the air carries germs and disease. Meat, fish and milk are favorite breeding places for disease germs.

House flies, better called typhoid flies, are among the dirtiest things that enter our homes. They fly from the sewers and manure heaps, carrying the filth on their feet to your baby's milk and even to the baby itself.

Guard Food Against Vermin.

Keep your food where pests cannot touch it. Keep household pets away from the food.

Look on every mouse as your enemy.

Kill roaches and ants, and keep weevils out of cereals.

Short in Man-Power.

Estimating that 16,000 men have been withdrawn from their regular employment to the army training camps, and there is a labor shortage of 7,000 men in West Virginia at this time, the West Virginia State Council is urging every merchant in the State to conform to the recommendations of the National Commercial Economy Board in the elimination of unnecessary deliveries and the release of men thus engaged to more needful occupations.

The Doctors Urge Food Conservation As a Public Health Problem

We have been shrinking at the thought that we must forego the pleasures of the table in an endeavor to "do our bit" toward conserving the food supply. It has not been pleasant to look forward to meatless days or wheatless bread, but now come the doctors with a resolution in which they urge us to eat less meat and more corn, rice and barley products. They tell us that if we use meal, hominy and other corn products in place of wheat and cut our meat orders to one small portion a day we will extend the average life of the nation's adults ten years. These men, wise in the problems of public health and proper feeding, point out that food conservation is not only an economic problem, but the greatest and most acute public health problem. And while we are making sacrifices at the dinner table it may develop that all the time we have been gaining in health, strength and bodily vigor.

Of course, the gourmet, who is satisfied with no natural food flavor and whose every dish must be bathed in rich sauces before it has any appeal to his jaded palate, will not easily learn that good corn may be transformed into many dishes of delicious flavors. But the mass of consumers once convinced that more corn and less meat is a cheaper and better way of living, will do their share toward conserving food and at the same time so improve their health that the doctors who urged them to better eating habits will find their practice diminishing.

H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana.

Seven Days Without Wheat Bread

White bread at every meal is a habit, not a necessity, and yet the habit is so fixed that it will not be an easy thing even when we know we must deny ourselves that our soldiers may be fed to do without toast for breakfast, sandwiches for lunch and crisp slices of Vienna bread for dinner. The State Food Administrator of Massachusetts is not advocating one wheatless meal a day, nor is he content simply to urge the economical use of white bread. He goes the whole way and his recommendation to hotels, clubs and restaurants is to cut out white bread altogether for a full week. The success of his war policy will only be known when the week is done.

White bread is a staple food and a breadless table will no doubt fail to satisfy everyone, yet anyone who will not agree to sacrifice for one week his fondness for white bread will show himself to be unpleasantly selfish and unpatriotic. There are so many substitutes for white bread—rye bread, corn bread of many kinds, brown bread and oatmeal muffins that no one should have any difficulty in forgetting for the present that there is such a thing as white bread. It ought to be especially easy to change one's eating habits now when such delectable foods as corn on the cob, butter beans, tomatoes, beats and all the other products of the garden are so abundant and so cheap.

It is one thing to talk of a war diet and personal sacrifice when we are merely omitting a single article of food from our ample dietary, and quite another when bread and almost every other necessity is measured by card as in France and Germany.—H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana.

To Educate the Blind.

Mrs. Julia B. Kendall of Laporte has charge of the collection of a fund to be used for the education of men blinded in battle. More than 500 men have been made self-sustaining after having been deprived of their sight by liquid fire on European battlefields.

"The people of the United States," says Walter Ackermann, "are better informed about the war as a whole than are the people of any European country."

Red Cross in Schools.

Henry P. Davison, chairman of the Red Cross war council, announces the launching of a Junior Red Cross, open to all school children in the country. The new organization hopes to become a channel for patriotic service and interest to the 22,000,000 boys and girls of school age in the United States. Membership in the Junior Red Cross is to be by schools. Whenever there has been placed in the local school fund an amount equal to 25 cents for every pupil the school becomes a school auxiliary of the Red Cross, and is entitled to display a special Red Cross banner. At the same time every pupil becomes a junior member, and is entitled to wear the membership button.

Women Ready to Fight.

An organization of women in Texas and Oklahoma has been quietly formed and offered to the government as a regiment to go to France, and if necessary to fight in the trenches. The women are the wives of soldiers in the regular army, national guard and of men who are entering the national army. They enroll their membership to train and enter the army either as a fighting unit 1,500 strong, or for such other service as the war department may designate.

Believing the war department would not accept them as a military organization similar to the Battalion of Death of Russian women, they are taking the places of the men soldiers on guard duty, patrol and scout work and other service for which women are especially fitted.

A Splendid Public Service.

The South Bend News-Times is doing some notable publicity work as a part of the campaign to stimulate thrift. It has been running display "copy" based on the weekly bulletins of the United States Department of Agriculture, with all the salient points on food conservation attractively emphasized.

Looney on Committee.

J. F. Looney of Indianapolis, superintendent of the Postal Telegraph Company's lines in Indiana, has been named by Chairman Frank Wampler, a member of the committee on communications of the Indiana State Council of Defense. He succeeds Mr. E. J. Huber of the same company.

Stump Stops Speaking.

Albert Stump, a prominent lawyer of Auburn, Ind., who has lived up to his name, by speaking as field organizer for the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, has taken on a new patriotic work. He is now a member of the Second Officers' Training Camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Lockridge Lecturing.

Ross F. Lockridge has been lecturing successfully on the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve before Teachers' Institutes at Kokomo, Lafayette, Peru, Logansport and Delphi.

No Meat on Tuesdays.

The Hotel Severin, Indianapolis, has established Tuesday as a meatless day. This is the first instance of the Hoover recommendations being followed on such a large scale in Indiana.

Volland Favors Guard.

Mayor Volland of Columbus, Ind., has endorsed the formation of a local militia company to replace the National Guard. "Even in time of peace such a company could render services valuable to the community," said Mayor Volland.

Do Your Bit—Climb.

As a war measure the Western Union Telegraph Company has closed its telegraph office at the Plymouth, Ind., depot. The public is asked to do its bit by climbing the steps to the tower when desiring to send a telegram.

Food control only asks that you diet for your country; not die.—Baltimore American.

Thin Potato Skins Mean Mighty Saving

When potatoes are a penny a pound they are prosaic and uninteresting food. Not so now—we appreciate them at a dollar a peck. They are so costly that experts have begun to study them and a science in preparing potatoes is being developed that is far more valuable to our every day life than we realize. They point out that when medium-sized potatoes are very carefully pared about 20 per cent. of the total potato substance is lost. When these same potatoes were boiled in their skins and then peeled, the loss of the potato substance was diminished by one-half. When the small potatoes, which the housewife once carelessly threw away as too small to bother about, are boiled and then peeled, her loss is only half as much as when potatoes of average size are pared and then boiled. But there is another saving in using small potatoes. They cook very quickly and save fuel and time.

The use of extra large potatoes is not advisable from an economic point of view. Such potatoes are usually irregular in outline and much more substance is lost in paring them than in the case of smaller, more uniform tubers. If, however, the potato is boiled in the skin so that it can be peeled without cutting away any of the potato, the loss of food is very small.

Old potatoes, which are wilted or shriveled, should be soaked before they are prepared for cooking. This soaking fills up the wasted tissue and makes it possible to take off a thinner paring.

Another important point in this study of the scientific handling of the potato is the fact that the mineral salts and most of the protein lies close to the skin. The customary method of paring wastes these most important foods. So soak potatoes before paring if they must be stripped of their jackets before cooking. The better practice, of course, is to boil or bake them in the skins.

—H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana.

Do Not Hoard Food

Food conservation is a slogan that has swept the country. Thrift is the watchword of the kitchen. Every housewife is piling up stores of canned food in her endeavor to conserve the surplus of her garden. Any practice which prevents wastage is laudible, but whenever housewives with an eye to future need store more than the family can use they are guilty of hoarding food. When food is scarce it is selfish and unpatriotic to hoard it. If the housekeeper is not a home gardener she should consider carefully how much food she has a right to buy and can for her family. If you have a friend who has more in his garden than he can use, help him save it. If you have relatives in the country who are not marketing all their products, get it from them and save it. Not everyone can go to the country, but those who are so fortunate, plan always to return full handed. They will save a surplus that would otherwise waste and they will cut out some of the profits of the middleman.

In buying food to hold against a time of scarcity, a good rule to follow is to buy in quantity only of those things which are plentiful and likely to waste. Buy apples when they are cheap in the fall and store them either in the cellar or in the form of jellies and apple butter. But do not buy peaches when they are scarce and high-priced, even if pickled peaches and peach marmalades are a table delight. Let those who can afford it buy the rare and expensive foods. Be thrifty by limiting your purchases to those things which nature has furnished in abundance.—H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana.

Hydrophobia Peril.

Rockport—The hydrophobia peril is always present where there are unrestrained dogs. Fifteen people from this township have been sent to Pasture institutes the past year for treatment on account of having been bitten by rabid dogs, and one man at Huntingburg died not long ago a horrible death from hydrophobia, caused by the bite of a dog.

Educators Awake To Need of Times

Army Will be Supplied With Specially Trained Men as Needed.

In anticipation of the need of telegraphers, linemen, and other skilled men in the signal corps of the United States army, when the second and additional calls are made for troops, the educational section of the Indiana State Council of Defense has arranged for the necessary education of men of conscript age. The Council, in special session, September 10, heard a comprehensive statement of the situation that confronts the war department from Captain John A. Kick of the central department, with headquarters in Chicago, after which it inaugurated plans that are expected to guarantee more than Indiana's quota of 900 men, calculated on the basis of a federal need of 25,000.

The educational section was requested also to anticipate further demands for trained men, and will arrange for the intensive training of engineers, ordnance experts, and other specialists as the needs of the service become apparent.

NEED OF TELEGRAPHERS STATED.

The meeting of the section was called to order by J. G. Collicott, head of vocational training in the schools of Indiana. Mr. Collicott stated that the presence of the educational section was rendered necessary by demands that had been made upon the Indiana State Council of Defense by the federal government, and he called upon Chairman Will H. Hays to state these demands. Mr. Hays, in response referred to the following letter, which he said represented a "present need for 900 specially trained men from Indiana, and it's up to this section to get the men":

War Department, Headquarters Central Department. Office Department Signal Officer, Chicago, Ill., September 1, 1917.

—From Office Department Signal Officer—

To Mr. Will H. Hays, Chairman, State Council of Defense, 83 State House, Indianapolis, Ind.:

—Subject: Training Telegraphers for the United States Army—

1. Permit this Department to call your attention to the very serious situation that confronts the war department at the present time as relates to the training of telegraphers for service in the signal corps of the United States army.

2. It is requested that your State Council of Defense co-operate with this office in establishing classes in the schools and institutions throughout your State for training as telegraphers young men who will be included in the second and later calls under the draft. For your use in this connection we are attaching hereto a classified list of the schools whose assistance in this patriotic work has been solicited.

3. Upon the basis of a given requirement for the entire country, the quota for the central department has been established and subdivided by States. Accordingly it is desired that at least 900 telegraphers be secured through the educational institutions of the State of Indiana.

4. Your immediate and most earnest attention to this very important matter is respectfully requested.

(Signed) L. D. WILDMAN,
Lt.-Col., Signal Corps, U. S. R.

Children of Liberty.

(William Dudley Foulke of Richmond, Ind.)

Children of liberty, whereso'er ye be,
Forward to battle till the world is free!
Come from sturdy England, from heroic France,
Rise from holy Russia; Italy, advance!
Look! We stand beside you, freedom's eldest born,
We would share the laurels from the tyrant torn.
Glorious the gospel comes across the sea;
On then to battle till the world is free!

Listen to the tocsin, how it sways and rings,
Strikes the doom of empire, tolls the knell of kings!

Crush the proud oppressor, smite him stroke on stroke—

Free the plains of Poland—break the Belgian yoke!

Rescue for the captives! Shatter every chain!

Succor for the helpless! Honor for the slain!

Children of liberty, whereso'er ye be,

Forward to battle till the world is free!

DEMAND IS VERY INSISTENT.

Captain Kick then explained to the section that the present needs of the signal corps have been supplied, but there is no reserve, either for the army or for the commercial demand, which is very insistent. He said 2,000 students are in training in the Central division to supply the requirements of the corps when the army begins to move.

"The signal corps is the army's means of communication," said Captain Kick. "Specialists of the Illinois State Council of Defense are now working out a course of study or plan of education that is intended to produce telegraphers capable of twenty words a minute within a period of three months. The training should be selective. The men accepted should be of the highest type of citizenship, entirely trustworthy, such as will avoid errors and do some original thinking as opportunity affords. In Chicago industrial leaders have been called in to assist in the selection of desirable students. In this they have recognized an opportunity to discharge a patriotic duty and at the same time to do something for worthy young men."

Captain Kick recommended some training of a military nature, or other kind, in order to retain the interest of the student. He said elemental courses in electricity are being worked out by the United States Department of Education, which will be offered as supplemental to the more mechanical training.

MUNCIE HAS A CLASS OF FIFTY.

Superintendent Moore of the Muncie schools reported that they had already enrolled fifty students in a course in telegraphy and expected soon to increase their facilities so as to be able to train 200. He said the class was divided into two sections, each reporting three nights a week.

Assistant State Federal Director Carl Fritsche, speaking for State Director Isaac D. Straus, then informed the section that 10,000 Indiana youths have been enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, making this State first in the entire union in number enrolled. He asked endorsement of a recommendation to the State Board of Education that a text book be prepared on the subject of food production and conservation, the primary purpose of the U. S. Boys' Reserve, and its study be made mandatory for both boys and girls in the public high schools of the State. The section by unanimous vote endorsed Mr. Fritsche's proposal and will urge its adoption by the State Board of Education at the next regular session of the latter board.

Mr. Fritsche presented the first illustration of

Fraternal Orders Ready For Service

Membership Loyal and Awaiting Orders from State Council, They Say.

Pledges of support, in whatever duties are assigned them, were received by Chairman Will H. Hays of the Indiana State Council of Defense from the representatives of hundreds of thousands of members of fraternal societies of the commonwealth. More than twenty-five accredited representatives of the State organizations were present and others who were unable to arrange to attend joined in the unanimity of expression of whole-hearted loyalty to Indiana and the nation in everything that may have a bearing on the successful prosecution of the war with Germany.

Speeches of an appropriate and enthusiastic nature were made by a number of the lodge representatives. Resolutions of sympathy for Governor James P. Goodrich were adopted and before adjournment the meeting subscribed a fund with which a beautiful floral tribute was purchased and sent to the Governor's bedside at the Methodist Hospital, with the resolutions.

As a result of the meeting Chairman Hays appointed a committee that will develop a plan of organization of what will become the Fraternal Orders section of the State Council, and act with it and at its direction in the prosecution of measures pertaining to the winning of the war. This committee includes the following:

Harry Wade, Indianapolis, Knights of Pythias.

Madison J. Walsh, Washington, Knights of Columbus.

E. L. Branigan, Franklin, Free and Accepted Masons.

A. A. Spear, Brazil, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Archibald H. Hobbs, Indianapolis, Improved Order of Red Men.

Miss Tarquinia Voss, Indianapolis, Daughters of the Revolution, will advise with the committee as a representative of the women's lodges and auxiliaries of the State.

INDIANA IS OBEYING ORDERS.

In opening the meeting Chairman Hays reviewed the history and purpose of the Indiana State Council of Defense. "Indiana is doing what the Council of National Defense, the War Department and the President want done, and will continue so to do."

Mr. Hays said he recognized the potentiality of the fraternal orders and deemed it the duty of the State Council to avail itself of every opportunity to develop the effectiveness of the war organization, and for that reason he had called in these representatives of perhaps hundreds of thousands "of the best men and women of the State, of unquestioned patriotism and willingness to serve, once they find the opportunity to be of service."

Mr. Hays said he would ask for an expression of those present and, speaking for the Knights of Pythias, Robert A. Brown of Indianapolis made a patriotic talk that was enthusiastically received. Mr. Brown said he had been suffering physically, so that he was advised not to come, but recognized in the meeting and its contemplated purpose such an opportunity for service that he "simply couldn't stay away."

SEES HERE AN OPPORTUNITY.

"I can't conceive of anything more consistent than that the fraternal orders of Indiana be

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—The regular semi-monthly business meeting of the County Council of Defense was held recently in Judge D. E. Smith's office in the court room. Four members of the board were present and a number of business matters were taken up and disposed of. The Council of Defense complying with the request from the State Council, appointed a chairman to head the Liberty Loan committee and named Hugh Hite for the place. Mr. Hite will be chairman for the county and will in turn appoint sub-committees. The Adams County Council of Defense has made and fulfilled every request made by the State and since the organization has been accomplishing a great deal.

Bartholomew County.—Professor Harlow Lindley of Earlham College spoke before the Bartholomew County Teachers' Institute on the United States Boys' Working Reserve. He said in part: "If Uncle Sam desired to take the boys for military service you know he would do so without hesitation and he would not hesitate to tell the boys about it, either. He doesn't want them for military service, though; he wants them to help in keeping the country going financially and industrially and he wants them to help on the farms."

Benton County.—The Benton County Council at its regular September session appropriated for the use of the Benton County Council of Defense $350, with the assurance that more would be forthcoming if found needed. The fund is subject to vouchers having the endorsement of the Council of Defense.

Attorney Charles M. Snyder has been chosen to direct the activities of the "Four-Minute Men" under the direction of the County Council of Defense. He will organize a squad of speakers for patriotic talks in the moving picture houses of the county and be ready for service at once.

Cass County.—Only one member of the County Council supported the appropriation of $500 requested for the Cass County Council of Defense. Judge Nelson of the Circuit Court presented the request for funds for the use of the Council of Defense, but the county council took the position that in view of the fact that other patriotic activities were being financed by popular subscription and voluntary contribution, the Defense Council might do likewise.

Clinton County.—Frankfort's curb market, established as a result of the recommendation of the committee on food production and conservation of the Indiana State Council of Defense, is proving popular and profitable. Market is held Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings under the direction of Walter Corns, market master.

Delaware County.—Miss Mabel Hollis of Fargo, N. D., baked some "war bread" of corn meal, oat meal, yeast and water at the Delaware County Teachers' Institute. Those who partook of it declared it palatable and nutritious.

The Gaston Gazette publishes a monthly bulletin of Red Cross activities. Prominent in the work are Mesdames C. W. Barnhart, Genette Case, Isaac Parkinson, Willard Carmichael, Chester King, Julia Higdon, Bert Powers and Rose Woodring.

Dubois County.—Robert E. Eckert, superintendent of Dubois county public schools, reports that the Dubois county teachers' institute was notable for its patriotism. Prominent on the program was a series of lectures under the direction of Dr. L. N. Sherwood, who presented fundamental truths about the war in an able manner. His series of lectures included such subjects as "The Monroe Doctrine," "The Near Eastern Question," "What Germany Thinks of Herself" and "The Issues of War." The lectures were so successful that Dr. Sherwood was called to Huntington to repeat some of them. At the institute a County Educational Council of Defense was organized consisting of a representative of each township and city. Superintendent H. N. Hutchinson of Huntington was elected president and Alvin T. Whaley of Birdseye, secretary and treasurer. The council resolved that every teacher ought to be a member of the Red Cross. It also encouraged a series of wheat meetings that are to be held soon in Dubois county.

Fulton County.—Of the $2,000 appropriated for the use of the Fulton County Council of Defense $1,000 is available in 1917 and a like amount in 1918. The appropriation was made without a dissenting vote, after the purpose of the council was explained. Harry Shildmeyer, a well known Marion baritone, who will soon leave for service in the army, will contribute to a patriotic musical program to be given under the auspices of the Rochester chapter, Tri Kappa, for the benefit of the Red Cross, September 17. Mrs. Robert Spencer, soprano, and Miss Leah Gardner, the former of Marion and the latter of North Manchester, will also appear on the program.

Gibson County.—At the regular meeting of the County Council of Defense, presided over by Dr. J. N. Williams of Owensville, former Sheriff J. W. Barton was named as government representative to investigate and report all acts of treason and anti-war demonstrations or words and the person to whom all citizens may report such occurrences if any arise. The appointment was made following request from the State Council of Defense that such action be taken. Mr. Barton was the unanimous choice of the County Council.

Many other matters were discussed at the meeting, which was attended by Chairman Williams, R. N. Parrett, Mrs. Leonora Walker, W. B. Bingham and Lawrence Sullivan, members of the council, and James Robinson, in charge of the Boys' Working Reserve. The committee named to secure knitters reported good progress in the work and many pairs of warm socks for the soldiers are being knitted in all parts of the county. The committee in charge of the woman's reserve also reported good progress, but stated that ignorance as to the real meaning of the work caused many to refuse to sign, they having gained the impression that they might be drafted into government works or that the government might seize their supply of canned fruits and vegetables.

At a meeting of the County Council the sum of $500 was set aside for the use of the County Council of Defense to be used in defraying legitimate expenses. Action was taken following recommendation by the board of county commissioners.

The Defense Council now has funds to carry on any work which must be done. To secure yarn for the knitting of socks and other wearing apparel a subscription was taken, but not enough was secured to defray all expenses.

The council adjourned to meet again the first Wednesday in October.

One battalion of infantry for the new State militia will be organized in Gibson county. Owensville, Fort Branch and Oakland City have been asked to furnish a company of fifty men each. Princeton is already responding to the call and has thirty men enrolled under Captain Rumor. R. M. Davenport, whom all know, has been selected by the State Council of Defense and given authority to organize the company here. To date he has ten men enrolled.

Grant County.—The Grant County Council of Defense has been doing effective work under the direction of Chairman Albert Boley and Secretary Zach C. Sanderson. In spite of the fact that there has been a scarcity of funds, the officers many times being compelled to meet the necessary expenses, extensive work has been done in the various departments of the organization.

They have held several meetings with farmers called in from all over the county. The purpose is to get an idea of the amount of food production and the necessary amount of labor needed to take care of it.

The Boys' Working Reserve has been thoroughly organized under the direction of Ernest Hoisinger. In this department the boys under military age have been enrolled for work on farms or at the different phases of labor the council may deem advisable. Grant county's quota was placed by the State Council at 920. Names of all the boys in each township who are not of military age have been compiled and a list given to the township director, who, with the aid of a captain and two lieutenants, determine how many of these boys will work in connection with the council.

The County Council has now taken up the work of obtaining members for the United States Public Service Reserve, which is an official national organization of adult males who desire to find their place for service to the country in the war emergency.

Throughout the country the public is taking hold of the reserve proposition with a vim, and Mr. Sanderson of the Council of Defense predicts a large membership from this county.

Greene County.—The County Council at its regular September session appropriated $600 for the use of the Greene County Council of Defense.

Hancock County.—The Hancock County Council of Defense has the following officers: Omer S. Jackson, chairman; Albert L. New, vice-chairman, and F. Harrison Warner, secretary. The other members are John S. Souder, Mrs. Nora Roberts, Elbert L. Tyner and Dr. William A. Justice. The headquarters are located in the Thayer Block at Greensfield. In connection with the Business Men's Association a picnic was held recently for which the council furnished the speaker, Philip Zoercher, who gave a rousing patriotic address. Mr. Amos R. Elsberry has charge of organizing a home guard; George J. Richman is director of the Boys' Working Reserve, and General A. L. New, John S. Souder and Dr. William A. Justice are on a committee to have charge of the "Four-Minute Men."

Harrison County.—The County Council of Harrison county appropriated for the use of the Harrison County Council of Defense $250 for use in 1917 and $600 for 1918.

Hendricks County.—The county council of Hendricks appropriated for the use of the Hendricks County Council of Defense $300 for 1917 and $500 for 1918, with the assurance that additional moneys would be set aside for the use of the defense council should it be needed.

Henry County.—Mrs. Arch Davis is recovering from a broken arm, received in a fall while canvassing for signatures to the service cards.

Howard County.—J. C. Blackledge required the Trades and Labor Council to vacate his property for the reason that he was unwilling that meetings whose patriotism might be of a doubtful or debatable character be held there.

A military drill will be a compulsory part of the course of study in the Kokomo high school this winter. Principal C. E. Hinshaw has worked out the program and drilling will be under the direction of Professor T. A. Hanson, who had four years of training at Purdue University. A fraction of a credit will be given for proficiency in the drills. The school officials expect the drills to be of benefit physically and to encourage a broader degree of patriotism.

Jasper County.—At the meeting of the Jasper County Council of Defense the following form of organization was effected: Legal committee, Moses Leopold, chairman; Sanitation and Medicine, Dr. E. C. English, chairman; Food Supply and Conservation, Stewart Leaming, chairman; Survey and Organization of Man-power, Harvey W. Wood, Jr., chairman; Public Morals, Rev. J. B. Fleming, chairman; Military Affairs, J. M. Sausser, chairman; Educational section, County Superintendent M. L. Sterrett, chairman.

An appropriation of $700 was asked of the county council and granted.

Mrs. Ross, head of the committee on women's activities, reported that 135 pairs of socks had been sent in, the State having apportioned only seventy pairs for Jasper county.

Chairman Sausser reported the formation of a military company with Moses Leopold, captain; E. W. Hickman, first lieutenant; A. E. Wallace, second lieutenant. Rev. Fleming reported having held several public meetings and asked the co-operation of ministers of the county.

Reports of disloyalty in Keener township were ordered investigated and if treasurable utterances have been made the federal officials will be asked to administer punishment.

An educational campaign covering the causes and objects of the war is contemplated by Superintendent Sterrett.

Lake County.—Hammond housewives are attending "instruction meetings" in various neighborhoods of the city, being conducted by Frank O'Rourke, local representative of the State and national food administration. Demonstrations and lectures are being conducted in the public schools.

Attorneys Joseph Conroy and D. E. Boone are making four-minute talks for the purpose of raising the necessary money for the food campaign.

Vocational Director Sylvester of the Hammond schools is in charge of the domestic science teachers who are conducting the demonstration work.

Laporte County.—The Laporte County Council of Defense was allowed $2,500 at the regular session of the County Council last week. The fund becomes available immediately and is to be used at the discretion of the Council of Defense.

Marion County.—"What Our Enemy Really Is" was the subject of a four-minute talk by Douglass Pierce at the Alhambra theater here, this week, before the local Four-Minute men. The Marion county corps of four-minute speakers now consists of the following: C. R. Raithe Eggeston, city chairman; John J. Sheagnessy, secretary; Henry Abrams, Ralph Bamberger, Ernest Cohn, Leo Kaminsky, Hugh McVeagh, Roy McGregor, Don A. McKinnon, Douglas Pierce, H. E. Robertson, Dr. Louis H. Segar, Dr. Herbert T. Wagner, James H. Hibben, Edward R. Sitzman, Robert Peele Noble and R. O. Johnson.

Marshall County.—Relative to persistent reports of disloyalty among the citizens of Bremen, German township, this county, the Bremen Enquirer says:

"Mr. Draughtsbaugh refused to give the names of any men under surveillance, but stated that Bremen is a hotbed of pro-Germanism and that he was going to 'clean up' in that town pretty soon. It is understood from other sources that a merchant of Bremen was told by a federal agent that he would not be prosecuted for what he had said, but if he uttered seditious statements from now on he would be interned for the period of the war and his possessions confiscated.

"That is a humiliating statement to read concerning one's home community, and the deepest humiliation lies in the knowledge that it is true. There is some consolation in the knowledge that arrangements are on the way to take care of local disloyals. If they find themselves in prison and their property confiscated they will have nobody but themselves to blame. The great majority of the people of this community are loyal and patriotic. If a relative few persist in disloyal acts and utterances they may confidently expect to pay the penalty with compound interest."

Miami County.—H. G. Anderson, State leader in horticultural marketing, has proposed a county-wide market system for this county, and with the co-operation of Hal C. Phelps, county adviser, it will be undertaken. The plan is for local producers to bring in their surplus and after the wants of consumers have been satisfied, representatives of the government will take over the remainder, and conserve it, so as to prevent waste. Miami county producers who have been consulted are willing to make the experiment and will assist in making it a success. The Miami County Council of Defense has been given an appropriation of $500 for its use and the appointment of Mr. Phelps as market adviser was in line with its recommendations.

Newton County.—At a session of the County Council of Defense it was decided to give a banquet to the men called to the colors in this first draft and they hereby extend a cordial invitation for all of them to be present on Monday evening, September 17, at the Presbyterian church in Kentland at 7 o'clock. The general public will be entertained by speeches and music and all are invited to honor our boys before their departure for the training camp. The council regrets very much that its limited means compel them to banquet only the men, but the speaking will be enjoyed by everybody.

Putnam County.—The Putnam County Council of Defense is following out many of the plans suggested by the State Council. Publicity matter and "Four-Minute Men" are in charge of C. T. Peck; L. G. Wright has charge of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve and Heber Ellis, well known as a DePauw athlete, is organizing the home guard. Eleven home guards have been planned for the county and three of these have already been formed, one in Putnamville, one in Fillmore and one in Belle Union. The council brought Miss Julia Landers of Indianapolis to speak on organizing the women. At a recent meeting Charles Crawley was appointed to take charge of securing a building for the storage of food. The secretary of the council is not Mr. Lockridge, as previously stated in the Indiana Bulletin, but Mrs. Lou Allen Baker.

Ripley County.—The County Council at its meeting in Versailles last week appropriated $2,000 for the use of the Ripley County Council of Defense. This money will be at the disposal of the Defense Council for use as it sees fit.

Rush County.—Miss Mary Sleeth, Librarian Garvey D. Allen and Will S. Meredith are compiling a list of soldiers and their addresses who are going from Rush county into the federal service.

Shelby County.—"Kill no cattle under two years of age" is the slogan of a movement started at Shelbyville.

Steuben County.—An appropriation of $100 for the use of the Steuben County Council of Defense was made last week by the County Council. The appropriation was to cover postage and necessary printing.

St. Joseph County.—Mayor Fred L. Dennis and Charles Calvert have reviewed the ten companies of home guards in this county and have praised the personnel and efficiency of those who have enlisted.

In addition to the regular company and squad drill the men are being put through a course in military courtesy, military definitions and the school of a soldier. According to Major Dennis the guard has enrolled 150 more men than it requires for full war strength. The quota is 650, while there are some 800 enlistments.

Sullivan County.—At a recent meeting of the Sullivan County Council of Defense the council was promised an appropriation of from $500 to $1,000 for defense work. The Boys' Working Reserve is under the direction of Donald B. Maple and the enrollment is very high. Lee Ellis, who has had considerable military experience, is in charge of the home guard movement. The board has appointed James Willis, local patrolman, head of the protection committee and he has already done some practical work. William W. Parsons, president of the State Normal at Terre Haute, gave a patriotic address before the Sullivan County Teachers' Institute.

Mrs. J. B. Young writes as follows:

"In Greene and Sullivan counties designing men made house-to-house visits urging our women not to sign the Hoover Food Cards or the Women's Service Cards. They represented that the government would send them away to work and would confiscate their canned fruits and vegetables. The woman who did not sign the cards lost a personal opportunity. But the gang, that the men are a part of, will in all probability call on these same homes and represent themselves as being sent by the government to take up the fruit and cart it away for their own use.

"Our great national government is trying to protect its women and keep her citizens as happy and contented as possible through this great crisis and anyone purporting that the government will plan to try her people in that way needs to be watched."

Tippecanoe County.—Tippecanoe County Council of Defense is making extensive plans for a home guard. W. B. Foresman is chairman of a committee on organization and he will be assisted by Professor A. G. Phillips of Purdue, who has had extensive military training. County Agent Otis Crane was recently made an auxiliary member of the County Council and a reciprocal arrangement will be made for the purpose of increasing and husbanding food supplies. Charles Murdock was named as chairman on a committee to promote the sale of the next Liberty bonds. Arrangements are being made to invite Will Hays, chairman of the State Council, to deliver an address at a forthcoming meeting.

The Lafayette Boy Scouts, who have been very helpful in assisting the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense in registration canvasses, Red Cross and Liberty Bond campaigns, completed recently a membership campaign that resulted in the enrollment of nearly eighty new members. In accordance with the national movement to have all boys' organizations co-operate with the United States Boys' Working Reserve, the Lafayette Rotary Club has decided to assume sponsorship for the Boy Scouts and the Boys' Reserve. The plan of the Rotary Club, working in connection with the local director, Carl J. Dexter, is to build up the Boy Scouts from the nucleus of their present organization and then set them to work to organize the Boys' Working Reserve. Splendid results are anticipated.

Vigo County.—Mrs. Lewis J. Cox of Terre Haute expects to enroll 5,000 boys and girls in the Junior Red Cross. Teachers of the public schools are assisting in the organization.

Wabash County.—Red Cross work at Wabash is under the direction of Mrs. J. C. Teague, who is assisted by Mrs. Arthur Carpenter and Mrs. Henry. This committee has started a branch of the Red Cross at Laketon. The officers of the Laketon society are: Mrs. Luella S. Little, chairman; Mrs. Quincy C. Stangle, secretary, and Mrs. Ruth Henry, treasurer.

Warwick County.—Seventeen boys and girls of Warwick county have organized a Pure-bred Calf Club. The officers of the club are: President, Adrian Watt; vice-president, Byron Smith; secretary-treasurer, Lenais Ringham. The above three and the following act as directors: Leupha Harry and Paul Rauth. Additional members of the association are: Fay Rudolph, Joe Batteiger, Elmo Rudolph, Ralph Wilson, Gordon Crenshaw, George Crenshaw, Gladys Bruce, Leroy Houghland, George Elvin Lant, Mary Jenner, Prentice Harry, Ora Harry and Katherine Batteiger.

the practical value of the reserve, in a call from Clinton county, where it was reported a heavy tomato crop was in danger of complete loss unless enough boys are released from their school work to make the harvest. The educational section accordingly adopted, unanimously, a resolution to recommend to all county superintendents of the State that they release boys of working age and ability for all or part time, as is deemed necessary, to harvest perishable crops, the boys remaining under the authority of the school officials. This action will be communicated to all school officials of the State, and is expected to result in a great saving to the food supply of the State. It was the sense of the section that the boys thus released be assisted to make up their school work at the earliest possible time.

STIRRING APPEAL FROM DR. ELLIS.

Before adjournment the section heard a stirring appeal from State Superintendent Horace Ellis, who has just returned from a trip through western Canada, and there had opportunity to observe conditions there due to the great war.

"We must smash tradition; discontinue, if necessary, all present practices," said Dr. Ellis, "in order to succor the soldiers.

"As usual," said Dr. Ellis, "is a dangerous phrase. He said school must go on, but not 'as usual.' He recommended that 'we convert the whole enginery of the schools to the prosecution of the war.

"We must prepare to defend the ideals we have established and know are correct when this war is over.

"The boys and girls must be made to understand that 'over there' men are dying and for principles that ought to make them love their country just a little bit more because of it.

"We ought to modify every decree we have ever made so as to bring the net result a little more favorable to the successful prosecution of the war.

"And in our practical school work we must smash traditions that would sacrifice the lives of hundreds of boys and girls during the months of September, October and November, depriving them of a bit of freedom from the grind of the school room, for the sake of a little arithmetic," concluded Dr. Ellis in a sweeping endorsement of outdoor exercise and athletic training of school children.

At the conclusion of the meeting Captain Kick explained to the section that the army has the necessary equipment, which it will furnish gratuitously to schools as a loan. It will also provide all suggestions gathered from experience and such text books as are being compiled for the purpose.

Reports received by Director Collicott show that classes in telegraphy are being organized at Indianapolis, Centerville, Muncie, Lafayette, Marion, East Chicago, Gary, Fairland, Winona Lake, Bloomington, Elkhart and Logansport, and preparations for inaugurating instruction have been made at Terre Haute, New Albany, Richmond, Vincennes and Anderson.

One sure way of stirring up a fight these days is to start a peace demonstration.—Sioux City Tribune.

War Library Work Endorsed by Council

Librarians are to do their part for the soldiers. At a meeting of the State Council of Defense, Louis J. Bailey, director of the Indiana War Council and Librarian of the Gary public library, made this fact apparent and received an endorsement of his plans. Mr. Bailey will assist in securing desired library accommodations for the men at the front and the men in the training camps. Up to the present, these men have not been provided with the proper kind of literary matter. They have been given cast-off books and old magazines, and reading matter that has not appealed to them or benefited them. Mr. Bailey's plan is to give them what they want, what will interest them, and what will educate them, if they so desire. He expects to help raise over a million dollars for soldiers' libraries and to supply thereby reading matter for troop trains, fifty-five camps, transports, navy vessels of all kinds, and foreign camps. He intends also to send books to the delivery stations in the second trench lines and the base hospitals. The organization of camp libraries will include Y. M. C. A., Y. M. H. A. and K. of C. buildings, central buildings in large camps, with proper distributing points, and co-operation through Red Cross nurses.

Soldiers are in need of books because most of them are accustomed to having them at home. They are usually anxious for recreative reading and, in many cases, ask for technical and trade literature, histories, biographies and geographies.

The War Department has asked the American Library Association, with its four thousand members, to organize a campaign for soldiers' libraries, and it was as one of the agitators of the movement that Director Bailey presented the following resolutions, which the Indiana State Council of Defense endorsed:

"Resolved, That the far-sighted provisions which the War Department is making through its Commission on Training Camp Activities for the welfare of our military and naval forces are deserving of the hearty approval and co-operation of all citizens;

"Resolved, That the task of providing libraries at the several training camps and furnishing reading matter to soldiers and sailors at home and abroad is peculiarly within the province of the organized libraries of this country, and that the designation by the Secretary of War of the American Library Association as the agency for the carrying out of this work and the appointment of a National Library War Council to co-operate in the work are eminently fitting;

"Resolved, That this meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense cordially endorses the plans which have been formulated by the American Library Association for securing the sum of one million dollars required;

"Resolved, That the Indiana State Council of Defense pledge its support and co-operation to the State organization formed for this purpose, and that they recommend to all local councils throughout the State hearty approval and support in all communities."

The Indiana campaign is to take place the week of September 24 to 29.

H. B. Ehler of Washington, field director for the Central division of the United States of the Library War Council with which to buy books for the soldiers and sailors of the nation, delivered an address Wednesday afternoon in the State House before the members of the Indianapolis committee which will have charge of the campaign in this city.

Charles Rush, the new city librarian, is chairman and among the members is William Fortune, head of the Red Cross work in Indianapolis.

Practical Patriotism.

Manager Edwin R. Spooner and Steward Charles Goepper of the Hotel Washington, Indianapolis, have decided to cancel from the bill of fare all unmatured fowls, pork, lamb or veal; young chickens not to weigh under two pounds, no suckling pigs, no lamb or veal, in order to let nature produce more weight in these needy times.

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Editorial Comment

LET'S DO IT LIKE MEN.

Americans must stop whining about the war. We have undertaken a man's job; let us tighten our belts and go to it like men.

America is not going to starve, nor go broke, nor lose all its young men. Its cities are not going to be sacked, nor blown up by U-boats, nor destroyed by airships.

We have been driven into the war. It was unavoidable, inevitable, just part of the everlasting struggle between Kings on one hand and liberty-loving peoples everywhere on the other. Let us muzzle the croaker and prophet of evil; trample on the speculator; jail the traitor.

What we need is divine courage and the faith which will remove mountains. Send our fighting men forth with stout hearts as well as strong arms. Germans have shown what solidarity can do in a sinister cause. Let us show how much more these weapons can do for us in a cause that is holy.

America is again face to face with stern sacrifice, that barbarism may not triumph and that popular government may not perish from this earth. Let us do it boldly and with an indomitable spirit like that of '76.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Taken Too Literally.

Some men seem inclined to accept in too sweeping a manner the advice given by the Greensburg grocers to the point of "carrying your packages home instead of having every little thing delivered." Now this advice was meant chiefly for the women, who have overworked the free delivery system to such an extent that the service has added a big item of expense to the retail stores, says the Greensburg Times. But the men—why, we saw two or three fellows staggering home with "packages" that almost overtaxed their capacity.

With "Genuine Envy"

It was with "genuine envy" for the men who will have the first opportunity of fighting Germany that President Wilson witnessed their departure. In a letter to Thomas L. Chadbourne, Jr., of the mayor's committee on national defense, New York, he says:

"The White House, Washington, Aug. 30, 1917.

"My Dear Mr. Chadbourne—Please say to the men on September 4 how entirely my heart is with them and how my thoughts will follow them across the sea with confidence and also with genuine envy, for I should like to be with them on the fields and in the trenches, where the real and final battle for the independence of the United States is to be fought, alongside the other peoples of the world, struggling like ourselves to make an end of those things which have threatened the integrity of their territory, the lives of their people, and the very character and independence of their governments. Bid them Godspeed for me from a very full heart.

"Cordially and sincerely, yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

Attention—County Councils

INFORMATION BULLETIN, No. 34.

—Dentists—

To County Councils of Defense:

We have heard from some localities that there are young men anxious to take the dental examination in order to get a State License which is necessary before they can enlist as dentists in the army.

Ordinarily there would be no meeting of the State Dental Board until November 12, but the secretary of the board has issued a statement this afternoon that the board will call a special session and hold examination, if there are a considerable number of men wanting to take it.

Please take steps at once to disseminate this information in your county in order that any dental students or others desiring to take examination for a State license in order to enlist may have an opportunity so to do, and write at once to Dr. H. C. McKittrick, Secretary, State Board of Dental Examination, Indianapolis.

—Nurses—

To County Councils of Defense:

Owing to the fact that there are in the State many nurses who desire to become Red Cross nurses and are prevented from doing so because they have not taken the State examination and received a certificate from the State Board of Registration and Examination of Nurses, the State Council of Defense has recommended that a special examination be held by the State Board to provide for the emergency.

The State Board of Registration and Examination of Nurses will, therefore, hold a special examination, only for those nurses who desire to enter the war service before December 1, at the State House at Indianapolis on the 12th and 13th of September. All those desiring to take this examination should communicate with Miss Edna Humphrey, secretary of the board, at Crawfordsville, Ind., before September 8.

Please see that this information receives the widest publicity in your county.

The Red Cross accepts only registered nurses for war service and it is absolutely necessary that those who intend to enter such service take the examination of the State Board.

—Second Liberty Loan—

To County Councils of Defense:

The Treasury Department is now perfecting its organization for the sale of bonds in the "Second Liberty Loan of 1917," and the Council of National Defense has requested the several State Councils to do likewise.

Each County Council is therefore requested to immediately appoint a Liberty Loan Committee in order that everything will be ready to move forward the moment the State Council is advised of the form of activities to be undertaken in this vitally important work.

It is hardly necessary to emphasize the importance of placing on this committee the most active leading citizens in your county.

The State Council desires to have the name of the chairman of this committee as soon as you are able to furnish it.

—Second Liberty Loan (2)—

To County Councils of Defense:

Mr. John H. Winterbotham, representing the National Council of Defense, is here today especially in connection with the second Liberty Loan.

The Liberty Loan campaign will be conducted as before by the federal reserve banks, but the plan in detail has not been finally consummated. It will involve the appointment of the county chairman by the banks; as before, and their plan will be to appoint the same men as before where possible.

Further, their plan is to have the State and County Councils of Defense aid in the campaign, which was not done before for the reason that many of the State Councils of Defense were not then organized. It is now believed by the department that the effort which they will want made by the State and County Councils of Defense will not go further than the creation of committees in each county to act with the appointee of the federal reserve bank, and co-operate with the committee selected by him, the idea being to bring all the influences possible to bear to aid the situation, and we should plan accordingly.

As soon as complete detailed information reaches us, we will promptly forward it to you.

—Speaking Campaign—

To County Councils of Defense:

We want again to call your attention to the importance of a vigorous speaking campaign to preach practical patriotism in the present crisis. If there has ever been any doubt in any one's mind as to America's position in this war, what we are fighting for or what our supreme duty is, certainly it has been clarified by the masterful presentation of the situation by the President in his letter to the Pope: "American rights have been trampled upon in an intolerable manner by the imperial German government."

We are fighting for American rights because our own citizens have been slain and our flag fired upon. And the people of this country will realize that it is our personal war and we are going to France to fight because the battle is there to be fought on French soil first and if not settled there will be settled here.

Indiana is doing her full duty in this war. She will continue so to do.

The task is so great its magnitude sometimes almost overwhelms us, but the response of the people is as gratifying as the responsibility is great. and we ask that the County Councils continue to aid and that the newspapers continue to aid, as all have aided, to the end that in this State every single possible thing may be done which goes in any way toward helping win the victory which is so absolutely vital for the country's future. Let us make it clear to those in Washington, who are carrying the supreme burden, that there is no place in the nation where more loyal or complete support will come than from Indiana.

It may be that there is a little danger at this time of a lessening of our vigor because of the first drive in this regard having been rather concluded and for that very reason we think it is especially important now that there be instituted in every community a vigorous campaign, by speaking and otherwise, to put a real punch into our patriotism. The speakers' bureau is now in full operation under the direction of Prof. J. J. Pettijohn of Indiana University, and speakers will be furnished for all the meetings which can be organized. Also, we want volunteers to offer their services and pay their own expenses to make these speeches. The names of men who are willing to be used in this service should be sent to Prof. J. J. Pettijohn, care of the State Council of Defense, Room No. 83, State House, Indianapolis.

We urge that you take steps at once, if in your judgment it is at all necessary in your community (and we think it is desirable every place) to institute this campaign and have these meetings and speeches, all to the end that the people may understand why we are in the war, and the absolute rectitude of our position and bring to the government the very fullest, unqualified and enthusiastic support in everything that is done in the war work.

Sectional Reports Received By Council

Medical, Educational and Food Activities Prominent in Regular Session.

Plans for conserving the fuel value of used railroad ties through County Councils of Defense, the United States Boys' Working Reserve and the State Board of Forestry were endorsed at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 12. A. W. Brady, chairman of the special committee to which this question was referred, reported that the plan had been considered of asking the railroads' co-operation, and inasmuch as the problem is local, it was thought that the County Councils can best work it out for themselves. Mr. Brady warned the council against expecting too much benefit from the plan. A. E. Reynolds directed attention to the value of wood ashes, which he said should be conserved and Isaac D. Straus offered the co-operative assistance of the Boys' Reserve in the movement, which he said had been recommended to Federal Director W. E. Hall of Washington.

The finding of the special committee, consisting of Frank Wampler, J. L. Keach and A. B. Storms, on the report of the merchants' economy committee, "endorsed the spirit of the report and all the economies recommended" and expressing the belief that closer co-operation between consumers and retailers will effect important savings, was approved.

EXEMPTION OF DENTISTS.

In the absence of Dr. Charles P. Emerson, Dr. John Oliver reporting for the medical section of the council, endorsed the resolution presented by Charles Fox, recommending to the War Department the exemption of dental students and placing them on the same footing as medical students in reference to completing their courses of study. Mr. Straus offered a resolution that it be the sense of the council that dentists be exempted from the draft so that they may be eligible for commissions the same as physicians in the medical reserve. This resolution was unanimously adopted.

Chairman Hays reported the visit to the State Council of John H. Winterbottom, representing the section of the Council of National Defense on co-operation of States; the meeting of representatives of fraternal orders of Indiana, and that no reply had been received from the Council of National Defense to the request for a statement of its policy relative to the prosecution of contracts for public improvements such as was brought up to the council from Muncie, Ind., involving the elevation of railroad tracks. Mr. Hays also stated that a referendum of the Chambers of Commerce of Indiana on how their membership may be utilized in furtherance of the cause of prosecuting the war had been sent out over the State and would be reported on later. J. G. Collicott reported the meeting of the educational section on the subject of educating telegraphers, an account of which appears elsewhere in the Bulletin.

A communication from John Northways, representing the secretaries of Indiana Chambers of Commerce, suggesting that these bodies be utilized in the collection of a fund totaling $2 for each man in the army for a comfort, mess and company fund, to be collected by October 1 and distributed to the army units through the State Council of Defense, was referred to the finance committee of the council.

Louis J. Bailey, director of the Indiana Library War Council, presented his plan, reported elsewhere, and received the endorsement of the council.

WARNING ON COAL SHORTAGE.

Will J. Freeman stated that he desired to "again sound an alarm over the present coal shortage." He suggested that the attention of the transportation committee be directed to the shortage of cars and said open-top cars are being used for the transportation of building material and merchandise, to the further jeopardy of public interest in the prompt movement of coal. He said there has not been more than a 71 per cent.

supply of coal cars in Indiana for the past four or five months and the seriousness of the situation is increasing rapidly with the approach of the "pinch of cold weather."

Miss Julia Landers reported that Mrs. Grace Julian Clark of Irvington had consented to head the "foster-mother movement" proposed for the enrolled women and applied to the enlisted men in their home localities. The council deferred an endorsement pending a statement from Raymond Fosdick, head of the federal recreational bureau, as to the attitude of his organization on the proposition.

Professor G. I. Christie of the food committee reported that the council's tent at the State Fair had resulted in a splendid manifestation of interest among the women and the enrollment of many who might not otherwise have been reached. He added that the exhibits had proved of interest and are to be used in Louisville and Chicago.

BETTER LIVE STOCK CLUBS.

Professor Christie also reported the organization of Better Live Stock Clubs, with the co-operation of bankers over the State, and a plan whereby through the co-operation of the Indianapolis Stock Yards many of the 600 cows marketed there every month may be sent back to Indiana farms, rather than butchered for beef. Professor Christie will conduct an experiment and demonstration for the education of stock men at the Indianapolis Stock Yards, the operators of which will co-operate in the development of three car loads of cattle, which will be tested with silage, patent and other feeds.

On motion of Mr. Straus the council unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, It is so extremely necessary to extend all propaganda, giving publicity to the urgent demand for:

"(a) Food conservation.

"(b) Food production.

"(c) Enrollment of boys of the ages 16 to 20, inclusive, in the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve for the purpose of devoting their vacations to supplying the emergent labor necessary on the farms for food production; be it

"Resolved, That we heartily endorse the recommendation of the educational section of the State Council of Defense that the State Board of Education for Indiana place in the hands of every high school student, both boys and girls, a specially prepared text book setting forth essential facts relating to all voluntary war measures which have had to do with increased food production and conservation; he it further

"Resolved, That we endorse the action of Dr. Horace Ellis, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, in advising the school superintendents and high school principals, that wherever it is absolutely essential to release boys from school work for aiding in harvesting perishable crops, that these boys will be given credit for such harvest labor and will be given every possible opportunity to make up their studies upon their return to school, provided they are employed in emergent work during the full time of their absence from the class room."

Chicago Potato Program

CHICAGO—Plans for buying and storing in Chicago 1,000,000 bushels of potatoes, for use after January 1 next, were started by the middle western division of the national food administration. The potatoes are to be sold to consumers at cost, the price to be fixed after all expenses, including interest on the capital required to finance the deal, have been determined.

According to the plans the working capital for starting the project will be advanced in the form of a loan by the city of Chicago, the sum necessary to make the first purchase and to pay the freight being estimated at $200,000.

The federal reserve board has already approved a plan by which warehouse receipts on potatoes stored under certain specified conditions may be used for collateral for loans at federal reserve banks. After the first lot has been bought and safely stored away, a loan may be made on the warehouse receipts and more potatoes bought. The process could then be repeated until 1,000,000 bushels are in storage.

Expect Farmers to Take Next Loan

Bankers of St. Joseph County Arrange to Sell Securities Issue.

South Bend.—Charles L. Zeigler of the First National bank, South Bend, is chairman of the second Liberty Loan committee for St. Joseph county. He will have as his active assistants Charles W. Cohn of the Merchants National Bank and Eugene Miller of the American Trust Company. The preliminary organization meeting attracted bankers from Mishawaka, North Liberty, Walkerton and Lakeville. Commenting on the loan, a representative of the bankers said:

"The second Liberty Loan will be a popular loan, and you can feel sure that we are going to put it through right in this county. There was a fine representation at the meeting and we feel that the bankers are going to do everything in their power to make the loan in St. Joseph county a huge success.

"We believe that the farmers will be able to take more of the second loan than they did the first. They have money now. It is probable that the bonds will be sold on the payment plan, just as the first bonds were sold. It may be that the interest on this second loan will be 4 per cent. If that comes about, then the first loan automatically will be raised to 4 per cent. At that rate you can buy coal or groceries or pay your rent with Liberty bonds. They'll be just like cash.

"I know we'll put it through with flying colors. We've got to do it to get the boys to France."

Curb Market at Bloomington

The curb produce market in Bloomington has been flourishing for the past five or six weeks. The market is open from 6 a. m. until noon on Wednesdays and all day Saturdays. The market has increased from three lone vehicles with garden products to forty wagons in one day.

Arthur Parks, a policeman, acts as market master, seeing that the sellers observe the rules of spacing, that scales are accurate, and keeps things in order generally. Each salesman is required to unhitch his horse and to tie him at one of the racks about the court house. Mr. Parks said that one day when there was an excess of potatoes they sold for $1.00 per bushel.

Grocers, farmers, buyers, rich and poor, merchants and business men generally, were consulted concerning the market and the general consensus of opinion of all classes was that the market was an excellent movement and would undoubtedly be bigger and better next year. One man set up a stand to sell patent medicines, flavor extracts, etc., one market day, but he had to hunt new territory as he did not produce any eatable by his own efforts.

Mrs. Annie Hinshaw had a unique stand selling various kinds of cakes, home-made bread, apple butter, sauerkraut, stuffed mangoes and sweet pickles, in addition to the raw vegetables.

Homer Cooter sold twenty-one bushels of string beans last Saturday in addition to his other products. He said that before the opening of the market he had to allow about half of his produce to go to waste as he could not find a sale for it. Another farmer said that for every bushel of tomatoes he used to sell that there were two that rotted. Today, through the curb produce market, he sells them all.

The experience of Bloomington in this kind of market is only one of twenty-five or thirty of the successful new municipal markets which have been established in the State this summer and fall.

Things Known and Unknown.

Every few minutes one of the many "councils" in the State finds out something that everybody already knows. Richard Lieber has discovered that wood can be used as fuel. What Richard doesn't know is that it is practically impossible to get it cut.—Waveland Independent.

More Live Stock For Indiana Farms

Bankers Are Organizing Clubs That Promise Great Good for the State.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, through the Live Stock Division, have been making a determined effort to secure more and better live stock on Indiana farms.

The State Bankers' Association is co-operating in this movement and thus helping to solve the meat shortage of the world. The following letter was sent to the Indiana banks through the Indiana Bankers' Association and is self-explanatory:

To the Bank Addressed:

Gentlemen—How to place more and better live stock on Indiana farms is a subject that has received much serious consideration by individuals and interested organizations.

At a meeting of the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation, held with Mr. McCray and Mr. Ade at Hazeldon Farm, Brook, Ind., August 15, the Agricultural Committee of the Indiana Bankers' Association was requested to bring this subject before the bankers of the State.

Complying with this request, a meeting of our Agricultural Committee, together with members of interested banks, Purdue University and the State Food Committee, was held at the German House, Tuesday evening, August 28. At this meeting a review was made of what is now being done by a number of banks to promote live stock production on the farms in their counties.

The seriousness of the live stock situation throughout the United States has been emphasized by Food Administrator Hoover, Secretary Houston of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Purdue University and the live stock men of the country. High prices of feed and unusual prices for meat have induced large numbers of farmers to sell their live stock. Not only have they sold fat stock, but they have also sold large numbers of breeding animals.

In view of the fact that the European countries have destroyed in many cases their breeding herds and have reduced to a minimum the number of live stock they can keep, it is evident to all that the future supply of meat and of breeding stock must come in a large part from America.

If this is true then unusual efforts must be made to maintain on our farms large numbers of breeding animals so that our farmers may be able to meet the demand.

The demand for wool has demonstrated that too few sheep are kept. If the supply of wool necessary for uniforms, socks and other clothing is to be met the flocks of sheep must be materially increased. It will likely be impossible to place large flocks on many of our farms, but it is feasible and absolutely necessary that a few sheep be maintained on a large number of farms.

Again live stock offers an excellent medium through which to utilize large quantities of roughage such as silage, corn fodder, hay, straw, etc., in the production of food stuffs of the highest quality.

The feeding of live stock on the farm results in the retaining of the maximum amounts of fertilizing elements which maintain the productive power of the soil and insure profitable crops from year to year. No farm or community can overlook this important factor in establishing a permanent profitable agriculture.

Indiana bankers can assist in this movement in several ways.

1. Organize a young peoples live stock club and contest and arrange to furnish high class animals. The county agent and Purdue University will furnish plans. This is a practical, profitable work for banks.

2. Encourage the keeping of breeding stock on the farms.

3. Encourage the feeding of cattle, hogs and sheep. Offer every reasonable financial inducement to your patrons.

4. Encourage the dairymen to maintain their herds and to adopt better methods in feeding and management.

5. Encourage the building and filling of silos that a larger part of the corn crop may be saved and that the live stock business may be made more profitable.

Will you not take this up at once, give the matter your serious consideration and advise a workable plan for the furthering of the live stock industry in your community? Invite a number of interested live stock men with your county agent, if you have one, to meet with you and assist in working out a line of action. Purdue will also assist. We shall be glad to hear from you as to what you propose to do.

We hope that every Indiana bank will do something to help better the situation.

Yours very truly,

AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE,

W. W. Bonner, Chairman, Greensburg.

Geo. L. Davis, Kokomo.

Cecil C. Johnson, Paoli.

Walter Hays, Loogootee.

John W. Turner, Mt. Vernon.

John A. Thompson, Edinburg.

W. J. DeVol, Lebanon.

E. P. Moore, Mitchell.

E. F. Cahen, Fortville.

L. M. Gross, Elwood.

W. E. Dunn, Noblesville.

P. S.—In the September issue of The Hoosier Banker will appear a list of Indiana banks who are encouraging live stock development work. Read it!

If there are other banks which have not reported, we shall be glad to hear from them at once so that they may be listed.

DEVELOPMENT WORK BY BANKS.

The following is a brief statement of live stock projects now carried on by a number of Indiana banks:

The First National Bank of Tipton and the Purdue State Bank, West Lafayette, have purchased high-grade pigs and furnished same to young people on a promissory note, payable in six months. These pigs are to be fed for the market.

The State Bank of Monticello has furnished to club members a number of gilts on the condition that two choice gilts from the first or succeeding litter be returned to the bank, the member keeping the sow and the rest of the pigs.

The Terre Haute Trust Company has furnished pigs to two members from each of the twelve townships in Vigo county.

The Peoples State Bank at Sullivan furnished pigs to boys having the best agricultural conditions for successful pig club work.

The First National Bank at Mooresville has furnished pigs to club members within a radius of seven or eight miles of the city.

The German National Bank, Fort Wayne, has furnished pigs to club members.

The Second National Bank, Vincennes, has furnished pigs to club members.

The First National Bank at Owensville has furnished Poland China gilts and some grades to boys of the community.

The Farmers National Bank of Wadesville is furnishing pigs to club members.

The National Bank of Orleans is furnishing pigs.

The Howard National Bank at Kokomo has placed feeder calves in the hands of boys who are feeding them during the summer, the animals to be sold at auction during the late fall; the club member receives the difference between the selling and cost price.

The Atlas State Bank of Union City will furnish feeder calves this fall, giving the club members an opportunity to do winter feeding.

The First National Bank, Rensselaer, will arrange to place pure-bred short horn heifers six months and one year old among the boys of Jasper county.

The First National Bank of Vincennes will buy fifty pure-bred Holstein heifers due to drop their calves in thirty to sixty days. The boys and girls will then care for these animals and deposit with the bank 50 per cent. of the market proceeds. This bank also has employed a supervisor, who will give his entire time to visiting the boys and girls and aid them in the work. They have also planned to extend this work along other lines.

The Mount Vernon National Bank at Mount Vernon has placed more than one hundred pure-bred Holstein calves in Posey county.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank of Boonville has placed a number of Holstein calves in Warrick county.

The State Bank of Paoli has placed a large number of pure-bred Holstein calves and 250 sheep in different parts of the county. They are also planning a large pig club.

The Pendleton Banking Company and the Pendleton Trust Company will supply pigs and calves to club members.

The First National Bank and the Farmers State Bank of Portland will conduct calf and pig clubs in Jay county.

The Farmers State Bank, Bargersville, will conduct a pig club.

Crothersville State Bank will furnish pure-bred Holstein calves to young people in the county.

The Citizens National Bank of Tipton will supply dairy calves.

The White River Bank, Loogootee, has supplied Holstein calves and Duroc pigs.

The Citizens State Bank, Elwood, has furnished pigs and chickens to the members in the county.

The Old State Bank, Evansville, has furnished Berkshire gilts to a large number of boys.

NOTE—Details of the plans for conducting these clubs and contests will be furnished by the Agrl. Exp. Dept., Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.

CLOSE OF SILO CAMPAIGN.

The Silo campaign waged under the direction of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation is drawing to a close this month. A new silo poster has been issued by the committee and has attracted considerable attention. The underlying thought of the poster is, "If you cannot put a gun on your shoulder put a silo on your farm." This poster has been mailed to bankers, grain dealers and millers and to every one interested in the movement.

Maurice Douglass, in immediate charge of the work, attended the Louisville State Fair this week. He has taken with him an exhibit showing the value of silage. This exhibit was used at the Indiana State Fair and prepared by J. W. Schwab of the Animal Husbandry Department of Purdue University.

FOOD CONSERVATION WORK.

The Food Conservation Headquarters plans co-operation with Purdue University and the Agricultural Department of the federal government in establishing a permanent food headquarters. The demonstrations conducted at 48 Monument Circle have gained in popularity. The average attendance since July 23 has been 225 per week. Similar food headquarters have been established through the efforts of Mrs. McOuat, a member of the committee, at Martinsville, Lebanon, Franklin and Shelbyville.

BUSINESS MEN'S CLUB MEETING.

A Business Men's Club of Valparaiso will hold its first meeting of the winter season at the residence of Judge H. H. Loring on September 15. Food Director Christie has been invited to attend and speak before the body. W. Q. Fitch, assistant secretary to the director, will also attend the meeting.

STATE FARMERS' CONGRESS.

The Work of the State Council of Defense will be presented to the State Farmers' Congress by Chairman Will H. Hays at a dinner to be given the evening of September 19. Food problems will be discussed by Food Director G. I. Christie. A large attendance is expected at the Congress, which is a most influential body in Indiana.

LIVE STOCK CONFERENCE.

A conference of leading live stock men of the United States was called September 5-6, at Washington, D. C., by Secretary of Agriculture Houston and Food Administrator Hoover. Warren T. McCray of Kentland, and a member of the State Food Committee, represented Indiana. Mr. McCray was appointed by the conference on the live stock production committee to investigate conditions and report in the near future to Secretary Houston and Food Administrator Hoover.

Fraternal Orders Ready for Service

brought together to the end that they may serve in a concrete way in fighting this war for Democracy to a successful finish.

"Had they such fraternalism over there as we have here, and are trying to spread over the entire nation, there could have been no war.

"There is no age limit on patriotism. The opportunity to send is as great as the opportunity to go. The duty to send is as great as the duty to go.

"There is no neutrality now. The man or woman who is not for the United States at this time is against us."

"I come to you," said Madison J. Walsh of Washington, State deputy of the Knights of Columbus, "representing an organization which is loyal to the very heart's core. Despite the criticism that has been urged against them its members are loyal to a man. I am happy to be here and to say to you that 10,000 Knights of Columbus in Indiana are anxious to join their hearts and their hands with you in this cause. It is yours to command, Mr. Chairman, and we obey."

120,000 MASONS ARE LOYAL.

Calvin W. Prather, secretary of the Grand Lodge Free and Accepted Masons, said in part: "Our organization is intensely loyal. We only wait to be told what we are to do. I think you have taken a wise course in arranging this meeting so that we all can do something. I pledge to you the loyalty of 120,000 Masons in Indiana, who are ready and willing to join in an organization that will do some good along this line."

A. A. Spear of Brazil, Grand Master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, said in part: "I gladly pledge to this cause the whole-souled support of 85,000 members of the subordinate lodges of the State, 18,000 members of the Encampment and 50,000 Daughters of Rebekah. It doesn't matter what your politics were last November, no matter what you may think personally, you owe it to the country now to be of one mind and united in the prosecution of the war. We want every fellow to be an American and to stand by the President and his advisers. We have a law compelling lodges to keep in good standing every man who has entered the federal service.

John C. Snyder, Crawfordsville, of the Tribe of Ben-Hur, said: "We came here to see what you wanted done and we are ready to do it. This war is going to make this country a greater nation, but it will involve a great sacrifice. The tribe of Ben-Hur is ready to do its part."

EAGLES ENCOURAGE SOLDIERS.

W. J. Dillingham of Warsaw, State president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, said that early in the war his order was directed by the higher lodges to encourage enlistments in all branches of the federal service. "We are all apparently working along the same line," said Mr. Dillingham. "I am impressed that if we all work as one organization we can accomplish greater results. The Eagles are creating a patriotic fund by a per capita assessment that has for its object the payment of $1,000 to the dependents of every man who gives his life to his country. There is more we can do and the more we are called upon to do the better the feeling among the fraternities of the State. We will be pleased to give every effort possible to carry out any and all suggestions that may come from the State Council of Defense."

Mrs. Ione Everly of Boswell, representing the Degree of Pocahontas, declared: "We as an order abhor the selfishness of a nation that made this war possible. We must be true Americans, be loyal and true to the flag and all it stands for."

Lewis J. Borenstein, Indianapolis, president of District No. 2 B'nai Brith, declared "the Jewish people are first, last and always for this country and willing to make the sacrifices necessary to win the war. We feel that we must give not only of our incomes, but of our principals; not only of our spare time, but of the time ordinarily we would devote to business."

JEWISH PATRIOTISM LAUDED.

Chairman Hays at this point said:

"Mr. Borenstein, I want to take this opportunity, here and now, to say publicly that the 100 per cent. sterling quality of the loyal support of the Jewish people, in all lines of patriotic endeavor, in connection with the war, has been splendid and, indeed, encouraging."

Mr. Borenstein added that his order is raising $1,000,000 as a relief fund for the Jewish boys now in the service.

Arch H. Hobbs, Indianapolis, speaking for the Improved Order of Red Men, said: "I have been sent here by the head of our order to say that in anything we can do, we are at your service. We already are equipping ambulance units and sending them abroad. The 60,000 members of my order, from all walks of life, are loyal, they believe in Americanism; they believe in patriotism."

Mrs. M. E. Washington, New Albany, representing the Household of Ruth, said in part: "We have been wondering what we can do. We want to help. Although our funds may be meager, we are willing to divide. We are for Indiana and the country in this war."

Miss Tarquinia Voss, Indianapolis, of the Daughters of the Revolution, said her order stood for zeal, unity and co-operation. "We must work together. We pledge ourselves not only to the defense of the country, but to the education of the people as to why we are at war and what we hope to accomplish."

SONS OF VETERANS PATRIOTIC.

F. C. Focht, Winchester, representing the Sons of Veterans, said: "Through the veins of every member of our organization flows the blood of a patriot of the days of '61 to '65. We believe we are just as patriotic as they. We are a loyal organization and I pledge you that my people will do just what you want done, as soon as they are informed."

Will Gray, Covington, representing the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, said many of his fellow members already had entered the active service of the government. He said the rank was ready to do anything for the State Council and the government that it can do.

Harry Wade, Indianapolis, representing the Knights of Pythias, then suggested the scheme of effecting an organization, which met with unanimous approval.

Before adjournment, Madison J. Walsh, of Washington, paid a splendid tribute to Governor Goodrich, proposing the resolutions, which follow, and a floral tribute sent to the hospital with the resolutions:

Whereas, The Chief Executive of the State, our beloved Governor James P. Goodrich, is at this time waging a fight for his life, a fight we want him to win, as the State and the nation at this time are in dire need of his services; and

Whereas, The representatives of the fraternal societies of the State desire to manifest a bit of encouragement; be it

Resolved, That we express to the Governor our sincere good wishes and hope for his speedy recovery; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to him, accompanied by a floral tribute of our loyal affection.

ARCH H. HOBBS,

Special Committee.

Chairman Hays, in closing, expressed "a real appreciation of the attendance and spirit of the meeting. We feel keenly the responsibilities of the moment, and the support and sympathy evidenced here this afternoon are a great comfort."

The representatives present were:

Mrs. Nettie Ransford, Indianapolis, Order Eastern Star; Mrs. M. E. Washington, New Albany, Household of Ruth; John C. Snyder and Arthur McCain, Crawfordsville, Tribe of Ben-Hur; W. J. Dillingham and Elmer Dahn, Warsaw, Fraternal Order of Eagles; Lewis J. Borenstein, Indianapolis, Order B'nai Brith; Madison Walsh, Washington, Knights of Columbus; F. C. Focht, Winchester, Sons of Veterans; A. A. Spears, Brazil, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; A. Braun, Order of the Golden Rule; Calvin W. Prather, Indianapolis, Masons; Henry C. Landes, Indianapolis, Patriarchs Militant; Arch H. Hobbs, Indianapolis, Improved Order of Red Men; Mrs. Ione Everly, Boswell, Great Council of Pocahontas; W. W. Layton, C. C. Ritter and W. B. Gray, Covington, military department, Knights of Pythias; Mrs. Smith, Miss Tarquinia Voss, Indianapolis, Daughters of the Revolution; Harry Wade and Robert A. Brown, Indianapolis, Knights of Pythias; Mrs. Julia Reed, Indianapolis, Grand Court, Order of Calanthe.

Merchants' Economy

The Merchants' Economy Committee, State Council of Defense, has received advice from Washington, Ind., that the merchants of that city are solidly for the reduction of deliveries and the return of merchandise, as evidenced by a half page ad setting forth the rules of the Merchants' Economy Board, Council of National Defense, to which rules is affixed the signatures of fifteen of the more representative merchants in Washington.

A meeting was held in South Bend called by Mr. H. W. Eldridge, chairman of the Merchants' Economy Board for the district of South Bend. The meeting was attended by the merchants in the district of South Bend and was called for the purpose of instructing them what course to pursue to put in force the recommendations made by the Council of National Defense.

Milton Herz of Terre Haute, chairman of the district surrounding Terre Haute, will call a meeting of the merchants of that district soon.

The meeting of the merchants in the district of Evansville is scheduled for the very near future to take up the matter of reducing deliveries and return of merchandise. The demand for the display cards relative to deliveries and reduction of return of merchandise is coming to the Merchants' Economy Committee from all over the State. An extra supply is being printed in Indianapolis for the purpose of supplying this demand.

A meeting of the merchants of Hamilton, Hendricks, Marion, Hancock, Morgan, Johnson, Shelby, Monroe, Brown, Bartholomew, Lawrence and Jackson counties, these counties comprising the district of which F. M. Ayres of Indianapolis is chairman will be called to meet in Indianapolis within the week.

Letters fully explaining the movement of the return of merchandise and lessened deliveries have been sent to over three hundred and seventy-five dry goods dealers in the State. Mr. Meyer, the president of the Indiana Retail Grocers' Association, whose head office is at Anderson, Ind., has called a meeting of the Anderson grocers and will soon issue a letter to all of the members in his association throughout the State relative to this movement.

In Re Bulletin

The Indiana Bulletin, published at Indianapolis by the State Council of Defense, made its initial bow to the public last week, and is chock full of valuable information concerning the work that is being done all through the State. Many other interesting facts can be learned by perusing the columns of the Bulletin each week.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 5, 1917.

The Committee, Indiana State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Gentlemen—Please accept our sincere thanks for copies of the Indiana Bulletin received today. It is certainly an admirable newspaper, inspiring in its patriotic appeal, and will do untold good among our boys and girls. I am especially interested in all communications concerning the Boys' Reserve, particularly for suggestions in "doing our bit," and will be glad to pay personally for any Bulletins which you may have from time to time for distribution.

Yours very truly,

ELIZABETH M. CRAWFORD,
Principal, Indiana State Normal Training School.

News of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve

Col. Roosevelt's Indorsement.

Oyster Bay, L. I., N. Y., Sept. 4, 1917.

Mr. William E. Hall, National Director, U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, Washington, D. C.:

My Dear Mr. Hall—I wish to express my hearty and unreserved support of what you are doing. You are now actually engaged in meeting the shortage of labor on the farm by the creation of the Working Reserve, to include the boys between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one who ordinarily would not be in productive labor, and who can be turned into workers on the farm. You are endeavoring to standardize the work of the State organizations who are striving to meet our needs along these lines. I am glad to learn of the success with which you have already met in placing these inexperienced city boys on the farm, in addition to the country boys. You have shown, and the farmer has been prompt to recognize the fact, that the strong healthy boy is a tremendous help at this time, and that if his patriotism is appealed to, he will stick to the farm where the need is great, in spite of the offer of higher wages in the city. I am glad that you intend to encourage the training of the boys to prepare for some essential industry where they can take the place of a man called to the front. One of the great benefits you confer is that of making the boy realize that he is part of Uncle Sam's team; that he is doing his share in this great war; that he holds his services in trust for the nation, and that though it is proper to consider the question of material gain and the question of his own desires, yet that what he must most strongly consider at this time is where his services will do most good to our people as a whole. I earnestly wish you every success in your wise and patriotic effort.

Fraternally yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Report from Decatur.

Greensburg, Ind., September 8, 1917.

Pursuant to directions of the Indiana State Council of Defense, the local council of defense of Decatur county has ordered a complete and searching investigation of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. To carry out the investigation with impartiality and thoroughness the local Council of Defense has secured the service of five of the county's most representative and fair-minded men.

The investigation committee has spared no efforts in their zeal to determine the nature and character of the organization known as the United States Boys' Working Reserve. After mature consideration and due deliberation of the Boys' Working Reserve of America, the committee unanimously agree that the United States Boys' Working Reserve is an effort on the part of the United States Department of Labor to make a full and intelligent survey of the labor resources of the United States, counting the boys from sixteen to twenty-one years of age.

The following are the exact words of the committee:

"We, the undersigned citizens of Decatur county, after making a comprehensive and thorough investigation of the purposes and motives actuating the United States Boys' Working Reserve movement, find that it has absolutely no connection with the military service of the United States, but has for its sole purpose the organization of the youth of our land to take the place of the young men who have withdrawn from industrial life and entered the military service of the United States. The organization is a wise and timely precaution on the part of the American Government to meet an impending shortage of labor and every young man in Decatur county should hasten to add his name to the list.

"DR. C. C. MORRISON, President Y. M. C. A.,
"C. P. MILLER,
"WALTER W. BONNER, Secretary Indiana Commission on Food Production.
"SHERMAN P. MINEAR, President Decatur County Red Cross Chapter,
"HUGH WICKENS."

Washington County Boys Patriotic.

Washington County Teachers' Institute, held last week at Salem, under the direction of Orva Hopper, county superintendent, was one of the most successful in years. The attendance was very large and includes many out of the county visitors. Great attention was paid to patriotic music and conservation. Bernard Sobel of Purdue University, representing the State Council of Defense, spoke Thursday on the need and value of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. The campaign in this county is very vigorous in spite of the opposition which developed early in August when it was reported that certain parties offered to pay for the printing of articles in local papers in opposition to the organization, the articles having been promptly refused. Opposition seemed to serve as an incentive to increased effort on the part of Superintendent Hopper. One-half the townships have already reported an enrollment of 500 boys while the quota for the entire county is 280. The success is attributed to the efficiency of organizers in making the aims of the Reserve clear and to a house-to-house canvass.

Campaign in Allen County.

In a remarkable campaign in behalf of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve Allen county, under the direction of D. O. McComb and A. L. McDonald, has been having astonishing success. Up to the present, total registrations and enrollment number 2,176 and these have been obtained by personal solicitation, through looking up the boys all over the county. Messrs. McComb and McDonald were ably assisted by C. J. Hutchison, G. Howard Donner, Roy Bates and C. E. Richards. Professors Howe and Stump assisted in the publicity work by giving talks at several meetings. If this activity continues every boy in Allen county will be a candidate for the handsome federal badge of service.

Exceptional Enrolling.

Cheering news comes from Harrison county in regard to exceptional work that has been done there for the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, by two energetic field organizers, H. W. Gudgeon and James Beanblossom. Gudgeon has 65 enrollments to his credit and Beanblossom has 51. And they are not yet done, they declare. In commenting upon their unusual success, Mr. Isaac D. Straus remarked that they furnished an example to other counties that have been less persistent. "The real organizer," he said, "is a man who is daunted by nothing. He doesn't care if a community is prejudiced or not. He doesn't care if the boys are accessible or not. He doesn't even care about apathy and indifference. He simply does one thing. He looks for the boys and when he finds them he doesn't let them get away until they have signed up. This is the spirit and the enthusiasm we must have. The work of the Boys' Reserve is no joke. It is a crying necessity. It is not a pet theory, but is sternly practical. The organizer must make boys feel that if they do not sign up, they will soon be regarded as slackers and the slacker at home is more contemptible than the coward in the presence of the enemy.

Prompt Service Rendered.

W. H. Cox, farmer, sent in a request for a boy to the State office of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve on the morning of September 11. The Reserve "got busy" immediately and sent, on the very afternoon of the same day, Benjamin Bildersback, 19 years old, a boy with two years' experience, to the Cox farm. This incident is typical of the work the Reserve is doing daily, for the benefit of the farmer and the boy and for the benefit of the nation.

Paul Revere to Date.

Paul Revere is to live again, but this time he is to ride in an automobile. The State of New Mexico is forming county organizations of "motor minute men," who will serve during the time of the present war. Each county is to finance itself and the members are to be subject to the orders of a captain and the lieutenants appointed by him.

Red Cross Activities

The St. Joseph county chapter of the Red Cross has taken up a new line of work, designated "Home Service." It is one of twenty cities of the country already organized for this purpose, and its activities are in charge of the following committee: U. G. Manning, chairman; W. P. Furey, Miss Lela Scott, George W. Kalczynski, Lafayette Levan and Mrs. Stanley Klosin. The new work consists of relief work among the families of soldiers and sailors. Its purpose is the maintenance of a family life as nearly normal as possible, under the stress of war. A school of instruction is contemplated for workers, including lectures and discussions covering a period of six or seven weeks.

The executive committee has issued the following statement:

"Despite the care of the government in selecting those without dependents, the stress of war inevitably brings dependence and hardship in many cases. Instances of this have already arisen in this city, and while it is expected that the nation will make in due time some generous provision for dependents, yet results in other countries have shown that the abnormal conditions created leave a large field for relief and assistance by other agencies. The maintenance of normal family life requires many things besides food and shelter, especially when the one in the family is withdrawn who has done the planning and managing.

"In order that the families of those who have been called to service may have friendly and skilled assistance, the Red Cross is urging the organization of home service divisions of the committees on civilian relief, in the work of which may be concentrated all the activities that have to do with the care and support of dependents, the rehabilitation of families or the aid of returned soldiers or sailors.

PLANS NEAR COMPLETION

"In order that this aid may be systematic and efficient it is urged that corps of workers be given special courses of training this fall in anticipation of the need that will come later.

"The committee on civilian relief of the St. Joseph county chapter of the Red Cross has for some time been making ready to conduct a training school or institute of this kind here this fall and now has a program of work practically completed. It has also been organizing a corps of volunteer workers who will take this course of training. This list of workers in the home service section will be completed in a few days, and is made up largely of those who have had practical training in social work.

"In most places a charge will be made for the course, but here, owing to the volunteer aid available there will be no charge. Surrounding communities will also be invited to send representatives to take the course if they care to do so."

Following is an outline of the program for the course of instructions:

I.—General information concerning the organization and work of the Red Cross; Dr. C. A. Lippincott. Discussion.

II.—The Family: Its normal composition and status—normal problems, variations when the bread-winner leaves home. Special problems due to war; speaker from Indiana University. Discussion.

III.—Effective methods of social work, interviews, securing and interpretation of information. Supervision of families aided; Miss Lela Scott and Rabbi Liebert. Discussion.

IV.—Health and Hygiene; Dr. Sensenich. Discussion.

V.—Family Problems—(a) The children, wife and mother, education, recreation; (b) Juvenile delinquency; Judge W. W. Funk. Discussion.

VI.—Relief problems—family budgets; Father McGinn. Discussion.

VII.—Important details; (a) Helpful tools, (b) Co-operation; Mr. Manning. Discussion.

A course of reading is also suggested.

Organization Drive Covers Every County in Indiana

Twenty-three Teams of Four Men Each Will Bring Local Councils Up to Date in Every Detail of Patriotic Activity.

In response to an invitation from the State Council of Defense, more than a hundred representative business and professional men from every quarter of the State met in the chamber of the House of Representatives, State House, on the afternoon of Thursday, September 20 and volunteered to devote themselves gratuitously, paying their own expenses to the biggest single patriotic effort yet undertaken in Indiana—an organization drive to include every county of the State.

After Chairman Hays had explained the purpose of the State Council—to check up the activities of the County Councils and bring their organizations and their work up to the latest requests of the President, the War Department, the Council of National Defense, the State government and those who are carrying the burden of organizing Indiana's men and materials on a war basis, the men present volunteered to form twenty-three teams of four men each, which will spend one day in every county of the State, the ninety-two counties being divided into twenty-three districts of four counties each, beginning September 25 and concluding September 28. It is expected these men will bring Indiana's war organization up to fighting form, so that the State's part in the national war program may be carried out promptly and effectively.

Following are the men assigned by teams and the districts into which they will go:

Favors Dress Reform.

The educational committee of the Bartholomew County Council of Defense took a step in the right direction when it went on record in favor of dress reform for high school girls, says the Columbus Republican. The school authorities here have been pretty strict in the past about girls who go to school, dressed gorgeously enough to attend a dinner dance, but now and then one of them gets by the censor and most of her neighbors spend their time looking at her clothes instead of studying their lessons. High school is not a style show and the sooner the girls are made to realize this the better it will be for all concerned.

Beyond the Alps leaps Italy.—New York Sun.

No Meat Combination.

The United States Food Administration authorizes the following:

"Herbert Hoover stated, as to the reported combination of meat packers, that nothing of the kind was contemplated. The Food Administration requested the packers, great and small, to select a committee to represent the industry. During the past week meetings of cattle, hog and sheep producers have been held and preliminary committees formed to represent their industries.

"It is proposed to hold joint meetings of the packers' and growers' committees at an early date to consider constructive measures for the control of distribution and the elimination of speculation in meats."

Duty of Citizens in Present Situation

Committee on Morals Sets Forth Pertinent Suggestions to County Councils.

The following communication from the Committee on Morals, addressed to County Councils of Indiana, was unanimously endorsed at the regular meeting of the State Council of Defense and ordered distributed:

"The attention of the State Council of Defense having repeatedly been called to the fact that some individuals by speech and in print are in certain localities criticising our government and its determined policies, we believe it timely and pertinent that there should in the name of the State be a declaration:

"First—That a state of war now exists between the United States and the imperial German government. The time for discussion upon the main issue is past and the time for action has come. The right of free criticism of public officials and of public policies which has for its purpose correction of faults of administration or the calling to account before the bar of public opinion officials who are failing to perform their duty, or the discussion of policies that are being formulated, should not be curtailed or questioned, but in the interests of national efficiency in this time of crisis which involves the safety of our country, criticism of fundamental policies of the government when those policies have once been determined, becomes dangerous if not treasonable.

"An American citizen who at this juncture berates our government for participating in the world war, or who agitates for premature or indeterminate peace, or seeks to obstruct governmental measures for bringing the resources of the nation to bear effectively in the war, or seeks to discourage patriotism by his own unpatriotic words or spirit, is giving aid and comfort to the enemy. While he may not technically expose himself to the charge of treason and thus be brought to judgment by federal authority, he stands condemned before the bar of patriotic public opinion when by his acts or his words he imperils the success of our cause in this war.

"Second—We, therefore, urge upon the citizens of Indiana serious attention to the importance of developing an unquestioned patriotic attitude in all our communities without unnecessary restriction of the freedom of speech or action. We do believe that the time has come for the line of distinction to be drawn sharply between a patriotic and an unpatriotic attitude. All possible emphasis through the press and in public address, as well as by private conversation and influence, must be placed upon the imperative necessity that is upon us now to win this war. Our army in training and in the trenches must be made to feel that they have the solid moral backing of the nation. The governments of Europe must be made to understand that our people are united in the determination to add the entire strength of this nation to that of the allied nations, in the league of peoples of which we are now an essential part, in a determined purpose to defeat and discredit a brutal military autocracy that has sought to dominate the world.

"We challenge the attention of the citizens of this great State to the supreme duty of every citizen to give moral support to the government. In such an hour as this the one consideration which must be held uppermost is the safety of the nation itself. The necessity is now upon us for the sake of our freedom and future welfare, and for

Best Booster for U. S. Boys' Working Reserve Boys' Farm Camps for Reserve Force

A Hero of the Harvest of 1917

News Item—Each City Boy Who Works Three Weeks on a Farm Is Given a Medal

—Courtesy Western Newspaper Union.

The attractiveness of service with the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve receives a picturesque treatment in the clever letter sent recently by Robert C. Chenoweth to C. B. Fritsche, Assistant Federal State Director of the Boys' Reserve. Young Chenoweth is eighteen years of age and was graduated from Shortridge High School last June. He enters Purdue University this fall as a freshman to take a course in mechanical engineering. He wrote as follows:

"1713 Talbott Avenue,
Indianapolis, Ind., September 12, 1917.

"Mr. C. B. Fritsche, Assistant Federal State Director, U. S. Boys' Working Reserve:

"Dear Sir—I wish to thank you for the medal I have received which was given as a reward for what I consider a fine summer's outing. I spent this summer in one of the farmers' service camps, overseen by a very competent as well as a companionable counselor, Mr. Hamaker.

"We worked for the farmers in the neighborhood and ate our noon country dinner with them. No person, but one who has been on a farm, catered to with country hospitalities, can ever realize those wonderful dinners we had. After the night a party of boys would go down to the "Old Swimming Hole," where we had a spring-board and boat. As I look back on this summer I feel that it has been not only pleasant and profitable to me, but that I have done a bit for my country.

"Thanking you again, I am,

"Yours truly,

"ROBERT C. CHENOWETH."

Richard Rathsmann, aged sixteen, of Columbus, has gained the distinction of being the first boy in Bartholomew county to receive the federal award of the Working Reserve. ## Urges Wood Fuel as Coal Substitute

Wisconsin State Council of Defense Gives Timely Bit of Advice on Fuel Situation.

The Wisconsin State Council of Defense has published an important bulletin on the fuel situation in which is discussed the serious shortage of coal and the drastic measures which must be taken to prevent extreme hardship. The bulletin states that much suffering may be avoided if everyone who can do so will lay in a supply of wood. "Thousands of farmers," continues the bulletin, "can secure their winter fuel from timber on their own land. Many families in villages and rural communities can purchase wood close by at a nominal figure. Instead of waiting in uncertainty for coal, shoulder an ax and a saw, go into your timber patch and cut wood."

That this advice is well worth heeding is evident. As a nation we have been somewhat inclined to neglect wood as an accessible fuel. The French, on the contrary, have utilized every available piece of wood and have virtually established the collecting of fagots as a regular industry. This matter of cutting and gathering wood should appeal to the members of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve.

ROBERT C. CHENOWETH.

day's work we came back to the camp for supper. The sun was just going down, usually, and when we had finished we would sit out in the afterglow and swap lies about "how hard I had to work today." Most of the farmers took a liking to individual fellows and took pleasure in seeing that they had worked and were treated well. In fact, every boy in camp had one farmer who would rather take him than another. Almost every ## Movement Expected to Benefit Farmers as Well as Workers for All Time to Come.

Of notable import is the announcement concerning a conference held recently at the Yale Club, New York City, under the auspices of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, for the purpose of discussing boys' farm camps. At this conference matters vital to the maintenance, organization and management of farm camps was discussed. Probably the most important decision reached was that Intensive Farm Training Camps in the various States offer the most practical and effective means for training city boys to go on the farm and satisfy the labor shortage there. As a result a committee was named to be known as the National Committee on Intensive Farm Training Camps for Boys, for the purpose of promoting the training camp idea throughout the United States and to study the best methods of enlisting financial aid, and securing appropriations for establishing such camps.

CLASSIFICATION OF TRAINING CAMPS.

After the discussion, the following classification of camps was adopted:

1. Farm Training Camp—A camp used primarily to give a short but intensive course of training in the rudiments of farm activities to make an inexperienced boy of practical use to the farmer.

2. Farm Supply Camp—A camp located in the midst of a number of farms for the purpose of giving the boys a place to live, and from which they are distributed to the surrounding farms on which they work for wages paid by the farmer.

3. Co-operative Farm Camp—A camp located on one farm, or a number of farms, on which the boys of the camp work for profits to be divided among them.

4. Military Farm Camp—A camp which is farmed co-operatively by the boys, and at which regular military training is given, in addition to the farm work. One of the particular classifications of the Farm Supply Camp is the "flying squadron" camp, where a group of boys is moved from place to place to assist at the peak of the load in harvesting crops.

Dr. David Sneed, Columbia University, State director of the Boys' Working Reserve for New York, pointed out the urgent need for farm camps and emphasized the importance of aiding the farmer. "It is a business problem of a difficult sort," he said, "and must be treated as such. Return must be made to the boys. We cannot ask them to donate their services. Farm work in itself is physical training of the best sort, and four or five months of such work during the summer is of the greatest benefit to the city boy. Another value of the farm work is the general or broad experience it gives."

MOVEMENT MORE SIGNIFICANT.

John E. Milholland aptly voiced the situation in his remarks. "There is something deeper in this movement than many people realize," he said. We have either got to turn the tide that has been going away from the farmer for twenty-five years or make up our minds that agriculture is going to be in a bad way, and this regardless of the war. It is a question of economic development which we have to meet, whether the war ends this year or ten years hence. Seventeen per cent. of our farm hands went away last year. The percentage has been increasing each year. The problem has become a very serious matter. It is not the future—it is now." He pointed out that the great source of supply is the boy, "the waste boy, the boy hanging around the corner with a cigarette in his hand." He added also—and parents should be interested in this statement—that even those boys who are ordinarily looked upon as worthless can be made into good, capable farm workers.

Walter R. Jones, in charge of Camp Prospect, said: "We want the boys. We are tired of hobo labor."

Many other important topics were discussed and

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—Mrs. A. D. Artman is in charge of the signing of Hoover cards for Adams county.

Bartholomew County.—Jesse Newsom of Columbus has assigned the Four-Minute Men, John Rynerson and Julian Sharpnack, to local moving picture theaters. The speeches have been arranged in serial form, following each other until the general topic under discussion has been thoroughly covered. The general subject is international law. Sub-titles to be discussed will be the President's message and annotations by authorities on the legal phases of the message; history of international law; the German violations of international law, etc. The speakers will probably be heard at Crump's theater and the Crystal every night until the subject is exhausted. Other speakers will be assigned later and Mr. Newsom plans to keep the short talks going for some time to come.

The Hawcreek Community Association plan of community feed buying was adopted by a meeting of Bartholomew county dairymen at Columbus. Fred Suhre, secretary of the local organization, and a successful dairyman, was appointed purchasing agent. The dairymen say the high cost of feed has practically wiped out their profits, at prevailing prices.

Boone County.—The County Council of Defense has publicly commended Sheriff D. N. Lewis for his prompt action in suppressing a so-called socialistic meeting, the patriotism of which was of a highly doubtful character.

The county council appropriated $750 for the use of the Boone County Council of Defense. Of this amount it is stipulated $250 is to be used to provide comfort kits for the local young men who have joined the army.

Dekalb County.—An appropriation of $100 was made by the Dekalb county council for the use of the County Council of Defense. This, it is expected, will greatly assist the members of the Council of Defense to prosecute their work. The members get nothing in the way of salary and they all pay their own expenses. The fund will supply stamps, printing, rent, etc.

Howard County.—John B. Joyce, chairman of the Four-Minute Men in Kokomo, has named the following additional members of the local organization: W. R. Voorhis, J. C. Herron, F. J. Byers, Lloyd McClure and Dr. E. M. Landon. Beginning this week these speakers were assigned to the six moving picture theaters of Kokomo, making short talks on why we are at war with Germany and the proper methods of organizing to win.

Huntington County.—The Huntington Council of Defense, Peter Martin, chairman, is following suggestions of the State Council and is getting results. J. Q. Cline has been appointed chairman of the committee on public morals.

Jefferson County.—Captain Horace O. Woolford has resigned as chairman of the Jefferson County Council of Defense and William E. Ogden has been named by Judge Francis M. Griffith to succeed him. Captain Woolford found himself unable to give the required time to the work. He is now at Ft. Benjamin Harrison in charge of a company of infantry.

Knox County.—An appropriation of $1,500 has been made by the Knox county council, for the use of the County Council of Defense. There was no debate on the question, the council being unanimously back of the defense board in all its activities relative to preparing for the war.

Lake County.—Needless use of gasoline for pleasure purposes and a community food storehouse were questions considered by the Lake County Council of Defense, which met in the office of Judge McMahon with the following members present: Captain Norton, Judge Wildermuth of Gary; Peter W. Meyn of Hammond; J. B. Peterson, Mrs. J. Ward Wheeler and S. J. Craig of Crown Point. Several bulletins were read, one pertaining to the floating of a second Liberty Loan bond, and asking the local defense board to appoint a committee to assist the chairman which the banks appoint. This matter was deferred until the next meeting, as the loan is not to be floated until the first part of October.

Fred Ruf, Marshal Thomas Platt and Mayor Krost were appointed by the board to serve as a warehouse committee in Crown Point to see to the storing of food which the farmers are to be asked to donate for the use of the poor during the winter season. A suitable storeroom is to be provided for this purpose.

Miss Jennie Ward Wheeler stated that the service cards to be used in connection with the Women's Service League had arrived and would be put in the hands of those in charge in each of the cities and towns in the county.

Dr. William G. Seaman of Gary was appointed as chairman of the committee on moral, religious and social forces for the county.

The matter of books for the soldiers, both in training and in the field, was discussed and Judge Wildermuth stated that the American Library Association had taken up this work and each State is to donate a certain amount for their establishment and upkeep. Louis J. Bailey of Gary has been appointed to look after the work in Indiana and also to serve on the National Committee.

The next meeting of the council will be held the first Monday in October.

Marion County.—Henry Lane Wilson, former United States ambassador to Mexico, was elected president, Samuel M. Ralston, former Governor and Charles E. Cox, vice-presidents, and Thomas A. Wynne, treasurer of the Patriotic League, organized here September 15. The purpose of the organization, which includes representative business and professional men, follows:

"This organization is formed for purely patriotic purposes; to encourage and stimulate an intelligent support of the government now engaged in war; for the protection of American rights and institutions; to provide methods for striking at open or masked disloyalty; to aid the State and National governments in their policy of achieving a full measure of National efficiency."

Marshall County.—A. R. Cline, finding that business interests prevented his giving sufficient time to the duties incumbent upon the president of the council, tendered his resignation and was succeeded by L. G. Harley of Plymouth.

Much work is ahead of the County Council of Defense. The organization of a home guard will be advanced rapidly by A. E. Towne of Argos, who has volunteered to act as captain and promote the interests of the organization.

Mrs. E. N. Cook, secretary, is devoting a great deal of time and energy to the interests of the county council.

Miami County.—The County Council of Defense has given its endorsement and support of a mammoth farewell reception for the soldiers of this community September 20. A parade will be followed by an appropriate speaking program at Peru.

Montgomery County.—B. B. Engle of Crawfordsville, chairman of the second Liberty Loan drive, has named the following assistants:

For Darlington, W. A. Burgin; Linden, J. E. Hopewell; New Richmond, William Kirkpatrick; Wingate, John McCorkle; Waynetown, V. E. Livengood; New Market, J. A. Armantrout; Waveland, Charles Johnson; Browns Valley, C. H. Neler; Ladoga, Ira Foster; New Ross, Jesse Morrison; Lunsburg, Charles Linn; Kirkpatrick, Harry M. Wright.

Owen County.—James Robinson has resigned as director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve of Owen county, and Ira Vonderhyde of Princeton has been appointed by the County Council of Defense to succeed him.

Perry County.—The Committee on Morals, Religious and Social Forces of the Perry County Council of Defense will be organized at once by the Rev. Edwin Shake, who has accepted the chairmanship.

Switzerland County.—Under the heading "Our Bit," the Vevay Enterprise makes the following patriotic announcement:

"The Enterprise is desirous of being of some service during the war with Germany—so, commencing immediately, the Enterprise will be free to each and every Switzerland county soldier so long as the present war lasts."

Tippecanoe County.—Tippecanoe County Council of Defense has appointed W. S. Kepner to investigate all calls for the solicitation of war funds, and to investigate their worth. In order to bring about more hearty co-operation between the people of the county and the Council of Defense arrangements are being made for a dinner at the Fowler hotel to which will be invited the active men and women of the town, each one to pay his own expense. Will H. Hays, chairman of the State Council of Defense, will be the principal speaker at the dinner.

Vanderburgh County.—The Four-Minute Men, headed by Rabbi M. J. Merritt, Rev. John Kennedy and John J. Nolan, are making nightly talks in the moving picture theaters of Evansville. The Vanderburgh county council is meeting with encouraging response in its advocacy of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, the conservation of gasoline, food conservation and other patriotic activities.

Vigo County.—Professor F. S. Bogardus, of the Indiana State Normal, has been highly praised for interesting talks that he has been giving recently on war subjects.

Warrick County.—U. W. Youngblood has been appointed chairman of the Four-Minute Men for Warrick county.

Alabama Market Bureau a Success

Birmingham, Ala., has a food branch bureau which puts farmers and buyers in touch with each other. Farmers send in a list of products that they have for sale and these are published in bulletin form for distribution to produce buyers. Committees of business men have visited seventy-five towns in northern and central Alabama, conferring with merchants and bankers and organizing outlets for farm products. This work is as much needed by the produce houses as by the farmers themselves, for one of the largest grain dealers in Birmingham, who buys several hundred thousand dollars' worth of corn yearly, says that until the bureau was started he was unable to buy Alabama corn properly graded for market.—Official Bulletin.

Second Campaign to Enroll Women

Pledge Card System of Enlisting Housewives to Begin on October 14.

The Council of National Defense has sent a letter to the several State Councils of Defense reading in part as follows:

The Food Administrator has directed his Federal Food Commissioners in the States to begin, on October 14, 1917, a second campaign for the enrollment of women for food conservation through the pledge-card system. This new campaign will continue intensively for a week. Its purpose will be to supplement the earlier campaign for the enrollment of women, which was undertaken by the State Councils of Defense, working primarily through State divisions of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, and which was terminated on September 5. The first campaign was as successful as the circumstances allowed, but a large number of women were not touched thereby. It is important that these women shall be pledged; therefore the "clean-up" campaign will be undertaken by the Federal Food Commissioners on October 14.

NEW MANAGEMENT FOR CAMPAIGN.

Although supplementary to what has already been done, this "clean-up" campaign will be new, in point of management. Since the first campaign was inaugurated Congress has enacted the law establishing the food administration, and Federal Food Commissioners have been appointed (or will shortly be appointed) in all the States. The Food Administrator has placed the direction of the new food-pledge campaign in the hands of his agents, these food commissioners.

These reports show that in the earlier campaign the State divisions of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense (acting for the State Councils of Defense) usually carried the brunt of the work. The Food Administrator, accordingly, has instructed the food commissioners to enlist, in particular, the co-operation of the State woman's divisions.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, chairman of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, in outlining to the State chairmen the plans for the second food pledge campaign, says:

PLAN FOR STATE WORK.

"The plan of the Food Administration in pushing this intensive 'clean-up' campaign is that the State food administrator shall appoint a State executive committee and that the chairman of the woman's division of the food conservation department shall be a member of this committee. Or, if there is no chairman of the food conservation department of the woman's division in any State, the State food administrator shall consult with the chairman of the woman's division in making his appointments for the executive committee in order that the woman's committee may be represented."

The entire question of organization in each State for this campaign is placed entirely under the Food Administrator. This relieves the State division of much labor, as from the executive committee appointed by the Food Administrator instructions will be given in regard to the method of procedure in securing signatures for the cards.

SOLICITS CONTINUED SUPPORT.

Recognizing the splendid co-operation and service of the woman's committee in the last campaign, encumbered as it was with so many difficulties and obstacles, the Food Administrator solicits the continued support of the woman's committee as necessary to the largest success of the new intensive drive.

It is earnestly desired by the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense that every possible help which the State divisions can render the Food Administration will be given to the end that it will be so perfectly done that no further campaign of like character will be necessary.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Editorial Comment

OUR MATERIAL PROGRESS.

Just how war helps a nation's material as well as spiritual progress may be discerned these days by the alert observer of national affairs. Everyone worth while is doing something worth while. And everyone who is doing something feels a certain surprise and reassurance at finding himself more active, more efficient, than he has ever been before. Before the war broke out we were accustomed to regard ourselves as a very active nation, justly proud of our accomplishments and in position consistently to rest on our laurels. Our inventions were of the first order; our scientific research, scholarly and momentous; our industries, of the highest standard. Efficiency was the word we prized the most and which we regarded most applicable to our own particular achievements.

But the war has changed things. We have learned with a considerable shock that we have not been as efficient as we thought we were and that our before-the-war standards were not so remarkable as we thought. This change of mind has come about through the general readjustment the war has necessitated. Our allies demanded food, and when we looked around we found that we had not as much food on hand as we should have and could get. We started, straightway, a gardening campaign and as a result produced a food supply, increased beyond all precedent.

Incidentally, we discovered that even the food we had on hand was not properly protected and so we started crusades for fire protection. We had been shamefully extravagant, but the food experts are now showing us how properly to use and cook food. As a result we are learning while we are saving. The same facts are true of our inventions and scientific work. When we were without potash necessity forced us to find out how to get it by means of the laboratory. And we are not done yet. Only the central government knows now what American inventive genius is doing, but we hope before long that all civilization will witness our inventions crush the enemy.

We may have been capable before, but the war has increased our efficiency a thousandfold. We are a thrifty people now; we are a busy people. Our housewives regard their work as a business. Our girls have given up social frivolities to knit for our fighters. Our boys are enrolled in the Working Reserve. We are growing—economically, spiritually and patriotically. And we have just started.

YOU WILL KNOW HIM WHEN YOU SEE HIM.

He takes no interest in the war, except to smile, diabolically, when he reads of U-boat atrocities.

He gets his information on all war and political matters from an alleged weekly newspaper published in the German language.

He "strafes," in blasphemy, England and France, with no reservations because they are the allies of the United States in this war on Germany.

He declares the draft is unconstitutional; the war is unjust; that America is being used simply as the cat's-paw of a lot of bankrupt European nations which were ready to surrender to Germany.

He sneers at the mention of democracy, laughs when international law is mentioned, and quits you in disgust if you refer to Mexican intrigue or the Swedish diplomatic abortion.

He made no effort toward increased production of foodstuffs, he advises his neighbors against signing anything "the government will use against you;" he denies his wife and his daughter the privilege of enrolling in any patriotic activity; his son doesn't join the service.

He buys no Liberty bonds; excuses his refusal to contribute to the Red Cross by the statement that he always looked after his own and others should do the same; he has no interest in the comfort of those leaving for army service or the success of those who would serve as substitutes when the regulars are gone.

He justifies the rape of Belgium as a "military necessity."

He believes in the doctrine of "every fellow for himself" on the high seas, the international highways.

He cannot regard the murder of women and children on unarmed merchant ships as a crime.

He considers the deportation of peaceful civilians and their enforced slavery by a conquering tyrant as a natural consequence of war.

He calls this "a free country where a man may do as he pleases" and then protests against the increasing cost of living, the high tax rate and the federal appropriation of money for the successful prosecution of the war.

He is the type of fellow who considers the side with the largest army, the strongest navy, as always right.

He is of the sort who have no compunction about betraying the secrets of any government under which he lives and to which he may have sworn allegiance falsely.

He is of the kind who at the direction of professional spies spreads poison in material form for the purpose of killing live stock, and in the guise of information for the purpose of paralyzing true patriotism.

He is of the brand once known as a hyphenate, who retains no allegiance to the American government for the reason that he never felt any allegiance. The "German" of the hyphenate always did and always will come first.

In short, he is the species that is undesirable. He is a traitor. He will find no welcome in Germany after the war—such spies are never honored even in their own country. A fraud is always a fraud, and in this instance the counterfeit is the kind of fraud that deserves no consideration at the hands of honest men anywhere.

Spot the pro-German. He is a more dangerous enemy than the monsters in uniforms who made of fair Belgium the greatest sacrifice, the most revolting outrage a civilized world has ever been forced to tolerate.

There must be no "German-Americans" on this side of the Atlantic.

FOOD WILL DECIDE THE ISSUE.

Though food, rather than ammunition, is to decide the outcome of the present war, most of the men of the fighting world are not able to pay any attention to food. The men of England, Scotland, Ireland, Italy, Serbia and Belgium—our allies—are at the front, and their farms at home are meanwhile being neglected. As a result, the food production in these countries has been reduced to a dangerous degree. Even before the war the production of food was less than the amount required and the shortage had to be supplied by America. Now this shortage is greater than ever and, at the same time, the responsibility of America has been made more serious than ever, because the allies are placing such great dependence on her.

We must send these nations the food that they have to have. To do so will be a tremendous task, but we will send it nevertheless. There is, however, only one way to accomplish this intention: Every one of us must use food wisely and loyally. We must be economical. We must eliminate waste. We must stimulate food production and organize the handling of food. We must substitute, as largely as possible, other foods for wheat, beef, pork, dairy products and sugar. We must reduce consumption wherever possible.

To accomplish these things is the problem of the United States Food Administration. Yet the actual accomplishment is an individual matter, resting with each and every citizen. It is voluntary, a willing service, actuated by patriotism. The Food Administration has asked, therefore, that everyone join its work and sign membership cards as soon as possible. Each person who signs one of the pledge cards will be given immediately a kitchen "War Creed" wall card setting forth the ideas of the Food Administration for saving; a 64-page book entitled "Ten Lessons in Food Conservation," and a three-colored window card to be hung in the front window to show that the home is a member of the Food Administration. It is just as patriotic to have a food card in your window as it is to have a flag flying there. In order that everyone may have a chance to become a member of the Food Administration, the closing date for the pledge card campaign has been postponed to October. Every woman in Indiana should join the Food Administration before that date.

SECOND LIBERTY LOAN.

Are you saving your money to invest in the second issue of the Liberty Loan? It's coming, October 1, according to an announcement from the office of the Secretary of the Treasury. Experience has proved that a man or woman becomes a better citizen on becoming the owner of a Liberty Bond. For that reason an effort is to be made to get every person who can possibly do so to make this "vote of confidence" in the government and in the boys who go.

Experience of other nations also proves that those communities which take the largest investment in the securities of their country in the long run become the prosperous communities of the nation. The purchase of government bonds stimulates economy and thrift. The man who is responsible for his country's taking a large share of bonds is doing a service both to his nation and to his fellow citizens.

The attention of the State Council of Defense has been called to a publication known as Vireck's "The American Monthly," which appears, so patently, to be a disguised pro-German publication that the council has forwarded a copy to the federal government for investigation. The magazine prints articles on military affairs, events at Washington and on the war. It discusses matters from an angle that cannot possibly be construed to be disinterestedly patriotic. It presumes even to cavil at the work of the Red Cross. The magazine is so blatantly pro-German that it surely must die of its own insidious poison.

The Kettner cartoon, boosting the United States Boys' Working Reserve, is but a sample of the patriotic work being done, voluntarily and gratuitously, by these publicists. Kettner has been one of the most effective of the patriotic artists, both in ideas and their execution. The Indiana Bulletin acknowledges an obligation to the Western Newspaper Union for the use of this cartoon, which is expected to have a far-reaching favorable effect in the organization of the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

Council's Sheep Club

At the suggestion of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense, a Defense Sheep club has been organized for that county. The organizing committee includes Otis Crane, county agent; Professor Z. M. Smith, of the Purdue experiment station; C. M. Hickman, representing the banking interests which will finance the plan; Jesse C. Andrew and J. O. Beck.

Thirty-nine head of registered Shropshire yearling ewes have been secured. There are thirteen townships in the county and each township trustee has been invited to nominate one boy in his township for membership in the club. The rules of the club have been worked out by the Purdue experiment station. The boys will pay for the ewes at the rate of $27 per head, either in cash or by a twelve-month note bearing 6 per cent. interest.

Matters Before Defense Council

Bittner on Food Committee; Smith Chosen to Promote U. S. Boys' Reserve.

Announcement of the appointment of Professor W. S. Bittner of the department of economics, Indiana University, to the new food committee of the State Council of Defense, succeeding Dr. Frank Stockton, who resigned recently because of leaving the State, was made at the regular meeting of the State Council, September 19. The special committee appointed to reorganize the council's activities on the food question, nominated Mr. Bittner and his election was ratified by unanimous vote of the council.

On motion of Charles Fox the resolutions previously adopted by the council, recommending to the war department the exemption of dental students from conscription for the national army, and the placing of dental students on the same footing as medical students in reference to their eligibility to commissions in the Reserve corps, will be sent to Councils of Defense of other States for their consideration.

PLEA FROM DAIRY FARMERS.

A plea from dairy farmers of the State that their herds are in danger of extermination because of the high price of beef cattle and the scarcity of feed was received by the council and referred to the food committee. The special committee on food production and conservation will endeavor to work out a plan of co-operation that will accomplish the end desired by the dairymen.

The need of instruction among educators, as well as high school students on the significance and purposes of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, was pointed out by Isaac D. Straus, federal State director of the reserve. On Mr. Straus' motion the council employed Asa Smith of Wabash, Ind., to spend two months in the high schools of cities of 10,000 or more population, explaining the reserve and enlisting sympathetic support. Mr. Smith, it was stated, has made a special study of the reserve and his efforts will be supplemental to the instructions to be conveyed by the special text-book that will be introduced as a part of the course of study in Indiana high schools this winter.

Professor G. I. Christie of the committee on food production and conservation reported that the United States Department of Agriculture had authorized the employment of fifteen men for a period of eight weeks, in a campaign to locate and secure Indiana's share of the 10,000,000 bushels of seed corn wanted for the 1918 crop. This and the better live-stock contests being conducted over the State are just now occupying the major part of this committee's attention.

TO EDUCATE HOUSEWIVES.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Indiana food commissioner under National Administrator Herbert Hoover, spoke on the enrollment of women and emphasized the importance of a campaign of education that will bring to the women of the State the understanding that the economies urged by Mr. Hoover were not intended for the individual and personal benefit of the women addressed, but in order that there may be accumulated a surplus of staples that may be shipped to our armies and our allies abroad.

J. L. Keach stated that dealers in high perishable foodstuffs had reported that the Hoover campaign already had resulted in a greater consumption of this class of edibles than ever recorded heretofore.

James Edward Rogers of the War Department Recreational Bureau, assigned to training camps, stated the purpose of the proposed "foster mother for the soldiers" movement, which would take to the men abroad news from home, magazines and in other ways maintain a personal touch. The matter was referred to a committee for further consideration. The plan contemplates the assignment of enrolled women from a given locality to the task of keeping up correspondence with the soldiers from the same community.

GUARDING AGAINST FIRE.

The importance of maintaining strict watch against unnecessary fire risks is being urged upon the county councils. Grain elevators, storage houses, warehouses and other sources of civilian and military supply in particular should be watched in order that there be the greatest possible measure of conservation.

H. R. Kurrie reported that any plan contemplating the conservation of railroad cross ties for domestic fuel was of doubtful wisdom, because of the poor fuel quality of the ties and their inaccessibility to possible consumers.

Mr. Kurrie reported that the reported use of open top cars for the transportation of merchandise, which cars might assist in staving off a coal stringency, was being investigated and a report would be made later.

At the suggestion of Charles Fox a committee consisting of Mr. Fox and Will J. Freeman will investigate the alleged discrimination of railroads between their own mines and mines supplying the public with coal in the distribution of coal cars. Mr. Fox reported that one mine near Terre Haute was receiving cars in plenty six days a week, while another mine, within a stone's throw could secure cars only three days a week.

Chairman Hays stated that Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle, head of the committee on women's activities, had just returned from Washington, where, with a representative of the Council of National Defense, a comprehensive plan for organizing the women of the States was tentatively worked out, and that Mrs. Carlisle would be ready to make a report to the council soon.

Boys' Farm Camps

For Reserve Force

plans suggested in regard to the transportation of boys, food, hours of work, compensation, instruction, location of camp movements and the revolving of funds. The matter of recreation was given serious attention. Reports from the various camp leaders showed that the forms of amusing the boys during their idle hours varied widely. Emphasis was laid on the fact, also, that these boys who are performing a patriotic service, not for any one city or State, but for the country as a whole, should be well rewarded for their efforts and should be treated honorably by the people of the neighborhoods in which they are working. Incidents were cited where the boys had contributed to the social life of the various communities in which they worked. The success of the movement is being demonstrated rapidly. Before long everyone will have to be conscious of the value of the Boys' Working Reserve, for it will be a vital force in national life. Already farmers' organizations are passing resolutions expressing the hope that the work of the boys be continued.

ADVANTAGES FROM BOYS' CAMPS.

The following advantages associated with the camps deserve serious consideration:

The camp provides definite instruction.

It provides physical training and examination. It develops spirit and discipline.

It increases the farmer's respect for the city boy and also the city boy's respect for farming.

It results in a better boy morally and physically, and a boy filled with the desire to serve the nation.

Labor for the farms is to be mobilized in the various States through regular training camps of the sort discussed at the New York conference. They will be established under the approval of the federal government. Plans for these camps have been worked out by the Council of National Defense and have the hearty endorsement of President Wilson and his cabinet. These training camps, with courses along intensive lines, are expected to fit city boys for farm work. The outcome will undoubtedly be the equipment of thousands of youths along technical lines for work on farms where a serious shortage exists. As an evidence that the farmers' prejudice against the city boy is disappearing, officials today exhibited numerous letters from western grange owners asking for the establishment of more boys' camps.

No American is against the war. If anybody opposes it that opposition is sufficient proof of that person's un-Americanism.—Chicago Daily News.

Other Fraternities Pledge Their Help

State Council Receives Assurances of Support from Various Sources.

Though many members of fraternal orders were not able to be present to pledge their support personally to the State Council of Defense at the recent organization meeting, letters from prominent members testify a patriotic willingness to serve as occasion may demand. The following quotations from volunteers are significant:

"It affords me pleasure to advise that all Masons are interested in any movement tending to a betterment of conditions or affording an opportunity to exercise loyalty. If I can be of service to you I shall be most pleased to have you call on me. If the Council of Masons of this State are in a position to render any sort of assistance I am sure you may call on us."—Edgar H. Bristol, Salem, Ind.

Aaron Wolfson, of the Jovians, writes: "Am obliged to go East and cannot attend the meeting. At your service always, however."

Mrs. Emma Wiltse, counselor of the State Council of Indiana Sons and Daughters of Liberty, says: "I shall visit some of the councils in the very near future, and if I can in any way be of service to the State Council of Defense, I will be glad to do so."

"I want to pledge for those I represent a cordial and hearty support to the Nation in this crisis, as well as to all patriotic forces engaged in helping to bring autocracy to its knees. When there is anything I can do to help the cause, just say the word."—Norman E. Patrick of the Catholic Knights of America, in Indiana.

"You can rest assured," writes William Geake, deputy of the Supreme Order of the Northern Scottish Rite Masonic Jurisdiction of the U. S. A., "of my hearty co-operation and also that of the organization which I have the honor to represent."

M. A. Mahurin of Fort Wayne telegraphed: "As potentate of Mizpah Temple, representing twelve hundred members, we are in sympathy with the movement and will co-operate in the work."

"The Hibernians of Indiana want to assist you in every way they possibly can."—James E. Deery, State President Ancient Order of Hibernians.

"I am ready to assist you and the State Council and would like to hear from you again."—Calvin H. Ramsey, M. E. Grand High Priest, Royal Arch Masons.

Herbert Hoover's Idea.

A democracy is founded on the free play of individual initiative. That is fundamental to the development of the democracy itself. So long as the individual chooses to do what is right for the community he must have freedom of action, otherwise you do not get the intrinsic development of people on which we found our faith. All individuals must help—and they will, when the years have passed, have helped to demonstrate that democracy is sufficient of itself, and that the failure of democracy has always been to defend itself.

What is Really Needed.

The State Council of Defense urges on the County Councils the necessity of speaking campaigns to educate the people on the issues of the war. There are certainly many people who have very hazy ideas, and a few concise speeches would be helpful. We don't need oratory, but plain presentation of facts.—Waveland Independent.

Secretaries Will Provide Comfort

Fund for Departing Soldiers to be Raised by Counties at Rate of $2 per Man.

After an inquiry into the feasibility of the plan and the attitude of the War Department and army officials relative to it, the finance committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense recommended the endorsement of a proposal of John E. Northway, president of the Indiana Commercial Secretaries' Association, to provide a "comfort fund" for the soldiers who are leaving the State. The council by unanimous vote approved the report of the committee and authorized Mr. Northway and his organization to proceed with the execution of the plan, with the co-operation of the State Council through the County Councils of Defense in the State.

Mr. Northway's communication to the State Council, which sets forth the plan, follows in part: "At the meeting of the Indiana Commercial Secretaries' Association, held in Indianapolis last week, the matter of providing so-called 'comfort funds,' 'company funds' or 'mess funds' for the Indiana units of the new national army was discussed and by action of the meeting the following plan is suggested to the State Council of Defense for its consideration and with an urgent request from the Indiana Commercial Secretaries' Association that it be carried out at once by the State Council of Defense:

"The members of the national army are being taken from their homes, occupations and businesses to serve our country in the same war and in the same way as the members of our Indiana National Guard. But they go to the training cantonments in a disorganized way and, after being properly placed in the units in which they are to serve, they are not in 'home companies' or in any way so organized that a community can raise a sum of money to be used for the comforts of its own soldiers.

"After much consideration of the subject our plan is this:

1. That each county raise a sum of at least two dollars for each man they are furnishing in their first call under the selective conscription law.
2. That this fund be raised under the direction of the County Council of Defense, or some person or persons, organization or society to be appointed by the County Council of Defense.
3. That the funds all be raised before October 1 and that they be forwarded to the State Council of Defense by the person or organization raising them.
4. That the State Council of Defense turn them over to the commanding officer of the Indiana division of the national army, who will see that the money is divided equally between the various companies.

"Through this plan each company of 150 men would have a 'comfort fund' of three hundred dollars and each company or unit of the entire division would receive its proportionate amount. Every Indiana member of the national army would be provided for and there would be no heavy burden on any community to do it.

"To carry this plan out the Indiana Commercial Secretaries' Association will give the State Council of Defense all possible assistance and co-operation and the various members of our association will lend our best efforts toward enlisting our own local organizations in getting back of the movement in our home counties and wherever it is found to be practicable and advisable our organizations will undertake the raising of the funds in the various counties we represent. We shall furnish you promptly a list of the commercial organizations affiliated with our association promptly on your request.

"To illustrate the plan in operation: The State Council of Defense writes the Bartholomew County Council of Defense giving the plan in full and advising that the Columbus Chamber of Commerce is available to undertake to raise the Bartholomew county allotment. The Bartholomew County Council delegates the task to the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and it proceeds to raise from over the county, by the methods it decides upon as being most advisable, the sum of two hundred and eight dollars, this county having sent 104 men to the Louisville camp. Some time before October 1 the amount is sent to the State Council of Defense and Bartholomew county enjoys the satisfaction of knowing that she has done her part by her first quota for the national army.

"To carry the plan out successfully will require prompt action and we hope you will take the preliminary steps at your meeting this week and that as soon as possible the County Councils receive the information and advice that the campaign may be on all over the State at an early date."

Mr. Northway immediately called the committee of his organization together to formulate plans and the solicitation of the fund will begin as soon as the apportionment can be worked out by counties.

Red Cross Activities

The Union Township, Marshall County, Red Cross has shipped to the Fort Wayne headquarters 800 completed articles, all neatly arranged in bundles. The work was done under the direction of Mrs. Hunt. An interesting feature of the Culver exhibit was the quantity of children's garments intended for the little ones of the French districts that are being rehabilitated. There were many practical garments—sets of aprons and bloomers and some aprons with belts. From the pocket of every apron there peeped a pair of white stockings, the gift of Mrs. Lawrence Durburrow. The shipment represented the work of six organized units in Union township—three at the academy and three in the town of Culver.

Professor J. J. Pettijohn, head of the extension division of Indiana University, has been appointed director of the Red Cross Home Service Institutes for the State of Indiana. The appointment came from W. Frank Persons of Washington, D. C., director general of civil relief of the Red Cross, following a conference which Professor Pettijohn attended at the national capital.

Mrs. Earl Seales recently contributed an article to the Boonville Standard on the needs of the Warrick county Red Cross.

Mrs. J. D. Cone, accompanied by Mrs. George Whitcomb and Miss Claire Dixon of the North Vernon Red Cross, organized a sewing unit at Paris Crossing. Mrs. Cone also has been instrumental in organizing units at Selma and Hayden.

The Camden, Carroll county, Red Cross, newly established, is now doing active work. C. E. Baker has donated machines for the members, and the work is under the direction of Mrs. Arthur Ritchie, Mrs. Henry Croghan and Mrs. B. F. Wray.

The New Albany Red Cross Society gave an unusual entertainment at Glenwood park. All kinds of novelties were included in the program, and one particular country store stunt, under the direction of A. I. Buckman, took in $132. The Second Regiment Band was a feature of the entertainment.

Kokomo operates a successful Red Cross workshop that is open daily from 1 to 5 p. m.

The Synthetic Literary Society of Marion met recently with Mrs. Robert Dean, and spent the time in making surgical dressings, under the supervision of a Red Cross instructor. This is the month that the club should have started regular meetings, but the members decided that these dressings were more necessary. They voted, therefore patriotically, to put off their meetings for another month, and to continue their Red Cross work instead. Special work is being done also in Marion by classes under the direction of Mrs. Will Mitchell, Miss Sturdy and Mrs. George Webster. The Sans Souci Club has been sewing while Mrs. A. L. Butterworth will demonstrate make-over work before the Ladies' Aid Grace M. E. Society.

Miss Dorothy Mix of South Bend is in charge of a unique dance that is to be given for the benefit of the Red Cross. Moving pictures will be taken of the event, which is to be something new and novel.

At Newcastle the Red Cross needed a knitting machine and decided that it must have one in a hurry. It started, therefore, a penny collection and now the treasurer of the organization, Miss Harriet Goodwin, has $21.00 for the machine.

Attica, Ind., clubs are responding to war needs. Club and social activities promise to be somewhat less active during the coming season than in other years, owing to the large amount of work that is being devoted to the Red Cross. "The Kettle Drum Club" will limit its refreshments and elaborate refreshments to the Red Cross. The Monday Club, under the direction of Mrs. W. B. Reed, president, has arranged its program so that it may pay special attention to war matters. The Art History Club will devote part of the time, previously given to study, to knitting. The Hoosier Club met with Mrs. Will Woodhall and spent most of its time sewing for the Red Cross.

A. F. Bentley, director of the American Red Cross of Indiana, states that the Mishawaka chapter has a membership that is 20 per cent. in excess of its quota, based on population. Muncie, Indiana Harbor, Whiting, Rush county and Warrick county boast a similar excess.

Hope, Bartholomew county, women have taken up Red Cross knitting with much zeal. The class was organized by Mrs. Lina F. Thompson and Mrs. Laura D. Fix at the home of Mrs. B. F. Dudding. The second meeting was with Mrs. Jerry George and interest was so great that many were not able to secure instructions.

Arrangements have been made by the Wayne County Red Cross to maintain office hours at the headquarters in Richmond. The general supervision of headquarters has been organized and systematized in such a way that the work room will be open daily, except Saturday. The chapter has named the following committees:

Surgical Dressing Committee, Mrs. Olive Allison, chairman; Mrs. W. T. Spangler, Mrs. Frank Critchet and Mrs. E. E. McDivitt, with the following assistant supervisors: Monday, Mrs. Paul Comstock, Miss Scott, Mrs. S. R. Gaines.

Tuesday, Mrs. R. P. Wisler, Mrs. Harlan Mann, Mrs. B. F. Harris, Mrs. Ed. Schalk.

Wednesday, Mrs. Elbert Shirk, Mrs. Urban, Mrs. Nicholson.

Thursday, Mrs. Buck, Miss Starr, Miss M. Minck, Mrs. Charles Carter.

Friday, Mrs. Frank Critchet, Mrs. Caldwell, Mrs. Sadie Shaw.

Saturday, Mrs. Reynolds.

Knitting Committee, Mrs. John Clements, chairman; supervisors:

Monday, Mrs. Walter Dalbey, Miss Mary Clements.

Tuesday, Miss Anna Nicholson, Mrs. John Clements.

Wednesday, Miss Olive Ellison, Miss Martha Scott.

Thursday, Mrs. Clifford Piel, Mrs. Joseph Comer.

Friday, Mrs. Charles Land, Mrs. Milton Craighead.

Saturday, Mrs. S. E. Curtis.

Miss Anna Lough is chairman of the Hospital Garments Committee and is assisted by Mrs. Lee Nushbaum, Mrs. Demas Coe, Mrs. Will Morgan, Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Denny.

Mrs. Frank Critchet has charge of the comfort bag department.

The Red Cross chapter of Jefferson county cleared $28 from the sale of crosses and banners at the patriotic picnic at Neville's grove. Miss Mary Frances Hargan of the Madison schools is devoting one day each week to instructions in Red Cross sewing.

West Lebanon held recently a Red Cross home coming which included a pageant, "movies" and a patriotic display.

The West Lebanon Gazette conducts a regular Red Cross column. It printed recently a complimentary communication to the local Red Cross, written by C. J. Warrick.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 39.

September 13, 1917.

—Fallen Timber for Fuel—

To County Councils of Defense:

It has come to the attention of the State Council of Defense that there is really a consequential amount of fallen timber in Indiana useless for any other purpose except fuel; that much timber might be cut down with advantage to the forests, and of considerable fuel value, but worthless for anything else; that this fallen timber and such standing timber could be used in the fuel famine which is imminent in this State. It was the sense of the State Council that the matter could be taken up by the County Councils, and that there be instituted at once in each county a campaign in this regard; that those having woods might take such steps as would result in the use of this fallen timber and useless standing timber for fuel. We earnestly urge you to proceed at once to that end by the organization of special committees in each county as will result in the ascertaining of available supply and converting of it into wood and the use thereof for fuel.

It is further the idea of the council that the Boys' Working Reserve can be utilized in this work, and it is our purpose to get the State Board of Forestry still further interested in the matter. The whole plan originated with the State Board of Forestry and they are willing to co-operate to the fullest extent. We will appreciate your immediate attention to this matter.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Strange Attitude of Indiana Women

Set Forth by Mrs. Haseltine Dooley in Her Personal Canvass of Parke County.

Notwithstanding the difficulties encountered, the discouragements experienced, and the altogether unsatisfactory showing made in the enrollment of women, reports filed at the office of the National Food Director, in Washington, show Indiana to have been fifth in the list of States reporting. Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Ohio and Missouri alone surpassed Indiana in the number of patriotic women who signed the food cards and enrolled for such service as they are capable of rendering, in the event the government calls upon them.

The effort to educate the women of Indiana, through various avenues of publicity will continue in the hope that the second campaign for signatures will include a far greater proportion of the total female population. Food Commissioner Harry E. Barnard, who is the representative of National Food Administrator Herbert Hoover, believes that an intensive speaking and educational campaign is absolutely essential to a satisfactory showing.

Some idea of the difficulties experienced in the canvass for signatures of women may be gathered from the following excerpts from a report made by Mrs. Haseltine H. Dooley to the Parke County Council of Defense, probably a representative case:

"Unless one has undertaken to make a house to house canvass in a county like Parke, she can have no idea of the time and labor involved.

" * * * The Woman's League cards are rather complicated and formidable in appearance. I believe the work would have been lightened if the cards had been simplified. The majority of Parke county women are ready to be of service in any way they can; but these chairmen encountered many obstacles in the way of indifference, ignorance and in some instances actual hostility.

"The indifference is partly due to pure selfishness, which is an armor difficult to penetrate, and partly from not having studied the real conditions confronting us as a nation. Many women seem not to have the least conception that by refusing to co-operate heartily in every way with our Government, both State and National, that they are prolonging the war and contributing to the death roll of our own American boys, as well as those of our allies.

"The second class, the ignorant women—I mean ignorant as to the purposes of the various organizations formed to help in this titanic struggle—seem to suspect all sorts of ulterior motives in each plan proposed. They will not sign any sort of card lest it prove a sort of secret draft or inquiry. They think the Red Cross is a financial scheme on the part of the leaders, or a society stunt of some kind. Some more than suspect that the garments made by the sewing units never reach the army. One woman says she has seen a good many pictures of soldiers and she has never seen one with pajamas on. Some will have nothing to do with joining any league for service or conservation because they have no member of the family in the service, therefore it is nothing to them. Again, others refuse to help because they have someone in the army and therefore have done enough. (Oh, Stupidity! thy name is Woman.)

"Another class of women profess to be pacifists, opposed to all war, and therefore wrap their cloaks of self-righteousness about them and let it go at that. While I would not question their sincerity I think they fail to realize that sincerity, while an admirable virtue, can work untold harm when unaccompanied by practical common sense. Then scattered throughout the county in groups are what must be classed as a pro-German element. That there has been from some source a subtle dissemination of pro-German virus which has worked its malignant influence on the body politic is very apparent. Its effects are seen in a sentiment hostile to our Government and our allies. The small group of pro-German Senators seems to be the guides of this class.

"However, this canvass has revealed that while the great majority of our people are loyal and true, there is a great work to be done in this county in creating a solidarity of purpose and a spirit of militant patriotism which will help to bring the triumph of democratic principles and insure a lasting peace."

State Militia News

Boone County.—Ben Coombs has taken charge of the Boone county home guard organization, succeeding E. O. Rogers who recently joined the second officers' reserve training camp at Ft. Benjamin Harrison.

Clinton County.—H. E. Pavey, chairman of the Clinton Council of Defense Committee on Military Affairs, writes that a company of State militia has been formed at Frankfort and its services have been offered to the Governor.

Elkhart County.—The company at Elkhart is now completely organized, with Ira H. Church as Captain. Approximately 100 men are enrolled. The company has the use of the armory, which the State formerly provided for Company E, National Guard.

Grant County.—Grant county is busy preparing a home guard. George Lindsay has succeeded John O. Fryer as chairman of the committee on organization.

Jasper County.—Jasper county now has a militia company of fifty-eight enrolled men, five officers and fifty-five men. It is the intention to have an officers' school of instruction, and to secure the Rensselear armory, if possible.

Jefferson County.—A company of State militia has been organized here with the following officers: Captain, Robert F. Stanton; First Lieutenant, Leo Yunker; Second Lieutenant, William F. Johnson. The company meets once each week for drill.

Shelby County.—D. Wray DePrez is Captain of the Shelbyville militia. He has a company of sixty-two enlisted men and three officers.

Wayne County.—Three companies of volunteer State militia have been organized in this county by Frank Benn, chairman of the committee on military affairs of the Wayne County Council of Defense. In addition to the company at Richmond, Cambridge City and Hagerstown have each enlisted sufficient men to constitute separate companies. The Richmond company is in command of Captain Chester D. Weatherly, First Lieutenant, H. S. Maltby and Second Lieutenant Paul James.

The officers of the Cambridge City organization are: Captain, Dan Chapman; First Lieutenant, W. C. Squier; Second Lieutenant, N. Carlson. Hagerstown has enrolled a company of fifty men with the following officers: Captain, Charles R. Thornburg; First Lieutenant, L. M. Brannan; Second Lieutenant, R. O. Bailey.

What the Workers Find

"Many were disappointed in finding 'an enemy' had beat them to it. I was informed that men have been making a canvass of Stockton township and in Cass, Sullivan county, telling the women if they sign the cards a little later they will be made to go anywhere to work and their canned fruit will be taken from them and put on the market, as well as any other food supplies."

"If you will look in your Atlas for Jackson county, township of Washington, you can see one tip of the Kaiser's mustache curled up from Dudley town and the other tip at Sauers' Church, while the Crown Prince and the Empress look out through the eyes of every wooden-shoed lad and pig-tailed lady-chen that you meet on their way to the parochial school."

The above quotations are from reports received by the committee on enrollment of women of the Indiana Council of Defense. They indicate the seriousness of the situation that confronts the food administration in Indiana, and which emphasizes the importance of the campaign of patriotic education now in process of organization.

The Selective Service Law is Interpreted

The following rulings concerning the execution of the selective service law have been issued by the Provost Marshal-General:

When and whether there will be a second call is within the discretion of the President. There is no date set for a second call and, so far as is known, no second call is in present contemplation.

NO PERSON NOT IN QUOTA TO BE SENT WITH QUOTA.

A registrant whose order of liability is so late that he is not within the quota of a local board cannot, even on his own request, be advanced and sent with the quota.

MORE THAN ONE SELECTED MAN IN A SINGLE FAMILY.

The fact that more than one person is selected from a single family is not of itself ground for exemption or discharge.

CANNOT SEARCH FOR NAMES OF MISSING PERSONS.

Many requests are received at this office to go through the lists of persons registered in an effort to locate missing persons. The registration lists comprise 10,000,000 names segregated into 4,557 groups scattered in as many localities. It is manifestly impossible to comply with a request to search these lists for the names of missing persons, and no such attempt can be made in any case.

PRIOR SERVICE NO GROUND FOR EXEMPTION OR DISCHARGE.

Many registered men who have been selected for military service have applied for exemption or discharge on the ground that they have been discharged from the army, navy or marine corps sometimes for physical disqualification and sometimes merely upon expiration of enlistment. It seems scarcely necessary to say that prior service or discharge from the army, navy or marine corps is not ground for exemption or discharge from draft, and that such applications can receive no consideration.

ASSIGNMENT TO NON-MILITARY SERVICE.

The draft is for the purpose of increasing the military establishment. Registrants may in certain circumstances be exempted or discharged to enable them to continue in non-military pursuits, but after they are selected for military service they may not be assigned to non-military service.

NO SUBSTITUTES FOR DRAFTED MEN.

The selective service law specifically prohibits the acceptance of substitutes for men selected for military duty. The obligation is personal and cannot be transferred.

RESTRICTIONS ON DISCHARGE FOR DEPENDENCY.

Local boards have no power to grant discharges or hear claims for discharge by or in respect of a registrant when such claims are based upon the circumstance that persons not within the degree of relationship specified in the regulations are dependent upon the registrant's labor for support.

To Maintain Organization.

Because of the second drive upon the Hoover pledge in which the food administration has asked the co-operation of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, the committee is appealing to all those workers in the food campaign in the seventy-three national organizations under them to maintain their working force. A questionnaire intended to establish the amount of work accomplished and the methods used accompanies a vigorous letter to all the chairmen of the State divisions.

"It is our privilege and duty," says Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, "to uphold the Food Administrator in every helpful way by urging women everywhere to prove their oft-repeated claim that they are ready to serve their country whenever called upon, that we may do our part in bringing a speedy victory."

Acreage Needed to Make State's Share

Prof. Christie Indicates Each County's Share of Increased Production.

Professor G. I. Christie, director of production and conservation of the food committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense, has addressed the following communication to those interested:

"Indiana farmers have been asked by Secretary Houston, U. S. Department of Agriculture, and Mr. Hoover, National Food Administrator, to increase the wheat crop approximately 25 per cent. and the rye crop 35 per cent. To meet this request and secure the necessary acreage every county must plant a larger acreage this fall.

"George C. Bryant, State Field Agent, United States Bureau Crop Estimates, has co-operated with the State Food Committee in estimating the minimum acreage that will have to be planted in each county of the State in order to meet the total required by the United States government.

"You are urged to give this as much publicity as possible, since it will fix in the minds of your people just exactly what is required of them. You perhaps will not wish to publish the whole list, but the figures for your own county and those for adjoining counties will be comparative and of great value.

"We shall be glad to hear from you as to whether this acreage has been sown this fall. There is every evidence that a large crop is being planted in Indiana and we sincerely hope that you will leave nothing undone to make this the largest and best crop ever raised in the State."

Merchants' Economy

H. W. Eldredge, chairman of the district surrounding South Bend, has appointed B. F. Richardson of Warsaw, Joseph Dolezal of North Judson, Isaac Wile of Rochester and Conrad Ziesel of Elkhart as sub-chairmen to organize the merchants of their cities in the movement to reduce deliveries and return of merchandise. These gentlemen will report to Mr. Eldredge, who in turn will report to the merchants' economy committee of the State Council of Defense.

Lee Nusbaum of Richmond reports that he has the Richmond merchants in a fair way toward getting together in the reduction of deliveries and return of merchandise. Mr. Nusbaum will attempt to secure the co-operation of all merchants in the retail trade, including retail grocers of Richmond.

David Meyer of Anderson is organizing all of the retail merchants of Anderson and reports that he is having very good success, the majority of the merchants of that city having already agreed to co-operate with the movement and in every manner assist the State Council of Defense.

Word has been received from Hugh E. Mauzy, secretary of the Mauzy Company, Rushville, that the merchants of Henry, Rush and Decatur counties met September 11 at Newcastle, approved the rules concerning the return of merchandise adopted by the Council of National Defense and pledged the hearty support of all the merchants of the three counties named to back up the government and State in every way possible in the present crisis. The meeting was a very enthusiastic one.

Carl S. Wise, chairman of the district comprising Jasper, White, Cass, Miami, Wabash, Huntington and Howard counties, has just returned from the East and has taken up the matter of organizing the merchants of those counties in the elimination of the return of merchandise. Mr. Wise has the majority of the merchants at Logansport committed to the plan and will no doubt proceed to get the merchants in the counties named.

Advice has been received from J. C. O'Harra of the W. A. McNaughton Company, Muncie, and chairman of the district comprising Grant, Blackford, Jay, Delaware and Randolph counties, stating that the movement of eliminating the return of merchandise is well under way in his district. The McNaughton Company, with which he is connected, ran a page ad. in the Muncie Star of September 9, setting forth the stand of their company on this movement. This ad. certainly speaks much for the progressiveness of the McNaughton Company.

Evansville merchants are alive to the situation and are reducing the return and deliveries of merchandise, as shown by the large display ad. in the Evansville papers and signed by some thirty-five of the most representative stores. In addition to this they are enclosing in each package the printed rules and regulations as recommended by the National Council of Defense and the State Council of Defense.

A meeting of the merchants of Terre Haute and vicinity was held Thursday, September 13, at which action was taken regarding the return and delivery of merchandise. Mr. Milton E. Herz is chairman of the Terre Haute district, comprising several counties. The local merchants will co-operate with Mr. Herz through the Merchants' Association of Terre Haute.

METHOD IN WISCONSIN.

In a bulletin to the County Councils of Defense of Wisconsin the State Council of that commonwealth says:

"The Council of National Defense has just written us asking us to make clear to the counties these four points:

"1. That the public shall understand that the initiative comes from the Council of National Defense.

"2. That the purpose is to benefit the country as a whole and not any class or community.

"3. That all merchants in all lines of trades shall acquiesce in the recommendation of the Council of National Defense in order that no one may profit by the sacrifices made by other merchants in curtailing the service they have been accustomed to render their customers.

"4. That merchants shall establish the co-operative or central delivery system wherever possible and when this cannot be done they shall reduce their deliveries to not more than two per day over each route."

PETTIJOHN AT LAPORTE.

Professor J. J. Pettijohn of the extension division of Indiana University addressed the merchants of Laporte on the evening of September 18 on the subject, "A Co-operative Delivery System." Local merchants are interested in the economies endorsed by the State Council of Defense and steps already have been taken to adopt them here. The delivery problem is said to be one of the biggest handicaps to enterprise among Laporte merchants.

BUTCHERS AND GROCERS.

A committee consisting of Jap Hornbeck, Tom Slattery and H. E. Reynolds are working among butchers and grocers of Crawfordsville and Montgomery in order that they co-operate with the economies in selling and delivery that are recommended by the merchants' economy committee of the State Council of Defense. Clothiers, dry goods men and shoe dealers who are organized also will be represented in the county committee. Robert Tinsley and Frank Jones have been appointed members of a publicity committee which will arrange for a three days' tour of the county, visiting practically every merchant.

Carl S. Wise of Logansport reports that the merchants of his district are keenly alive to recommendations on the return of merchandise, and that the local dealers have, in several instances, run advertisements announcing their intention of following conservation rules.

The merchants of Elkhart, says Conrad Ziesel, are co-operating in the movement to lessen returns and deliveries of merchandise. A meeting of the Elkhart merchants was held September 18 to perfect satisfactory arrangements. Merchants of Elkhart, Goshen, Nappanee and other towns were in attendance.

South Bend merchants recently pledged themselves to co-operate with the government and State Councils of Defense in eliminating the waste in their business.

On Conserving Potatoes.

A. L. Hodgson, Randolph county agricultural agent, recommends that local districts consume their own potatoes instead of buying them from a distant market. "If farmers and others having a few potatoes for sale could find the people who will be compelled to buy and sell potatoes for winter use, at the same time using some of the available storage space in their cellars or pits," he says, "there would be less store-house congestion. The result would be lower prices for consumer, higher prices for producer and greater national efficiency due to the opportunity for storing perishable foods."

Team Work Necessary for Greater Efficiency

Superintendent Peterson Urges that County Agent be Utilized to the Greater Production of Foodstuffs.

(By C. V. Peterson, Tippecanoe County Superintendent of Schools.)

Now that we have a county agent it is up to the county to make the best use of him. It is a well-known fact that there is some opposition to the principle under which the county agent is employed, but there is no argument against the great good he can do.

No agricultural worker can do more to increase the food production than the county agent. He is the direct means of communication between the Department of Agriculture at Washington or the Purdue Experiment Station and the farmer. It is through him that the government is enabled to cooperate with the food producers of the nation.

TEAM WORK NECESSARY.

Team work in the community is necessary in order that all the resources of the country may be utilized. We must enlist the services of all local agencies in promoting better farm methods and increased facilities. The agent is in position to give expert information on agricultural subjects and will help solve many of the problems which confront the average farmer. Simply give him a chance. Let him make your farm a part of his laboratory and the information he has will be communicated to you, and what he may get will be communicated to all farmers.

Each community is made up of various classes of people. There are men and women who want to do things, others who are able to lecture or tell about things, still others who can write with force and conviction. We need all of these; for each person there is a place in the general plan for community development.

To Sell Liberty Bonds

Liberty bonds—the second loan—are going to sell like hot cakes if the enthusiasm of the County Councils of Defense continues. Rush County Council of Defense met recently and elected Carl H. Payne chairman and a committee of twenty-five to have charge of the sale of the second Liberty Loan bonds of 1917 in that county. The ministers and all the auctioneers of the county will aid in the publicity campaign and the "Four-Minute Men" will present the matter in the moving picture shows. W. J. Devol, banker of Lebanon, is chairman of the Boone County Liberty Loan campaign. B. B. Engle is chairman of the Montgomery county committee and A. N. Sollemeyer will head the Adams county organization. J. E. Hinshaw of Winchester will direct the bond sales in Randolph county. The second Liberty Loan committee for Switzerland county includes C. C. Shaw, chairman, Vevay; J. W. Johnson, Patriot; Harry Stow, East Enterprise; Richard Landram, Florence.

Other Liberty Loan committeemen follow: Decatur County—W. W. Bonner, chairman; Charles Woodward, Dan S. Perry and Harrington Boyd, Perry County—Magnus Kreisle, chairman; Roscoe Huffman, Alfous Schaerer, Harry Menor, Norman Hafele. Tippecanoe County—Charles Murdock, chairman. Martin County—Ed. Witcher, chairman; George Gates, Walter Hayes. Pike County—W. D. Curll, Petersburg, chairman; George T. Frank, George A. Hurst, Robert M. Gray, A. J. Heuring, M. McC. Stoops, W. D. Crow, A. H. Kuken, Sol D. Johnson, Herbert H. Harmeyer, John W. Seales, Samuel Hargrove. Clay County—Hugh Stevenson, chairman; J. B. Marshall, H. R. Neese, J. M. Henderson, H. E. Sutton, C. R. Knoll.

Greene, Madison and Tipton counties report that Liberty Loan committees will soon be appointed there.

"Don't argue about why we are in the war, but realize that the time now has come when American liberty, American justice, American independence and freedom are the stake for which we must fight."—Elihu Root.

WILL GIVE CREDIT.

We want to emphasize the boys' and girls' clubs—pig, corn, chicken, canning—anything along the line, we expect this to become a part of our school work; we are going to allow school credit for work done and properly and carefully reported to school authorities. Much of this will be under the general supervision of the county agent.

The need for food production and conservation is greater today than ever before. The greatest efficiency produced in any agency is team work. There are many communities in which the people are willing to work for the good of the nation, but do not know what to do. They need direction and leadership—a good county agent supplies the need. Let us all work together. Let there be no slackers anywhere. Patriots are needed in the fields as well as in the trenches. We are not going to tolerate indifference to patriotic duty among officers and school teachers; let us have reason to believe that our patrons and students are with us in our country's service.

Learn more about the Boys' Working Reserve. It is not the purpose of this organization to take boys out of school, or away from home where there is work to do, but to organize a helping reserve that can be put to best advantage. If need be we will arrange school work so that boys and girls, too, for that matter, can help garner the corn harvest now coming on. We urge that boys and girls remain in school, however, as long as possible, thus better preparing themselves for usefulness as the need arises.

Be Loyal or Get Out

Earl S. Brown in the Vevay, Ind., Enterprise.

Over in Ripley county, near Olean, a few days ago several hundred Germans held their annual picnic. One preacher offered up a prayer in German, and another preached a sermon in German. The speakers were seated on a platform with an arch covered with evergreens, and the platform was profusely decorated with flowers of all kinds.

But, strange as it may seem, nowhere on the grounds was there an American flag or a solitary rag of red, white and blue bunting.

And with such a spirit as this the Versailles Republican is wondering why it cannot stir up enough interest in the citizens of Ripley county to honor their drafted soldiers with a farewell reception.

Should such a meeting have been held in Switzerland county it would have been as much as the speaker's life was worth to have preached a sermon in German. But such a meeting could not have been held here. Our citizens would have believed the absence of American flags meant an insult to our country and would have cleaned out that meeting as quickly as a riot would break up an Irish ball.

If the German residents of Ripley county can't show loyalty to the flag of our country in which they have lived so peacefully, then why in the hell don't they go back to Germany where they belong? We've got no room in the United States for German sympathizers. Be loyal to Uncle Sam or get out, and do one or the other p. d. q.

Iowa Gets Busy.

At a recent meeting of the Iowa State Council of Defense, the question of peace and order in the various counties of the State was under discussion and it was arranged that the Governor of the State invite the city attorneys, the county sheriffs, the chairmen of the boards of supervisors and the mayors of cities and towns to a meeting for the exchange of ideas on the subject. The State hopes by this means to abolish disloyalty and secure effective defense co-operation.

Scientists Form Body on Research

Will Seek to Serve Needs of War and Peace And Effect Permanent Benefits.

As a result of a suggestion coming from C. C. Mendenhall, national chairman of the committee on State Research Councils, a group of scientists met at the State House September 15 and formed a permanent organization to be known as the Committee of Research of the State Council of Defense. The organization will be a permanent one and will serve war and peace needs. It will make a study of war mechanics and needs and will strive, at the same time, to effect industrial gains. It will work also with the different educational institutions of the State and will coordinate scientific activities and seek to eliminate duplication. The members of the committee are Dr. C. H. Benjamin, Dean of Engineering, Purdue University; Dr. F. R. Eldred, Director of Scientific Laboratories, Eli Lilly Co., Indianapolis; Dr. J. J. Green, Professor of Electrical Engineering, Notre Dame University; Dr. A. L. Foley, Professor of Physics, Indiana State University; Daniel B. Luten, Civil Engineer, Indianapolis; O. H. Skinner, General Superintendent Prest-o-Lite Company, Indianapolis; Dr. John White, Professor of Chemistry, Rose Polytechnic College. Dr. C. L. Mees, President of Rose Polytechnic College, presided at the meeting. A letter was read to the committee from F. C. Atkinson, President of the Indiana Section of the American Chemical Society, offering the services of that organization.

ONE AT A TIME, LADIES!

The following is part of an important letter that is being sent to the women of the State by Miss Julia E. Landers of the enrollment committee of the State Council of Defense:

"Will you please send me the names of any women in your county who are good public speakers and who would be willing to give some talks in your county or the next county should we have a campaign of three days to educate the women of Indiana in the part they must play in helping the President of the United States win this war? The State Council of Defense will probably give me money to spend on mileage for these speakers, and we will expect the woman member of each County Council of Defense to see that the speakers are entertained in homes for the two nights they will spend in the county. No money will be spent in salaries to speakers, because since none of us who are members of the State Council of Defense are receiving pay, but are gladly giving some of our time to the State, there is no reason why we should not ask the capable women of this State to help us with the plan of the State Council of Defense to enroll women for service."

Corn Meal Cheap Food.

The United States Food Administration authorizes the following:

"Corn meal, even at the present unprecedented high prices, according to a comparison of nutritive food values prepared by the Food Administration, continues the cheapest food found in a survey of fifty staples.

"There is twice as much nutritive value in a dollar's worth of corn meal, even at the prevailing high prices, as in a dollar's worth of wheat bread. The actual figures show that 47.4 cents' worth of corn meal now equals one dollar's worth of wheat bread in actual nutritive value.

"There are four bushels of corn raised in this country to every bushel of wheat, and corn meal is as good food for man as is wheat. It costs less, and is the richest crop in our country."

Let There Be Light.

The way to "enlighten the German people" is to lick them to a frazzle. Enlightenment will then arrive.—B. L. T. in Chicago Tribune.

Hurty Would Save Race From Decay

Secretary of State Board of Health Has Practical Plan of Conservation.

"The most important conservation, now and at any time, is the conservation of human beings." Thus declared Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana State Board of Health.

Dr. Hurty is not a pacifist, and he knows that strong bodies are necessary to strong minds and both are essential to the success of a nation in peace as well as in war.

DR. J. N. HURTY.

"Benjamin Franklin once said, 'Take care of your pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves.' I feel sure that if we look to it that our children are born free of disease, well formed and with pure blood; if we see to it that they are taught and trained the way they should go, we would then be able to solve all the problems of conservation. If we take care of the child we are then making men who are mentally, morally and intellectually strong—strong in mind, strong in soul, strong in physique. Men so made are the only ones who can make a strong nation. This idea is incorporated in the Indiana Child Creed: "Every child has the inalienable right to be born free from disease, free from deformity and with pure blood in its veins and arteries.

"Every child has the inalienable right to be loved; to have its individuality respected; to be trained wisely in mind, body and soul; to be protected from disease, from evil influences and evil persons, and to have a fair chance in life. In a word, to be brought up in the fear and admonition of the Lord.

"That state is delinquent which does not ceaselessly strive to secure these inalienable rights to its children.

"Strong nations regard conservation. Strong men are economical. Can you imagine Abraham Lincoln wasting food? People who waste food are immoral. Nations who neglect to enforce hygienic laws are bound to come to grief. Let us strive toward a healthy national life and the preservation of the healthy individual."

Crime Cannot Endure.

"Anyone striking the note that Germany is invincible and can endure a state of war forever is either a fool or its familiar alternative. . . . The fiction, the superstition rather, that Germany can endure a war of indefinite duration is a piece of German bureaucratic bluff, manufactured expressly for home consumption, but available for export if it can find a foreign market. It has been imported by one or two persons as a political side-line and is being boosted, but even those who read it do not follow it."—San Francisco Chronicle.

"What Are We Fighting For?"

(By the Rev. R. J. Burns, Butler, Ind.)

It is now three years since the great war began. When it commenced we asked, "What are they fighting for?" and now some are asking, "What are we fighting for?" It is the latter question that I shall attempt to answer. Before answering the question it might be profitable for us to study for a little while the spirit that dominates the German empire.

If we are to know the iron hand that holds in its palm the actions and even the very thoughts of the German people we must go back to the days that antedate the present ruler and study Prussianism—see her as she whets her already sharpened sword and wages conquest after conquest—bloodthirsty occasioned by a desire for more land, a land that was not her land, a land that had brought forth bountifully in response to the brawn and brain of an industrious and peace-loving people.

It is Prussianism personified that is keeping the world in the relentless grip of death and destruction today. The majority of the warring nations are praying for the day when they can go back to their homes and again follow their peaceful pursuits and forget the terrible tragedies that would shame and stigmatize forever a semi-civilized nation. It is not that Germany's territory has been invaded and that she is fighting a defensive fight and yet that is her plea. Germany is fighting a fight of pure and unadulterated imperialism—she is the aggressor and the whole world knows it. Her actions were premeditated and according to her way of thinking the time was right for a glorious victory over Belgium and France and her calculations would have proven correct had it not been for Russia on the east and England on the west who threw their flesh and blood into the mouth of the German cannon and stayed the victorious march of the Teuton. It is not long until Italy and Japan are in the game and thus the fight goes on—cannons belching forth death and destruction while the neutral world sits in the bleachers and watches the game. "Who will make the first run?" some one asks. The answer is, "It is going to be a draw." Everything now points to a long extensive struggle, when all at once Germany knocks a foul and the foul ball lights upon American territory either at sea or on land. This causes a stir in the bleachers and Mr. Kaiser is asked to explain, which he does very graciously. The game continues with increased interest and the second foul is perpetrated and the third and the fourth, which meant the sending of scores of men, women and children to watery graves to mingle with the seaweeds and rot amongst the filth at the bottom of the sea.

These facts are no secrets, but are known the world over and similar breaches of international law, to say nothing of breaches of international etiquette Germany has perpetrated against the United States for two years. She has honey-combed every avenue of American political and economical life. She has filled this country with her contemptible spies; she has incited riots and strikes among our laboring classes, and tried to destroy our munition factories, for which offenses some are now being held in custody.

We were a long time trying to convince ourselves that Germany was guilty of such inhuman atrocities and when anyone would cry out against her that person was called an alarmist and easily excited. Early in 1916 the Providence Journal called our attention to the fact that even then there was a conspiracy in the United States that was soon to work havoc with this country, but our neutral papers (?) called the editor of the Journal an alarmist and his Journal a yellow sheet; it took only a few days to prove that Mr. Editor knew what he was talking about when Mr. Boyed and one Mr. Von Papen, members of the German embassy, were expelled from this country as undesirables. These two gentlemen (?) it was learned had a branch office in Wall street, the very heart of New York's financial district. It was Germany that tried to entangle us in the meshes of the Mexican-Japanese conspiracy—Mr. Zimmerman, you will remember, was the blunt tool that made such a failure at the job. Thus the game had been going on until the great umpire calls time and demands a pinch hitter to come to the bat.

The call was so loud that a man in the bleachers heard the call and he deliberately leaves his seat and starts for the plate—the whole world is, on tiptoe and watching the move. As Mr. Pinch Hitter comes on to the diamond he is seen rolling up his sleeves, displaying two well-formed and muscular arms; he is a tall man and has chin whiskers; he wears a tall hat and has a suit made from the stars and stripes. Ah, it is Uncle Sam. He walks up to the plate with the elasticity of a youth—he picks up the big stick and squares himself at the plate and divines every move of Mr. Kaiser—the world is anxiously waiting and before we had time to breathe a good full breath Uncle Sam had hit the ball right on the nose and knocked a home run in the form of a $2,000,000,000 Liberty Loan—this staggers Germany and before she could square herself the pinch hitter landed another good one in the form of 10,000,000 young men, who said, "I am within the age limit and if you need me I will go." The next strike will knock the cover from the ball and the game will be over.

I said a moment ago that I was going to answer "Why are we fighting?" My answer is as follows: We are fighting because Germany invaded our shores just as truly as she invaded Belgium, only on a smaller scale.

Second: We must fight and whip her on the continent of Europe or she will fight us on this continent, and if she ever comes here our wives and children will receive just what the women and children of Belgium received.

Third: We are fighting a fight for liberty, hoping that the peoples of the whole world will soon have a government "of the people, for the people and by the people," a government that had its birth in the land of the free and the home of the brave, and a land that has as its emblem the stars and stripes.

Sale of Crops in the Field

Reports have been coming in of the sale of crops "in the field," in advance of the harvest, to be delivered on the order of the buyer, or to be harvested by the buyer at his pleasure. Past experience has shown our people that in many instances these crops are never harvested, warns the Coatesville Herald. This is not oversight on the part of the purchaser, as some credulous persons might think. It is deliberate and with a purpose. The crops are bought with this possible end in view. Our food hogs are shrewd. Government and State reports presage a record production of food crops this year. In the natural order of things this would be bound to lower prices to some extent, even in the face of the heavy foreign demand. But this is just what the food speculator does not wish to see occur. To avoid it he must evolve some plan to "retire" a greater or less proportion of the crop from the markets. Hence they are bought up "in the field"—and if our officials are not careful many of them will rot in the field. We believe that the great majority of our farmers are loyal to the core. We do not believe they will connive at a practice that tends to both waste and extortion. Loyal farmers, it is up to you to see that the purchaser of your crops—provided you have sold any "in the field"—moves these crops at the proper time. In case they are not so moved, and loss or even waste is threatened, it is your sacred duty as a loyal citizen to notify the authorities in charge of the food situation at Washington, and you should do this while there is yet time to save the crop. Our sons and brothers in France are going to need every ounce of our produce that we can send them. Let us see that none of it goes to waste through the "carelessness" of these speculators.

Davison Reviews Activities of the Red Cross in Europe

Henry P. Davison, as chairman, issued recently, on behalf of the war council of the American Red Cross, a report to the American people concerning the activities of the American Red Cross in Europe since war with Germany was declared. The report says in part:

The policy of the Red Cross war council is to report frequently to the American people concerning the use which is being made of all Red Cross money.

The war council of the American Red Cross, since its appointment on May 10, appropriated up to and including August 31, the sum of $12,339,681.87 for work in Europe, of which $10,692,601 is for use in France.

GENERAL OBJECTS.

The general lines of activity undertaken in France by the American Red Cross have been determined after a careful survey of the situation by the Red Cross commission. The purposes may be outlined as follows:

1. To establish and maintain hospitals for soldiers in the American army in France.
2. To establish and maintain canteens, rest houses, recreation huts and other means of supplying the American soldiers with such comforts and recreation as the army authorities may approve.
3. To establish and maintain in France canteens, rest houses, recreation huts and other means of supplying comfort and recreation for the soldiers in the armies of our allies.
4. To distribute hospital equipment and supplies of all kinds to military hospitals for soldiers of the American or allied armies.
5. To engage in civilian relief, including: (a) The care and education of destitute children; (b) care of mutilated soldiers; (c) care of sick and disabled soldiers; (d) relief work in the devastated areas of France and Belgium, such as furnishing to the inhabitants of these districts agricultural implements, household goods, foods, clothing and such temporary shelter as will enable them to return to their homes; (e) to provide relief for and guard against the increase of tuberculosis.
6. To furnish relief for soldiers and civilians held as prisoners by the enemy and to give assistance to such civilians as are returned to France from time to time from the parts of Belgium and of France held by the enemy.
7. To supply financial assistance to committees, societies or individuals allied with the American Red Cross and carrying on relief work in Europe.

The war council has sent to Europe five separate commissions, each composed of representative Americans. The work and policy of the American Red Cross will be determined and guided by the first-hand inquiries and the considered judgment of these commissions.

WORK FOR THE AMERICAN ARMY.

The first and supreme object of American Red Cross care is our own army and navy.

The American army in France is received in large reception camps on the coast, and after several weeks of preliminary training the men are sent across the country to permanent training camps back of the firing lines.

Along the route followed by the troops the Red Cross has established infirmaries and rest stations, each in charge of an American trained nurse with an American man to assist her.

Additional infirmaries and rest stations will be established in the near future, and adequate buildings are also being erected wherever needed.

Canteens are being established by the Red Cross at railway stations where American soldiers on reserve duty or on leave, and those returning to or from duty, may find rest and refreshment. Baths, food, games and other comforts will be made available at these canteens.

The war council has appropriated $100,000 for medical research work in France.

HOSPITAL WAREHOUSE SERVICE.

To be able to do its work without delay, the Red Cross is establishing warehouses at different points of importance in the French theater of war. An appropriation of $500,000 has been voted to establish this service and provide its first stock of supplies.

In response to a cable from the commission in France, the war council appropriated $1,500,000 to purchase foodstuffs to be sent to France.

It has also appropriated $1,000,000 for the purchase of supplies in France, all for use in the hospital supply service.

CANTEENS AND REST STATIONS.

At the military railroad stops the Red Cross is establishing shower baths, laundries and mending and disinfecting rooms. Then there will be rest rooms, with books, writing materials and games. Some of the stations will have dormitories and lunch rooms.

Near the firing line the Red Cross is establishing field canteens. Extending the work already begun by the French Red Cross, it will provide one of these canteens for every corps of the French army and as well as later for the American army.

To carry out these plans the war council has made appropriations of about $700,000, which will establish the canteens and maintain them for about three months.

RED CROSS TRANSPORTATION SERVICE.

A Red Cross transportation service through the co-operation of the French, British and Italian governments, the United States shipping board and the leading steamship and railroad companies has been established to handle the vast quantities of medical and relief supplies now being shipped almost daily to France, Belgium, Serbia, Russia and other belligerent countries.

The Red Cross will have cargo space on every steamer chartered by the United States shipping board. Army transports also will carry Red Cross supplies.

The French railroads are overtaxed and their facilities must be available for the military needs of the army. The Red Cross has accordingly determined to develop its own motor transport service. The first unit of trucks has been forwarded.

BASE HOSPITALS.

In advance of the fighting forces the United States sent to the European battle fields six base hospitals organized during the last year by the Red Cross—the first United States army organization sent to Europe. These were sent at the request of the British commission.

More than a dozen base hospitals organized by the American Red Cross are now seeing active service in France and others are rapidly being made ready for foreign service.

PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS.

It is estimated that some 500,000 persons are afflicted with tuberculosis as the direct result of the war. Scientific efforts to control the spread of the malady are not only of supreme concern to France herself, but they are of great importance in making France healthy for our own troops.

All work is being done under the general administration of the French government and by French people.

The American Red Cross has appropriated $1,000,000 for the relief of sick and wounded French soldiers and their families.

The Red Cross plans to be able to take care temporarily of these returning populations.

It is not the policy of the Red Cross to rebuild the villages of France, but it is our hope to be able to give a new start in life to a large number of persons who have been left destitute by the ravages of the German army.

The Red Cross has accordingly appropriated $40,090 for a provisional experiment in this direction, the plans for the experiment having been worked out in France by Mr. Homer Folks.

Most of those in charge of the Red Cross of the work in France are giving their own time and paying their own expenses.

The appropriations made for use in Europe outside of France, covering drugs and medical supplies, relief funds and expenses, are as follows:

For Russia .....	$322,780.87
For Roumania .....	247,000.00
For Italy .....	210,000.00
For Serbia .....	222,500.00
For England .....	8,800.00
For Armenia .....	600,000.00
Other appropriations .....	36,000.00

The total appropriations by the war council for Red Cross work in Europe are as follows:

In France .....	$10,692,601.00
Outside of France .....	1,647,080.87

Grand total .....

$12,339,681.87
Some of the European appropriations are to cover a full year, but the greater part will have been spent by November of the current year.

Store Windows to Teach Food Saving

The United States Food Administration authorizes the following:

Plans are now being perfected for a widespread campaign in visualized publicity to convince the people of the United States of the necessity for food conservation and to show them the best methods of food substitution.

Window displays in the retail stores all over the United States are to be used to tell in the most forceful way possible the aims of the United States Food Administration. The helpful co-operation necessary for the success of this plan is being secured through the various mercantile associations of the country, and the response already received is such as to guarantee the most complete success ever reached by any such plan of publicity and education.

WINDOW DISPLAY CONTEST.

In part this great educational campaign will be conducted in the form of a contest, with prizes for the best window displays, under the supervision of the United Publishers' Corporation, as representative of the trade papers of the nation. The voluntary services of these publications have been secured through Elbridge L. Howe of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, who is now working in Washington with the food administration. The plans perfected have been submitted to the food administration. The contest will close October 21.

GOVERNED BY FOOD POLICY.

All displays are to be governed by the briefly defined policy of the food administration that our national problem is to feed our allies this winter by sending them as much food as we can of the most concentrated nutritive value in the least shipping space. These foods are wheat, beef, pork, dairy products and sugar.

The success of the plan for this educational campaign does not rest entirely upon the contest idea. Many merchants have said that while they have no desire to participate in the window contest, they are quite willing to make their displays as a patriotic contribution to a cause the importance of which they recognize.

The window displays were started this week throughout the country.

University Saving.

The United States food administration authorizes the following:

"The University Club of Chicago is saving a ton of flour and two tons of meat a month through voluntary food conservation. The house committee of the club in making this announcement to the members links it with a 'roll of honor' of members who have joined the armed force of the nation. They call the food saving a patriotic enterprise and say that it enables the club to remit dues for those who have joined the national service."

Fire Marshal Aids in Preventing Loss

Friedley and His Assistants Doing Important Work of Conservation.

State Fire Marshal H. H. Friedley and his staff of inspectors have been conducting a fire prevention campaign in an effort to conserve food products and protect personal property. He has required since April 1 an inspection of all flour mills and grain warehouses with a view of suggesting to their owners practical means for fire prevention. These examinations have been made by men who have had experience in inspecting for insurance companies. As soon as the inspection of this sort of property is completed there will be an examination of food storage warehouses, canning factories, supply repositories, woolen and cotton mills, wholesale groceries, implement factories, etc. All this is being done with the idea of conserving resources and thereby bringing the war to a close earlier. Insurance compensates for loss, but it does not replace loss.

CAMPAIGN OF EDUCATION.

In order to make his work effective Fire Marshal Friedley has been conducting a publicity campaign of education. He has mailed out thousands of notices to factory owners bearing statements like the following:

"You are citizens and patriots and are serving your country in production. The conservation of food and property is the greatest need of the times. Close attention to details in the daily routine of operation in matters of fire prevention will reduce the fire hazard.

"Do you know that two-thirds of our fires are caused through carelessness?

"Where is your nearest fire alarm box?

"Have you a night watchman?

"Have you metal containers for rubbish?

"Is your water supply effective or are the pipes half filled with mud?

"If you cannot answer each of these questions satisfactorily you may be unintentionally playing into the hands of our enemies.

"This is not the time to procrastinate.

"Attend to these matters today."

"No Smoking" and "No Admission" cards may be obtained upon request from the office of the State Fire Marshal.

Right vs. Might.

"If Might made Right, life were a wild beast's cage;

If Right made Might, this were the golden age;

But now, until we win the long campaign,

Right must gain Might to conquer and to reign."

—Henry Van Dyke.

American Alliance in Northern Indiana

Major Ryan Secured Official Endorsement of Idea of Sergeant Welch.

Major Thomas F. Ryan of Fort Wayne, acting on the suggestion of Sergeant William Welch of Hammond, secured the endorsement of the War Department for the organization of the "American Alliance."

The purpose of the alliance is to demonstrate the solidarity of all the people of the State, particularly those of diverging races in the northern part of the commonwealth. It is also to stimulate patriotism wherever possible and "to let the khaki-clad boys know there is a solid pack behind them."

Major Ryan made a special trip to Washington and secured the full sanction of his superiors before putting the alliance on the map. It is expected that every community in the northern part of the State either will have a chapter or be represented in the organization within a few weeks.

The Call of the Hour—

Burnett

"The Call of the Hour" was the subject of a masterful sermon by the Rev. J. A. Burnett, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, South Bend. Dr. Burnett's text was Proverbs 24:5: "A man of knowledge increaseth strength." He said in part:

"The most important question now before the people of this country is the relation of education to the present war. In the heat of the struggle our attention is fixed on the present—but what of the future? We believe we shall win, but what then? We are fighting for democracy, but a democracy that simply takes the power from kings to put it into the hands of an unprepared people may prove a curse rather than a blessing. The beneficent results of this conflict depend on a citizenship which receives the trust and executes it for the coming generations.

"The national commissioner of education said recently: 'It is of the utmost importance that during the continuance of the war, and through the years immediately following, there shall be no lowering in the efficiency of our systems of education.'"

CHURCH SPONSOR OF EDUCATION.

"The church has always stood as the sponsor of education and therefore is most deeply interested in this question. If the world is to be 'safe for democracy' we cannot limit our horizon by today, but must have a seer's vision for the future.

"There are thousands of boys, girls, young men and young women in our schools, colleges and universities who should be developed for solving the immense problems that will inevitably follow the war. The most patriotic thing we can do as parents, teachers, young people, is to conserve, in every possible way, the interests of education. There are many in our industrial and commercial life who should turn back again to the work of the class room. This is the demand, the obligation, the opportunity of the hour, and to meet our responsibility we must have an intelligent sense of educational values.

BIG DIVIDENDS FOR INVESTMENT.

"These values are determined by the amount of time given to intellectual development. The commissioner of education, after careful investigation, has given us these facts: A boy with a common school education has one chance in 9,000 for achieving notable success; a boy with a high school education, 22 chances in 9,000; a college man, 200 chances in 9,000. An efficient life cannot come out of a limited or shortened educational course. The government has turned to the American colleges for its trained men, and the more time spent in educational pursuits the greater the chance of being placed in the ranks of leadership. This is the investment that returns ever increasing dividends.

"Educational values are determined also by the higher elements which influence the securing of an education or directing that of others. There has been a reaction in recent years in educational ideals. Formerly men were disciplined for making a living rather than making a life; now we educate for service. Humboldt declared that 'whatever you would put into the State you must first put into the schools.' The militarism of Germany has behind it generations of training in the home and in all the institutions of learning, and you cannot root out in a moment what years have imbedded in the life. In America we have impressed the minds of the youth with service and the lessons have been enforced by a history rich in the traditions of sacrifice.

AMERICA'S RESPONSIBILITY.

"All true education has this moral element—love, and the service of love; this is the teaching of Jesus Christ, the greatest of all teachers. Without this our education is a sunless day, a trackless wilderness, a chartless voyage.

"The value of education is revealed in the use we make of it. The obligations of the scholar are commensurate with his opportunities. An education that has no large outlook and does not hold a practical benefit for humanity is of little value. We must be educated in such a way that our scientific knowledge, our literary culture, our classical lore shall react upon the world in blessing. It is no idle boast that, in the reconstructions which must follow the present titanic upheaval, America shall project her influence into all the nations of the earth. What marvelous possibilities and vast responsibilities rest with those who instruct the young and guide their preparation for future service!"

Duty of Citizens in Present Situation

the security in the world of the principles for which we stand and shall stand, to demonstrate that democracies can be united and efficient in their determination to make the world safe for democracy.

"Third—Without desiring to engender or encourage suspicions and jealousies that should rather be allayed, we yet believe that there should be vigilance everywhere in rebuking treasonable words and checking treasonable action, and that prompt information should be given to federal authorities whenever it shall appear disloyalty is hindering national purposes.

"The time is now come when the nation must say to its own people, 'He who is not for us is against us.' If any citizen of this country is so constituted that he cannot whole-heartedly sustain the government, he should at least refrain from disloyal words or acts and should be constrained to do so, if necessary, both by public opinion and by governmental authority.

"We suggest that every effort be made by those in authority in the State, the county, the city and the township, to impress upon our citizens at this time the love of country by a display of the flag on all public buildings—court houses, city buildings and public schools, and that the U. S. regulations for the honor of the flag be observed in every community. We also recommend to the churches, private schools and social and fraternal organizations the same honor to the emblem of our country.

"Every citizen should consider it his patriotic duty to do something to help the country in one or more of the ways suggested by the National, State and County Councils of Defense, in food conservation, in the activities of the Red Cross, in the Boys' Reserve, in helping to cheer a soldier by letters, literature and remembrances, and the many other agencies to help the country at this time. While our boys are at the front in the line of danger let there be no 'slackers' among those who remain at home. Every man and woman should evidence his patriotism by being enrolled in some form of activity to help the country. Let this be the test of patriotism and the external sign of our sympathy with our country in this war."

War Notes

It has been stated that reindeer meat could be and should be made a very valuable part of the nation's meat supply. They can be raised more cheaply than cattle.

WAR FOOD is the title of a recent helpful book on food conservation, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture for free distribution.

"Again and again," says Stanley Washburn in an article on "The Changes in Russia," "I have seen the capacity of the Russians to recuperate, and on all of these occasions it has been because of the stamina, the faith and the stubborn character of the Russian people and the Russian troops."

Lou D. Sweet, a member of the Hoover food administration, initiated the plan of securing the Federal Reserve Board's approval of stored potatoes as a basis for bank loans.

Wilson visualizes the world not as so much more land or machines or money, but as so many men, women and children.—Secretary Lane.

This practice of forcing disloyal creatures to kiss the flag is rough on the flag.—New York Sun.

"We are fighting for what we believe and wish to be the rights of mankind and for the future peace and security of the world."—President Woodrow Wilson.

Organizers Find Indiana Patriotic and Willing Boys Qualify for U. S. Bronze Medals

County Councils Being Checked Up by Twenty-Three Teams Who Expect to Bring Hoosier Commonwealth to a Point of 100 Per Cent. Efficiency.

Reports from organizers canvassing the County Councils of Indiana, representing the State Council of Defense, for the first day, indicate a very encouraging condition. In almost every instance large audiences met with the organizers, who found the people willing, sometimes eager, to do what the President, the War Department, the Council of National Defense, the State Government, and the State Council of Defense consider necessary for the successful prosecution of the war.

The organizers emphasized the prospect of a long war, and the increasing demands that will come from those charged with responsibility for the successful conduct of American affairs. With no exception the people applauded these patriotic sentiments, and indicated an entire lack of patience with slackers and traitors.

Confidential reports will be made by each of the teams of conditions as they find them in each county. Upon these the State Council will base a follow-up campaign that is intended to strengthen every weak link, and bring every County Council up to a point in efficiency where even the slightest request will be complied with promptly and correctly.

The organizers expressed their confidence in the ability of the County Councils to organize on a war basis, and went into the work determined that the work be done, if their influence could serve to bring it about.

Following are the reports of the first day's meetings as received by the State Council:

Indianapolis.—Meeting today with local committee members and one or two friends only. Have all work seemingly well in hand; are well organized and officered.

HARRY C. SHERIDAN.

Madison.—Meeting at North Vernon was well attended by a representative gathering. Conditions are fair and the organization is at work.

A. K. SILLS.

Corydon.—The Old State House at Corydon was well filled this afternoon. The meeting was enthusiastic. Faris, Myers, myself and many others made patriotic talks. The local organization is in good shape. The "Hoover Card" campaign was a failure. More such meetings are needed.

JOHN A. RIDDLE.

Anderson.—About fifty were at the Anderson meeting of organization. Some members of the council were absent. Committees are needed. The food situation is taken care of by Butler and Swain. Co-ordination of activities and a personal appeal to each member of Madison County Council by the State Council is urged and we believe you will get results.

J. H. CONROY.

Richmond.—Forty were at the day meeting, half of the women mostly organization members. They are active and interested. Two four minute talks at crowded theatres in the evening were well received.

J. F. DENNY, GEO. EBERHART.

Bloomington.—About 45 were in attendance at the Monroe County meeting, largely members of the eleven committees. They have not done much yet, but are interested and will now get down to work.

CHARLES REMSTER.

Spencer.—Good meetings. The County Council is fairly well organized. Ladies' organizations are active. A full list of officers and organizations was obtained.

W. L. SLINKARD.

Logansport.—The meeting was well attended by town people and a few from country districts. After the mass meeting a two hours session with County Council of Defense was held. Conditions are not satisfactory, being hampered for funds. The County Council refuses an appropriation. We arranged for headquarters. Food matters have been given little attention. An attempted organization of the Boys' Reserve failed. No effort has been made to organize the militia. A splendid organization of four minute men exists. The council promises to get after the food problem, organize the Boys' Reserve and a Militia Unit at once, to make an industrial survey, appoint a Morals Committee, put on speaking campaign in county. We believe good will come from today's session, but recommend that the State Council do some follow up work here. Folks hearts are right, but they don't know just how.

H. S. NORTON.

Decatur.—We found Adams county in excellent condition. The organization is complete and had an enthusiastic meeting.

L. RAY LENICH.

Noblesville.—Thirty were present at the Noblesville meeting, but only two members of County Council were there. Those attending were interested. Would recommend you wire the Chairmen to have all members present.

FRED VANNUYS.

Washington.—We had a fair meeting with over one hundred present, serious interest was manifest. A complete organization perfected. Inability to secure Red Cross supplies greatly discourages women.

A. D. OGBORN.

Delphi.—We had an earnest meeting with about one hundred and fifty present. Speeches by Buchzhowski, self and five local speakers, among them two ladies.

L. C. EMBREE.

Lafayette.—We found Tippecanoe Council in good condition, but hard to arouse public interest. Conservation lines were well conceived and worked. The Curb market is successful. Home Guards are coming, also the Secret Service prevention section, more wheat campaign, Sheep Club, Soldiers Letter Writing, Home Gardening Club, Boys' Working Reserve, Boy Scouts. Officers of the County Council Defense are enthusiastic.

ALBERT W. BITTERS.

Greensburg.—We held a well attended and enthusiastic meeting here this afternoon. The county is well organized.

JOHN CHEWNING.

Princeton.—At the meeting here at 2 p. m. the attendance was seventy-five. Good interest. Talks were made by Fenn, Dye and Eichhorn. Organization conferences were held before and after meeting. Good activity heretofore in some lines and general activity is promised. The organization of the Council is complete.

W. H. EICHHORN.

Franklin.—We had good meeting for Johnson County at Franklin. All our team was present, and found conditions good.

HARRY L. KITSELMAN.

Twenty-one Honored by Official Decoration for Three Weeks of Productive Labor.

The number of boys who have already qualified for the Federal bronze badge awarded by the United States government to those members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve who have been engaged in productive labor for a period of at least three weeks is constantly growing. Twenty-one were decorated last week.

Those honored by an official award of the badge were:

Allen County—Joseph Stiefel, Fort Wayne.

Clinton County—Morris L. Howe, Frankfort.

Noble County—Clare Weir and Ralph Mayer, Ligonier.

Fountain County—Vern French, Vernis Clore, Clinton Glascock, Harry Peveler Irwin Crane, Mack Reed, Tom Rusk, Ernest Newton, Ivile Frazier, Frank Youngblood, Lawrence Osborn, Everett Wilbur, Jesse Wilbur, Orville Strader, Clyde Young, Glen Lightle and Henry Gregory, all of Veedersburg.

PATRIOTIC MEETING.

G. W. Rosencrans, Reserve Director of Fountain county, presented bronze badges to seventeen boys of Veedersburg at a public mass meeting Tuesday night. Mr. Rosencrans reports that the interest in the Reserve has been stimulated very much by this patriotic meeting, and that many boys have since enrolled in the Reserve.

PRAISES ALLEN COUNTY.

Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of Indiana for the Boys' Working Reserve, has a letter from William E. Hall, National Director, praising the work of the Reserve in Indiana, and particularly Allen county. Mr. Hall says that the results accomplished by A. L. McDonald, city director of Fort Wayne, and his associates are truly remarkable.

SCHOOL TEACHERS ACTIVE.

Harry B. Henderson, County Director of Jackson county, reports that 110 school teachers of that county are now actively engaged in enrolling boys in the Reserve. This kind of co-operation will undoubtedly do much toward keeping Indiana in the lead of all other States in organizing the Reserve.

* * * *

NINETY-FOUR PER CENT. ENROLLED.

Hendricks county is forging to the front in its organization work. Ralph E. Arnett, County Director, reports that in one of the townships 94 per cent. of the boys eligible for the Reserve have been enrolled.

TO HELP IN HOWARD.

William A. Batey of Taylor township, Howard county, has been named an associate director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. He will assist Albert F. Hutson, county director for Howard county.

* * * *

BOYS IN BEAN HARVEST.

Farmers of Bartholomew county secured the assistance of eighty-five boys, all members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, to harvest

Organizers Find Indiana Patriotic and Willing to Increase Acreage

Goshen.—A meeting of the County Council and sub-committees was well attended. The council is well organized and most of the work outlined is well under way. A disposition was shown to enthusiastically support the State Council's plans.

Auburn.—We held open meeting in the public square. A large crowd including school children met at the city hall with the County Defense Council and others. A large public meeting was held in the assembly room of the court house in the evening. All four members addressed meetings and urged home guard organizations. Farmers ask for labor.

Ft. Wayne.—Successful meeting was held here tonight. The organization is in good shape.

Crawfordsville.—A splendid meeting was held at Crawfordsville. Montgomery County is thoroughly organized in team work. All present and enthusiasm is revived.

Salem.—At Scottsburg the meeting was good; much interest being shown. A complete organization was perfected. At the Salem meeting the attendance was fair. Night meetings seem to be better than day, as the farmers are very busy.

THURSDAY'S REPORTS.

Muncie.—We had a splendid organization meeting in Muncie. The County Council is organized and has a splendid morale.

Liberty.—We had a glorious meeting here. There was a good attendance and a rousing response. Every request of the County Council is being promptly executed. A committee of women is now knitting for Wayne county. Little Union is the banner county of the State.

Boonville.—Meeting at Mt. Vernon was as scheduled. The court room was filled and the audience appreciative. The people are interested. The County Council is well organized and active. Suggestions are well received. It will do good work.

Hartford City.—The organization here is completed.

Greenfield.—We had an excellent meeting at Greenfield. They are well organized and doing good work. We had probably two hundred in attendance.

South Bend.—A successful meeting was held here tonight. The council is well organized, and in the Home Guard department especially so.

Columbia City.—Whitley County will organize. We had a splendid meeting here tonight.

Lawrenceburg.—We held a good meeting at Versailles today. It was well attended. Enthusiastic addresses were made by each of the three members of the team presenting the plan of organization. Speeches were also made by a number of clergymen representing different churches pledging hearty co-operation in giving the government a loyal support.

Monon.—We had a fine meeting at Monticello, of two hundred and fifty, representing every part of county. Addresses by Chaney and self. Chaney and I spoke tonight on street at Monon to a good and attentive crowd.

Auburn.—The afternoon meetings at Angola in the court room and on court house yard, drew a fair crowd. Steuben county is very patriotic and her quota volunteered except one.

Tipton.—We had an interesting meeting at Tipton. The Council is well organized. The records show lots of activity. Chairman Smith and Secretary Coleman both are wide awake and capable. Tipton county organization can not be improved.

Crawfordsville.—We had a splendid meeting at Covington. Fountain county is well organized. Any orders given will be immediately cured for by the officers of the County Council.

Williamsport.—Five newspapers in the county are helpful. The county has fire protection, a nominal Home Guard organization, home gardening is general and the people are prepared for the second Liberty bonds. At the meeting at the court house we boosted the Four-Minute Men. Prof. Stewart of the public schools, of Williamsport, is director of the Boys' Working Reserve. We advised a letter to Soldiers' Club.

Peru.—We had a splendid meeting here. There was a good crowd at the mass meeting. One session with the Council was very satisfactory. We think you may expect more activity from now and satisfactory results.

English.—About thirty-five were in attendance at our meeting here. The chairman of the County Council was not present. There was nothing doing except a little Hoover card work. They need a speaking campaign in this county. Headquarters are opened, but they have no funds and no appropriation from the county has been asked.

Columbus.—We had a good meeting here this afternoon. We found very effective work here.

French Lick.—At the Lawrence county meeting about twenty-five members of the committee were present. We had a good business meeting. The Council is interested and working.

CHAS. REMSTER.

Encouraging Responses Received by Committee Which Canvassed the State.

At the request of Secretary Houston, of the United States Department of Agriculture, and Herbert Hoover, National Food Administrator, the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation sent to the various counties of the State a statement showing the acreage of wheat and rye necessary for each county to sow in order that Indiana will meet the requirements of the government in sowing 2,800,000 acres of wheat and 294,000 acres of rye, and asked what might be expected. The answers from the counties are encouraging and show that farmers are sowing a large crop of wheat and rye.

Cass County.—"A reasonably large crop of wheat will be sown."—S. Jacobson. "Cass county has her acreage in wheat and rye. We have made a vigorous campaign in this locality."—W. G. Sweet.

Floyd County.—"We are satisfied in your estimate of 6,000 acres for Floyd county, you are overly conservative as there is going to be a big increase in the acreage in Floyd county this fall and we have always estimated that there is around 7,500 acres planted in wheat in previous years in this county."—G. C. Ellis.

Hancock County.—"The acreage in this particular locality will fall short 50 per cent. of what farmers intended sowing owing to corn being blow down so badly."—Reeves Grain & Fuel Co.

Henry County.—"Henry county will at least increase the wheat crop 25 per cent."—G. W. Ruff.

Jackson County.—"We are in the midst of a fine rain just now, and if the season continues to stay open for another month we will materially increase our acreage, though whether we reach the figures made in your letter is somewhat problematical."—Bliss Milling Company.

Laporte County.—"We think we will reach the requirement though good deal of seeding may be late."—S. D. Bailey.

Marshall County.—"There is being an increased acreage of wheat and rye put out in our section. Farmers are more careful of seed and soil preparation than for quite a long time."—Urschel Brothers.

Parke County.—"In our section the indications are that the increase in acreage will be fully 50 per cent."—Geo. W. Rohm.

Pulaski County.—"Estimates are that old Pulaski will meet the demanded acreage of wheat and will increase the rye acreage above the requirements."—I. J. Mathews, County Agent.

Randolph County.—"The wheat acreage will be largest in history of Randolph county, but will be short of what it would have been as we had a very bad wind storm here and some of the corn is down."—Goodrich Bros. Hay & Grain Co.

Starke County.—"We have been conducting a wheat campaign and also have been encouraging the sowing of rye on land which has not been planted for several years. As you know there are acres of sandy soil which are not suited to wheat and it is on these places we are sowing rye."—Chas. A. Buechner, County Agent.

Union County.—"Union county will reach and probably go beyond the 19,000 acres of wheat. We may fall a little under the 1,000 acres of rye."—J. N. McMahan. "We are doing all possible in this, Union county, and we feel very confident that the minimum 19,000 acres that Mr. Bryant has given for this county will be sown in wheat, and we think that perhaps it will be increased to 20,000 acres."—McCoy Bros.

Vanderburg County.—"It is our understanding that the farmers are putting in at least 25 per cent. more wheat than last year."—Akin-Erskine Milling Co.

Washington County.—"There is preparation for an unusually large crop of wheat in this county."—O. L. Cauble.

TO THE DRAFTED

(Contributed)

To you fortunate ones who are about to go forward to that long battle line where the armies of autocracy and oppression are facing the armies of the free, congratulations and Godspeed!

You go, not as reluctant victims of misfortune or a fatal chance, but rather as our chosen ones; the pick and flower of our manhood, whole of body, sound in mind and spirit—what all of us should like to be. And we who are too old or too weak, or in some other respect unfitted to go in body, shall go with you in spirit. We know that we ask much of you, and we expect much, for we expect things in keeping with our great traditions things born of the spirit of Nathan Hale; but we know that we shall not be disappointed.

In imagination and in sympathy we shall be there with you on the firing line, and at home we shall do all that we can to make you comfortable and content. We shall pray that you may return in safety, but even more fervently we shall pray that your courage may not flag or the edge of your determination be dulled.

You are to fight in the noblest cause in which man ever took up arms, and for a nation the most generous in all the world to her soldier sons. You go with her blessing, for she trusts you; and be sure that whether you return or not she will hold your names in honor and grateful memory until the end of time.

Patriotism in Indiana

Clay County.—W. E. Carpenter, superintendent of the M. E. Sunday school of Brazil, has been elected a member of the National Sunday School War Council. The appointment came from William S. Danfor, W. C. Pearce and E. B. Chappell, special committee who called a meeting of the council for September 26 in Cleveland, Ohio.

Floyd County.—The Women's Club "War Relief Work" department will assist in raising the county's quota of the war library fund. It is arranging for an open patriotic meeting September 24, at which there will be appropriate addresses and music. The club also is knitting socks for soldiers and in other ways contributing its bit.

Fountain County.—At the regular meeting of the Fountain County Council of Defense a newspaper publicity committee was named. J. F. McDermott, Jr., of the Attica Daily Tribune, is chairman and the committee includes representative newspaper people from all over the county, as follows: George Schwin, Covington Friend; Wheeler McMillan, Covington Republican; E. E. Baker, Veederburg News; R. A. Boe, Kingman Star; J. W. Small, Kingman Times; Harry Fenton Ross, Attica Ledger, and George M. Williams, Fountain and Warren Democrat.

Gibson County.—Melon growers, upon whom a large part of Indiana and the Middle West have been dependent for their annual supply of melons, have agreed to abandon this crop for next year and plant their ground in wheat and rye. They say they probably will lose money by so doing, but that they consider it a patriotic duty. Decker growers have had a very successful season, their crop averaging $100 an acre.

Howard County.—Lloyd McClure, an attorney of Kokomo, has been named chairman of the Howard County Council of Defense, succeeding A. O. Somers. The latter was forced to resign because of the fact that his duties as commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. required all his time. The council at present includes the following membership: Lloyd McClure, chairman; William Johnson, John Ellis, Earnest Murray, Al. Thompson and Harvey Lybrook. Mrs. W. C. Purdum, chosen to represent the women, has notified Judge Overton that she cannot serve and her place will be filled soon. The council is reorganizing and expects to become more vigorous as a result. Committees will be selected and the requests of the State Council complied with without unnecessary delay.

Huntington County.—Farmers in the vicinity of Andrews, this county, have agreed to demonstrate their patriotism by doubling the acreage usually devoted to wheat for 1918. They are already breaking ground and have the necessary seed.

Lake County.—Chairman David E. Boone is encouraged with the growth of the American Alliance. Labor leaders, politicians, lawyers, doctors, manufacturers and business men are lending their moral support to the organization. The alliance has issued a poster giving the following "Ten Reasons Why" every citizen identify himself with the organization: 1. To promote Americanism. 2. To make clear the reason "why we are at war." 3. To promulgate "freedom and democracy." 4. To put loyalty first. 5. To safeguard American interests. 6. To stand patriotically behind the government. 7. To render aid to the boys in the trench and on the sea. 8. To back the man that's fighting for you. 9. To teach "Young America" his duty to his government. 10. To bind firmly together all true Americans.

Laporte County.—Four-minute men for Laporte county include some of the ablest speakers in the community. J. M. Kramer and H. B. Darling, who head the organization, announce the enrollment of the following assistants, who will make addresses regularly in the moving picture theaters of the county: Finley P. Mount, Rev. A. C. Smith, Rev. A. S. Stewart, Rev. Holly M. Hale, Rev. George V. Morris, Dr. C. S. Mack, Rev. Father Wakefer, Rev. Father Zircher, Rev. M. Goodwin, Rev. E. H. Guenther, C. W. Pettit, R. A. Overholser, C. V. Shields, R. N. Smith, H. W. Worden, H. W. Sallwasser, D. J. McGill, E. J. Fishbaugh, H. B. Darling, Rev. Axel Nelson, P. A. Tannis, F. R. Liddell, W. A. McVey, H. R. Klock, F. A. Clem, C. E. Wolfe, Paul Van Riper, E. Gildersleeve, F. B. Heust, J. B. Shick, H. H. Keller, W. C. Weir, L. Darrow, N. E. Rowley, E. E. Weir, F. J. Pitner, H. B. Morenus, H. M. Cable, Edwin Schurz, J. C. Richter, Hascall Rosenthal, A. J. Hickey, Arthur Lay, Norman F. Wolfe, George Hahn, Captain Trevitt, W. W. King, M. R. Sutherland, William Walton, H. J. Montgomery, F. R. Farnam, Dr. H. H. Martin, Dr. F. T. Wilcox, F. E. Osborn, P. Q. Doran, F. J. Conboy, A. J. Stahl, J. A. Terry, E. N. Schafer.

Montgomery County.—Crawfordsville has organized to raise $500 for the war library fund. The organization follows: Gilbert Howell, chairman; Miss Sue Beck, secretary and treasurer; John C. Snyder, L. N. Hines, Harry Wedding, Mrs. George L. Mackintosh and Professor G. H. H. Tap, executive committee. A. A. McCain will have charge of the publicity, and lodges, churches, clubs and societies will assist in the canvas for funds.

St. Joseph County.—South Bend women have organized for "war service." They have divided the city into sixteen districts and will make a thorough canvass of every precinct to secure signatures to the Hoover food cards. Mrs. Victor F. Jones is chairman of the organization and the district chairman are as follows: Mrs. Fred Reed, District No. 1; Mrs. F. C. Noble, No. 2; Mrs. J. A. Rode, No. 3; Miss Mary DuShane, No. 4; Miss Maude Hoke, No. 5; Mrs. Edward Hagey, No. 6; Mrs. Guy Fish, No. 7; Mrs. J. B. Berteling, No. 8; Miss Lillian Martin, No. 9; Mrs. George W. Phillips, No. 10; Mrs. J. C. Mather, No. 11; Mrs. William Cass, No. 12; Mrs. Irving Jackson, No. 13; Mrs. J. S. Burns, No. 14; Mrs. William Baker, No. 15; Mrs. K. C. DelRhoades, No. 16.

Vanderburg County.—During the parade of selective conscripts, enroute to the training camps, citizens threw $268 into an American flag. The money will be used as a company fund for tobacco and "other comforts."

Wabash County.—O. J. Neighbours, superintendent of the Wabash city schools, has been appointed chairman of the four-minute men and has begun work. The managers of the local moving picture shows have offered to cooperate to the fullest in making the talks effective.

Red Cross Activities

The activities of the Plainfield Red Cross Society are in four divisions, surgical dressing, sewing, knitting and first-aid to the injured. Surgical dressing instruction is being given in the Masonic dining room by Mrs. Dorinda G. Morgan, who has just completed a course under the Red Cross in Indianapolis. Her class includes Mesdames C. M. Havens, John Hanna, Chester Pike, Horace L. Hanna, O. P. Duckworth, B. R. Inman, Robert Bly, Harry Hobbs, C. N. Symons, Daisy Haldabaugh, Otis Kirtley, Ira Holschaw, S. E. Weddle, V. K. Osborn, George Shideier, Will Doan, Amos Carter, Joseph Spear, J. C. Jamison, W. A. Rushton, Harry Rector, R. W. Lewis, Warren Duke; Misses Patton, Caroline McAdams, Cora DeVeece, Doris Roach, Jessie Sims, Minnie Sims, Mary Sims, Jessie Harkleroad, Iva Inman, Marjorie Moore, Oate McClain, Emma Murphy and Lola Heagan. The class meets Monday, Tuesday and Friday afternoons. Mrs. Horace L. Hanna is purchasing agent for the knitters and Mrs. Will Schoel, director. Mrs. Ed. Hiatt is chairman of the sewing division and the heads of the four units are Mesdames Charles Tucker, Alva Hornaday, M. E. Vaughn and R. W. Stephenson. Dr. Cooper is instructing the first-aid class.

South Bend has been doing notable work for the Red Cross and conservation. Miss Ada Hillier, supervisor of household arts, is in charge of a big mass meeting to be held for the purpose of arranging classes in conservation. The employees of Robertson Brothers' Department Store will give a Red Cross dance September 26, the proceeds of which are to be used to buy yarn for soldiers' garments. The committee in charge of the dance is composed of Mrs. Emma McLean, Miss Cecelia Kane, Miss Margaret Vahliet, Mrs. Rose Mace Murphy, Miss Ora Baker, Miss Ada Sale, Joseph Cunningham, Edward Morse, John Haase, Frank Robertson, A. Drayton and Ray Cooper. The high school juniors also will give a dance September 28. Miss Katherine Klingel is sponsor for the occasion. A musical entertainment has been planned by the Worth While Red Cross Auxiliary 26, the proceeds to be used in winter Red Cross work. Among those taking part will be Miss Josephine Decker, Miss Helen Gullfoyle, Mrs. Fred Woodward, Mrs. E. M. Morris and Miss Esther Fulton.

Red Cross knitting is under the direction of Mrs. L. T. McCollum, chairman. The members of the extension committee are Mrs. G. H. Warner, chairman; Mrs. A. J. Gernhart, Mrs. D. A. Pugh and Mrs. Loren Kenyon. Mrs. E. A. Doan is chairman of the general committee.

Dekalb County Red Cross officials have directed every chapter in the county and its branches to make regular monthly reports of all receipts and expenditures, which will be published. Donations will be noted and an accurate permanent record made of all financial matters. The executive committee for the county follows: L. G. Whitten, Auburn; George Carroll, Garrett, Mrs. Ora Knisel, Butler; W. H. Leas, Waterloo; Frank Bowman, St. Joe; E. H. Branch, Ashley and Dr. F. S. Browne of Corunna.

No Requisitioning of Wheat Contemplated.

The Food Administration authorizes the following statement:

Mr. Hoover said that any statement purporting to come from him that the Government contemplated requisitioning wheat from farmers is untrue.

Except in certain very limited areas where anti-war and pro-German propaganda is being carried on, there was no disposition to withhold the wheat from the Government and the allies.

The farmers are very busy planting very greatly increased acreage of winter wheat. The report of the millers' committee shows that all mills in the Central and Southern States are running over the normal of last year, and while the lateness of the harvest has shortened supplies to mills in the northeastern section, this is now remedied by arrivals of Canadian wheat.

I am informed that the Washburn-Crosby mills at Minneapolis are running at 90 per cent. of capacity.

Forty-three States Organized for War

Great National Machine Working Smoothly With Washington Directing.

Nation-wide local organization for war purposes is now approaching completion, according to a report just made to the several State Councils by the section on co-operation with States of the National Council of Defense. In every State in the Union there is by this time an official State Council of Defense; and in 43 of the 48 States a chain of county or local Councils has been developed. Two more States have planned to begin such local organization at once. Every week the section on co-operation with States hears of new districts organized and new activities undertaken by the local organizations.

The reports which come to Washington from the State Councils show the value of the decentralization thus obtained. The most useful sort of war work is that done locally by individuals who come into personal touch with all the elements in their community and who know their field like a book. Not only are the county and town Councils of Defense useful in doing work for which there is a unique demand in their own locality, but they are especially valuable in carrying through projects initiated either in Washington or in the State Councils.

The great machine is now working smoothly. Suppose Washington wishes local co-operation throughout the country in some particular task. Through the section on co-operation with States it calls for the help of the State Councils; the State Councils pass on the work to the county or town councils; and these in turn in some cases direct the work of subordinate Councils and committees. With a minimum of duplication the work is carried on locally under Federal direction. And the machine works the other way, too. Any suggestion from a local organization may be transmitted to Washington and be made the basis of work in as much of the country as is prepared for it.

There are many interesting variations in local organization. While the county is the usual unit of State subdivision, in many of the smaller Eastern States the township or municipality has been taken as the unit, while several States have town Councils working under the county Councils.

THREE WAYS OF CHOOSING MEMBERS.

There are three distinct methods of choosing the members of Local Councils. In a majority of the States the members were appointed directly by the governor or the State Council, but in a few States certain county officials were ex-officio constituted the County Council and in many cases the State Council arranged a meeting of prominent citizens, at which the county elected its Council members. The relation between State and local organization varies from Wisconsin, where the work of the State Council is law and all the activities of the County Councils are supervised with greatest care, to Massachusetts, where the municipal Councils are held entirely competent to manage their own affairs and receive nothing more binding than suggestions from the statehouse. It may generally be said that local organizations are given wide discretion by the State bodies.

MOST ARE SELF-SUPPORTING.

In a majority of cases the local Councils are self-supporting, sometimes being supported by volunteer contributions and in a few cases by appropriations from the local authorities. The general verdict seems to be that the financial problem is easier for local than for State organizations.

Detailed information as to the work that the different States are doing is being collected and filed by the section on co-operation with States, and is at the disposal of the public. The section undertakes to act as a clearing house for the State Councils, transmitting suggestions and advice from one to the other and furthering the rapid growth of the whole vast system of war activities.

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

IGNORANCE OR INDIFFERENCE

Ignorance or indifference in places of responsibility is liable to bring about disaster, especially in war times. A surprising instance of this fact has been found in a school man—a high school principal who has unthinkingly, we hope, rather than through ignorance, put a premium on idleness and has discouraged the young patriot. A letter came recently to the Indiana State Council of Defense from a young man who has been enrolled with the United States Boys' Working Reserve and who has been working in a munition plant during the vacation. When school opened, he went to his principal and asked if he could have his schedule so arranged that he could devote part of the day to continuing his work in the munition plant. The principal was indifferent to the request and, ignoring the real point at issue, twitted the boy about funds. "Doesn't your father give you all the money you want?" the principal asked sharply. "That ought to satisfy you. If he supports you there is no need of trying to do so yourself." Instead of encouraging the patriotic impulse that prompted the boy to give his leisure moments to patriotic service, the principal discouraged the notion of a boy's working when he could be idle instead. That an educator could so speak, at any time, to a youth under his guidance, seems incomprehensible. Everyone knows that under any circumstances the youth should be encouraged to follow industry; that he should employ his time to advantage; that his success as a student depends on his success as a worker. These principles, in war times, have a tremendous significance, a significance which no one who reads the papers and is awake to the needs of his country can neglect. War and its needs demand the utilization of every resource, both human and material. Schools are rightfully demanding regular attendance and increased mental alertness on the part of the youth of America. There must be no conflict between these two demands, but rather a compromise in the form of co-operation for higher efficiency for the achievement of national victory.

The school man, right now, is the very one to bring about this patriotic co-operation. He must be broad enough to smash tradition and readjust his own mental attitude as well as the curriculum and rules of the school so that the needs of the hour will be met without lowering educational standards. This same problem has been solved successfully in other countries and there is no excuse for the indifference displayed in this incident.

The slogan every place today is "Economize and Produce." Economize not only applies to foodstuffs and other necessities of life, but to time also. It is practical, by stimulated effort, increased efficiency and a re-arranged program to effect such economy in time as to enable the older youth of our country to become producers of war necessities and foodstuffs. In accomplishing this end, the educators of the state will not only be rendering real patriotic service, but will lay the foundation for such a rejuvenation of our present school system as will relegate to the past what P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, is pleased to call "the old storage battery method of overcharging a boy with a confusing mass of information" and replace it with a practical sort of training which harmonizes with the demands of the age in which we live.

Democracy must live. For it to live we must fight. To fight successfully we must produce supplies. To produce sufficient supplies everybody must work. Honor to the patriotic boy who would work as well as study. The boy who can drive nails as well as appreciate Chaucer's Canterbury Tales has the making of the type of citizen who will rehabilitate this world when peace comes.

TO MAKE THE HOSPITALS SAFE, TOO

To the many reasons why the United States went to war with Germany, and why it must continue to prosecute the fight with every ounce of vigor and resource, add the following from the official report from the west front of a German aerial attack on territory occupied by the St. Louis and Harvard hospital units:

"Five bombs were thrown. The explosions instantly killed Lieut. William F. Fitzsimmons of the Medical Officers Reserve Corps, United States Army, and three army privates, and wounded Lieuts. Clarence A. McGuire, Thaddeus D. Smith and Rea W. Whidden, Officers Reserve Corps, United States Army, six privates, a woman nurse and 22 patients.

"The hospital has 1800 beds under canvas in a quadrangle 800 feet square, is in a district where there are many similar institutions and is unmistakable as a hospital."

Of the same incident, an Associated Press dispatch said:

"Germany is apparently conducting a deliberate aerial offensive against allied hospitals. * * * Numerous attacks have been made within the last fortnight, in which hospitals plainly marked have been singled out for attack. * * *

"A typical instance of the new form of German frightfulness was reported today from the French front. German aviators dropped bombs every twenty minutes during several hours of daylight on a hospital in Vandelain Court; nineteen persons killed and twenty-six wounded."

ROOT FLAYS AGITATORS

"A nation which declares war and goes on discussing whether it ought to have declared war or not is impotent, paralyzed, imbecile, and earns the contempt of mankind and the certainty of humiliating defeat and subjection to foreign control.

"Before the decision of a proposal to make war men may range themselves upon one side or the other of the question; but after the decision in favor of war the country has ranged itself, and the only issue left for the individual citizen is whether he is for or against his country.

"From that time on arguments against war in which the country is engaged are enemy arguments.

"They encourage the enemy. They tend to introduce delay and irresolution into our own councils.

"The men who are speaking and writing and printing arguments against the war now, and against everything which is being done to carry on the war, are rendering more effective service to Germany than they ever could render in the field with arms in their hands."—Elihu Root.

THE FOOD PLEDGE

The food pledge is making its way very rapidly with the whole American people, but the terrible world emergency behind it has not yet come home to all of us. Living in a land which now has the largest remaining stock of food in the world, we are a little slow to realize that this stock can not possibly be our own to use as we see fit, but must be divided with countries where famine is a constant haunting specter. We live in the midst of plenty this year. But famine is just across the seas, and next year, or two years from now, it may be in our own land unless we can realize the full significance of food saving today and adjust our habits to provide for tomorrow.

Every provision of the food pledge, from wheat to soap fats, has been carefully thought out after detailed study of the world's supply of food today and its probable supplies for several years to come.

Butter must be conserved because the world's stock of edible fats is rapidly diminishing and an increased production can not be secured except by organized effort in the dairy and allied industries extending over several years.

Sugar must be conserved because there is a serious, immediate shortage.

Every available medium for keeping the food pledge before every man, woman and child in the United States must be used during the whole period of the war and even for a considerable period afterwards. For this problem of saving food is a responsibility put upon everyone every day. To the individual at the breakfast or dinner table it may seem one of the lesser duties of war. But in the mass it is one of our greatest and most immediate duties. Every publication and every person that aids in the daily work of reminding the American people of this duty renders a true patriotic service.—The Official Bulletin.

Food Administration on Milk Problem

Letter Sets Forth Absence of Legal Authority for Fixing Prices.

The attitude of the United States Food Administration in regard to the milk problem, as affecting almost every section of the United States, was clearly outlined recently in a letter from the United States Food Administrator to I. Elkin Nathans of New York City, secretary of the New York Milk Conference Board. The letter follows:

"I have given earnest consideration to your request for the intervention of the food administration in the pending settlement of milk prices with producers' representatives. As you are aware, the administration has no authority to intervene or to fix prices.

INQUIRY BEING MADE.

"We have a special committee engaged in an inquiry as to the cost of producing milk and its distribution, with a view to publication. The study is based not only upon inquiry into the agricultural phases, but also the actual commercial experience in milk sales during recent years and the co-ordinate prices of feed and labor. You will understand that such an inquiry must be exhaustive and will require time and consideration.

"The probable large corn crops; the arrangement with the millers by which mill feeds will be cheaper, and the export embargo on many feeds, including cottonseed meal, will, I am convinced, reduce the cost of feed and consequently of milk production later in the fall.

FAVORS MONTHLY CONTRACTS.

"In consequence of this, I stated to a similar request from the producers, that while we could not intervene, that we did believe public interest would be better served if any contracts to be made were limited from month to month.

"We are anxious that the price of milk should not advance to the already sorely tried city consumer and are convinced that all experience shows that increase in price will diminish consumption.

"On the other hand, we are in no position to pass upon either the justice or injustice of the producers' demands. Not only have we no authority to do so, but it seems to me that intervention in local trade settlements of this character, if necessary, rests upon State and city officials and not upon the federal government."

Hendricks County Organization Full

Chairman Theodore Martin Has a Comprehensive Council and is at Work.

One of the most comprehensive plans of organization reported from the canvass of Indiana counties is that of the Hendricks County Council of Defense, which is headed by Theodore Martin.

Mr. Martin inaugurated four-minute talks in the moving picture theaters of Danville before his committee was fully organized. It is now making a regular line of addresses and also serves as the Council's publicity committee.

The Women's Service League has worked with the Red Cross and has done much knitting. They are now engaged in securing a complete enrollment in the Hoover food organization.

In some townships of the county 94 per cent. of the boys have been enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve. The public schools are assisting in this work.

The Committee on Inspection and Welfare consists of four sections, three members each; each section consists of a doctor, a teacher and a mother. Their duties in brief are to keep in touch with conditions where boys may be placed and to keep in touch with like organizations in other counties.

The finance committee of the council is headed by Marion Bailey, a patriotic business man, and J. C. Clay, an influential farmer.

The following is the organization in detail:

FOUR-MINUTE MEN.

—Zim E. Dougan, Danville, County Director—
Committeemen for Towns and Townships of County—

1. John Moore, Plainfield.
2. Grant Martin, Cartersburg.
3. Benjamin Edmondson, Hazelwood.
4. Fred Whicker, Stilesville.
5. C. D. Knight, Coatesville.
6. Milber Kendall, Amo.
7. Marshall Underwood, Danville.
8. George B. Davis, North Salem.
9. Ora E. Leak, Lizton.
10. E. W. Sawyer, Pittsboro.
11. Rev. R. Emery, Brownsburg.
12. C. M. Roark, Danville.
13. Rev. F. H. Collier, Danville.
14. C. E. Kelley, Clayton.

THE WOMAN'S SERVICE LEAGUE.

—Mrs. Mary J. Christie, Danville, County Director—

Committeemen for Towns and Townships—

1. Mrs. Everett Hopkins, Brownsburg.
2. Mrs. W. F. Franklin, Danville.
3. Mrs. Charles W. Bridges, Coatesville.
4. Mrs. O. H. Wisehart, North Salem.
5. Mrs. Claude Boyd, Stilesville.
6. Mrs. Joseph Pruitt, Plainfield.
7. Mrs. C. E. Shields, Clayton.
8. Mrs. Charles Evans, Brownsburg.
9. Mrs. Paul K. Christie, Hadley.
10. Mrs. Ed. Sawyer, Pittsboro.
11. Mrs. O. E. Leak, Lizton.
12. Mrs. Otis Frazee, Danville.

BOYS' WORKING RESERVE.

—Ralph E. Arnett, Danville, County Director—
Committeemen for Towns and Townships—

1. J. F. Everett, Brownsburg.
2. Milburn Easley, Danville.
3. A. J. Stevenson, Amo.
4. Frank B. Hopkins, North Salem.
5. Julian V. Ray, Stilesville.
6. A. D. Johnson, Plainfield.
7. J. M. McHaffie, Clayton.
8. Frank Herdrick, Brownsburg.
9. J. Fred Hull, Danville.
10. Chester Parker, Pittsboro.
11. George Reitzel, Brownsburg.
12. Charles McBrayer, Danville.
13. J. P. Snodgrass, Danville.

COMMITTEE ON INSPECTION AND WELFARE.

—El River, Union and Middle Townships—
1. G. H. Reitzel, Brownsburg.

2. Dr. Wm. H. Terrell, Pittsboro.
  3. Mrs. Wallace Ergenbrey, North Salem.
- Brown, Lincoln and Washington Townships—
1. J. F. Everett, Brownsburg.
2. Dr. J. M. Marsh, Brownsburg.
3. Mrs. Horace Zimmermann, Bridgeport.

- Guilford, Liberty and Franklin Townships—
1. J. M. McHaffie, Stilesville.
2. Dr. Amos Carter, Plainfield.
3. Mrs. Charlie Robards, Stilesville.

- Marion, Clay and Center Townships—
1. J. Fred Hull, Danville.
2. Dr. J. H. Hicks, Amo.
3. Mrs. Horace Miles, Danville.

COUNTY COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Theodore T. Martin, Danville, Chairman.
Mrs. Mary J. Christie, Danville, Secretary.
Ralph E. Arnett, Danville, Director Boys' Working Reserve.
Marion Bailey, Lizton, and J. C. Clay, North Salem, Finance Committee.
Charles Bridges, Coatesville.
Eddie Blair, Danville.

HOME GUARDS.

—Solon A. Enloe, Director—

Squad units are being organized in all towns of the county. Leaders for each squad will be selected after ability is known. Local squads will meet once a week and drill; all squads will meet once a month and drill in mass in county seat.

Safeguarding of Women Workers

Recommended for Attention of County Councils in Industrial Centers.

Recognizing the danger of abuses that might creep in because of the emergency in industry, due to war pressure, the Indiana Industrial Board, through J. J. Walsh, State Factory Inspector, urged the State Council of Defense to co-operate in an effort to safeguard women and girls who might be subject to dangerous and immoral influences. As a result the State Council directed a bulletin to chairmen of County Councils in industrial centers urging them to keep on the lookout for and report violations of the law to the proper authorities. The Council by the same motion urged upon the industrial board the importance of enforcing all laws directed toward making the conditions surrounding such employment conducive to the moral and physical welfare of female workers, as it is rendered necessary by the emergencies growing out of the war. County Councils are asked to avail themselves of all existing social agencies, such as the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the Associated Charities, Juvenile Courts, Truant officers and the State Manufacturers' Association, in seeking to prevent the exploitation of women or placing them in situations conducive to immorality.

LETTER FROM INSPECTOR WALSH.

The council's attention to the matter was asked in the following letter from Mr. Walsh:

"May we ask the co-operation of your honorable body in a most important matter, that of maintaining during these trying times the proper respect and appreciation of the womanhood of our State? After careful investigation by the factory inspection department we are convinced that there is no such scarcity of male labor in this State at this time as would warrant any employer placing women or young girls in employment that is dangerous and liable to subject them to a severe accident, or work the character of which tends to a lowering of the moral standard. You will rightly agree that the great importance of maintaining the highest possible degree of respect and appreciation for the womanhood of our State, regardless of station, age or color, is barely surpassed in importance by the great principles for which we are struggling. In fact, the dignity and refinement of the gentler sex is the one supreme elevating influence of man, and if we are to prevent a future condition that will subject all noble-minded men to shame and humiliation due to the fact that we will be constantly encountering women or young girls who have been maimed in industry, or observe others of the sex that have become depraved due to the character of employment and association, the most careful attention should be given to this matter.

"We would respectfully submit for the consideration of your honorable body the question of appointing in all industrial centers a committee of at least three citizens, to be composed of one representative of the employers, a laboring man who has given some study to working conditions and at least one citizen of the community that is recognized for his or her interest in the welfare of women and young girls and who has made a study of industrial conditions. This committee to investigate conditions and prevent the employment of women or young girls in any line of endeavor that is extra hazardous from the standpoint of life, health or morals.

"This committee could arrange for the mobilization of all surplus male labor and see that all hangers-on around pool rooms, saloons and other loafing places are given an opportunity to perform the labor that properly belongs to men and justify their existence.

"Confident of receiving your prompt and hearty co-operation in this important matter and wishing you the fullest measure of success in your noble work, we remain,

"Yours very truly,

"THE INDUSTRIAL BOARD OF INDIANA,
"By John J. Walsh, Factory Inspector."

The Council directed that a bulletin be telegraphed to chairmen of County Councils directing their attention to the imperative need of their communities sowing the allotted wheat acreage in order that the needs of the United States government be supplied.

At the request of Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Indiana representative of Herbert Hoover, Federal Food Administrator, the Council directed an appeal to the people of Indiana to do their share toward saving the State's portion of the 100,000 tons of sugar wanted for export to France.

FALSE REPORT CIRCULATED.

The council also at Mr. Hoover's suggestion repudiated the report being circulated that the federal government has any intention of confiscating any of the surplus food supply that has been conserved by Indiana housewives. The State Food Commissioner brands the disseminators of this report as "worse than traitors," and the absence of any such purpose on the part of the government will be announced through a special bulletin from the State Council to the people of the State.

Every chairman of a County Council in Indiana is expected by the State Council to take prompt and effective action directed by the following important telegram relative to increased acreage and production for 1918, which is the report of the Food Committee of the State Council on the subject:

"The United States Department of Agriculture and the National Food Administration urgently request Indiana farmers to increase acreage of wheat twenty-five per cent. and rye thirty-five per cent. The necessary acreage in your county is estimated wheat..... rye..... (here supply figures). These crops are absolutely necessary to meet food demands. Only a few days remain for seeding. Every agency in your county should be used. Call on the county agent, food production committee, Farmers Institute officers, grain dealers and millers. Use papers and other agencies to secure largest possible acreage. We urge immediate action and request an early report."

Resolutions Adopted.

At the regular meeting of the Council of Defense of Marion county (Indianapolis), resolutions directing the attention of the public to the sin of tempting soldiers and calling on all peace officers to enforce the laws that will sustain their efficiency were adopted.

More Wheat Asked of Indiana Farms

Better Live Stock Also Planned as Source of Vastly Increased Food Supply.

Important matters touching on increased production of live stock and grain in Indiana were considered at the tenth meeting of the committee on Food Production and Conservation of the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 21. The meeting was attended by Chairman Ralph W. Moss; W. W. Bonner, secretary; G. I. Christie, director; Harry McCarthy, representing Ralph Polk; F. C. Heacock, W. J. Hogan, Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Hoover representative in Indiana; L. H. Wright, J. C. Beavers, Z. M. Smith, W. Q. Fitch and representatives of the Indiana Manufacturers of Dairy Products.

How to place more and better live stock on Indiana farms was the subject taken up with the agricultural committee of the State Bankers' Association. Mr. Bonner, chairman of the committee, reported that all the banks in the State were sent a letter urging them to assist in the movement by organizing young people's live stock clubs and contests and encouraging the keeping of breeding stock on farms, the feeding of cattle, hogs and sheep, the building and filling of silos, and encourage dairymen to maintain their herds and adopt better methods of feeding and management.

J. C. Beavers of Purdue reported plans for a State-wide seed campaign. A determined effort will be made in Indiana to produce a larger corn crop for 1918. A tremendous increase is possible through the proper selection of the seed, which would result in a larger yield per acre. The report designated October 15 to 20 as a week to be known as seed corn week. Mr. Guthrie moved the adoption of the report. The motion was seconded by Mr. Bonner and carried.

WILL USE SCHOOL FORCES.

Z. M. Smith suggested using the various school forces to assist in the seed corn campaign, and to accomplish this suggested that the superintendent of public instruction be asked to co-operate in the work. It was moved by Mr. Guthrie that Horace Ellis, State superintendent of public instruction, be asked to co-operate in the seed corn campaign. The motion was seconded by Mr. Bonner and carried.

A telegram was presented by Professor Christie from the United States Department of Agriculture, in which the federal government offers to pay the salaries and expenses of fifteen men for eight weeks to assist in carrying out the seed corn campaign. Mr. Bonner moved that the director accept the assistance offered through the United States Department of Agriculture. The motion was seconded by Mr. Guthrie and carried.

A copy of a resolution written by the State Dairy Association, which had been presented to the State Council of Defense, was then read to the food committee by the secretary. The resolution concerned the dairy industry in Indiana. It stated that the dairy farmers were not receiving enough compensation for their products on account of the increased cost of production. After a discussion of the resolution the following motion was made by Mr. Heacock:

READY FOR CONFERENCE.

"That Professor Christie be instructed to report to the Indiana State Dairy Association that their resolution had been read and discussed and that the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation stands ready to confer with the State Dairy Association on the matter, and further, that the Dairy Association be asked to furnish some concrete basis whereby the situation as outlined in their resolution could be met." This motion was seconded by Mr. Guthrie.

Professor Christie reported on the meeting with Dr. Pearson, representing Secretary Houston of the United States Department of Agriculture, relative to the farm labor situation, particularly as affected by the draft. Governor Goodrich attended the meeting and after conferring with the committee on the proposition agreed that the food committee should prepare a letter to be sent to the war department over his signature relative to the farm labor situation. Copies of this letter were also sent to the State district exemption boards.

THE SEED CORN CAMPAIGN.

The following is the report of a plan for the seed corn campaign, which the committee adopted:

"There is every indication that the need for corn at the close of 1918 will be just as great as it is now. Corn is not only our main grain feed for livestock, but under present conditions its importance as human food is steadily increasing. As long as the present war continues, America will be called on for increased meat and bread production. For fattening pork and cattle, for maintaining breeding and work stock, and for furnishing food for man, corn will be needed in large quantities. In maintaining the production of the crop, the people of Indiana can render a valuable service to themselves, the nation and the world.

"Corn is the most important crop produced in this State. It is also the most profitable crop produced by most farmers, but it will not be desirable for Indiana farmers to increase the 1918 corn acreage much, if any, above that planted in 1917. Increased production must come largely from increased yields per acre. This will require a determination on the part of many that heretofore has not been fully exercised. Field selection of seed corn is known to be one of the best ways of increasing yields, but on account of this year's crop being late, and already damaged by frosts in some sections, field selection of seed is much more important than usual. This means of increasing the yield of next year's crop is so important that some organized effort should be made to bring the matter to the attention of every one interested directly or indirectly in farming.

SOME THINGS TO BE DONE.

"Although the seed corn planted in Indiana is usually of better than average quality, some organized effort needs to be made to see that sufficient seed is selected and properly stored for planting the 1918 crop.

"To bring farmers, boys and girls and others to a full realization of the importance of maintaining and if possible increasing corn production, it will be necessary to hold public meetings in every local community and in the schools throughout the State and discuss the importance of early seed corn selection and its value in securing a maximum crop next year. The value of early field selection of seed corn will be set forth in a leaflet which may be sent to all parties interested. The proper use of printed posters should be beneficial in arousing interest in seed selection and storage. Much good should also be accomplished by calling this matter to the attention of all teachers so that they may, if it seems desirable, encourage their students to take an active part in this work."

METHODS OF PROCEDURE.

Through a leader, the plan of work outlined above should be arranged for each county in the State. In county agent counties this work may be organized and started by the county agent with the assistance of business men, bankers, grain dealers, millers, farmers institute chairman, the teachers and other local organizations. Where there are no county agents, special agents should be appointed to take care of the work along the lines suggested for the county agent. These agents should co-operate with local organizations, hold meetings, give instructions, and be of assistance to the people in every way possible.

Much interest and additional weight could be given the movement by designating October 15th to 20th as Seed Corn Week during which sufficient seed for planting the 1918 crop should be selected and properly stored for drying. During this week every one interested in farm life should consider it his or her duty to take an active part in the work. Students in the higher grades and high schools should be taught how to select and store seed corn and be allowed time to select 100 to 200 ears.

The leaflets, posters and other literature being prepared may be distributed through the bankers, grain dealers, millers and schools. All of these organizations co-operating to do effective work should be able to reach every farmer in the State, either personally or with the literature.

Merchants' Economy

Following an address by Prof. J. J. Pettijohn, Laporte merchants to a considerable number decided on the collective or co-operative system of delivery, and the matter of organizing such a delivery was placed in the hands of a committee. The grocers and meat market men are most directly interested, but dry goods and clothing merchants also are interested, and are figuring on going into the plan, though perhaps on a different basis from the grocers.

The sentiment of the 40 per cent. seems to favor a privately owned delivery system, the merchants to make arrangements with the owner or manager of the system for the delivery of their goods at a flat rate. The Benson system has been investigated somewhat by a number of Laporte merchants, and Prof. Pettijohn promised to send Sec. Vaughn additional information on this system.

Prof. Pettijohn has gathered data on collective delivery systems in 100 or more towns. About 23 towns in Indiana have such systems, he said, while Michigan has a great many more.

Incidentally, he stated that his department would this winter arrange for the holding of a number of institutes for merchants, somewhat in the same way that the agricultural department holds institutes for farmers. He was invited to hold the first one of these institutes here.

He divided the collective delivery systems into two general classes: the system that is privately owned and the one that is co-operative, owned and operated, that is by the merchants themselves.

He mentioned Ann Arbor, Mich., as a good example of the co-operative system. There 17 wagons are used and there are five deliveries per day within the city limits. The cost to grocers of a delivery is 3 2-8 cents, if they are members of the stock company. If not the cost is 4 1-8 cents. To butchers the cost is 2 3-8 cents if they are members and 3 1-8 cents if they are non-members. The cost of delivery here has been reckoned at between eight and nine cents, and merchants said they believed this was about correct.

Investigations had shown, Mr. Pettijohn said, the following reductions in the cost of delivery at the following towns, by the use of the collective system: Pontiac, Mich., 50 per cent; Excelsior Springs, Mo., 20 to 25 per cent; Angola, Ind., 20 to 50 per cent; Rushville, Ind., 10 to 20 per cent; Massillon, O., 25 per cent; Freeport, O., 50 per cent; Elwood, Ind., 25 per cent. Other towns showed similar results.

The cost of delivery to the grocer has been calculated as 3 per cent of the total income from all sales.

THE DELIVERY PLAN.

The collective plan of delivery means, from the customer's standpoint, that instead of each merchant doing his own delivering, a company or organization, especially for that purpose, will do all the delivering for the stores that go into the scheme. It will mean that deliveries will be made at stated hours, say 8 o'clock, 10, 1, 3 and 5, instead of at all times of day. Customers will be sure of getting their goods on the next delivery after the order is given, but will not be able to call up at any time and get immediate delivery, which some of them now do or attempt to do, causing much annoyance, additional expense and waste.

Secretary Vaughn stated that the majority of the merchants have signed up. A committee consisting of D. J. Hunter, chairman; L. M. Vaughn, secretary; Albert Draves, Boyd Grandstaff, H. R. Kloksiem, Jacob Levine, George L. McLane, Lot V. Oglesby, William C. Tews and Peter N. Wolf, was authorized to investigate further and to negotiate with such parties as are necessary to consummate the project.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 41.

September 15, 1917.

—Red Cross—

To County Councils of Defense:

The American Red Cross is the officially recognized agency for voluntary effort on behalf of the armed forces of the Nation and for the administration of relief. With its widely distributed local units and with its well defined program for the social welfare of the families of soldiers and sailors, it is in a strategic position to conduct a unified, nation-wide program in this field.

It is earnestly desired by the Council of National Defense and the State Council of Defense that there should be the most helpful co-operation between the County Councils of Defense and the local chapters of the Red Cross wherever co-operation is practicable, and particularly in the field of "Home Service." This is desirable not only for the sake of public interest in this work and for its efficiency, but also for the welfare and consideration due to the families concerned.

Will you therefore kindly request your Morals and Social Committee to confer at once with the local Red Cross officials and report at your next meeting as to the services the County Council of Defense may perform in co-operation with the Red Cross?

—Speakers' Bureau—

To County Councils of Defense:

Professor J. J. Pettijohn, in charge of the Speakers' Bureau, makes the following suggestion:

"We are using up a great deal of money in long distance calls and telegrams that could be saved if the county chairmen throughout the State would give us more time on our speaking dates."

In order to conduct the work as economically as possible, we would appreciate it if this suggestion could be adopted as far as possible by the county chairmen.

—Exemption Boards—

To County Councils of Defense:

We are advised by the Council of National Defense that the war department desires the aid of the different State and County Councils of Defense in obtaining volunteer clerical assistants for local exemption boards. There has been but a limited appropriation made by the government for this purpose, and, unless the boards secure this assistance, they will be unable to continue the performance of their work.

A large amount of work is yet to be done, inasmuch as the Secretary of War has recently announced that all registrants not already examined will be examined in the near future, and it is within the bounds of possibility that a second draft of a half million of men will be held within the next few months.

Will you please, therefore, confer with your local exemption boards in order that you may discover their needs and whether or not they desire your aid. We are sure that the several county Councils can be of great service to the war department in this matter.

FOR SPECIAL ATTENTION OF WOMEN MEMBERS OF COUNTY COUNCILS.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense authorizes the following:

There is some misunderstanding about the registration for service which is being taken in different parts of the United States by the various divisions of the Woman's Committee. It is well to make clear the following facts:

1. The registration is purely voluntary—there is no compulsion about it.
2. The purpose is to secure an official record of the woman power of the country so that in case of emergency the government may know where to turn for any needed service.
3. Even though a woman offers her service when she registers, she will not be required to give that service if her circumstances have changed when she is asked to serve, and she is then unable to fill her promise.
4. The registration is not designed to take women from their homes at any time unless they are able and willing to serve away from home.

The Woman's Committee has requested the State divisions to have the registrars thoroughly instructed in regard to the work, and suggests to the State chairmen that registration taken at the polls on a registration day formally proclaimed by the Governor of the State, or announced by the State Council of Defense, has been found most satisfactory.

The misunderstanding concerning registration is largely in districts of foreign population where the women think they are to be drafted for work outside their homes, whether they want to work or not. The Woman's Committee lays stress upon the statement that both the registration and the service are voluntary, but it urges that every woman over sixteen years of age register in order to complete a census of the woman power of the country which may be of inestimable value in war work.

The above suggestion from the Woman's Committee is in line with the effort heretofore made in this State to correct this misunderstanding. We are advised by Miss Julia Landers, the chairman of the Committee on Enrollment, that the misunderstanding is quite prevalent in Indiana, and special attention should be given to the correction.

ANNE STUDEBAKER CARLISLE,

Chairman, Woman's Section, State Council of Defense.

Save the Fats.

The Food Administration has issued the following:

Not long ago Field Marshal Hindenburg sent word to the German Government at Berlin that if his troops and the men and women who were making shells in the factories didn't have more fats something would happen to Germany.

Fats supply energy. Some fats are also necessary for growth and repair. All fats are important in the upkeep of the body. Hindenburg knew that if the German people did not get more fats they would be too weak to fight or work.

The fats we waste would almost supply Germany. Avoid waste and save them for ourselves and our allies.

Glycerine, the chief substance used in making explosives, is made from fats. Think of the thousands of tons of explosives that have been made in the last three years and you will understand why fats are so badly needed.

October 21, New Date

The Council of National Defense has sent the following letter to the several State Councils of Defense:

Supplementing our bulletin of September 8, No. 56, announcing food-pledge "clean-up" campaign, we beg to advise you that the United States Food Administration has changed the date of the "clean-up" campaign for the enrollment of women for food conservation, which is to be conducted under the direction of the Federal food administrators in the States from October 14 to 21.

This decision was made after a conference in Washington of the several Federal food administrators, at which the various problems of the campaign were discussed.

Eating Fish Would Save Other Foods

Source of Meat Supply Hitherto Unused May Prevent a Shortage.

Dr. Henry B. Ward of the United States Bureau of Fisheries spoke before the Indianapolis Committee on Food Conservation on Friday, September 21. He was secured by Director G. I. Christie to present the subject of fish with the view of conducting a fish-eating campaign in Indiana. Fish is meat and has a high food value, and the analysis, according to Dr. Ward, shows that fish meat contains as much building food as beefsteak.

The fisheries of the United States produce annually about 1,500,000,000 pounds of food, including shell fish. Alaska has a yearly output of about 250,000,000 pounds of fish, making the total yield for the American fisheries close to 2,000,000,000 pounds per year. The most promising outlook for an increase in the food supply by the fisheries is in fish hitherto unused, and those that have just been brought to the public attention, such as the shark, greyfish, toadfish, etc.

FISH SUPPLY EXCEEDS DEMANDS.

A campaign which would result in a greater consumption of fish would effect a saving of several million pounds of food per year, which is now wasted owing to the fact that the supply of fish is greater than the demand. A greater consumption of fish would also help to relieve the shortage of meats and other foods.

The food committee expects to conduct a series of demonstrations on the various ways of preparing fish during this fall and winter, not only in Indianapolis but throughout the State. The committee will open its new headquarters on Pennsylvania street, directly east of the Federal Building. The entire building will be devoted to the work of the committee.

The committee is planning to carry on an intensified conservation campaign during the fall and winter through their co-operation with Purdue and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. Frank McOuat, secretary of the committee, has just returned from the northern part of Indiana, where she has had a successful trip, establishing conservation headquarters in a number of cities. As a result of her activities the work will be taken up by Hammond, Gary, Indiana Harbor, East Chicago, Whiting, Valparaiso, Crown Point and Dyer.

A Public Benefactor.

The man who made potatoes grow this year where weeds grew last year is a public benefactor, even if he doesn't get appointed chairman of some committee on food production and conservation.—Newport, Ind., Hoosier State.

Resolutions.

BE IT RESOLVED, That the State Council of Defense, in conference assembled, extend to Governor James P. Goodrich the heartfelt sympathy of its members, in his hour of trial.

That he may be spared to guide his people safely through the throes of the momentous struggle between autocracy and democracy is the devoted prayer of the citizenship of Indiana.

With one accord we acclaim him as a servant faithful to his people.

The above resolutions were offered by former State Senator Robert E. Proctor, of Elkhart, at the meeting of the State Council of Defense with volunteer organizers, numbering more than 100, in the chamber of the House of Representatives, September 20, preliminary to the State-wide campaign. They were adopted unanimously, amid applause. The resolutions were conveyed to the Governor at the Methodist Hospital, where he has been for weeks, suffering from typhoid fever.

their bean crop. The wholesale price of beans is $8 per bushel and the average yield was twenty bushels to the acre. The beans would have been lost had not the boys' help been available, and farmers without exception are now enthusiastic supporters of the Boys' Reserve.

PORTER COUNTY.

Professor L. F. Bennett of Valparaiso has been appointed Associate County Director, with Professor C. W. Boucher of Porter county.

STATE HIGH SCHOOL ORGANIZER.

Agreeable to the suggestion that comes from Washington that every high school platform should ring forth the Nation's call to the youth of America for mental alertness, unflinching courage, self-sacrifice and intensified application to productive employment in those hours after school and during vacation, which formerly were wasted, the State Council of Defense has created the office of State High School Organizer.

Asa J. Smith of Wabash, Ind., has been selected to fill this position. He started a State-wide campaign this week, speaking in Fountain, Howard, Allen and Whitley counties.

His itinerary for the first week in October is as follows:

October 1, Miami county; October 2, Cass county; October 3, Carroll county; October 4, Tippecanoe county; October 5, Boone county.

Dr. Horace Ellis has sent out instructions to the principals of all high schools, advising that when Mr. Smith arrives at the school that the classes for the next period be dispensed with and that all the students, both boys and girls, be assembled in order to hear the patriotic message which Mr. Smith will bring to them. Particular emphasis will be placed on the United States Boys' Working Reserve, but the girls as well will be told how they can serve their country in time of war. Parents are also invited to these meetings in order that they may be aroused to the important part that the youth of America will play in helping to win this war.

MILLION BUSHEL SEED CORN.

One million bushels of high class seed corn are to be selected from Indiana fields October 22-26 if the program of the Indiana Committee on food production and conservation is carried out. Indiana farmers will plant approximately six million acres of corn in 1918. A bushel of seed is required for each six acres planted.

G. I. Christie, state food director, states that if all the seed for the 1918 crops could be selected from the field before the time of heavy freezes, and properly stored, the yield next year easily would be increased thirty million bushels.

Experiments conducted by the Purdue Experiment station comparing germination of corn selected at different stages of maturity are of interest. This work was started in the fall of 1907 and has been duplicated each year since so that the results are the average of seven years covering a number of conditions. Corn selected just before denting germinated 79.7 per cent. Corn that was nicely dented when selected germinated 93.5 per cent. The ripest ears selected when corn was ready to shock showed 92.6 per cent. germination, while the ripest ears at time of husking germinated 88.5 per cent. It will be seen that corn which is matured and selected before the heavy freezes gives the best quality of seed.

BOYS WORKING ON FARMS.

The farm labor problem is being met in some communities by using high school boys. Interested boys can render a big service in many lines of work on the farm. The following letter was received Monday by G. I. Christie, state food director, from C. M. Job, county agent, Columbus, Indiana:

"You will probably be interested to know of our first experience with a group of town boys in working for the farmers. One man asked for 21 boys to pull beans last Saturday. The county agent requested that the teachers in Columbus and East Columbus make the announcement that boys were wanted to pull beans. Eighty-five boys between the ages of 10 and 15 responded and were anxious to go.

"We could not use all of the boys, but got in touch with some other men who had beans to pull and they were glad to take a number of boys. We took 37 of the largest boys.

"The farmers came after the boys in the morning and brought them back in the afternoon. The boys took their dinner and received $1.00 to $1.20 for the day's work, according to their age. The farmers were well pleased with the work done by the boys. Two of the farmers engaged part of the boys to work next Saturday cutting corn and filling silo. Some other men in the county have already asked for boys to pull beans next Saturday."

MARKET FOR CANNED GOODS.

What shall be done with the surplus of canned vegetables and fruit is a question asked by many women of the State who have labored to can the large quantities yielded by the many gardens and orchards. These women are not so anxious to make money as they are to have this supply of food used by families who need it.

An attempt to help solve this problem and aid in disposing of these canned goods is being made by G. I. Christie, state food director. He finds it is largely a matter of locating the material that is for sale. There are many families ready to buy at good prices all the canned vegetables and fruit that can be had.

An organization of young women known as Tri Kappa's of Montmorenci have brought canned vegetables and fruit to the Lafayette curb market. A notice was run in the Lafayette papers stating the time the automobiles would arrive. Women of Lafayette have gathered in large groups and have waited more than an hour for the arrival of the Montmorenci people with their produce. The canned goods have all been readily sold at reasonable prices and in many cases orders were placed for future delivery.

An exhibit of canned products was held under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' Association of West Lafayette, the first of September. A large amount of canned vegetables were sold. People are demanding this material.

How many cans of vegetables and fruit have you for sale? Give sizes and kind of cans. State point to which these can be most conveniently delivered. These and other questions are being sent by the State food director to persons who have indicated they have materials for sale. Others who wish help should write at once to Office of Markets, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind. All possible help will be given in finding a market for surplus canned products.

According to statistics gathered by the national emergency food garden commission, one out of every ten person in Indiana is cultivating a food garden.

To Sell Liberty Bonds

The Owen county second Liberty loan organization will be headed by J. B. Bryan, cashier of the Spencer National Bank. His executive committee includes John Smith of the Exchange Bank, A. R. Marley of the Gasport Bank, A. H. Wampler, cashier of the Gosport Banking Company, and C. F. Lomatch, cashier of the Patrickburg Bank.

Harry Kitselman, Muncie manufacturer, heads the second Liberty loan organization in Delaware county. Frank McNaughton of the McNaughton company is vice-chairman of the general committee and head of the publicity department; J. Clyde Mansfield, assistant cashier of the Delaware County National Bank, secretary, with the following committees:

Executive Committee—K. A. Oesterle, F. D. Rose, Frank B. Bernard, P. W. Cooper, George L. Haymond, B. C. Bowman.

Building and Loan Committee—James M. Motenbocker, George N. Higman, A. O. Hoppes.

Publicity Committee—Frank McNaughton, Harry Wolf, H. E. Lewin, Walter McConnell.

Merchants' Committee—Vincent W. Jones, chairman; Frank J. Claypool, J. C. O'Harra, Ed. H. Bath, Edward B. Wilson.

Manufacturers' Committee—J. Lloyd Kimbrough, chairman; Ray P. Johnson, Warren M. Sample, Eugene E. Vate, A. C. Lipsitz.

Chairman for Daleville—J. N. Barnard.

Chairman for Selma—R. W. Barnard.

Chairman for Yorktown—R. S. Cummins.

Chairman for Albany—Bert A. Russell.

Chairman for Eaton—George W. Hoover.

Chairman for Gaston—Paul Powers.

Chairman for Oakville—Charles S. Kern.

Henry C. Davis is chairman of the Howard county second Liberty loan; Richard Ruddell, vice-chairman; Fred L. Trees, secretary, and Charles H. Havens, publicity manager. The organization includes representative business and professional men from every township in the county.

Second Farmers' Congress.

Professor G. I. Christie of the Committee on Food Production and Conservation of the Indiana State Council of Defense, President W. E. Stone of Purdue, Will H. Hays, chairman of the State Council of Defense, and Mrs. Hortense Tapp Moore of Rockville were the speakers at the second annual Farmers' Congress held at Lafayette, September 19. Mrs. Moore spoke on war preparation and emphasized the necessity for fullest co-operation, suggesting the township as the unit for organization.

It is all right for girls to play around with rifles if it amuses them, but it is more commendable to try for a high record on the kitchen range. —Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

"Burden of Food Conservation Must Fall Equally Upon All"

The problem of food conservation is one of many complexions, says the National Food Administration. We cannot and we do not wish, with our free institutions and our large resources of food, to imitate Europe in its policed rationing, but we must voluntarily and intelligently assume the responsibility before us as one in which everyone has a direct and inescapable interest. We must increase our export of foods to the allies, and in the circumstances of our shipping situation, these exports must be of the most concentrated foods. These are wheat, flour, beef, pork and dairy products.

We have other foods in great abundance which we can use instead of these commodities, and we can prevent wastes in a thousand directions. We must guard the drainage of exports from the United States, that we retain a proper supply for our own country, and we must adopt such measures as will ameliorate, so far as may be, the price conditions of our less fortunate.

We might so drain the supplies from the country to Europe as by the high prices that would follow to force our people to shorten their consumption. This operation of "normal economic forces" would starve that element of the community to whom we owe the most protection. We must try to impose the burden equally upon all. There is no royal road to food conservation. We can only accomplish this by the voluntary action of our whole people, each element in proportion to its means.

RESOLUTION

BE IT RESOLVED, That the Indiana State Council of Defense hereby puts itself on record as denouncing all acts and utterances of a disloyal nature.

To condemn and resent an act of treason is the plain duty of every American citizen.

The attention of our people has been called to the malicious, false and treasonable-like statements accredited to United States Senator Robert M. LaFollette.

Such words and acts not only hinder our efforts, but misrepresent the heart of our country in this war. They give aid and comfort to the enemy, which has been guilty of crimes against humanity unprecedented and almost beyond belief. Be it veiled or uncovered, treason is treason, wherever found and should be dealt with accordingly.

It is the sentiment of this Council that United States Senators should immediately give serious consideration to the question of removing from the United States Senate any and all members of that body whose acts or words are detrimental to a successful prosecution of the war.

The above resolution was adopted, without opposition, at the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense at its meeting October 3. It sets forth in unmistakable language the attitude of the Council on the subject of acts or words that may in any wise interfere with the successful prosecution of the war with Germany. County Councils are urged to give it the widest possible publicity, to the end that there be no question whatever as to how offenders are likely to be received.

Council on Record Against Disloyalty

Resolution Held Pertinent to Purpose for Which Defense Body Was Created.

"I think we would make a great mistake if we did not stand up and be counted. Mr. Keach, I think you are wrong in suggesting that this is a bid for popularity and that we would be accused of that. I am sure that the man who offered the resolution has nothing of that kind in his mind and that this will not be construed as such an action. Now this is exactly, in my opinion, in line with the very pertinent purposes of the Council of Defense.

"Now, we hear it as you men do not hear it—the effect of things like the speech of LaFollette, and wherever there is an opportunity, in words, if we can't do anything else, and in acts if we can, we must combat that influence, and if that speech had been made in Indiana I will say that the chairman of the State Council of Defense would have gone out and tried to have gotten action by some authority that would have taken him by the neck and put him out of the State of Indiana.

"I think this resolution ought to be adopted." Chairman Will H. Hays of the Indiana State Council of Defense thus declared himself favoring the adoption of the resolution, printed on page 1 of the Indiana Bulletin this week.

ADE REPORTS FALSE STORIES.

Mr. Hays left the chair, temporarily, to support the resolution, which had been presented by Frank Wampler. Mr. Wampler offered it after George Ade had declared he thought something more should be done by the Council, if possible, to offset the effect of such reports as had caused women of Newton county to quit knitting—that the officers at Fort Benjamin Harrison were selling Red Cross garments to soldiers, instead of giving them away. Mr. Ade also stated that there had been persistent reports that all canned goods, over a certain fixed quantity, found in private houses would be confiscated by the federal government, and he thought the State Council should assist in stamping out such sources of misinformation.

Mr. Woollen moved that the resolution be referred to a committee, but withdrew his motion when Mr. Wampler offered to withdraw the resolution rather than "temporize" on the subject. Mr. Woollen declined to vote on the adoption of the resolution, saying he preferred to have a longer time for its proper consideration.

Mr. Keach, seconding Mr. Woollen's motion, said the passage of the resolution would be regarded as a "bid for popularity."

Mr. Charles Fox moved the adoption of the resolution and the motion was seconded by A. E. Reynolds, and the motion carried without dissent.

Richard Lieber, secretary of the State Board of Forestry, called attention to the waste of fuel timber in forests of the State and the Council, by motion, agreed to endeavor to stimulate the County Councils to a realization of the importance of conserving wood fuel, "in view of the coal famine that is threatening." County Councils will be asked to make a survey of fuel timber available and report to the State Forestry Board, which, with the co-operation of the State Council of Defense, will endeavor to secure a market for such wood.

ALL REQUESTS COMPLIED WITH.

It was reported by the finance committee that every request that had been made by the United States Treasury Department had been complied with, in anticipation of the sale of the second liberty loan.

The transportation committee was asked to assist in the solution of a problem that confronts Marshall county onion growers, who reported the unwillingness of a railroad to accept partially loaded cars, necessitating a haul of as much as thirty miles to another railroad, there being no storage available for the season's crop.

Chairman Hays read a newspaper dispatch quoting Secretary of War Baker as follows: "Every effort that this country is capable of making should be applied to bringing the war to a successful conclusion. The resources of the country in a general way may be said to consist of men, money and material, and during the period of the war new enterprises of undertaking should be tried and justified by the test: Will the men, money and material so applied best contribute in this way to the winning of the war?" Mr. Hays said this purported to be a reply to the inquiry recently directed to the Council of National Defense by the Indiana State Council, asking a definition of the policy of the federal body on important public works, but that he had not received a copy of the Secretary's letter if it had been directed to him.

FINANCE COMMITTEE REPORT.

The finance committee of the Council submitted the following report for the month of September, which was approved and ordered placed on file:

Indianapolis, September 30, 1917.

To the State Council of Defense:

We submit the following statement of receipts and disbursements for the month of September, 1917:

PUBLIC WAR LETTER WRITER.

Mr. Ade presented for the consideration of the Council the suggestion that every County Council be advised to install in headquarters a typist who would serve as a voluntary letter writer for citizens wishing to correspond with men in the army. He said the plan had been introduced in some places and had been found a very prolific source of correspondence, which had been appreciated and enjoyed by the men in the training camps.

Inquiries relative to the formation of voluntary militia companies as "home guards" were referred to the committee on military affairs, where they will remain until "some means are found to provide the desired uniforms, guns and authority to act."

On motion of William Irwin, Professor G. I. Christie was directed to co-operate with the school authorities in an effort to secure the dismissal of school or the release therefrom of such boys and girls as might help save the tomato crop, which is wasting in the fields of Marion and Johnson counties owing to the scarcity of available labor.

Dr. Storms to Speak.

Dr. A. B. Storms of Indianapolis will represent the Indiana State Council of Defense in an address before the Indiana Bankers' Association at Evansville on the afternoon of October 10.

Food Administration to Make Bread Recommendations Soon.

The following statement was made public this week by the United States Food Administration:

"The Federal Trade Commission's inquiry into the cost of baking and distribution of bread is expected to be completed in a few days. As soon as this data can be properly considered, the Food Administration intends to announce its views as to standards, shape, and composition of bread and to make recommendations to the bakers, retailers, and consumers as to co-operation in reduction of price.

Organizers' Work Among Councils

Being Checked With a View to Carrying Out Recommendations to Strengthen Line-up.

Later reports from the teams of organizers whose canvass of the County Councils of the State last week did so much to revive patriotism in Indiana, indicate that there are many very effective local bodies, yet still much to be done before the ninety-two County Councils have been brought up to the standard of most of the counties of the State.

The recommendations of the organizers are being checked and catalogued and will be made the basis of a second drive, through personal visits, where possible, in an attempt to make every county organization complete and active. The State Council of Defense will continue to devote its attention to this work, until Indiana is in position to meet every request made of it by the President, the War Department and the Council of National Defense, as well as to execute matters of patriotic significance having their origin in the executive office of Governor James P. Goodrich or with the State Council itself.

Following are the brief final reports received from the teams of organizers:

Huntington.—Excellent meeting here today. Organization work progressing fine.

FRED I. KING.

Fowler.—Enthusiastic patriotic mass meeting. Court house packed. Five speeches. People aroused. Red Cross active. Conservation and increased production promising best conditions.

ALBERT W. BITTERS.

Connersville.—Connersville meeting a howling success. Response ready and enthusiastic. All departments working fine. Resolution asking senators from Indiana to vote for expulsion of LaFollette from senate unanimously adopted.

ENTIRE COMMITTEE.

Terre Haute.—Two good meetings here today in Vermillion county, one at Newport as scheduled. With daily paper and band we got a crowd for night meeting at Clinton. Judge Schoonover of Fountain county with us at Newport.

ALFRED D. MERRILL.

Warsaw.—Met with Council at Plymouth today. Organization in a chaotic state due to lack of directing head until within the last two weeks. Organization now under way.

CHARLES O. ROEMLER.

Evansville.—Boonville meeting at court room this afternoon. Warrick County Council active and fairly well organized. Local conditions good but general interest somewhat lacking. Considerable enthusiasm aroused in meeting and great earnestness shown. Want more speaking to arouse interest.

WM. H. EICHORN.

L. RAY LENICH.

Winchester.—Organization complete in Jay county.

Lawrenceburg.—Best meeting of trip held at Lawrenceburg today. W. H. O'Brien, chairman, presided. Every sub-committee reported. Their reports were excellent. Besides members of team prominent people of county made splendid addresses. The county is well organized and the work of County Council is well in hand.

JOHN CHEWNING.

Lagrange.—Meeting at Lagrange today. Reports of considerable criticism of government in war. Profess not to know reason for war and suspect motives. County Council has not appropriated any money for use of workers.

C. M. NIEZER.

Jasper.—Fine meeting here. Largely attended. County well organized and thoroughly awake. Great work being done to increase food production but seriously retarded by failure of railroads to furnish and deliver cars for fertilizers. Urge the matter be taken up with National Council and railroads compelled to furnish and deliver cars.

A. D. OGBORN.

Wabash.—Most satisfactory meeting here. Every part of county represented. Every committee headed efficiently.

H. S. NORTON.

Marion.—Meeting here poorly attended. Those attending will be active in the future. Congratulate you on your system. Judge Charles presided. Things here will eventually be in good shape.

JACKSON & CONROY.

Wabash.—Wells County Council just in process of organizing. Women's work well advanced, other members not ready for service.

FRED I. KING.

Kokomo.—Dandy meeting. Good chairman here who will work and you will get great assistance from Howard county when organized according to your system. JACKSON & CONROY.

W. H. EICHORN.

Evansville.—Meeting here in Court Room attended by appreciative audience. The local Council is well organized and doing work.

W. H. EICHORN.

Rochester.—Meeting here well attended by people from county districts. Only four members of County Council of Defense present. Chairman of county absent.

H. S. NORTON.

Winchester.—Organization in Randolph county completed.

L. RAY LENICH.

Kentland.—Big meeting in Kentland Opera House. County well organized. People enthused. Council busy. Red Cross active. No sedition. Splendid patriotism. Had grand reception.

ALBERT W. BITTERS.

Albion.—Afternoon meeting at Albion Court House. Good crowd. Condition in Noble county good.

C. M. NEIZER.

Cannelton.—Meeting splendid. Court House filled. Enthusiastic officers working hard and alert in all branches of service.

JOHN A. RIDDLE.

Terre Haute.—Organization meeting small but very successful.

EARL HOUCK.

Brazil.—We consider Clay county in fair shape. Our meeting was enthusiastic.

ED C. TONER.

Sullivan.—We are pleased to endorse work of the Sullivan County Council of Defense in every particular.

WM. H. SWAIN.

Jeffersonville.—Meeting here not well attended. At New Albany meeting fair. Full organization completed at both places.

D. FRANK CULBERTSON.

Vincennes.—Knox county in condition of preparation. Proper sentiment and patriotism exists here.

JESSE F. WEISMAN.

There are Bremens and Bremens.

In Bremen, Germany, you can't read a newspaper in English, you can't speak English in public or even on a telephone, you can't learn it in school. And if you questioned the divine right of the Kaiser to murder and rape, his butchers would shoot you before you could get to jail.

In Bremen, Indiana, you can read Dutch billingsgate in the enemy tongue, you can talk German with your mouth and both hands wherever you please, you can learn it in our public schools. And you can even blaspheme the President.

But we're getting wiser, slowly, and we may collect the penalty yet.—Bremen (Ind.) Enquirer.

Press Comment.

Some of the reforms now being inaugurated by the Council of Defense should be continued permanently after the war so far as they relate to the running of stores dealing in various kinds of merchandise.

* * * *

The State Council of Defense will now tackle the milk question; it is getting to be a serious problem. Like many other things the people seldom realize the importance of it until it grows desperate. It is fast reaching that stage now.—Crawfordsville Journal.

Not Enough Food Without Economy

Forecast of Available Supply Indicates Grave Danger of Serious Shortage.

The National Food Administration has issued the following:

The food problem today of our own Nation has as its most conspicuous phase an international character. A sufficient and regular supply of food for the maintenance of the great field armies of our fighting allies and of their no less great armies of working men and working women in the war industries, and, finally, for the maintenance of the women and children in the home, is an absolute necessity, second to no other, for the successful prosecution of the war for liberty. In the providing of this food for the great allied food pool the United States plays a predominant part, for we have long been the greatest granary, food store, and butcher shop in the world, and the place to which those European nations now constituting the chief fighting group of the allies have always turned to obtain the food supplies necessary to make up the deficiency between their food production and food needs.

NEEDS OF THE ALLIED ARMIES.

With the present diversion of tens of millions of men from the farms into the fighting and industrial armies, resulting in a marked lessening of food production, and the present necessity of increasing the daily ration of other millions of men turned from sedentary occupations into those of strenuous physical labor, resulting in a marked increase of consumption, this deficiency between the food needs and the food production of the allies becomes greater than ever, with the consequence of a large increase in the food quantities imperatively needed from the United States if the allied armies are to be able to "carry on."

HARVESTS CAN NOW BE FORECAST.

This is a general statement of a condition which only needs to be elaborated in detail to show just what we have to do. Our harvests and the harvests of Europe can now be forecasted. We can also survey our combined stocks of food animals; in other words, the size of that part of the world's larder on which we and the allies can draw for the next 12 months can now be estimated. This estimate shows at once that it contains too little for our own and our allies' use unless we all administer the supply with the greatest care and wisdom. The allied peoples are energetically undertaking this administration. It lies now with us to do our part. If we fail, the people of the allies can not be maintained at war. Their soldiers can not fight without food. A certain definitely determinable part of that food must come from us.

Whole Nations at War.

The point has been reached where war is waged by whole nations. Every man, woman, and child is involved and nearly every adult and most boys and girls can be efficient factors. We are in this war for the purpose of defending our rights, of making sure that, as a Nation, we shall be able to live the sort of life and to have the sort of institutions we desire, of making democracy persist in the world, and of safeguarding the world against the recurrence of such a war as this. To accomplish this the Nation must aim at the perfection of organization, and therefore each individual must recognize the necessity of making sacrifices for the common good and more than ever of working under limitations—of doing team work. Our people have a genius for organization, and they will not fail in the task they have assumed. Our farmers, on whom a great responsibility rests, are the most efficient farmers in the world when they do their best. They will not be found wanting in this crisis.

Community Canning in the High School Home Economics Laboratory at Laporte, Indiana. This work was done under the direction of I. L. Conner, of the High School Faculty, assisted by County Agent J. D. Harper.

Community Canning Popular in Laporte

Steam Pressure Outfits Serve to Attract
Many to Course of Instruction.

The following report was received from J. D. Harper, county agricultural agent of Laporte county, concerning community canning:

In Laporte county the canning idea is becoming increasingly popular, due largely to the fact that it has been made easy and inexpensive by the steam pressure outfits donated to the community by the Hobart M. Cable Company, piano manufacturers. These outfits were donated at the suggestion of the county agricultural agent. Arrangements were made to put these in the high school home economics laboratory, under the direction of I. L. Connor, one of the high school faculty who had been employed to take charge of the school gardens throughout the summer. High school girls were enrolled to spend regular periods at the school building, and work under the immediate supervision of volunteer matrons. Twenty matrons and fifty high school girls have reported faithfully for duty each week, and the interest is growing daily.

In addition to the canning classes thus organized, there are nine teams of high school girls, consisting of three girls each, who prepare raw materials direct from the garden or stores, for processing in the steam canners by the cold pack method. These girls have been soliciting orders and canning for people who did not care to prepare the material and put it in the cans at home.

Accurate records have been kept of the amount and kind of products canned. The following is a report of the work for the first month:

Amount of raw material prepared by the preparation schools:

Bushels of beans .....	15
Bushels of peas .....	25
Crates of cherries .....	14
Bushels of spinach and Swiss chard .....	6
Number of quarts turned over to the canning schools to process .....	625
Fees received by the preparation schools .....	$52.10
Additional number of quarts of foodstuffs processed by the canning classes, but which were prepared in the homes .....	1,300
Number of families having fruits and vegetables canned .....	107

Besides people who have actually brought garden products and fruits to the school to have them canned, there has been a very great interest stimulated throughout the county. A number of visitors have watched the work and have gone home to do their own canning. The work is resulting in a very greatly increased amount of canned foodstuffs that are not counted at the school. The benefits of the work can hardly be measured, not only in the greater amount of canned products available for winter use, but also in the educational advantages to the girls, who are receiving school credit for their work.

President's Appeal to School Children for Red Cross Service.

To the School Children of the United States:

A PROCLAMATION.

The President of the United States is also President of the American Red Cross. It is from these offices joined in one that I write you a word of greeting at this time when so many of you are beginning the school year.

The American Red Cross has just prepared a Junior Membership with School Activities in which every pupil in the United States can find a chance to serve our country. The school is the natural center of your life. Through it you can best work in the great cause of freedom to which we have all pledged ourselves.

Our Junior Red Cross will bring to you opportunities of service to your community and to other communities all over the world and guide your service with high and religious ideals. It will teach you how to save in order that suffering children elsewhere may have the chance to live. It will teach you how to prepare some of the supplies which wounded soldiers and homeless families lack. It will send to you through the Red Cross Bulletins the thrilling stories of relief and rescue. And best of all, more perfectly than through any of your other school lessons, you will learn by doing those kind things under your teacher's direction to be the future good citizens of this great country which we all love.

And I commend to all school teachers in the country the simple plan which the American Red Cross has worked out to provide for your co-operation, knowing as I do that school children will give their best service under the direct guidance and instruction of their teachers. Is not this perhaps the chance for which you have been looking to give your time and efforts in some measure to meet our national needs?

(Signed) WOODROW WILSON,

September 15, 1917.

President.

America Must and Will Meet Allies' Food Needs, Says Plea for Economy

Seven years ago a famous European student of history prophesied that the next great war of the future would not be won by fighting but by famine. We are today fighting that war, and famine is indeed threatening to be its arbiter.

The men of England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Italy and Belgium—our allies—are fighting; they are not on the farms. The production of food by these countries has therefore been greatly reduced. Even before the war it was much less than the amount consumed. The difference came more largely from other countries than from America. Now this difference is greater than ever, and, at the same time, supplies can no longer come from most of the other countries. They must now come from America. Therefore our allies depend on us for food as they have never depended before, and they ask us for it with a right which they have never had before. For today they are doing the fighting, the suffering, and dying—in our war.

We must send them the food they have to have. We will send it. But we can only do it by a wise and loyal economy of food on the part of every one of us. We must stimulate our food production, organize our food handling, eliminate all the waste possible, substitute as largely as possible other foods for wheat, beef, pork, dairy products, and sugar, and reduce consumption where it is excessive.

To accomplish these things is the problem of the United States Food Administration. But this accomplishment can come only from the combined personal and voluntary service of all the people of the land. To that end we want all the people to join the Food Administration. No fees or dues; merely a promise to help. Send for our membership pledge and our plan.

UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION.

Bookkeeping on the Farm.

William Stone and L. Robertson of Purdue have gone to Laporte, where they will assist County Agent J. D. Harper in instructing farmers how to keep a set of books. Farming is getting to be so much of a business that all the more progressive tillers of the soil desire to have some means of knowing at the end of the year just what their year's labor netted them. Purdue is encouraging the bookkeeping idea and lending instructions where called for.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 8

Editorial Comment

WARS MUST BE PAID FOR BY SAVINGS

Wars must be paid for by savings. We must save in the consumption in commodities and the consumption of unproductive labor in order that we may divert our manhood to the army and to the shops. If by the reduction in consumption of labor and the commodities that it produces and the diversion of this saving to that labor and those commodities demanded by the war, we shall be able to fight to eternity. We can mortgage our future savings for a little while, but a piling up of mortgages is but a short step toward bankruptcy. Every atom that we save is available for subscription to liberty bonds.

The whole of Europe has been engaged ever since the war began in the elimination of waste, the simplification of life, and the increase of its industrial capacity. When the war is over the consuming power of the world will be reduced by the loss of prosperity and man power, and we shall enter a period of competition without parallel in ferocity. After the war we must maintain our foreign markets if our working people are to be employed. We shall be in no position to compete if we continue to live on the same basis of waste and extravagance on which we have lived hitherto. Simple, temperate living is a moral issue of the first order at any time, and any other basis of conduct during the war becomes a wrong against the interest of the country and the interest of democracy.—Official Bulletin.

THE PRICE OF FOODSTUFFS

The impact of the food shortage of Europe has knocked at every door of the United States during the past three years. The prices of foodstuffs have nearly doubled, and the reverberations of Europe's increasing shortage would have thundered twice as loudly during the coming year even had we not entered the war, and it can now only be mitigated if we can exert a strong control, and this in many directions.

We are today in an era of high prices. We must maintain prices at such a level as will stimulate production, for we are faced by a starving world, and the value of a commodity to the hungry is greater than its price.

The call of patriotism, of humanity, and of duty rings clear and insistent. We must heed it if we are to defend our ideals, maintain our form of government and safeguard our future welfare.—Official Bulletin.

BRINGING HOME THE TRUTH

Disclosures of the Von Bernstorff treachery ought to bring the truth home to Indiana. Not since the ruthless invasion of Belgium, the slaughter of non-combatants, the rape of defenseless women, the transportation of peaceable civilians, has the shameless treachery of German agents been so manifest.

It ought to be clear from the admissions of the State Department that not a few citizens of Indiana may consider themselves in a rather delicate situation. They may be identified by their membership in the nation-wide organization that Bernstorff proposed to reach with the $50,000 asked for, by cable, for the purpose of influencing Congress. Just how much service they were to the anti-American cause they themselves know better than anyone else, except it be a confidential employe of the State Department. It is to be regarded as a great charity that the Lansing contribution to American enlightenment did not include the name of the organization, and the shame of its members brought to their doorsteps with greater force, and in the full view of a curious public.

Many, no doubt, were altogether innocent of any purpose to intrigue. They perhaps permitted some maudlin sentiment to influence them to do the bidding of the Kaiser's agents. A measure of sympathy is due them for the deception. But this does not apply to all. Many must have been cognizant of the deep-seated villainy behind the expenditure of money for such purposes of influencing legislation, fomenting labor trouble and in otherwise seeking to embarrass the government in its international relations. This latter class is known to the government of the United States. Their identity surely will be exposed to the entire nation unless they modify their conduct to take on at least the appearance of an allegiance to America.

The treachery of those who supported the German propaganda as set out by Von Bernstorff differs from that of the repudiated ambassador only in the degree of their guilt.

Attention—County Councils

BULLETIN NO. 45.

September 27, 1917.

—Sugar Economy—

To County Councils of Defense:

Dr. H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana, has received the following telegram from Mr. Herbert Hoover:

Washington, D. C., September 24, 1917.

We have received a request from the French government that we allow them to export from the United States one hundred thousand tons of sugar during the next month and probably more at a later period. Our own situation is that we have just sufficient sugar to maintain our normal consumption until the first of January, when the new West Indian crop becomes available to all. Our consumption is at the rate of 90 pounds per person per year—a little under four ounces per day per person. The French people are on a ration of sugar equal to only twenty-one pounds per annum per person, or at the rate of less than one single ounce per day per person—a little more than the weight of a silver dollar each day. The English and Italian rations are also not over one ounce per day. The French people will be entirely without sugar for over two months if we refuse to part with enough from our stocks to keep them supplied with even this small allowance, as it is not available from any other quarters. Sugar, even to a greater amount than the French ration, is a human necessity. If our people will reduce by one-third their purchases and consumption of candy and of sugar for other uses than preserving fruit, which we do not wish to interfere with, we can save the French situation. In the interest of the French people and the loyalty we owe them to divide our food in the maintenance of our common cause, I ask the American people to do this.

County Councils are requested to give this message the widest publicity and to use every effort to get it to every housewife in the county.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 47.

September 29, 1917.

—Female Labor—

To County Councils of Defense:

The State Council of Defense, which considered the subject at the instance of the Industrial Board of Indiana, regards it a matter of great importance to the State that the employment of women and girls in industries be carefully watched during the war, to the end that abnormal labor conditions shall not cause the unnecessary use of female labor in occupations hazardous to life, limb or health, and that no weakening in the moral conditions surrounding the employment of such labor be permitted.

The State Council therefore requests each of the County Councils in counties having industrial centers to appoint a committee to be known as the Committee on Woman Labor, which shall keep itself informed of conditions involving the employment of women and girls in manufacturing and other industries in their communities and see that such employment does not violate the standards indicated. Such committee should include in its membership a representative of employers, a representative laboring man or woman, and a citizen who takes especial interest in welfare work. The committee should, in its work, co-operate with other agencies having similar objects, such as the Y. W. C. A., the local board of charities and the juvenile court, as well as representatives of the Indiana Manufacturers' Association.

Kindly keep the State Council advised as to your action in the premises.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 48.

—Fire Prevention Day—

To County Councils of Defense:

Your attention is called to the enclosed circulars relating to Fire Prevention, by which you will see that the State Fire Marshal is making special effort for the observance of October 9th, by appropriate exercises on lines of Fire Prevention.

The serious illness of Governor Goodrich prevented the issuance of the usual proclamation. However, all schools, churches and public assemblies are being requested to aid in publicity, and the County Councils are requested to co-operate to the fullest extent.

Statistics show that from fifty to seventy per cent. of fires originate from preventable causes. If, therefore, the people can be awakened to the importance of Fire Prevention, and thereby lessen the fire waste, it is a most economic important step to be taken. Parties suffering loss may have insurance that would in a measure indemnify them, but this would not take the place of the food or property values that are thus needlessly destroyed.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

A Committee of Great Usefulness

"If I thought this meant a committee of busybodies who would interfere in the proper employment of women in the war emergency, I would not favor it at all. But I think it can be made a body of great usefulness," said Arthur W. Brady of the State Council of Defense in moving the organization of a special committee to be responsible to each County Council in industrial centers in the State, whose duty shall be the oversight of moral and physical conditions surrounding emergency war workers.

Mr. Brady's proposal that such committee include one employer, one laboring man who has made a study of the subject and a citizen of the community recognized as having an interest in the welfare of women and girls in industry, was unanimously endorsed by the Council.

It was the sense of the Council that such activity need not overlap or duplicate any of the work contemplated by the vocational educational authorities, who already have launched a plan for the intensive training of women and young men who will later be called upon to replace men in many lines of industrial activity.

Dr. A. B. Storms' recommendation that the information already secured by certain sociological agencies be utilized by the committee, also was approved, and chairmen of County Councils, particularly those in manufacturing centers, will be asked to give prompt and careful attention to the selection of this important committee.

Farmers Are Before Nation Prominently

Money and Men Are Available But Food Supply Depends on Tillers of the Soil.

Director G. I. Christie made an address before the State Board of Charities at their conference in Laporte, October 2nd, in part as follows:

"The farmer and his products are prominently before the nation. More than ever before it is realized that the man on the land plays a most important part in fighting this world war. In declaring war this country pledged money, men and food. Congress has appropriated the money. Men are rapidly assembling in camps to form a great and powerful army soon to take an active part on the battle fields.

"The amount of food that can be furnished the people of Europe depends upon our production and conservation. The farmer is called upon to grow more crops, to raise more meat and to produce more dairy products. A great increase can be made. Farmers have not attained in any measure their maximum in production. They are just finding out the possibilities of the soil, crops and live stock.

"The average yield of corn in Indiana is 40 bushels per acre. Good lands produce 60 to 70 and 80 bushels per acre. This low average is due to poor soil which can be remedied by drainage, rotation of crops, fertilization and cultivation and poor seed which can be eliminated by selection and testing and the choice of better varieties.

"During the past season some Indiana farmers grew more than 50 bushels of wheat per acre. Large numbers had a yield of 30 to 40 bushels per acre, yet the average of the State is about 17 bushels. The large yields are the result of well drained and fertilized soils, well prepared seed bed and the use of the best varieties of wheat and the treatment of the seed to eliminate smut and diseases. All of this can be done by thousands of farmers in the State and materially increase the yield.

"In the production of beef some feeders require 13 to 15 pounds of corn to produce a pound of beef while others use but 8 to 10. The difference and saving is due to the ration used, the care in feeding and the selection of the cattle. This difference in cost of production means many times the difference between profit and loss. But greater still is the opportunity to get a large number of pounds of meat from the same amount of corn where the better methods are used.

"The average dairy cow in the State produces about 160 pounds of butterfat in a year and returns a profit of $17.00. The good cows in Indiana herds produce more than 300 pounds of butterfat in a year with a profit to the owner of more than $87.00. Here there is room for improvement and surely dairymen are justified in making a big effort to eliminate the poor cow and raise the production of their herds.

"War needs also demand that the farmer employ better business methods. In the past the farm has been run with labor and equipment available. If, at the end of the season, there was a balance in the bank the farmer had made money. If he was still in debt the season had not been successful.

"With the fixing of prices comes a necessity for knowing more definitely the cost of production. Farmers have given little attention to this item. At this time, however, it is all important. The U. S. Department states that to produce a bushel of wheat it costs $1.71. The price fixed at the terminal markets is $2.20. With maximum yields this profit should be sufficient. With average or minimum yields the total profit or net income to a farmer will be small. The problem then is that of increased production with a lowering of the cost."

INDIANA PRAISED BY DEPARTMENT

The United States Department of Agriculture in a statement issued September 26, says that "active co-operation is being given by the grain States in the work of the United States Department of Agriculture in seeking to bring about the sowing this fall of the increased acreage of wheat and rye requested by the secretary of agriculture and the food administration. In Indiana, for example, the State food committee has worked out the exact acreage which must be sown in each county to bring the increased acreage for the State up to the figures suggested.

The committee has distributed the computations throughout the State through letters, circulars and newspaper notices, in an effort to stimulate concrete local interest in the increased grain production campaign. Recipients of the letters are asked to keep the agency informed as to whether the necessary county acreage has been sown.

"The United States Department of Agriculture asked the State of Indiana as a whole to increase the wheat acreage approximately 25 per cent. and the rye average approximately 35 per cent.

"The department and the food administration believe that the method of procedure adopted by the Indiana food committee should be found useful in other States."

SEED CORN CAMPAIGNERS.

Arrangements are rapidly being completed for the seed corn campaign which is to be conducted this fall and winter under the direction of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. The United States Department of Agriculture is making good its promise to assist in this work. The following have been selected as the Government men to assist in the campaign for eight weeks:

E. C. Martindale, Wilkinson.
R. L. Thompson, Topeka.
Walter Rogers, Nashville.
W. B. Anderson, Velpin.
A. J. Dillon, Culver.
Mr. Jechiel, Culver.
Clavin Perdue, Warren.
E. Thornburg, Winchester.
S. W. Taylor, Boonville.
J. S. Helms, Richmond.
W. F. Franklin, Danville.
Grant Johnson, Dale.
J. B. Edmondson, Clayton.

The week of October 15 to 20 has been chosen as seed corn week and special effort will be made to select from the field as much as possible of the seed which is needed for next year's corn crop. It is estimated that Indiana will need 1,000,000 bushels.

EXTENSION WORKERS' CONFERENCE.

Agricultural workers of Indiana will meet in conference at Purdue University, October 22 to 26. The conference will open with an address by W. E. Stone, president of the university, on the subject: "The Farmer and the Nation." Ralph W. Moss, chairman of the Food Production and Conservation Committee, will speak on: "Indiana's Place in the National Food Program," and Professor G. I. Christie will discuss the work accomplished by the Food Production and Conservation campaign which has been waged.

A round-table talk will follow each of the subjects discussed during the morning and afternoon sessions throughout the conference.

The women attending the conference will be interested in a number of the subjects presented to the general assembly and in addition will arrange a special program. Miss Florence E. Ward of the United States Department of Agriculture, will lead the discussions. An important subject which they expect to take up is the one of county and city work for women.

The principal speakers of the conference are: Tuesday.—Professor George Roberts of Kentucky, on "Profitable Crop Production"; C. G. Woodbury, director of the Indiana Experiment Station, "Some Phases of War Time Horticulture." Dr. H. E. Barnard on "Food Conservation." Miss Florence E. Ward will give the closing address on the subject of "Home Demonstrational Work."

Wednesday.—Warren T. McCray, chairman of the Live Stock Committee of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, will discuss: "How Indiana Can Meet the Increased Demand for Live Stock." O. H. Benson from the United States Department of Agriculture will speak on boys' and girls' club work. Will H. Hays, chairman of the State Council of Defense, will give an address in the evening on: "Indiana and the War Situation." Professor T. F. Moran will close the day's program with a talk on "The Citizen and the Crisis."

Thursday.—The day will be spent in discussions relative to local organizations. The work will be divided into three divisions: Community Organizations, Farmers' Clubs and Farmers' Institute Associations. The speakers will be: George Libbert from Goshen, Mrs. C. N. Linley of Salem and Professor Latta of Purdue. Professor R. E. Caldwell, head of the dairy department of Purdue, will speak on "Dairying in the Food Emergency." The evening will be spent at a dinner and social hour.

Friday.—"Farmers' Short Courses" will be discussed by G. M. Frier of the Extension Department. L. B. Clore, treasurer of the Federal Farm Loan Bank, Louisville, Ky., will make the closing address of the conference on the subject of "The Farm Mortgage Loan."

GREATER WHEAT ACREAGE

Replies from various parts of the State are still being received relative to the wheat acreage which is being sown this fall. The answers for the most part are very encouraging.

Hancock.—"Our farmers have sown their full quota of wheat. It is estimated by many that the acreage planted is 50 per cent. above that of 1916."—J. S. Souder.

Huntington County.—"This year we will have more than double the acreage we had last year."—J. F. Plice.

Jefferson.—"If weather continues favorable, we anticipate an acreage in Jefferson county of 20,000 to possibly 24,000, in line with your proposed acreage. We estimate last year's acreage to have been 10,000 to 12,500 acres sown to wheat in Jefferson county. We are unable to give an estimate on rye."—W. Trow Company.

Miami.—"The acreage is large—at least 40 per cent. larger than last year, and a very large per cent. of it put in the very best of shape."—J. F. Crouder.

Morgan.—"We have been making some investigation of the wheat acreage to be sown in this territory and are of the opinion that it will exceed that of last year by 25 to 40 per cent."—The Comer & Searce Co.

Ripley.—"There is fully one-third more acreage put in wheat this fall than last fall. Am glad to say that farmers as a general rule are more particular in their seed wheat."—Milan Milling Co.

Shelby.—"The wheat and rye acreage sown this fall in our territory will be 15 to 25 per cent. short of last year on account of down corn, increased cost of sowing and labor shortage."—L. C. Burnside.

A Fraud Branded.

The Food Administration authorizes the following:

"It has come to the notice of the United States Food Administration from time to time that advertisers of foodstuffs claim directly or by inference that a certain commodity or its price has received the approval or has been endorsed by the Food Administrator, Herbert Hoover, or the Food Administration.

"To counteract the effect of this, the announcement is authorized by the Food Administration that in no case has the Food Administrator authorized any such use of names for trade purposes, and in fact has notified certain parties that injunctions against such use will be issued unless the practice is immediately stopped."

The Slacker's Creed.

I believe that every man should look after his own interests regardless of the needs of his country. I believe that a soft job at home is preferable to service on the battlefield. I believe that it is the duty of every man except me to fight for his country. I believe that every man should take as much advantage of the exemption law as he can. I believe in democracy so long as it protects me and asks nothing from me. I believe that liberty is not worth fighting for; that life is too sweet to be cast away for mere principle; that cowardice is preferable to death. I believe, finally, that there are no slackers in all the world.

Patriotism in Indiana

Bartholomew County.—William G. Irwin of Columbus, a member of the State Council of Defense, has agreed to pay the cost of a bulletin board upon which shall be painted the name of every soldier who has gone out from this county for service in the new national army and the county commissioners will arrange for the board on the courthouse lawn. The board will be illuminated by the city of Columbus. Later it is intended to replace the temporary board with a permanent bronze tablet.

Miss Louise J. Mason, secretary of the local chapter of the Red Cross, is organizing a first-aid class, under the authorization of the national headquarters. Dr. E. U. Wood will have charge of the class, which already numbers fifteen. It is expected the cost of the course will not exceed $1 per pupil.

Benton County.—Members of the Benton County Council of Defense are assisting in marketing the sale of the large potato crop here. John Budres, one of the selected soldiers, secured release long enough to harvest his crop of 1,000 bushels. John Roth, who farms his own land northwest of Fowler, says he has planted from twelve to twenty-seven acres of potatoes each year for twelve years and the average yield for the twelve years was 160 bushels an acre. Mr. Roth states he received all the way from 25 cents to 80 cents a bushel, and after figuring the seed, labor and all expenses, found that potatoes were a better paying crop than either corn or oats, which disproves the old theory of many that potatoes don't pay in this county. One year he raised and sold 7,000 bushels.

Blackford County.—Names of men who have gone from this county into the federal service have been posted on a large, neatly painted board on the courthouse square. The board also contains the total amount of money donated for the Red Cross. The board is painted white and the names are in black.

The County Council of Defense has named John C. Moore of Hartford City as county chairman of the fuel conservation movement and he has appointed the following township chairmen: Harrison, Mann Lacey; Licking, Charles Carroll; Jackson, Mont Wheatley; Washington, I. R. Harrold.

The State Council started the movement to use all fallen timber for fuel, thus making the situation better for those who are in need of fuel and cannot get coal. In the State every year there are thousands of cords of wood that go to waste for the reason that it is left lying in the woods to rot. The cutting up of the wood and clearing it off will be an advantage to the woods, and make better pasture, besides saving off a fuel famine in the county.

The State Council in every instance left the work to the County Councils, and they then appointed a man who will be at the head of the movement. In every township in Blackford county there are many cords of wood lying in the woods. This should be cut up and used.

Boone County.—The Boone County Sunday School Association has prepared a petition which is twenty-five feet long and bears 764 names, asking Congress to abolish the board of trade as an encouragement to grain producers and consumers during war time. Every section of the county is represented in the list of signers.

Carroll County.—The Camden Chapter, Carroll county, Red Cross arranged that the church collection last Sunday should go to the Red Cross fund. A total of $11.57 was received.

Cass County.—Since the visit of the team of organizers sent out by the Indiana State Council of Defense, the Cass County Council has taken a new lease of life. Another request will be made of the civil Council for an appropriation to pay the necessary expenses of the Council of Defense. The request will be for $500 and since the presentation of the situation here by the representatives of the State Council, it is believed the allowance will be made.

Clay County.—Miss Martha Garrison, who has been instructing a Red Cross class, has gone to Anderson to become a part of the hospital unit being organized there for service in France. Miss Garrison has been superintendent of a private hospital here and has trained many local people in first-aid work. Dr. Lewis C. Rentschler, of Crown Point, is a lieutenant in the new Anderson hospital unit.

Decatur County.—In connection with the patriotic meeting held here Tuesday, attended by John Chewing, Rockport; Homer Elliott, Spencer, and John F. Riley, Hammond, representing the Indiana State Council of Defense, the following resolutions were adopted, amid enthusiastic applause:

Whereas, Our country is involved in the great world war and a great and grave responsibility rests upon our President in conducting this war to a successful conclusion and the establishment of an enduring peace and to make the world safe for democracy, and

Whereas, The efforts of our President have been and are ably sustained and supported by our State administration and State Council of Defense and its local branches, and

Whereas, Our country is now and will continue to be represented in this great crisis by the flower of our young manhood; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this assembly, representative of the citizenship of our country, does heartily endorse all administrative acts of our National and State administrations in the conduct of the war and as heartily condemn all acts of obstructionists as disloyal to our country and to our flag, and be it further

Resolved, That it is the sacred and patriotic duty of every citizen of our country to make every effort and sacrifice to provide every possible comfort and protection to our boys in camp and on the battlefield.

Resolved, That this assembly extend its sympathy to Governor Goodrich and his family in his serious illness and our hope for his speedy recovery.

Delaware County.—Mrs. Sarah H. Hartley has accepted a place on the Delaware County Council of Defense, replacing Mrs. Fred Rose, who resigned. Mrs. Hartley will represent the women of the community who are already organized and vigorous in furthering the Hoover food enrollment and other activities recommended by the State Council of Defense.

Fountain County.—The town council of Covington appropriated $250 for a searchlight for the guidance of aviators enroute between Rantoul, Ill., and Dayton, Ohio. The light will be 250 candle power and burn nightly until 11 o'clock.

Gibson County.—The Princeton Democrat, commenting editorially on the local situation, says:

"The meeting called by the County Defense Council Tuesday afternoon was a fair example of the feeling of the average person toward the war. It was attended by less than fifty people. Unless all signs fail the average man will be forced to awaken to the fact that a no distant date that his country is fighting for its existence. There is far too great a spirit abroad, and it is not combatted properly by the patriotic speakers that it is impossible for America to lose in this war. It is possible and unless there is a greater manifestation to do something besides send soldiers to the front, entirely probable."

Grant County.—Superintendent A. E. Highley of the Marion schools, is organizing a class in telegraphy. The Morse code will be taught in the new high school building. The Marion high school has an enrollment of 450 and the new Conservation text book will be a prominent part of the curriculum this year. "We are willing to do all possible to assist the Nation in carrying to a successful close the present war," writes Superintendent Highley.

Jackson County.—David B. Vance, chairman of the Jackson County Council of Defense, died very suddenly September 28. His place will be filled by the judge of the circuit court who appointed him.

Jefferson County.—Chairman William Ogden of the Jefferson County Council of Defense, has named the following committee whose duty shall be to co-operate with the civil authorities in the enforcement of the vagrancy laws: George A. Monroe, chairman; John W. Jenkins, Peter Kremer, H. J. Zearing, D. G. Stuart of Madison, W. T. Hughes, Dupont; D. M. Johnson, Dupont, and J. E. Elder, Blocher.

Madison County.—Miss Renah Adams of this county, residing near Alexandria, claims to be the first girl in this county to take the place of a farm laborer. When her brother was called to the army Miss Adams volunteered to make up the shortage in the fields. She secured an appropriate costume and bids fair to make good her proposal to make a "full hand."

Marshall County.—The members of the County Council of Defense held a meeting at the courthouse September 19. Nearly all the townships were represented. Much business had accumulated owing to the resignation of the county chairman and important work has been greatly retarded. The Council is taking hold with vigor under direction of the new chairman, L. G. Harley.

Donald Bose of Argos was made chairman of the four-minute committee, which is to make a tour of the county in short talks defining the purpose of the Defense Council. A. L. Schooner of Argos was made chairman of the merchants' economy organization. The publicity committee comprises all the newspaper editors of the county. The finance committee comprises L. G. Harley, Mrs. R. N. Cook and Henry Miller of Bourbon.

The canning factory that contracted for tomatoes is not taking them, and Mr. C. L. Newman was appointed to take charge of this work and will notify users where tomatoes from farmers can be obtained.

The committee in charge of the centennial fund has loaned a part of the fund to the Council until it can get the county appropriation next January.

Miami County.—Owing to his inability to devote the necessary time to the work of organizing a volunteer State militia company in Miami county, Mr. Al. Drum asked the County Council to relieve him. W. W. Failing of Peru accepted the place and is busily engaged in the formation of a company. The County Council instructed the chairman of the publicity committee to take over the subject of "navy inventions." The Miami County Council of Defense meets in the rooms of the Peru Chamber of Commerce.

Monroe County.—Merchants of Bloomington have entered into an agreement to close their places of business at 5 o'clock every evening. They believe this a practical method of conserving light and fuel, and they do not anticipate any loss of business once the public is educated to the plan.

Bloomington women factory workers have adopted bloomers for factory wear. Manufacturers say the women have successfully replaced many men and probably will be retained indefinitely.

Montgomery County.—At the suggestion of County Agent B. A. Chitty, farmers of this county have started a campaign to secure 25,000 bushels of the best seed corn for 1918 planting. Committees have been appointed in every township in the county to assist the campaign.

Noble County.—Red Cross knitters at Albion have been forced to discontinue their activities because of the famine in yarn. An appeal was sent to the State Council of Defense and other agencies which were expected to relieve the shortage.

Orange County.—The local Council of Defense has nominated the following committee to direct the sale of the second issue of Liberty bonds: Owen C. Ham and E. O. Grosvener, Paoli; W. W. Cave, French Lick; Dr. H. M. Arthur, West Baden; O. O. Laughlin and Joseph E. Mathers, Orleans.

Owen County.—In an effort to arouse the County Council the Leader, published at Spencer, says editorially: "As has been mentioned before in this paper, there is work here that we believe should be done by the County Council of Defense. From various parts of the county come reports of a wastage of crops, particularly fruits, that should be looked after. In the absence of a county agent to locate markets, the Council might very profitably substitute in this respect. Foodstuffs should not be wasted."

Shelby County.—Company B of the Shelby County Volunteer Militia has sixty members in Flat Rock and vicinity. However enough men have been enrolled to justify the beginning of drills, which are held every Wednesday evening. Virgil Endicott and Frank Davis are the company buglers. Officers of Company C are W. E. Teloe, captain; William Ensey, first lieutenant; Ira Beatty, second lieutenant.

St. Joseph County.—"Get a Recruit" is the slogan of the Mishawaka home guards. Each man of the various companies here promises to secure an additional volunteer. It is intended to enroll sixty-five men in each of the ten companies being raised. The question of appropriate uniforms has been discussed and probably will be submitted to the State authorities before final action is taken.

Mrs. Victor F. Jones has been named as the woman member of the local County Council of Defense to replace Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle, who is now a member of the State Council.

Tippecanoe County.—Local club women will be glad to know of the announcement from Washington that Professor Mary Matthews, head of the home economics department at Purdue University, has been appointed by Herbert Hoover to be home economics director for Indiana. The fact that Professor Matthews is so well known among the women of this State will render her work comparatively easy, for they have great faith in her and will be willing to carry out her wishes. At the Fort Wayne convention of the Indiana Federation of Clubs next month, Professor Matthews will present to the delegates an outline of what Mr. Hoover expects, and the organized plans for executing his purposes. She is now chairman of the committee on home economics and food sanitation of the Indiana Federation of Clubs, a member of the home economics department of the General Federation, president of the State Home Economics Association, councillor at large of the American Home Economics Association and secretary of the Lafayette branch of the Collegiate Alumnae Association.—Lafayette Journal.

Vigo County.—Seven women have accepted employment in the machine shops of the Vandallia railroad, and one of them, Miss Hazel Brackell, has introduced a "man-nish" suit of overalls that makes her work safer and more convenient, she says.

White County.—W. K. O'Connell, J. P. Simons, J. B. Wright, Louis Hinchman, J. W. Searcy, J. D. Duffey, M. E. Burnett, Charles J. Ramb, C. C. Middlestadt and Fred Obenchain have been appointed to direct the sale of the second Liberty Loan bonds in White county and they have completed a county-wide organization to assist.

Officials are investigating the alleged destruction of a carload of flour shipped by Loughery Bros. Company, millers, of Monticello. It is reported that when the carload of flour reached an eastern sea-board port, it was found to contain quantities of carbolic acid, and utterly destroyed as far as food value is concerned.

Food First Essential in Winning the War.

The Food Administration has issued the following:

All the blood, all the heroism, all the money, and all the munitions in the world will not win this war unless our allies and the people behind them are fed.

They will not be fed, your sacrifice of blood and money will be in vain, we shall go hungry and a great cause will be lost unless you stand guard each day in your home over your supply of wheat, meat, fats, sugar, milk.

Practical Value of U. S. Boys' Reserve

During Past Two Weeks 200 Indiana Members Aided in Harvesting Crops.

The practical value of the United States Boys' Working Reserve has become apparent during the past two weeks in which time as many as 200 Indiana boys have aided in harvesting perishable crops such as beans, sweet corn, frosted onions, tomatoes, grapes and apples. In addition, many boys have been working in canneries where a labor shortage threatened the loss of foodstuffs, the conserving of which is so vital to the solution of the food problem.

The need for this organization is emphasized by reports from other States, including Wisconsin, Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland, Michigan, California and Pennsylvania where thousands of boys, who ordinarily were not productive, have been doing their bit toward winning the war by devoting their spare hours during vacation and after school and on Saturdays to those tasks which would otherwise be left unfinished because of lack of labor. The service rendered by these boys is so necessary and of such a practical nature that it is a sad reflection on the intelligence of those parents who oppose the enrollment of their sons. The Reserve serves a two-fold purpose: first, it aids in sustaining the armies in France; second, by supplying the additional labor required for increasing food-production, it will help lower the cost of living at home.

SENATOR NEW PRAISES RESERVE

Under the leadership of County Superintendent of Schools, Prof. A. F. Hutson, and his Associated Director, Wm. Batey, the Boys' Working Reserve of Howard county is becoming very active. At the high school organization meeting held last week, the following letter from Senator Harry S. New was made public:

Mr. William Batey, Kokomo, Ind.:

My Dear Mr. Batey—In contemplating the American boys' opportunities for helpful service in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, I am frank to say that I know of no organization of similar character better calculated to foster the qualities that we have come to look upon as peculiarly typical of American manhood and boyhood.

And so I want to pay my tribute in this brief way to the directors and members of this organization—it embraces patriotism, loyalty, courage and devotion to high ideals of service for the common good. Surely, no true American can suppress a heartfelt thrill of praise when bringing to his mind's eye the splendid achievements of the sturdy young Americans who have allied themselves with the Boys' Working Reserve. I am for them in whatever they undertake—I know it will be well done.

Very sincerely yours,

HARRY S. NEW.

EDUCATORS CO-OPERATING.

The school authorities of Indiana are rapidly adjusting the schedules of the schools to meet the practical demands of the hour. From St. Joseph county comes the report that in Lake and Chikaming townships, during the next two weeks schools will be closed in order that the pupils may join in harvesting the grape crop. In Bartholomew county, school boys, who are members of the Boys' Working Reserve, are harvesting beans. In Whitley and Allen counties, boys have been saving onions that were frost bitten. In many other counties boys are being released from school for short periods in order that they may aid in seeding next year's wheat crop. Agreeable to the timely and patriotic ruling of State Superintendent of Public Instruction Horace Ellis, these pupils will not lose standing in their classes because of absence from school for work of this nature, but will be given every opportunity to make up their studies. This is the practical sort of co-operation through which "the needs of the hour will be met without lowering educational standards." In its ultimate effect, it will improve scholarship for nothing so stimulates youth to increased effort than a realization of its responsibility to society.

THREE BOYS IN ONE FAMILY.

George, Will and Joe Ramsey of Fort Wayne and of the ages sixteen, eighteen and twenty, respectively, have enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve. They are brothers and it is believed hold the record. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Ramsey, are to be congratulated and at the same time envied on account of the opportunity they have for contributing three worthy boys to such important service.

SCHOOL PRINCIPALS RESPOND.

The State Board of Education and Indiana State Council of Defense have received most encouraging responses from the high school principals of the State to the proposed plan of introducing a war text book which will include an outline of the need and purpose of all voluntary war measures, and will place particular emphasis on the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

The following excerpts from letters received are typical:

"The school and its resources are at the State's command."

"Our high school stands ready to do whatever it can in helping to win the war for Democracy."

"We count it a privilege to be able to co-operate in any way."

"We appreciate very much the tireless energy of the State Council of Defense in directing this difficult work, and thank you for your very considerate co-operation."

It is indeed gratifying to be thus assured that the school authorities of Indiana who in times like these occupy places of real responsibility, are ready to lend their co-operation to every suggestion that comes from the National and State Councils of Defense.

COMMERCIAL CLUB CO-OPERATES.

Saturday, September 29, the Commercial Club of Fort Wayne held a public meeting for the purpose of hearing from Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director, the need for their full co-operation in furthering the work of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. An advisory committee consisting of twenty-five business and professional men of Fort Wayne was promptly appointed and they will co-operate with A. L. McDonald, city director, and D. O. McComb, county director of Allen county, in pushing to a successful conclusion the good work that has been so well started by Mr. McDonald and Mr. McComb.

MORE BOYS EARN AWARD.

During the past week, for work in food production and conservation, the following boys were honored with the Federal bronze badge which bears the Great Seal of the United States:

Bartholomew County.—Charles Behrman.

Dearborn County.—Clayton J. Canfield, Ruthford C. Moore.

Jefferson County.—Joseph Vaughn, Oliver P. Jaynes, Osmer Richmond, Howard Kupfler, Henry Epplesheimer, Peter King.

Fountain County.—Evan Ellis, Freeman Newkirk, Jesse D. Fine, Homer Taylor, H. F. Newman, Voris Riley, Raymond Eitnier, Walter Rusk, Russell Cox, Robert Galloway, Albert Dawden, Lawrence E. Pitzer, Thomas Goodin, Carl Davis, Earl H. Myer, Fred Crawford, Carl Diehl, Clint Coffing, Frank Davidson, Homer Shultz, Irvin Davis, Clarence Fine, Esten Goodin, Roy Hamm, Glen Gose.

EVERY BOY IN SCHOOL REGISTERS

Frank McGeath, County Director for the Boys' Working Reserve of Montgomery county, established a new record when every boy of the Crawfordville High School was registered in the Reserve Monday morning, October 1st. Mr. McGeath advises that plans are now being made to visit every high school in the county for the purpose of enrolling every eligible boy for productive labor.

"Why not make it the fixed aim of the United States," says Admiral Peary, "to be the first air power of the world?"

Will Not Take Food From Family Supply

No Such Course Ever Contemplated Says Official Government Statement.

The Department of Agriculture authorizes the following:

"There is no truth in a widely circulated statement that the Government expects to take food supplies from any family. Both the Food Administration and the Department of Agriculture join in a statement to counteract what seems to be a deliberate propaganda to the effect that the Government intends to take from every family all canned goods put up in excess of 100 quarts.

"This is only one of the variations of the rumor, which has been widely circulated. Another statement is that the Government has been urging the canning, drying, and preserving of fruits and vegetables so that they will be in a convenient form for the Government to handle and transport when it takes them away from the people. Further elaboration is that these goods are to be taken away from the American homes and shipped to England.

"The authorities state emphatically that no such course has ever been contemplated by the Government. On the contrary, both the Department of Agriculture and the Food Administration are strongly urging housewives to can and preserve, especially at this time, all surplus fruits and vegetables in order that the households themselves may have a cheap and plentiful supply of food."

Time for the Pacifist Past

Henry Lane Wilson made a speech at Muncie Labor Day and paid his respects to pacifists and slackers, and among other things said:

"Before the declaration of war by the United States, many things could be done and said which a true spirit of patriotism requires should be neither said nor done now. Before the declaration of war by the United States any man who wanted to be pro-German had a right so to be; any man who was foolish enough to be a pacifist had the right to indulge his foolishness; any man who was opposed to conscriptive drafts had a right to voice his opposition; anyone who wanted to strike here or there, or elsewhere, had the right to strike. But now the United States has declared war against an imperial despotism which is a menace to our country and our institutions, and every man who is pro-German should be designated by a shorter and uglier word; every man who is a pacifist and thereby endeavoring to paralyze the vigor of our military operations is firing from the rear on your son and mine; every man who is a slacker is asking others to do that for his protection which he refuses to do himself and every man who strikes on industries—the operation of which is essential to our efficiency in time of war—is contributing to the cause of the enemy.

"War found us unprepared and a vast distance from the scene of conflict. To discharge our obligations as a co-partner in the war against autocracy and for American rights great sacrifices must be made by all classes of people, and all must give their support to the constituted authorities unhesitatingly and unreservedly. Many of us do not like some of the laws which have been passed to aid the government in its conduct of the war. Ordinarily such objections would be well founded, but now we are engaged in war with a ruthless autocracy, and must use every weapon which can be forged for its destruction. The powers which we give to the Chief Executive are leased powers for the period of the war and will be returned to the people with its triumphant conclusion."

Patriotic School Teachers.

The teachers in the Cook County (Ill.) rural schools are working twelve months this year. After taking a special course in the cold pack method of preserving vegetables, they superintended the work of the Girls' Canning Clubs, which are said to have put up one million jars of fruits and vegetables.

Herman Wilke on German Tyranny

Elwood Manufacturer Tells Just What Prussian Autocracy Means.

(By Herman Wilke, of Elwood, Ind., before Allen County Council of Defense.)

"I know Germany. I was born there. I went to school in the Fatherland, and let me tell you, my good German friends here tonight, if you are in the audience, that you do not know what you are talking about when you support German autocracy. If you are honest about it you will say that you and your fathers fled from Germany just as mine did, to escape military tyranny. I know Prussianism. You may have been born elsewhere in the empire, but the brutal iron heel of the government that has drenched this whole world in its war for world power was the same power that made every German who had a little cottage or mud hut, no matter how poor he was, to board a German soldier free of charge. That soldier was the autocrat in that home. His word was law. If he punished a child or knocked him from the chair to the floor, the father must smile. To resent the action of the brutal guest, who must have the best of everything in that house, was to bring dire punishment upon the head of that family. There was a filled knapsack hanging upon the wall and a loaded gun in the corner, and when a call of war did come, that soldier, with 150 others, knew just where to run in order to form a company ready for immediate service. That is a type of the German organization for you. What I have said cannot be denied.

"Let me tell you something else. I have been asked so many times how can the German people, who are generally so peaceful, have changed into such murderers. I tell you that for years and years there has not been a minister standing in the pulpits of Germany but what has been selected by the government. Approved by the powers, he has never preached to the people without combining the name of Kaiser Wilhelm with God Almighty. The people have had it preached to them. It became a part of their religion. God had given them the Kaiser. It is a part of their very training as well, for not a school teacher or instructor in the schools of the fatherland but what is there subject to the approval of the imperial German government, and not a session is held but what the children are taught that Germany must lead the world, that their Kaiser and their God are inseparably connected. I tell you that the German people have had so much of this doctrine soaked into them by this constant effort that they really believe what has been taught, and cannot escape from the virus.

"My mother carried me here in her arms. She knew what military tyranny was, for she suffered until we came to the land of the free to live under the God-given stars and stripes. Often have I heard her say in heart-broken anguish over the safety of her brothers who fought in the German legions, 'O why is it necessary for a people to fight and keep great armies when all could be so happy?' Her brothers were killed in battle, but our love went out to this great country of freedom which has blessed the world and which is ours today. How happy she would be were she only here now to know that three sturdy grandsons are in the service ready to follow Old Glory to a greater sphere of freedom than the world has ever known. They have taken a solemn vow to follow our flag until it floats in triumph over Dresden, if need be. And their march, my friends, won't be the march of the Germans through Belgium, with its crimes, and its blood, and its tears, for they will say to the German people, 'Come, my brothers, into the enjoyment of the fruits of a great freedom of a world democracy that knows no divine right of kings and that shall mean for all peace and happiness. We come not to rob you of your land, or your money, or to enslave you, but to bring you in larger measure that message which the angels sang on the night the dear Jesus was born in old Judea, 'Peace on earth; good will to men.'"

The Grand Army to the New Army

Orlando A. Somers of Kokomo, Ind., who resigned the chairmanship of the Howard County Council of Defense, after being elected Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, at its national encampment in Boston, contributed the following to a metropolitan newspaper, which solicited an expression from him, anent the departure of the first American troops for service in France:

"You ask me for an expression on the occasion of the departure of our first men under the first call to the colors to battle in the world's great conflict beyond the seas.

"Only last week the great encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Boston gave expression of their minds, purposes and patriotism.

"What think you should come into the mind and soul of him who more than half a century ago battled for the life of our republic and the freedom of a race?

"When our children's children—the flower of American manhood—are called to the colors all consideration of policies and political theories must be obliterated and the American people must stand before God and all the nations of the world one common throng of united minds, holding for our purposes the single aim—to achieve for ourselves and all peoples that fuller freedom which has been the hope and dream of our fathers and the yearning of mankind.

"Knowing that lasting peace can come only through the gates of victory, our prayer is, 'God Speed the Day.'"

Complacency Our Deadliest Enemy

Everything Must be Subordinated to Winning the War—Daniel Willard.

"If you are about to undertake an enterprise, stop and ask yourself the question: Will this help America win the war?" is the advice of Daniel Willard to the American people. He would have everyone apply that test to each thing done while the war lasts, for, Mr. Willard says, we are in a war that will tax our resources and our endurance, but which we must win.

In private life Mr. Willard is president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad (and is accounted one of the country's great industrial leaders), and now is chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Council of National Defense. Thus he speaks with authority.

"This war differs from all wars that preceded it," Mr. Willard says further. "Hitherto wars have been between armies. This war is between the economic forces of the opposing nations. That means a testing of our whole people and those of our allies against the whole people of Germany and her allies.

"What Europe has known America will know if Germany wins this war, for she will establish her power in Canada and in Mexico—she will put us under the permanent necessity of being prepared for war, the sort of war she makes, along every foot of our boundaries. Can any one parley over the proposition that we must win?

"What I have mentioned is apart from the direct and immediate punishment which Germany will visit upon us if she wins. Germany will force upon us her standards, and she will do that after she shall have made us as near powerless as she can. That is what she is trying to do today, with all her efficient millions. The deadliest enemy we can have in such a fight is complacency—the feeling that everything will come out all right, which is so prevalent among some Americans because our fortunate situation in life hitherto has made so many things come out all right."

"America's Flying Start," by Sydney Brooks, describes what America has already done by way of war preparations in munitions making. The book is published by Everybody's.

Bush Would Permit No Pacifist Meeting

Lieutenant-Governor Replies to Inquiry Made by Marion County Council.

The Chairman of the Indiana State Council of Defense is in receipt of the following correspondence: Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 28, 1917.

Will H. Hays. Chairman State Council of Defense:

My Dear Mr. Hays—I enclose a copy of a letter of Lieutenant-Governor Bush, addressed to the Marion County Council of Defense, of great public interest, to be published in the Indiana Bulletin by the State Council of Defense.

In explanation of this letter I would state that about two weeks ago we heard rumors that owing to the illness of Governor Goodrich, that certain agitators and alleged peace advocates were attempting to hold a peace meeting in Indianapolis. A little later these rumors took more definite shape by some unknown men who did not disclose their identity, applying to the Board of Public Works of the City of Indianapolis, to rent Tomlinson Hall.

The men stated that the meeting was to be addressed by Senator LaFollette, who is doing so much at present—as you are aware—to embarrass our Government and President, encourage disloyalty and to bring discredit on himself and Congress. Permission to use Tomlinson Hall was denied for such purpose and the men disappeared.

Fearing that these parties might attempt to hold a meeting in some other hall in the city of Indianapolis, on short notice, this Council concluded—owing to the illness and inability to act of Governor Goodrich—to ask Lieutenant-Governor Bush if he would extend to us his influence and power in the event an emergency would arise, necessary to prevent such meeting. Lieutenant-Governor Bush's letter is a vigorous expression of patriotism and gives us the assurance we desire.

I therefore feel that the activity of this Council in this matter should have recognition by a publication of this letter in the State Council's official bulletin.

Yours very truly,
RUSSELL B. HARRISON,

Secretary.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 19, 1917.

Col. Russell B. Harrison, Secretary Marion County Council of Defense:

My Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your letter of Sept. 15th, in which you bring to my attention the fact that an attempt has been made by unknown persons to rent Tomlinson Hall in Indianapolis, for the purpose of holding an alleged peace meeting and that the manifest purpose of such a meeting, at this time, could only be embarrassing to the President in the discharge of his duties in the conduct of the war.

You ask if further attempt is made to hold such peace meeting by parties who have been denied the privilege of having such meetings in other states, whether in the event of the inability of Governor Goodrich to act on account of his serious illness I will use every influence and power at my command to suppress such a meeting.

You may rest assured that I am in hearty accord with the President in the vigorous prosecution of this war. And if an emergency should arise where it becomes necessary for me to prevent the holding of a disgraceful peace meeting, such as was recently held in Chicago, I shall discharge my duties in accord with Section 10 Article 5 of the Indiana State Constitution as follows:

"In case of the removal of the Governor from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the duties of the office, the same shall devolve on the Lieutenant-Governor."

I hope that it will not be necessary for me to act. But if it becomes necessary, I am not unmindful of the fact that Indiana has a record for patriotism and loyalty unsurpassed by none in the sisterhood of States and that its geographical boundaries are not wide enough to harbor ultra-pacifists or German propagandists.

Yours very truly,
EDGAR D. BUSH,
Lieutenant-Governor.

"There is no surer bond between a man and his country than that he shall be a bondholder of his country. Let us see that this Liberty Loan bond issue is a bond issue of the democracy."—THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Indiana War Mothers in Food Campaign

Those with Sons in Army Enlist in Conservation Movement Under Dr. Barnard and Herbert Hoover.

Mrs. Alice M. French, 901 Middle Drive, Woodruff Place, Indianapolis, is enrolling Indiana mothers who have sons in the new national army as a special brigade in the host of women food conservators. Mrs. French was designated for the task by State Food Commissioner Dr. Harry E. Barnard and she expects to have a large effective working organization in the field for service during conservation week, October 21-28.

Dr. Barnard made the following statement relative to the war mothers' organization:

"The idea of organizing the war mothers sprang spontaneously from the field, many women whose sons are with the colors demanding a chance to help solve the country's food problem. They are asking the privilege of making one more sacrifice. They are asking what they can do to make certain that hunger is not added to the list of foes their sons must face.

"The food problem that menaces our allies is likewise the food problem that menaces the sons of our war mothers. The woman who gives her son to fight has a right to demand that he be fed.

"America must have a food program if it is to play a fitting part in the world war. This program, to be effective, requires that the people in this country conserve those food products that our allies and our own soldiers must have—wheat, meat, sugar and fats."

PROGRAM OF CONSERVATION WEEK.

The program for Food Conservation week includes a special conservation sermon in most of the churches of Indiana on Sunday, October 21; meatless Tuesday, October 23, and meatless Friday, October 26; wheatless dinners all week; conservation rally with public speaking, Wednesday, October 24; Merchants' Conservation Day of special bargain sales, Thursday, October 25, and Conservation day in the public schools, Friday, October 26. The campaign will close with a flourish October 27 and the day following will be given over to praise services in the churches of an appropriate character.

To every woman signing the food pledge during the week the United States Food administration will give free the beautiful tri-colored window card; the "Kitchen War Creed," containing practical suggestions that will help in the conservation campaign, and "Ten Lessons on Food Conservation," a booklet prepared under the personal direction of Herbert Hoover, giving valuable recipes, hints, etc.

WOMEN'S CLUBS JOIN CAMPAIGN.

Six hundred Indiana women's clubs were asked by H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, to lend all their force to make the food administration's hope of a "million new food card signers by October 28" a reality. Each club in the State will be expected to form a conservation recruiting team of from ten to thirty members which will assist the woman member of the County Council of Defense in each county in the intensive drive for new food pledge signatures.

Many women's clubs in the State have signified their intention to Food Administrator Barnard of having a special conservation program at one of their meetings in the near future. The Food Administration, the Indiana offices of which are at Room 20, State House, is supplying material to every club that wants to work up a conservation program.

★ MEMBER OF ★
UNITED STATES

ADMINISTRATION

"One million food administration membership cards in the front windows of Indiana homes by October 28," is the slogan of the Food Administration for Indiana.

The above is a reproduction of the handsome three color window card which will be given to Indiana women who sign the Hoover pledge card. The food administration points out that it will soon be considered just as patriotic to have one of these cards in your window as it is to hang out the American flag.

Women who put this card in their window will show that they have studied the food problem as outlined on the Kitchen "War Creed," and in the book, "Ten Lessons on Conservation," which are to be given at the time they sign the pledge card. The food problem needs some study and it is necessary for people to get thoroughly interested in it before they can understand what it means and realize what they must do. The appearance of these window cards in thousands of windows will help to create the intensive interest in food conservation that is absolutely imperative at this time.

"Boost food conservation in your neighborhood by hanging the window card in your window," says Mr. Hoover.

State Council Aids in Bond Distribution

County Chairman Directed to Co-Operate in Disposing of United States Bonds.

At the solicitation of the State committee directing the distribution of the second Liberty loan, United States government bonds, the Indiana State Council of Defense has turned over its entire machinery of organization to helping this important cause. Chairmen of County Councils of Defense have received direction from the State chairmen to co-operate fully with local heads of the loan committees and in every manner seek to bring the campaign to a quick, successful conclusion.

The services of the publicity department of the Council likewise were offered to assist in the distribution of the loan and will give it the attention it deserves. Indiana editors have shown a commendably patriotic willingness to further the distribution, working with local agencies, and publishing such information and propaganda as is available.

Chairman Hays named Evans Woollen, chairman of the finance committee of the Indiana State Council, to represent the Council in the loan drive, extending him the privilege of selecting such assistants as he desires and needs.

The United States is to have a "camouflage" unit composed of "ingenious young men who are looking for special entertainment in the way of fooling Germans." It will be the duty of these men to devise artificial means of deceiving enemy observers. The term "camouflage" comes from the French music halls and means "faking."

Patriotism in Indiana

Bartholomew County.—When Mrs. Charles Curola learned of the need of a delivery clerk at a Columbus grocery she applied for the place and secured it. She is driving a motor truck and says she enjoys substituting for a man who has joined the national army. She will continue on the job until her employers find a satisfactory substitute not eligible to conscription.

A complete company has been organized in Bartholomew county and is meeting regularly for drills and military education. The officers of the company are: W. C. Western, captain; D. R. Nutter, first lieutenant; Elbert Shaw, second lieutenant.

Benton County.—The ravages of hog cholera threaten to wipe out many valuable herds of swine in this county. The Benton County Council of Defense has issued the following "Hog Cholera Warning."

"Hog cholera has broken out in the southeastern part of the county and we consider it the most important war duties to confine this loss within the narrowest possible limits.

"Proper sanitation and inoculation will prevent the loss of hogs by cholera, and the personal opinions of all men should be submerged for the common good.

"The County Council of Defense has employed a competent man to inspect any suspicious cases of hog sickness that may occur anywhere in the county, and any citizen who knows of such sickness should report to the Council so that an investigation can be made whether it is their own hogs or others. The sooner the trouble can be found out the smaller the loss.

"We want to solemnly warn all hog owners that the leaving of dead hogs unburied will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. The man who throws dead animals into the creeks or ditches will not only be prosecuted, but scorned as a traitor to his country by the people of this county.

"The need for hogs and more hogs is the greatest of any one farm product. The world is hungry for fats. Raise all you can, and by careful attention and vaccination save them for the use of humanity.

"BENTON COUNTY COUNCIL OF DEFENSE."

Clay County.—Clay county said farewell to her soldier boys with an appropriate program at Brazil October 5. After the band played "America," the Rev. G. E. Francis invoked divine blessing, after which the Rev. G. E. Francis made a ten-minute talk. Then a 25-cent collection with the soldiers' mess fund was taken and there was a liberal response. At the depot comfort kits were presented by the local chapter of the Red Cross, the crowd sang "America" and Professor E. M. Muncie delivered a short address on the subject, "Boys, Do Your Best!" The farewell prayer was by the Rev. S. E. Davis.

Miss Emma Ealey of Crown Point, a graduate of St. Vincent's Hospital, Indianapolis, is now with United States Hospital Unit No. 1 in New York, and expects to sail soon for service in France.

Rev. George E. Francis of Brazil has been named chairman of the speaking campaign, which will be a feature of the Liberty loan drive in this county. Speeches will be made in every township.

Delaware County.—Muncie moving picture theaters have been stormed during the past two weeks with speeches advocating the purchase of United States bonds of the second Liberty loan. Speakers in the campaign included the following: A. C. Silverburg, Thomas Bracken, Edward Gainer, Charles Reeves, Frank Rurt, Samuel Ringold, Vincent Jones, Dr. W. A. Spurgeon, Charles Wood, Claude Ball, J. H. Maxon, Fred McClellan, J. F. Treasure, Clarence McLeary, Leonard Paris, J. Cooper, Props. Lon Thornburg and Charles Dill.

Dubois County.—Since the recent visit of the organizers from the Indiana State Council of Defense, the Dubois County Council has appropriated $500 for the use of the County Council of Defense. The Dubois Council has opened headquarters in the court house. The organization has been perfected with the appointment of the following committees: Finance Committee—George P. Wagner and Bomar Traylor of Jasper and A. L. Gray of Huntington; Advisory Committee—William Heltman of Holland, J. O. Sanders of Birdseye, H. C. Rothert, Mrs. E. B. Fish and J. V. Stimson of Huntington; Horace M. Kean of Jasper and Miss Helen Rose of Ireland. Publicity Committee—Ed. H. Dufendach and E. W. Pickhardt of Huntington; S. C. Smith of Jasper. Co-ordination Committee—George P. Wagner and Mrs. George Wilson of Jasper, George L. Stein of Huntington. Sanitation Committee—Dr. L. C. Lukemeyer of Huntington, Dr. E. A. Sturm of Jasper and Dr. U. G. Kelso of Dubois. Food Conservation Committee—George P. Wagner and Mrs. W. E. Cox of Jasper, Fred Stimson and Mrs. H. C. Rothert of Huntington and H. W. A. Hemmer of Holland. Survey Committee—J. P. Huther and George P. Wagner of Jasper and J. V. Stimson of Huntington. Military Committee—Philip J. Kunkel of Jasper. Protection Committee—Victor V. Cassidy of Jasper. Public Morale Committee—Rev. Basil Heuler, Rev. Bernard Heischelbeck, Rev. A. A. Pratt of Jasper; Rev. F. W. Neutauer, Jasper, R. F. D. 3; Rev. Charles H. Miller and Rev. John R. Bolln of Huntington. Speaking Committee—Bomar Traylor of Jasper and A. L. Gray of Huntington. Shipping Committee—J. V. Stimson of Huntington and Joseph Sturm and Louis Joseph of Jasper. Fraternal Orders—

W. A. Wilson and M. L. Wagner of Jasper, George L. Stein, Mrs. Louis Lukemeyer and Frank G. Katterhenry. "Four-Minute" Committee—Bomar Traylor of Jasper. Woman's Committee—Mrs. Sarah Cooper, Jasper; Miss Laura Milburn, Cusco; Mrs. Peter Harder, Dubois; Mrs. Homer Wineinger and Mrs. Homer Atkinson, Jasper, R. F. D.; Mrs. J. L. Bretz, Jasper; Mrs. A. L. Gray, Huntington; Mrs. Naomi Schnell, Johnsburg; Mrs. Joseph Sondermann, Ferdinand; Mrs. O. A. Bigham, St. Anthony; Mrs. J. O. Sanders, Birdseye; Mrs. John Line, Dubois; Miss Lena Striegel, Celestine. Boys' Working Reserve—William Melchior. Registration Committee—Work of this committee to be attended to by the Woman's Committee. Christmas Gift Committee—Mrs. H. C. Knapp, Huntington.

Floyd County.—Four-minute speakers who are assisting in the Floyd county campaign for the second Liberty loan, and who will continue to serve for the period of the war, are as follows: Revs. A. H. Keeney, T. H. Cartmell and W. O. Williams, Professor F. E. Andrews, Amos Burt, J. L. Bottorff, W. B. Allison, Wilmer T. Fox, Homer M. Frank, A. J. Howard, Claude McBride, Albert F. Peters, H. C. Poindexter, T. G. Schimpff, James W. Sweeney and George J. Yester.

Franklin County.—The Women's Social Club of Brookville, the largest of its kind in this county, will this season hold its regular meetings at the Red Cross work room. They will "conserve" by serving no refreshments, although the "eats" have always been an important item of the program.

Gibson County.—Dr. J. M. Williams of Owensville presided over the regular meeting of the County Council of Defense, and owing to the absence of a number of members, no business was transacted, except the announcement by the chairman of the following committee chairmen:

Advisory Committee, Judge S. L. Vandever; Publicity Committee, Robert C. Baltzell; Legal Committee, Sanford Trippett; Protection Committee, Joe Barton; Speakers' Bureau Committee, Claude Smith; Boys' Working Reserve Committee, Ira Vonderhyde; Women's Section Committee, Mrs. Nora Walker; Enrollment and Registration in Service League Committee, Mrs. M. P. Hollingsworth; Food Conservation and the Selection of Seeds Committee, Roy Marshall; Sale of Liberty Bonds Committee, Herman Graper; Educational Section Committee, Professor J. W. Stott; Medical Section, Sanitation and Medicine Committee, Dr. Cushman; Labor Committee, J. T. Mullen; Production, Transportation, Distribution and Conservation of Coal and Gasoline Committee, E. B. Funk; Public Morale Committee, Rev. McMillan.

Each chairman will be expected to attend the regular monthly meetings of the County Council of Defense. Meetings are held at the court room at 3:30 p. m. the first Wednesday in each month.

Greene County.—County Agent O. E. Ackerson has issued an appeal to farmers to select and store sufficient seed corn for 1918 planting. His appeal says in part: "Farmers of Greene county, this is the biggest piece of preparedness we can do at this time. Make seed corn gathering a special task. Drop all other business until more than enough has been selected and properly stored. The increased yield will return more profit than any other work you can do. When the sun goes down October 20 we hope every Greene county corn grower can say, 'I have enough field-selected seed corn properly stored away to plant my 1918 crop.'"

Huntington County.—Fred A. Loew, county agricultural agent, in a discussion of milk production in Huntington county, urges dairymen to better their herds and organize a co-operative association. He said: "Out of such organization and co-operation should come the removal of all unprofitable individual animals from the herd and the substitution of individuals which will produce enough milk to more than pay for the cost of feed and care. The organization of the milk producers of Huntington county will make it possible to have a cow testing association in the county, the results of which will be the reduction of the cost of milk production.

Lagrange County.—The Lagrange County Council of Defense, through the instrumentality of Chairman Frank J. Duntan, secured an appropriation of $500 from the County Council. The local defense body has arranged to complete its organization in detail and respond to all requests made of it by the Indiana State Council of Defense.

Lake County.—The American Alliance has started a campaign for membership and expects to enroll more than 5,000 within the month. President D. E. Boone, assisted by Attorney Joseph Conroy, established a chapter in Hobart. President Boone has named Peter Meyn chairman of the finance committee and Charles Surprise and Roscoe Hematost members with him. A. M. Turner, Chairman Ray Seely and Mrs. William Newman constitute the executive committee. Mrs. William Welch heads the entertainment board and Mrs. T. F. Lerry is also on this committee.

If the labor supply in Crown Point does not improve with the advent of cold weather, when farm work slackens up, it is plain to be seen that some of the women will have to don overalls and take the place of some of the young men who have gone to the colors, says the Crown Point Register. There is hardly a store in town that keep up with their orders. Considerable assistance could be given by housewives if they would do what they could to lighten the delivery work, and in this particular it is not unlikely that all deliveries will be suspended unless more help can be secured. It is a condition this time and not a theory that confronts the employer of labor.

Mrs. G. W. Ray of Gary has been drafted by the women of Illinois to go on a three weeks' speaking tour of that State in an effort to secure enrollments in the Service League.

Laporte County.—The Laporte Chamber of Commerce at its annual banquet directed the dispatch of the following telegram to Senators Watson and New.

"The Laporte Chamber of Commerce assembled at banquet instructs me to express the sentiment of this community in connection with the LaFollette and Stone sedition cases. We resent very much the attitude of these men and trust you will represent us as Americans in effecting their expulsion.

"L. M. VAUGHN, Secretary."

Four-minute men of Laporte county have been speaking on the second Liberty loan this week.

Marshall County.—The County Council of Defense will endeavor to catalogue every wheat grower and his acreage in this county. An effort will be made to guarantee sufficient labor to put in the seed and harvest the crop. It is believed the county will more than make the increased acreage allotted it by the Committee on Food Production and Conservation of the Indiana State Council of Defense.

Miami County.—The Fulton Leader says: "The County Council of Defense will start a lively campaign all over the county in a very short time by sending a good talker (no home guard), a man who is thoroughly conversant with the subjects, needs and situation, as there is not enough interest taken in this great and most necessary work. The public does not seem to be alive to its importance."

Montgomery County.—A signal corps school will be established at Crawfordville for the purpose of training men for service in the new national army. H. M. Williams, manager of the Postal Telegraph office, and H. F. Jones, manager of the Western Union, have volunteered to serve as instructors. Men between eighteen and forty-five will be accepted as students and they will be examined physically by Dr. H. W. Sigmond, Superintendent L. N. Hines has set apart a room in the high school building for class work.

Ripley County.—A meeting of the County Council for Defense of Ripley county was held at Versailles. Among the subjects discussed were Red Cross Work, Liberty Loan, Food Preservation, Boys' Working Reserve and Home Guards. Arrangements were also made for an organization of "Four-Minute Talks." A committee was appointed to organize this work to include all the ministers in the county. Among the ministers present were Rev. Langendorf, Father Adelbert and Rev. Schriber of Batesville, Rev. Doering of Napoleon, Rev. Herman Arndt of Penntown and Father Wagner of Morris. Father Wagner made a very eloquent patriotic address and was complimented by the members of the meeting. Several committees were appointed for special work of a nature that is not yet ready to make public.

St. Joseph County.—Urging the young men of the new national army to keep fresh in their minds at all times the memory of their mothers and the dear ones at home, the Rev. John Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame University, also admonished them not to face the great work that is theirs to be done with a spirit of hate. "No great work was ever accomplished by anyone who was ruled by such a spirit," added Father Cavanaugh. "If you soldiers, by good, clean lives, while in service in foreign lands, create a good impression, America will be looked upon with pride. But if, on the other hand, your conduct is such as will create a bad impression, the victory that is certain to come to this country will have lost most of its sweetness, for of what value will a victory be if it is won at a loss of the name of the youth of the country?" Father Cavanaugh's address was a feature at the Rotary Club's farewell dinner to the selected men, October 3.

Captain Edwin Nicar, a veteran of the Civil war, also spoke and he said the young men now starting to war are far better equipped in every way to render effective service than were the boys of '61.

The other speakers of the evening included Mayor Fred W. Keller, Thomas W. Slick, Dr. J. B. Berteling, W. O. Davis, and F. A. Bryan, who acted as toastmaster. Music was furnished by the Donahue orchestra, the Polnaire quartet, Merl Guthrie, Ernest Staples and Roscoe Reinhold.

Former United States service men residing in this county have organized what is known as the St. Joseph County Battalion. The organization's purpose will be to foster patriotism through regular reunions and when possible to serve the nation in all emergencies. The following officers have been elected: President, D. W. Swem; vice-president, E. E. Beck; secretary, Normal E. Nell; treasurer, T. C. Barnes; surgeon, A. B. Morey; chaplain, D. N. Dressler.

Shelby County.—J. Oscar Hall, chairman of the Shelby County Four-Minute men, has arranged for addresses in the moving picture houses of Shelbyville at regular intervals. Herbert C. Jones, George H. Melke and D. L. Wilson assisted this week in presenting the importance of everybody subscribing for Liberty bonds.

Sullivan County.—The Sullivan County Council of Defense, assisted by the women of the community, held a banquet for departing soldiers, September 22. It was a memorable affair. Dinner was served in the court house park to 105 young men of the new army, thirty-two veterans of the Civil war, members of the County Council of Defense, the conscription board and speakers for the occasion. In addition to the big dinner, the program included speeches, a band concert and moving pictures furnished entertainment for the occasion. Pictures also were taken of the crowd of 7,000 which saw the boys entrain Sunday morning and these will be shown for the benefit of the local Red Cross chapter. Another dinner was planned for the remaining 160 men of the Sullivan county quota October 6.

Tippecanoe County.—The Tippecanoe County Council will co-operate with County Agent Otis Crane to make a corn show in December successful. The Council urged more knitting of socks for the soldiers and greater co-operation with the organizers of the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

* * * * *

Wabash County.—Lafontaine has opened a Red Cross work shop. Mrs. George U. Guyer is chairman, Mrs. Lew Morris vice-chairman and Mrs. Leander Sailors secretary and treasurer. The shop has been busily engaged on hospital bed shirts. Mesdames Dicken, Martin, Ovid Miller and George Guyer have received instructions in preparing surgical dressings and will establish classes for regular instruction at once.

New Enterprises During War Discouraged by Mr. Baker.

October 1, 1917.

Mr. Will H. Hays, Chairman Indiana State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Mr. Hays—The Council of National Defense has considered the question you raise in your recent letter as to the attitude which should be taken relative to improvements, public and otherwise, which involve large construction work, and recommends as follows:

Every effort that this country is capable of making should be applied to bring the war to a speedy and successful conclusion. The resources of the country in a general way may be said to consist of men, money and material, and during the period of the war any new enterprise or undertaking should be tried and justified by the test: Will the men, money and material so applied best contribute in this way to the winning of the war?

New enterprises which are not fundamental to the efficient operation of the country's necessary activities should not be undertaken. This will not result adversely upon business or conditions of employment because every man and every resource will be needed during the war. All effort should be centered to help win the war.

Very truly yours,

NEWTON D. BAKER,

Secretary of War and Chairman Council of National Defense.

Purdue Military Affairs.

Military training will be among the chief activities of Purdue University as a result of the order from the war department making the university a reserve officers' training school. Maj. Cassels, U. S. A., retired, has arrived here and is ready to take up his duties.

The commandant will have seven regular army assistants and twelve non-commissioned officers from the regular army to help him drill the men. Under the new rule juniors and seniors will be eligible for officers reserve corps training. At the end of the college year the men will spend a month in extensive training at one of the national army cantonments.

A Proud Heritage.

Rochester, Ind.—Mrs. Martha Sippy Oliver, residing two miles east of Akron, is "doing her bit" by knitting socks for soldiers, despite the fact she is eighty-five years old.

Mrs. Oliver was born in Medina county, Ohio, and removed with her parents in 1844. Both grandfathers served in the Revolutionary war and both were present at the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, at Yorktown.

An uncle, Dr. Joseph Sippy, was an officer in the war of 1812, and her husband, Robert L. Oliver, was a Civil war veteran.

Council to Assist British Recruiting

Indiana Doing Her Share in Securing Physicians for the New National Army.

British male subjects between the ages of 19 and 46, now residing in Indiana, including those who have taken first citizenship papers will be solicited to enlist in the Canadian army by Captain A. Lys Brown, of the Dominion forces. The Indiana State Council of Defense will assist Captain Brown in locating such citizens and encouraging their enlistment. He will maintain a recruiting station in Indianapolis.

Captain Brown appeared before the regular meeting of the State Council, October 10th. He said that inasmuch as British subjects now residing in the United States are not subject to the American conscription law, the War department had considered it right and proper that they should be solicited for service with their fellow countrymen.

The names of the Britishers between 21 and 31 were secured at the time of the federal registration, but the English regulations include all between 19 and 45; and those 19 to 21 and over 31 to 45 must be located in some other manner.

UNDER DOUBLE DUTY TO SERVE

Captain Brown explained to the Council that the Canadian army officials consider British residents of the United States under a double duty to serve; first, the obligation to their native land and second the obligation to the country in which they have lately been making their livelihood. He said recruits will be trained more quickly and assigned sooner by joining the Canadian forces, and that within a year they will be sent to the front to fill up the ranks of the fighting organizations already on the battle line.

As an endorsement and encouragement of the captain's purpose the State Council named a committee consisting of Frank Wampler and J. L. Keach to co-operate in every way possible.

Chairman Hays announced the appointment of William G. Irwin treasurer of the fund being collected by the secretaries of the Indiana Chambers of Commerce to provide comforts for Indiana soldiers. John Northway, of Columbus, Ind., Chairman of the State Secretary's Association, had requested that the State Council, which indorsed the creation of the comfort fund, appoint a member to handle the money.

The matter of establishing a Junior Training Camp Association, having for its object the military training of boys of twelve years of age and over, was referred to the Advisory committee, of which Thomas Taggart is chairman.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE INVITED.

At the suggestion of Isaac D. Straus, federal state director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, the Council extended an invitation to Federal Director William E. Hall to call the proposed national conference of state directors in Indianapolis.

The imperative need of greater facilities for the growing work of the State Council of Defense, was pointed out by Mr. Straus and the chairman was authorized to investigate the availability of more commodious quarters.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson reported that Indiana stands well among the States with reference to furnishing her quota of physicians wanted for the national army. He said Indiana's figure is 572 and that 380 are already in service, with 600 more having volunteered. He said in Jasper county, fifteen miles from Wheatland, there is now no physician and that a special committee of the medical section is engaged in seeking to take care of such sections of the State as may be deprived of adequate medical protection, due to enlistments.

Dr. Emerson said there are 1,453 registered nurses in Indiana and 261 qualified but not registered. He said the State now has 90 in the field and 180 more have volunteered for Red Cross service. He said the problem of training the 600 wanted by the war department is taxing the thirty training schools in the State. He said the hospitals have doubled their facilities in the past three years and asked the co-operation of the State Council in encouraging the establishment of county tuberculosis hospitals to care for requirements. He said there are but 444 tuberculosis beds available and that there should be 3833.

Dr. Emerson said Indiana is second among the States in the amount of pharmaceutical supplies available for the purposes of the war department.

ASSISTING IN BOND DISTRIBUTION.

Chairman Hays reported a meeting of the committee on organization of the fraternal societies section of the Council, and that a report would be forthcoming soon. He also reported the solicitation of the Liberty Loan organization of Indiana to the Council to assist in distributing the second loan of 1917 and the appointment of Evans Woollen with such assistants as he may desire, to represent the Council in this connection.

E. E. Stacey, State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Indiana, informed the Council that the Association is looking after Indiana young men at Camp Zachary Taylor and Camp Shelby. He also referred to the enormous demands being made upon the association by France, Russia and Italy. He invited the Council members to attend the State wide war work conference to be held at Indianapolis the evening of October 15th, to be addressed by Sherwood Eddy, who has just returned from service at the front.

A suggestion to Dr. Harry E. Barnard by Herbert Hoover, federal food director, that a conference of producers, manufacturers and shippers of food stuffs be called to seek a means of eliminating waste, was referred to the food committee of the Council, to act in conjunction with Dr. Barnard.

Walter Gregg, a solicitor for the War Library Council, asked that the Council designate some one to receive contributions to a soldiers' tobacco fund, which is being offered by many, he said, and the Council without committing itself upon the matter of an indorsement of the collection of such fund, designated Evans Woollen to receive such money as is offered for the purpose and to forward it to the national organization having the matter in hand.

War Sometimes Inevitable

(By William Allen Wood, of Indianapolis.)

There are times when war is inevitable if we are to enjoy the higher peace and its benefits. The oppression, religious, political or industrial, which brought most of our ancestors to early America and which they successfully combated after they established government on this side of the Atlantic, recurs in the attitude and acts of autocratic governments today. It must be downed by that supreme sign of spiritual and physical vitality in any individual or people—the will to fight. Whatever may be said of the glories of peace and the horrors of war, there is nothing in the gamut of human experience that appeals to us so strongly as the offer of one's life for a principle when there is no other way to secure the right.

A man with the true virtue of fight, which makes every other virtue effective, is willing to serve anywhere. Let us, then, Americans, give the best there is in us for liberty, as did our fathers of the colonies; let us strive in any capacity in which we may be called to overthrow the spirit of autocracy.

Organizing New Section.

Chairman Will H. Wade, A. L. Branigan, Archibald Hobbs and A. A. Spear, of the committee on organization of the fraternal societies section of the State Council of Defense, met October 8th and agreed upon tentative plans which they will recommend to the representative State heads of fraternal orders, for ratification.

The committee was addressed briefly by Will H. Hays, Chairman of the State Council, on the possibilities of their 500,000 members as a constructive resource of the State in war work.

The committee expects to be able to present a definite, comprehensive plan to the State Council within a short time.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 9

Editorial Comment

To Recipients of the Indiana Bulletin.

In the distribution of the Indiana Bulletin it is inevitable that many names should be certified twice to the mailing list, owing to the varied activities of numerous individuals. For instance, many members of the legislature and editors of newspapers are members of important committees and from each of these sources the names have been sent in to the Publicity Committee. In all such cases the State Council of Defense will consider it the duty of the recipient to report the receipt of more than one copy, to the end that the mailing list may be corrected and all duplications omitted.

EDUCATION VS. MONEY.

Send the young man to college and, if he has scientific aptitude, be sure to send him to a technical college. Some parents feel that because of the war, they need not send their sons to college. This is a serious mistake, for the war has created a tremendous need for the educated man, particularly the scientific man. The more we know, the better able will we be to conquer the enemy. But young men are inclined to forget this important fact. They find that by starting to work at once that they can make more money than they could by continuing their school work. They forget that the prices of today are inflated prices and that, after all, it is the man who has the thorough education who is permanently equipped for a successful life. A prominent professor of pharmacy spoke regretfully recently of the decrease in the enrollment of his classes. He deplored the fact that young men were heeding the call of financial sirens rather than the call to patriotic preparation for national service and the ennobling influences of a college education. The fact is deplorable, and every citizen should see that remedial steps are taken. Our young people should continue to go to college.

CARING FOR SCHOOL BOOKS.

What about the care of school books in war times? Has the school child been told that he must take care of his books? In these days when we are trying to impress upon the young people patriotic conservation principles it seems essential to make them conscious of the value that their school books represent. If a book is soiled, torn or marred with pencil markings or ink blots it becomes unsightly and loses much of its value; whereas a neat, well-kept book may serve not only the present owner, but many others who may use it in turn.

PHARMACY AND THE ARMY.

The Pharmacy department of Purdue university is making plans this year to accommodate itself to war needs. For the first time in the history of the university all pharmacy students will be required to take military drill in order that they may be prepared to serve in a two-fold capacity—military and scientific. Their military training is designed to make them able to work efficiently in the regular hospital corps. A regular physician will give part of the instruction.

H. H. Mosier, publisher of the Bristol Banner, Bristol, Ind., writes that the article recently published in the Indiana Bulletin addressed "To the Drafted" was printed first in the Youth's Companion, as an editorial, early in September, and since has been reproduced with proper credit, in his paper and elsewhere. The Bulletin is grateful for the information and gladly calls attention to the fact. The Bulletin has no disposition to deprive any one of full credit for contributions or articles used, and in this case takes pleasure in giving the Youth's Companion recognition for a beautiful and inspiring contribution to the splendid patriotic literature of the times. This article came to the Bulletin without any revelation of the identity of its author, which explains the manner of its publication.

Patriotic Press Comment

Money Talks.

"Money talks" has long been an expression of much meaning in this country. Money not only talks, but it shouts. It is making so much noise in the United States now that it is heard all over the world. England, France, Belgium, Russia and Italy hear it and rejoice. Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey hear it and tremble. They now realize that they are going to get what is coming to them—one good, thorough, complete and overwhelming defeat. Japan hears it and sends an embassy to the United States to tell the people of the United States how much the Japanese think of them. The Japs want no row with Uncle Sam. Money not only talks, it shouts. The United States is entering the war with its men, its money, its ammunition and all its strength to make the world safe for democracy.—English (Ind.) News.

Feeling the Pinch.

Chesterton is beginning to feel the pinch of war times. Monday morning the delivery man on the Morgan Bros. route advised his customers that no more milk would be delivered to them by this concern. A few days before they had been advised that Morgan Bros. had decided to cease running a milk route, and that a man would take it over, providing the customers would contract by the month and pay in advance. The idea was that an amount certain would be contracted for, and that there would be neither shortage or surplus on the day's delivery, and that people who went visiting or had other reasons for not taking milk would have to pay just the same. When the new man undertook to contract with farmers for his supply he found that there was none to be had. The farmers were either tied up with contracts or had reduced their herds or sold them off. Just what is to be done to supply Chesterton during the winter remains to be seen. With remorseless steadiness the times predicted last spring are approaching, and it is becoming impossible, regardless of price, to obtain many things necessary to the sustenance of life. The pinch is coming right home to us, and it will not be long before the people will realize why the government has appealed to every household to conserve the food supply.—Chesterton (Ind.) Tribune.

Much Fuel Available.

The State Council of Defense has recommended to the various County Councils of the State that a survey of fallen and standing timber available for fuel be made, in anticipation of the shortage of coal this winter. Lake county has thousands of cords of timber, much of it available for fuel, if the men to cut it and teams to haul it could be found. Along the Kankakee river especially there are great quantities of timber dug out by the dredges engaged in ditch work, which is lying covered with mud and debris and left to rot away. All of this could be floated down the river, where it could be reached with teams.—Crown Point Register.

Civilian Relief Work Under Red Cross

Class at South Bend Has Arranged Program for Study of Home Life.

South Bend.—The seven weeks' course in Red Cross Home Service work started here October 5. One evening each week for seven weeks will be devoted to the course, which is free to the public. The following program has been announced for the course:

I. General information concerning the organization and work of the Red Cross. Dr. Lippincott.

II. The Family: Its normal composition and status—normal problems, variations when the bread-winner leaves home. Special problems due to war. Miss Edna G. Henry, director of social science department, Indiana University. Discussion.

III. Effective methods of social work, interviews, securing and interpretation of information. Supervision of families aided. Miss Scott, Rabbi Liebert.

IV. Health and Hygiene—Dr. Sensenich.

V. Family Problems: (a) The children, wife and mother, education, recreation; (b) Juvenile delinquency. Judge W. W. Funk.

VI. Relief Problems—Family Budgets. Father McGinn.

VII. Important Details: (a) Helpful Tools; (b) Co-operation. Mr. Manning.

James L. Fieser, director of civilian relief work for Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky in the national organization, also will appear on the program. Those enrolled for the course already include the following: Mrs. E. W. Anders, Mrs. W. L. Benitz, Mrs. W. Bender, Miss Erma Collmer, Miss Stella Ciesielska, Mrs. Albert Evans, Mrs. Edward Fricke, Mrs. Herbert Frantz, Mrs. Martha Grzesek, John C. Hiss, Miss Genevieve Hagerty, Mrs. Charles Huff, Mrs. C. L. Immel, Mrs. Fred Keller, Stanley Kochanowski, Mrs. James Kelley, Frank A. Leyes, Miss Sarah Lyons, Mrs. F. E. Lambert, Mrs. Carrie Meyer, Mrs. Pearl Kakielska, Miss Monica Makielska, Mrs. P. P. Nicely, Mrs. Mamie Niezgodska, Miss Onetta Newhardt, Mrs. A. P. Perley, Edward T. Reiley, Martin J. Roach, Mrs. F. C. Rohm, Mrs. E. C. Railsbach, Mrs. R. F. Thompson, Mrs. J. B. Toms, Miss Addie Van den Bosch, Mrs. H. E. Vitou, Mrs. Walter Weld, Mrs. Thekla Wypiszyńska, Miss Stella A. Wawrzon.

War Topics for Club Women.

The educational department of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, of which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is chairman, is requesting the women's clubs of the country to study the causes of the war. Mrs. Catt asks the women to confine their program this coming year to such topics as:

1. Causes of war.
2. Conditions in Europe preceding the war.
3. Meaning of the war for America and necessity for self-sacrifice.
4. Food conservation, marketing, production, distribution, etc.
5. Emphasize child welfare and other departments in the work of the woman's committee.
6. Study of ways and means of better community life, etc.
7. What peace terms should include in order to secure permanent peace.

Will Study Bulletin.

The Salem, Ind., high school Current Events class has asked for twelve copies of the INDIANA BULLETIN. They expect to use the Bulletin in their class work along with other periodicals, believing it will be the source of patriotic inspiration.

Although the State Council of Defense had no thought, in launching the Bulletin, that the demand for it would soon become so general, yet this request will be complied with, as will others of a similar nature that may come from educators over the State.

Attention—County Councils

—Female Labor—

To County Council of Defense:

The State Council of Defense, which considered the subject at the instance of the Industrial Board of Indiana, regards it a matter of great importance to the State that the employment of women and girls in industries be carefully watched during the war, to the end that abnormal labor conditions shall not cause the unnecessary use of female labor in occupations hazardous to life, limb or health, and that no weakening in the moral conditions surrounding the employment of such labor be permitted.

The State Council therefore requests each of the County Councils in counties having industrial centers to appoint a committee to be known as the Committee on Woman Labor, which shall keep itself informed of conditions involving the employment of women and girls in manufacturing and other industries in their communities and see that such employment does not violate the standards indicated. Such committee should include in its membership a representative of employers, a representative laboring man or woman and a citizen who takes especial interest in welfare work. The committee should, in its work, co-operate with other agencies having similar objects, such as the Y. W. C. A., the local board of charities and the juvenile court, as well as representatives of the Indiana Manufacturers' Association.

Kindly keep the State Council advised as to your action in the premises.

—Improvements and Construction Work—

To the County Councils of Defense:

The State Council is in receipt of the following letter from the Council of National Defense:

"The Council of National Defense has considered the question you raise in your recent letter as to the attitude which should be taken relative to improvements, public and otherwise, which involve large construction work, and recommends as follows:

"Every effort that this country is capable of making should be applied to bring the war to a speedy and successful conclusion. The resources of the country in a general way may be said to consist of men, money and material, and during the period of war any new enterprise or undertaking should be tried and justified by the test: Will the men, money and material so applied best contribute in this way to the winning of the war?

"New enterprises which are not fundamental to the efficient operation of the country's necessary activities should not be undertaken. This will not result adversely upon business or conditions of employment, because every man and every resource will be needed during the war. All effort should be centered to help win the war.

"Very truly yours,

"NEWTON D. BAKER,

"Secretary of War and Chairman Council of National Defense."

Will you kindly give this matter the publicity that it deserves?

—Second Liberty Loan (4)—

To County Councils of Defense:

The following telegram was sent you on Saturday relative to the Liberty loan campaign:

"The State campaign committees of the Liberty loan have asked the State Council of Defense to aid in the distribution of Indiana's quota of the second Liberty bonds. We are going into this just as hard as possible and want the County Councils of Defense to prepare accordingly.

Please get in touch immediately with the Liberty loan chairman of your county, to whom the State Liberty Loan Committees are this morning wiring. Meet with him and help plan campaign and do everything possible in the premises immediately. Please send immediately to us report as to preparations made to date in your county for this sale."

As suggested in that telegram the State campaign committees of the Liberty loan have asked the State Council of Defense to aid in the distribution of the bonds. This, of course, is our duty and there is but one way we can make the assistance effective, and that is through the County Councils and their organizations. You will remember we were advised some time ago by the National Council that we would be asked to aid in this, and to that end asked that a special committee be appointed by each County Council to be ready to co-operate with the county chairman of the Liberty loan campaign. If you have not such a special committee it should be appointed right away, and otherwise get ready to do everything necessary to make the sale in your county a success. The big thing is not only to get the bonds subscribed by the banks in the counties, but to aid in getting them distributed and into the hands of the individuals.

Mr. Evans Woollen, chairman of the Finance Committee of the State Council, will act as chairman of the special committee of the State Council in connection with the Liberty loan campaign, and you will hear from him frequently in regard to this matter. Please get in touch immediately with the chairman of the Liberty loan campaign in your county and advise us at once just what has been done to date and what you are preparing to do in connection with the matter.

—Fallen Timber for Fuel (2)—

To County Councils of Defense:

The attention of the County Councils is again called to the matter of utilizing dead and fallen timber for fuel wherever it is available. This matter has been brought to your attention in our Bulletin No. 39, but it is the desire of the State Council to strongly emphasize the probability of a coal famine this winter and to urge County Councils to begin campaigns that will result in the bringing out of large quantities of fire wood.

You will find in every county many land owners only too glad to give this wood away for the asking. The removal of it benefits their property.

The State Forestry Board is ascertaining the names of dealers in the larger industrial centers of the State who will buy wood of this kind and what they will pay for it. This will permit those counties that have more wood than they can use to dispose of it at a fair price in other parts of the State and will encourage land owners to get the wood out themselves and market it.

The importance of this matter should be impressed upon the people by full publicity so that adequate preparation will be made for the coming winter. Inactivity in this regard will certainly lay the County Councils open to criticism and censure by the people they represent if many families are allowed to suffer this winter on account of a shortage of fuel.

Please report to the State Council regarding your action in complying with this request.

—Y. M. C. A.—

To County Councils of Defense:

Your attention is called to a State-wide war work conference of the National War Council of the Y. M. C. A. This meeting is to be held Monday evening, October 15, beginning with a 6 o'clock dinner at $1.50 per plate in the Riley room of the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis. The Y. M. C. A. is sending a request to each county chairman requesting him to attend this meeting or send a representative.

The Y. M. C. A. has not only shouldered the stupendous task of placing thousands of its buildings in the American lines in Europe, but has recently, and at the urgent request of their respective governments, promised to extend its work into the French, Italian and Russian armies. The Y. M. C. A. confesses that the magnitude of this undertaking is such that it is forced to obtain the co-operation of every individual and organization in the nation, and the State Council has offered to use its good offices to bring a representative from every county in the State to the meeting above referred to. It, therefore, is most anxious that not one of the County Councils fails in this matter.

Economical Meal; Also Nutritious

Federal Food Administration Issues Table Showing Comparative Cost.

For the information of housewives who wish accurate information on relative costs in planning economical and at the same time nutritious meals, the National Food Administration has issued a table showing the comparative cost and food values of fifty foods.

Bread is taken as the standard of comparison, and the cost per pound and the relative cost per hundred calories of the other materials is shown. The prices given are averages of those in twenty-five places throughout the country on August 1. The table shows that twelve articles are cheaper than bread on the basis of calories obtained for the money, two are of equal value, and thirty-six higher. Corn meal, notwithstanding its present high price, continues to give the most food value for the money. Broiler chickens stand at the foot of the list.

The experts of the Food Administration think that an intelligent use of this table will help housewives. They point out that it would be impossible for a family to keep in health if it were fed exclusively on the foods in the lower part of the table. Their advice is that the housewife continue to prepare the usual meal of varied diet, and utilize this table as a guide in making combinations that will save money and at the same time be nutritious. The table follows:

Selection and Preservation of Seed Corn

By A. T. WIANCKO, Department of Soils and Crops.
Purdue University Agricultural Extension Department.

There never has been a time when there were such important reasons for giving extra attention to the selection of seed corn as there are this year. The demand for corn is likely to be greater next year than it is now. On account of labor shortage, the corn acreage can hardly be increased and it may be lessened. This means that if the total crop is to be increased, or even maintained, the yield per acre must be increased. There will not be extra time for much improvement in cultural methods and fertilizers will be expensive, so that making sure of good seed will be the simplest way to increase yields. To produce large crops has come to be the farmer's most patriotic duty. In the case of corn, the first important step in the work of preparation for a large crop is to select a good supply of seed ears this fall.

The frosts of September 9 and 10, which damaged much corn throughout the northern portion of the corn belt, very forcibly called attention to the backward condition of the corn crop all over the country. In many fields it will be impossible even now to find good seed corn for next year's planting, and other areas will have to be called upon for seed next spring. The indications are that there will be much immature corn at husking time. Under these conditions, it would be the greatest folly to depend upon the corn crib for seed next spring. No matter how much the farmer may be crowded with other work, he should by all means take the time to select a good lot of seed corn this fall before heavy frost. By the time the general husking is on there will be frozen germs on many otherwise good-looking ears.

TIME TO SELECT SEED CORN.

The best time to select seed corn is as soon as possible after the corn has matured and while the stalks are standing and in a condition to show all their characteristics. It is a great mistake to think that good seed ears can be selected from the crib when there are no means of telling on what kind of stalks or under what conditions the ears were produced. The stalk that bears the ear has a number of important characteristics that should be known before the ear is selected for seed. Every observant farmer knows this. The best thing to do, therefore, is to take a basket or bag and go into the field and take time to select every ear with care.

KIND OF CORN TO SELECT.

The stalks from which seed ears are selected should be strong and vigorous looking. They should be of medium height, strong at the base, tapering gradually to the tassel and well supplied with large, broad leaves. The ears should be borne at a convenient height for husking. Experiments have shown that the height at which the ear is borne on the stalk is closely correlated with time of maturity. Within a few years a variety can be made two weeks earlier by selecting low ears or two weeks later by selecting high ears. The shank should be of medium length and strength, and the ear should hang freely but firmly. Further than this, the ears selected should be well matured, strong and well developed, with straight rows of regular-sized kernels. The kernels should be well dented and a little rougher than the average of the crop, otherwise the variety will become smoother each year and the kernels shallower. Very rough ears and extreme depth of kernel are not desirable either. The ears selected should be of a size suited to the local conditions. There is a limit to the size of ear that can be expected to ripen in the average season. Many farmers make the mistake of raising corn that is really too large and too late for their conditions. The result is much immature corn of poor quality. By selecting seed comparatively early and taking only well-matured ears, there is no danger of getting into trouble with late corn. In a season like this, the objections to late corn are strongly emphasized.

This Man is Not Taking Any Chances on Getting Seed Corn for His Next Crop.

Inexpensive Special Seed Corn Racks. Can be Made from Fence Lumber and Laths.

Every Farmer Should Aim to Secure Seed Like this.

STORAGE OF SEED CORN.

Just as soon as the corn has been picked it must be immediately placed in a dry, well-ventilated place and arranged in such a way that each ear may have a free circulation of air around it. Much corn that is intended for seed is injured by improper methods of drying and storing. It is most liable to injury during the first few weeks after husking. The outside of the ear may be dry and hard, but the cob and points of the kernels still contain an excess of moisture, and it is this that so easily causes fermentation, growing, molding or injury from freezing. When the amount of seed corn to be saved is not large, the old practice of hanging it by the husks to overhead beams in an airy place is a good one. With large amounts, specially arranged racks for single rows of ears are most convenient. Other schemes, such as wire hangers, boards studded with nails and fence-wire racks are all good as long as the ears are kept separate. There should always be plenty of empty space in the place of storing, otherwise it will be practically impossible to keep the air dry. Natural drying in the place of storage is always safest and best, and if the corn is well matured, as it should be, there need be no difficulty in getting it dry before freezing weather. Drying by artificial heat is risky, unless one has the experience with it, and should be avoided if possible. Many a lot of good seed corn has been spoiled by over-heating while drying.

When once thoroughly dried, seed corn will stand any amount of cold weather and needs to be protected only from outside dampness.

The work of final selection, testing and grading of seed corn for planting should be taken up during the winter, but early enough to leave time to look elsewhere in case sufficient good seed is not at hand.

Remember that a good seed ear ought to produce at least five bushels of corn and that it cannot be too carefully selected.

County Agents Count.

(Weekly News Letter of U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

The right sort of a county agent is what his title implies—the trusted agent, friend, and counselor of the farmers with whom he works. He is not an outsider with quantities of advice, but a sympathetic helper of his own people, learning by doing.

Folks in some shiftless communities are said to exist by taking in one another's washing: thrifty communities, with a county agent leader, become more thrifty by going to school to each other and learning the best methods of all.

The demonstrations fostered by an able county agent lead to community ideals, community spirit, and community teamwork.

Home sanitation, home water supply, sewage disposal, abatement of the fly nuisance, vegetable gardening, home canning, improvement of the home grounds, betterment of cooking and sewing, and food conservation are all parts of the work which women home demonstration agents can help do.

The country church, supported by a few families, has been known to grow and prosper under the influence of the community spirit generated through an active, earnest county agent.

Community Gatherings.

"We need it now at this time. In a war or democracy we need the community gathering more than at any time in America's history. We are not going to win this war by our army or by our navy alone. We are going to win it by a united people behind the fighting lines. We are going to win it by a mobilization of the public mind, so that they will stand back of everything that is done. Well, now that unification must come through these school house meetings."—Congressman Kelley.

Women Agents From Purdue UniversityTo Give Instructions in Food Conservation as It Relates to the Family Kitchen.

In accordance with the provisions of the Emergency Food Bill passed recently by the United States Congress, Purdue University is now placing women in the counties of Indiana who will do work similar to that of the regular county agricultural agents. Their particular duties, however, will be to give instruction in food conservation as relates to domestic science methods and principles. The organization of these women agents is under the direction of Miss Lella Gaddis, who has had extensive experience in work of this sort. She will be assisted by Mrs. Edna B. Sewell, who will have charge of home demonstrations and baking; Miss Edith Patt, and Miss Elizabeth Collins, who will have charge of urban work. The women agents will work with local clubs, auxiliaries and classes. They will have offices in the county seats and will give demonstrations and lectures on foods, cooking and preserving. As far as possible the work will be standardized though the needs of each particular county will be considered.

SEED CORN CAMPAIGN IS ON.

C. B. Peterson, Superintendent of Schools of Tippecanoe county, is co-operating with the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation on seed corn selection. The following instructions have been issued to the teachers:

"October 15 to 20 has been designated as seed corn selection week. During this week seventh and eighth grade boys should devote at least three afternoons; high school boys should give not less than four afternoons and vocational agricultural students should devote all of each afternoon to the selection of seed corn under the direction of the teachers. It is estimated that one million bushels of high-grade seed corn must be selected to supply the six million acres of corn which Indiana farmers will plant in 1918. The State Food Production Committee, the State Council of Defense, Purdue University, County Councils of Defense, county agents, community betterment clubs, farmers' institutes, bankers, grain dealers and daily newspapers are all co-operating in this important work. It is up to our schools to do their part."

SENDING OUT FORM LETTERS

The following report concerning the seed corn campaign has been received from the county agent of Vanderburg county:

Vanderburg county is carrying out the seed corn campaign through the organization of the Vanderburg Farm Improvement Association, which is an organization reaching every section of the county. They as officers are to send out form letters made up by the office to all the farmers of the county. That association also is to call a meeting in each township for the latter part of next week and the first of the following week.

The county superintendent of the schools is also co-operating with the office in securing a county-wide campaign through the schools. The teachers are asked to take up seed corn selection and storage in their agricultural classes, this to be followed by an opportunity to select at least 200 ears of seed corn. Circular letters will be sent out by this office to all teachers suggesting methods of instruction and selection. At the end of the seed corn week report cards will be sent out to all rural teachers, who will fill in the names and addresses of farmers in the locality and give them to the pupils to be filled out by them on visit to the farmer, as to the amount of seed corn stored, surplus, if any, acreage planted in 1917 and acreage to be planted in 1918. This is to be signed by the pupil and turned in to us through the teacher.

WHEAT CAMPAIGN CLOSES

J. C. Beavers, state leader of the Wheat campaign, reports that wheat sowing is still in progress in many of the northern counties. This week will practically finish the wheat sowing in the State.

The Food Production and Conservation Committee is well pleased with the results of the campaign, as reports indicate a record acreage. Every county without an exception has made a determined effort to sow the acreage allotted in order to meet the demands of the government. Late reports follow:

Allen County: "As far as we can find out from conversation with our farmers coming here, about 10 to 15 per cent. more wheat was sown this season. We judge that more farmers used commercial fertilizer than last season. Approximately six cars were used in our neighborhood, a radius of about six miles."—Jos. Brudi & Co.

Grant County: The Thomas Milling Company reports the down corn has reduced the acreage considerably over what had been planned.

Randolph County: "There is at least 40 per cent. more wheat sown this year than any previous year. There would have been somewhat more had not the corn got down so badly and if fertilizers had moved more promptly. The rye acreage is possibly increased 10 per cent."—Roscoe A. Fields.

Washington County: "A careful survey convinces us that Washington county will easily sow her allotted acreage of wheat and rye this fall. The 27,000 acres of wheat is now in sight, while the rye will double the proposed acreage. The obtaining of fertilizer has caused us very little inconvenience to date."—H. L. Menaugh, Secretary.

Wells County: "We believe the acreage sown in Wells county is 50 per cent. more than last year."—Bluffton Milling Company.

HOG PRODUCTION CAMPAIGN

A state-wide campaign for increased hog production will be waged by the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation co-operating with Purdue University and the state veterinarian. A conference will be held at Purdue University October 30 for the purpose of outlining the program.

This conference is called at the suggestion of Secretary Houston of the United States Department of Agriculture, who is arranging for a series of such conferences to be held in the various states throughout the middle West. Representatives of the United States Department and the Food Administration will be present to co-operate with the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation, the state veterinarian and Purdue University in deciding the lines of work to be taken up during the next few months.

A piece of work attracting much attention has been the organization of pig clubs in connection with the banks in various parts of the State. These have proved successful and have resulted not only in increasing the number of hogs on many farms, but have done much to improve the methods of feeding and breeding.

Arrangements will be made to have a number of specialists work in the State so as to further the program in the best possible way.

Read, Women, Then Sign!

Some Bartholomew county women have been advised not to sign the Hoover pledge cards. There have been vague rumors that signing these cards made the women likely to be taken away from their homes and used in munition factories. Did any of you ever read one of these pledge cards to see what it really says? The pledge reads: "I am glad to join you in the service of food conservation for our nation and I hereby accept membership in the U. S. Food Administration, pledging myself to carry out the directions and advice of the Food Administrator in my home, in so far as my circumstances permit." She makes the pledge to carry out these instructions "IN MY HOME" so far as circumstances will permit. There are no fees or dues to be paid and women who refuse to sign these cards, knowing exactly what they mean, are likely to go into the slacker classification. —Columbus Republican.

Training of Boys in Summer Camps

Proposed by Directors of United States
Working Reserve for Year 1918.

Indiana boys who have enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve are having big things planned for them by the State Advisory Committee, which held its first meeting Wednesday, October 10, at the Claypool Hotel, called by Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director.

The mobilization of Indiana boys between sixteen to twenty-one years of age in camps for three weeks' intensive physical training and education in the rudiments of agriculture on a plan analogous to the officers' training camps, but for a different purpose, was proposed by Mr. Straus and met with the hearty approval of the committee and other invited guests who were present. One camp will be located near DeMotte, in Jasper county, where the Straus Brothers Company of Ligonier have so generously donated to the Boys' Reserve for two years, free of charge, a 640-acre farm. Present plans call for the accommodation of at least one hundred boys at a time on this farm who, after three weeks' training, will be sent out singly or in groups to work on farms in different parts of the State, they in turn being replaced by a succeeding company of one hundred boys who will continue the cultivation of the crops planted by the first company and be trained at the same time. All profits resulting from the sale of the crops will be used in helping to finance the camp. By this method it is anticipated that at least seven hundred boys will be trained during the summer on the one Straus farm. It is likely that other locations will be secured before spring.

SPLENDID WORK IN ILLINOIS.

Among the speakers at the meeting was Burdette D. Butler of Chicago, Federal State Director for the Illinois branch of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve. He told of the excellent results of the work accomplished by Illinois boys during the past season, stating that 405 boys earned on an average of $23.25 per month and board, making a total earning for the season of $27,481.50.

Of the total number of city boys sent out to work on farms only four were sent back as being unsatisfactory. Mr. Butler said that such a clean record for over 99 per cent. of the boys is the finest thing he ever heard of and is indeed a tribute to the loyalty, patriotism and courageous manhood of the youth of America. Encouraging indeed was the report by Mr. Butler of the co-operation of the farmers who employed these boys, of the paternal pride they took in the success of the boys and of the patience they exercised during the first few weeks in adjusting the boys, both physically and mentally, to their new work. Mr. Butler said that after the strangeness of the new situation wore off and after a few knuckles had been skinned and honest callous places had developed in the hands, the boys worked like veterans and most of the farmers for whom they worked urged them to return early next spring. These Chicago boys were drawn from all walks of life, some of them being prominent in high school athletics, some coming from families of small means, others working because they were actuated by a patriotic impulse to do something for their country during this crisis. Pullman Lowden, son of Governor Lowden of Illinois, was among those who worked hard all summer and returned home last week with his veins charged with rich red blood, his mind clear and filled with that boyish enthusiasm so typical of youth when it feels that it has accomplished something worth while.

A PERMANENT CONTRIBUTION.

George L. MacIntosh, president of Wabash College, praised the Boys' Working Reserve and defined it as being a permanent contribution to the economic forces of the country. He stated that enrolling in the Reserve is becoming fashionable for the boys, and that the big problem is to get the boy in touch with the farmer who is to employ him. Therefore, proper means of publicity must be devised which will secure the sympathetic co-operation of the farmer in training green city and town boys to perform the tasks which their country cousins find so easy.

Horace Ellis, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, stated that he had circularized all of the principals and school superintendents in the State, advising them to not hesitate to release boys from school in order to harvest perishable crops and instructing them that if they had any doubts as to what course to pursue, to resolve those doubts instantly in favor of the State Council of Defense and the United States Boys' Working Reserve and they would be sustained by the State authorities. Dr. Ellis stated that the most critical critic cannot find one fault with the plans and purposes of the Boys' Reserve. Of course, mistakes will be made, but they will only contribute toward a final and correct solution of the many complex labor problems which confront the agricultural and industrial forces of the nation. Continuing, he said the Reserve will do more to build up the manhood of the youth of today, eliminate the "soft Charlie man" and make courageous, stalwart fellows of the boys of Indiana and improve the character of their patriotism than anything the schools have ever conceived of. Dr. Ellis praised athletics in schools, illustrating their value by describing how 75 per cent. of the men who have been accepted for aviation service in the army are former college football and baseball players. Athletics should be encouraged by every school authority, for they not only develop manly characteristics, but give an added zest to that stalwart heroism which is so essential in times like these.

TWO FARM CAMP SUCCESSES.

William P. Hapgood, president of the Columbia Conserve Company, described the success of the two "farmers' service camps" which his company financed last summer at Glenn Valley and Medora, Ind. He stated that in order to be successful in encouraging boys to go on farms it would be necessary to demand of the farmers a minimum wage, guaranteeing a certain amount of work per week in order that the boys might be assured of continuity of work and not be called upon to stand all the loss of time incident to inclement weather. The farmer has a new problem in training the labor that is necessary to enable him to increase his production.

R. M. Ladd of Gary, Ind., who conducted a farm camp of Gary boys near Chicago last summer, said that his boys were paid $25.00 and $30.00 per month with board, and of the fifteen boys he took out every one made good and did a man's job. He suggested that a junior organization should be provided to take care of the boys under sixteen years of age who are able and willing to work on farms but yet are too young to be eligible for the Reserve.

In closing, the conference passed a resolution conveying to Governor Goodrich an expression of the pleasure found by the Boys' Working Reserve of Indiana in the knowledge that he is steadily recovering and reminding him that whereas under his direction previous to his illness, Indiana took the initiative and the lead over other States in formulating and initiating various war measures, that the Boys' Working Reserve of Indiana is endeavoring to maintain the pace he set.

Among the visitors present at the conference also were I. N. Logan of Indianapolis and W. P. Bitner of Bloomington.

The members of the State Advisory Committee are: Dr. Horace Ellis, George C. Ball, Hon. Martin A. Morrison, Hon. Joseph M. Cravens, L. B. Clore, Fred Hunting, E. E. Stacey, L. K. Babcock, W. H. Latta, Hon. William A. Wirt, Professor J. G. Collicott, Clarence B. Kessinger, Rev. George L. MacIntosh, Dr. Carl Stoltz, Frank Wilson, Sol Kiser, William P. Hapwood and S. O. Belzer.

HIGH SCHOOLS RESPONDING

Reports coming in from the various counties in which Asa J. Smith, state high school organizer, has appeared before the student bodies of the high schools indicate that the boys are becoming enthusiastic over the Reserve, and many parents who formerly were skeptical regarding its purpose and value are now urging their sons to join, recognizing that they can render no higher patriotic service. High schools in the following counties have been visited in the last two weeks: Miami, Cass, Carroll, Tippecanoe, Clinton, Boone, Marion, Johnson, Bartholomew, Jackson, Scott, Washington, Clark and Floyd.

PATRIOTISM ON THE SQUARE

The following letter reveals true patriotism in the heart of a real Hoosier boy:

Portland, Indiana, R. R. No. 12,

October 2, 1917.

Mr. Isaac D. Straus, 83 State House, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir:—I got your letter the 29th of last month since we moved from Redkey to Jefferson township. I am ready to do my duty whatever it may be. I am right on the square with the U. S. A. now for I am working on a farm.

Yours truly,

* * * * * ROY BUSH.

MONTGOMERY BOYS RECOGNIZED

Upon recommendation of Frank McGeath, County Director of Montgomery county, forty-six boys have been awarded the Federal bronze badge for the patriotic service they rendered during the past summer in working on farms.

The following boys, who are the first of their respective counties to be recommended for the award, were given badges during the past week: Dubois county, Cyril Wilson; Fulton county, Lawrence Wrentmore; Marion county, Leroy Boutte; Sullivan county, Melvin Bennett.

Upon recommendation of F. E. Smith, the following boys in Elkhart county were awarded the badge: Wilson J. Weatherbee, J. S. Warrick, H. L. Warrick, Estel J. Albright and Paul L. Reynolds.

Fountain county still leads in the number of boys who have earned the right to wear this badge. As many as thirty-two boys being recommended by G. W. Rosencrans during the past ten days.

For service rendered in munition factories and steel plants in Gary, Indiana, forty-eight boys were awarded the badge Friday, October 5th. George M. Pinneo, City Director for Gary, reports the Gary boys are keen to join the Reserve, and as soon as an intelligent explanation is made of its purpose and need very few parents offer any opposition. * * * * *

LAPORTE PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

Following a conference attended by all of the enrolling officers of the twenty-one townships of Laporte county on Monday night, Fred R. Farnam conducted a three-day speaking tour, reaching every part of the county for the purpose of arousing the patriotic support of all parents of the work of the Reserve. Mr. Farnam was assisted on this speaking tour by Paul Van Riper, J. D. Harper and L. W. Keeler.

ASSOCIATE COUNTY DIRECTOR

Mr. A. H. Douglas of Logansport, has been appointed Associate County Director to co-operate with Mr. Charles D. Chase in Cass county.

Benjamin Blumberg, who was very active in the State publicity campaign conducted in August, has been appointed Associate City Director with Prof. C. J. Waits of Terre Haute.

CLINTON COUNTY BOYS WORKING

O. M. Pittenger, City Superintendent of Schools of Frankfort, reports that many boys have been released from school on alternate days for the purpose of aiding the farmers in harvesting tomatoes, and also for filling silos. The farmers transport the boys back and forth by way of automobile and pay them $1.50 per day and furnish their dinners. These boys have gone out under the direction of Mr. Bowen, who is a teacher of agriculture, and are rapidly learning the practical side of farming under his competent direction.

In spite of the skepticism that prevailed when it was first suggested that these boys might be of service, the farmers have all been very well pleased with their work, and as one farmer said, "We would much rather have the boys than the usual hobo laborer that many of us have relied upon in the past."

"No matter how great the sacrifice we are called upon to make, no matter how much treasure we destroy, no matter how many lives we lose of those we love, we should thank God that the cause is worthy of them all."—WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

Executive Office, State of Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., October 11, 1917.

Secretary of School Boards, County Treasurers and City and Town Clerks:

In view of the fact that the United States government is now engaged in a national campaign for the sale of Liberty bonds to provide the sinews for carrying the present world war to a successful conclusion and for the further reason that the selling of these bonds overshadows in importance any other financial transactions of a like nature, as acting Governor of Indiana, I desire respectfully to suggest and urge all county and city officials to withdraw all offerings of municipal bonds except those actually compelled by necessity, until the completion of the Liberty loan campaign.

This, of course, does not apply to refunding bonds.

Trusting you will give this matter your careful and favorable consideration, I beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

EDGAR D. BUSH,
Acting Governor of Indiana.

Seed Corn Week in Indiana Successful

Many Counties in the State Will Continue Until Supply is Assured.

October 15-20 was designated as Seed Corn Week by the Food Production and Conservation Committee of the State Council of Defense, although the selection of seed corn will be continued in many counties throughout the coming week. The newspapers of the State have done an excellent work in putting the campaign before the people in an effective way. As a result of the early frost great care will need to be given to the selection of good mature seed. It is felt by the Food Committee that millions of bushels of corn can be added to the 1918 corn crop through the proper selection of seed. The drive for a greater food production can be given a material impetus through this work. The food committee is using every available force to make the campaign the biggest ever put on in Indiana.

The work of the county agricultural agents, the county superintendents of schools, the various agricultural organizations and the members of the county food committee has been very effective. Reports have been received relative to the organization of the work, a summary of which follows:

Wells County.—Harry Gray, County Agent, and A. R. Huyette, County Superintendent. Wells County organized township meetings to be held in the corn fields and at the school grounds where a number of farmers might gather and seed corn be selected. A four-page leaflet setting out the various points to have in mind in selection of seed corn, and also giving the time and place of the various township meetings, was published through the efforts of the county agent.

Fountain County.—G. W. Rosencrans, County Agent, and Guy A. Waldrip, County Superintendent, asked the teachers and especially those having agricultural classes, to give instruction to their students in the selection of seed corn, this instruction to be given in the field. Each pupil was required to select one to two hundred ears of corn during seed corn week. As a part of

Letter From Secretary Baker

The Chairman of the Indiana State Council of Defense is in receipt of a letter from Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, who is also Chairman of the Council of National Defense, at Washington, D. C. Mr. Baker gives an unqualified indorsement of the purposes and work of local defense organizations, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF WAR.
WASHINGTON

October 16th, 1917.

Will H. Hays, Chairman,
State Council of Defense,
Indianapolis, Ind.

My dear Mr. Hays:

The Council of National Defense and the State Councils with their local safety organizations represent with the Governors of the several states and the organizations administering the draft law the normal lines of communication and cooperation between the National Administration and the people. In this time of emergency no one conversant with the conditions and the difficulties here can be other than wholeheartedly appreciative of the continuing counsel and ungrudging efforts that have come to the common cause through all of these agencies, and no word of mine which can sustain or which can help to sustain or strengthen the National, State and Local Institutions of the Councils of Defense will remain unspoken. The work of the Indiana Council has been particularly gratifying. More power to you.

With best wishes.

Cordially yours,

Newton D. Baker

Secretary of War.

In making the letter public the State Council authorizes the following:

The Indiana State Council is giving the letter of Secretary Baker to the public in the hope that it will serve to stimulate interest in the work the council has undertaken, and arouse a greater popular support of the measures which the President, the Council of National Defense, the War Department and the Indiana State government deem essential to winning the war.

their project the seed corn to be stored and tested by them.

Henry County.—H. B. Roberts, County Superintendent, reported on the 13th that the board of education and the county agent had completed plans for seed corn day in Henry County, and that a large amount of seed would be selected.

Posey County.—B. Edward Behrens, County Superintendent, in reply to a request asking for assistance in the work stated that the plan of the department for the pre-vocational teachers to enter into the activities of selecting seed corn has the hearty approval of their office.

Newton County.—"Relative to the seed corn campaign, will say that I am making personal appeals to the teachers at the township institutes. Mr. S. S. Davis, County Demonstrating Agent, is sending help to those teachers in townships where the frost has not killed the corn. Practically all of the corn in the six northern townships of this county in my judgment is not fit for seed." W. O. Schanlaub, County Superintendent.

Fayette County.—Earl Lines, County Superintendent, states that he and the county agent had made a schedule for a tour of the county holding seed corn selection demonstrations in each township for the sole benefit of the boys in the agricultural classes. Farmers and boys were also asked to join the crowd. One half day is to be given each central school. The county superintendent feels that excellent work would be accomplished.

Hendricks County.—Theodore T. Martin, County Superintendent, says that Friday, October 19, was set as seed corn day for the schools. In addition to this a school manual was prepared which contains printed instructions relative to seed corn selection. A copy of these instructions were given to each teacher and plans are made whereby the teacher is to take up the work as a part of the regular school work.

Wayne County.—Wayne County is expecting to meet the demand of the food production committee and do her part in the selection of one million bushels of high grade seed corn which is needed for the 1918 crop in Indiana. The meet-

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—C. L. Walters has been named chairman of the Patriotic League for this county. Mr. Walters expects to perfect his organization at once. In addition to a general support of the State and Federal governments during the war, this organization will assist in looking after the Adams county young men in the Federal service, arrange patriotic meetings and otherwise aid the cause of the United States in its war with Germany.

Bartholomew County.—Mayor Volland, of Columbus, has named the following committee to make a survey of the fuel situation of this county: W. A. Mooney, J. Glanton Perry, T. F. Fitzgibbon, Adolph Snyder, Fred Fehring, John Allison, C. F. Spannagel, Dan Crowe, Paul Poynter, Charles S. Barnaby and the mayor.

In order to know the exact conditions the work of getting preliminary information was divided into three parts:

—Railroads—

(a) Amount of coal received in May, June, July, August and September, 1917.

(b) Coal received May, June, July, August, September, 1916.

(c) Coal received October, 1916, to May, 1917, by months.

Mr. Spannagel, of the Blg Four, in connection with Mr. Burns, of the Pennsylvania Lines, will supply this information.

—Industries, Utilities, Etc.—

(a) Monthly consumption.

(b) Present supply.

(c) Contract being filled.

(d) From whom buying.

The committee to care for this information consists of Mayor Volland, W. A. Mooney, John Allison, John Schaefer and John Jewell.

—Retail Dealers—

(a) Sales last year, May to May.

(b) Sales this year, May to October, by months.

(c) Present supply.

(d) Have you a contract?

(e) Your experience on open market.

The committee to co-operate with the coal dealers is made up of W. W. Adams, chairman; Prof. Fitzgibbon, Dan Crowe, Fred Fehring and C. S. Barnaby.

The members of the committee will have suggestions, it is announced, their purpose being to put Columbus in a state of preparedness for any condition that may arise. The fuel dictator will have the information, reliable, authentic and immediate, if this committee is successful in its efforts.

It is its purpose to co-operate with all elements that will enlist in the cause of furnishing fuel to those who need it. There is to be perfect harmony and unity with the retail coal dealers, who will help carry out the government plans.

Boone County.—The Boone County Council of Defense has named a committee consisting of C. F. S. Neal, Ivory C. Tolle and John Jones to make a survey of the fuel situation in this county. The Council also will put on a publicity campaign on the importance of conservation in fuel and seed corn. Mrs. B. F. McKey was named head of the Women's Liberty Loan Committee; Mrs. Lillian Conley "War Mother," and Charles Shusser chairman of the Home Guard organization work. The latter succeeds Ben Coombs.

Carroll County.—The Rev. G. Stanley West has taken charge of the Four-Minute Men in this county and will arrange for speakers in the moving picture theaters of Delphi. Mrs. Edward Blythe has arranged to supervise Red Cross sewing and knitting, a room having been secured for the purpose and many women having volunteered their services.

Clay County.—The Clay County Council of Defense has been asked to help relieve the labor shortage that exists here. The high wages paid to miners have lured many young men from the farms, the result being a serious handicap to the farmers at a time when they need help most.

Dekalb County.—Mayor J. Y. McClellan announces his purpose to ask the city council of Auburn to purchase a tract of timber and have same cut into fuel for the use of the inhabitants of the city who are without coal. The purpose is to sell the wood at its actual cost. Mayor McClellan has appealed to the United States Senators, who have promised to help him secure relief from the fuel shortage that exists here.

Delaware County.—Delaware county women have organized for war work to co-operate with the County Council of Defense in every possible activity. A compact organization, reaching every township and precinct in the county, will be undertaken. A temporary central committee consisting of Genevieve H. Hanna, chairman; Mrs. A. T. Applegate and Mrs. M. T. Hawley, vice-chairmen; Mrs. C. G. Williams, secretary, and Mrs. J. C. O'Harris, treasurer, was selected. This committee will organize a permanent committee. One of the first duties to be undertaken by the new organization is a complete food survey of the county.

Fountain County.—Harry Mounts, who has been in charge of the Wabash railroad station at Riverside, has turned the job over to Mrs. Eugene Minter, a bride of a few months, whose husband has joined the national army. The shortage of qualified station agents is being felt all along the line and arrangements are being made for further substitutions of women for men, where qualified women can be found.

Fulton County.—Mrs. Perry Heath, secretary of the Fulton County Council of Defense, writes as follows: "In so far as I am in touch with the county, I believe I begin to sense a new interest in not only our work, but in war activities generally, and what seems to me still more important, I notice a new willingness to be convinced that there is a real need for the work that is being attempted. We are convinced that German propaganda has been used effectively in one or two localities and we have one moderately pro-German settlement; however, even they will come out to listen to a Hoover card speech now—not a card has been signed there so far—and we have hopes, even of them. And I am free to confess we have had a prolonged period of discouragement. So any rift in the cloud is very welcome."

Arrangements have been made for a series of public addresses on patriotic subjects during the week of October 22 in this county. It is intended to arouse the citizens to an appreciation of the importance of the war work they have been called upon to do by the Indiana State Council of Defense, the President, the War Department and the Council of National Defense. It is intended to have a quartet of singers accompany the speakers, and it is hoped to reach every section of the county. The Rev. Harley Davis, of Letters, has been named head of the council's committee on public morals. Congressman Henry A. Barnhart has agreed to devote part of his time to the campaign in this county.

Gibson County.—Dr. J. M. Williams, chairman of the County Council of Defense, has named the following committee chairman:

Advisory Committee—Judge S. L. Vandever.

Publicity Committee—Robert C. Balzell.

Legal Committee—Sanford Trippett.

Protection Committee—Joseph Barton.

Speakers' Bureau—Claude Smith.

Boys' Reserve—Ira Vonderhey.

Woman's Section—Mrs. Nora Walker.

(a) Enrollment and Registration—Mrs. M. P. Hollingsworth.

Food Conservation and Selection of Seed—Roy Marshall.

Liberty Bond Sales—Herman Graper.

Educational Section—Prof. Scott.

Medical Section—Dr. R. A. Cushman.

Labor—T. J. Mullen.

Production, Transportation, Distribution and Conservation of Coal and Gasoline—E. B. Funk.

Public Morals—Rev. McMillan.

The Council meets the first Wednesday afternoon of each month and all committee chairmen and members of the sub-committees are expected to be present. O. L. Collins, who resigned from the Council, has been succeeded by J. T. Mullen.

Grant County.—Col. Daniel Gunder, who has had extensive military training, is drilling a local home guard company. A majority of the members have been in some branch of the military service and it is hoped to make this company one of the most efficient in the State.

Greene County.—The Greene County Council has secured headquarters and is now holding regular meetings. Four-Minute Men are being organized and other activities outlined by the Indiana State Council of Defense will be inaugurated as soon as suggested. A patriotic speaking campaign, calling for a visit to every public school house in the county, will begin shortly. Committees have been named to organize and finance this campaign, and as a result there has been a marked revival of patriotic spirit in the community.

Henry County.—E. W. Lewellyn, superintendent of the Newcastle city schools, has been appointed chairman of the educational section of the Henry County Council of Defense. He will name a representative educator from each township of the county on his committee. Walter S. Chambers, state senator and publisher of the Newcastle Times, has been appointed chairman of the publicity committee of the Council. W. C. Bend heads the committee that will make a survey of dead and fallen timber that may be available for fuel purposes. Henry county women are signing the Hoover enrollment cards and are expected to add 60,000 cans of fruit to the immense quantity that has already been conserved.

Jackson County.—John E. Hunsucker, president of the State Bank of Valonia, has succeeded to the chairmanship of the County Council of Defense, made vacant by the death of Captain D. B. Vance.

Jay County.—The Portland Red Cross Society has inaugurated a rather novel plan of attracting the public's attention to their work. Each Saturday afternoon large display windows in the principal stores in Portland are selected and the ladies sew in the windows, making surgical dressings and other Red Cross garments. Passers-by are attracted to the novel window attraction and are reminded that they can do their bit toward the good work by either contributing toward the cause or assist with the sewing. The local society invites all ladies of the vicinity to assist with the sewing any afternoon at the Red Cross sewing parlors, and all contributions are welcomed at any time.

Lagrange County.—Dr. George R. Grose, president of Depauw University, made an address at the Lagrange County Corn Show on the afternoon of October 10 that was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience, which went away with a baptism of patriotism. Dr. Grose was here under the auspices of the Indiana State Council of Defense and his address was the outstanding feature of the corn show program.

Lake County.—County Auditor Edward Simon, of Crown Point; O. H. Gersbach, of Gibson, and C. H. Doorley, of Gary, have been appointed a committee of the Lake County Council of Defense to make a survey of the dead and fallen timber in the county that might be used for fuel purposes in the event of a serious coal shortage. The committee is now at work and expects to make a report soon.

Food Mentor Frank O'Rourke met with nine restaurant and hotel proprietors, and hereafter at Hammond restaurants the conservation fight will be in vogue.

There will be no wheat bread served at Tuesday noon-day meals. Corn and rye bread will be substituted.

Beginning Wednesday the restaurants will specialize on fish dinners as well as on Friday—making two fish days a week.

Further "conservation bits" will be planned later. The restaurant owners patriotically agreed to "do their bit" by observing strictly the plan.

Miami County.—The Miami County Council of Defense has changed its meeting time from every Saturday morning to the second and fourth Saturday mornings. The organization is complete and receiving encouraging reports from all committees. The Red Cross recently paid $120 for yarn with which to make socks and other garments for the soldiers' comfort.

Montgomery County.—Farmers of this county have set out to collect 25,000 bushels of the best seed corn available for 1918 planting. They will increase their acreage of wheat and rye, as urged by the Indiana State Council of Defense. Since school opened the United States Boys' Working Reserve has taken on new life and the organizers expect to secure the enrollment of every eligible boy in the county within a few weeks. The food conservation cards are being distributed and signed by many women. A committee named by the County Council of Defense is making a survey of dead and fallen timber for use in the event the coal shortage becomes acute.

City Clerk C. M. Harlan, of Crawfordsville, announces that the city is ready to take up any of its bonds that may be outstanding in order that the holders of these bonds may invest the proceeds in Liberty bonds. The city has recently recalled $14,000 worth of its securities.

Noble County.—Patriotic meetings in support of the sale of the second Liberty loan bond issue are being held in this county. Ministers have been enlisted and they are giving of their time and energy in assisting the local bond distributors.

Orange County.—The Orange County Council of Defense has a complete organization under the direction of Chairman Oscar Ratts and every department is alive and active. A splendid patriotic meeting was held in Paoli October 11, at which the Rev. Charles Howard Taylor, of Bloomington, made the principal address.

Pike County.—Pike county citizens need not worry about the prospective fuel shortage. All they need to do is to go outside their kitchen doors, sink a shaft and find fuel needed for heating and cooking. All the work assigned to the local County Council of Defense is well in hand and the council has been able to show results in soldiers, money and other evidences of loyalty.

Rush County.—A. L. Gary, chairman of the County Council of Defense, called a meeting of farmers in the court house at Rushville on the afternoon of October 13, at which time plans were laid for a supply of seed corn for 1918. The meeting was largely attended and addresses were made by stock men and others, who appealed to the patriotism of Rush county farmers as well as their desire for personal gain in selecting the best seed available and making the 1918 harvest the greatest on record. Chairman Gary announces that it is necessary that the per capita purchase of bonds in Rush county be $35 if the community is to do its full share in the second Liberty loan distribution. He encourages the purchase of bonds of small denominations by men and women of limited means, and expects many to take advantage of the opportunity to subscribe.

The people of Rush county are endeavoring to fulfill every request that the Government and the State Council of Defense make, and among other things are being particularly careful in the matter of conserving food. The practice of feeding unused bread to chickens and stock has been very generally discontinued here in an effort to save wheat.

St. Joseph County.—Miss Margaret Parker, of the Epworth Hospital, South Bend, delivered the second of a series of talks on home nursing before the Mishawaka Women's Club Monday afternoon. The women expect to organize a large class in this feature of Red Cross work.

Starke County.—The County Council of Defense has been active in a campaign to influence farmers to increase their acreage of wheat and rye, in line with the request of National Food Administrator Hoover and the recommendations of the committee on food production and conservation of the Indiana State Council of Defense.

Tiptecan County.—Arrangements are being made here for a mammoth corn show in December. This is independent of the seed corn campaign planned for the latter part of October. The County Council of Defense is encouraging both the show and the selection of good seed corn.

Warrick County.—Warrick county is in splendid condition and all patriotic work is going satisfactorily. We have very few "slackers" and few are disloyal. The enrollment of women and the Red Cross activities are well in hand. The enrollment of boys in the United States Boys' Working Reserve has been slow but satisfactory, as those eligible for the most part have been at work. All the essential committeemen have been named and have organized except the moral and enlistment committees, which are being perfected.

Wayne County.—A special meeting of the county council has been called for October 20, at which time a request for an appropriation of $1,000 for the use of the County Council of Defense will be presented. The county commissioners have endorsed the proposed appropriation. Private enterprises here have guaranteed $2,000 in addition to what may be available from the county treasury for the proper equipment of home guards, this county being entirely without prospect for relief in an emergency that might require the presence of armed men.

Patriotic Press Comment

Articles Profitable.

The space usually given to the leading editorial in The Press for several weeks has been devoted to the expressions of the Council of Defense writers, a series of these editorials being published as coming from the various authors. They are worth reading and studying carefully. Each week you will find what some prominent Indiana man has to say concerning the patriotic duty of the citizens of the state. They are sound in their doctrine and can be followed with profit.—Waterloo Press.

Indiana Must Awaken.

Yesterday the State Council of Defense completed a four-day speaking campaign, touching every county in the State. The plan was an admirable one—intended to stimulate a greater interest in conservation of our resources and thus help win the war. The only trouble in the whole plan was that far too many of those who should have been interested and attend the meeting in their county failed to do so. Indiana must awaken to the importance of this war and to the conserving of our resources or the present high prices of today are only a patching to those to come if, in fact, there will not be actual suffering.—Portland Sun.

Two Blades for One.

If the farmers of Indiana don't make two blades of wheat grow where one grew before it will not be because they were not urged to do so by the State and County Councils of Defense, other government agencies and the newspapers.—Princeton Democrat.

Community Must Profit.

If the community does not profit by the visit of the Defense Council representatives to the city Friday afternoon, then organization here is a hopeless task. The problem faced by the Fulton County Council of Defense is one common to every county in the State—that of waking the people up to the real state of things. Far as we are from the scene of the world war, we have not yet assumed our small share of the responsibility. If we do not now cooperate with those in charge of the work, then the county will fail when the government calls. Keep this in mind, and act accordingly, if you are asked to help.—Rochester Sentinel.

Once German But is Now Real American.

"If Germany wins this war, fifty years hence its government will rule the American people. I do not want my American children to be put under this yoke, which I escaped by coming to America. My hope is that the German government will be overthrown and that the German nation, my relatives and friends, will enter an international agreement for peace and justice.

"The German government has had more than one opportunity to obtain all justice and terminate this war. Its actions show that world domination, not justice, is its aim."

This is part of a statement made by Max F. Meyer, a professor in the University of Missouri, who was born in Germany, was educated there under Prussian rule until he was 25 years old.

Coal Problem Again Before the Council

Railroads May be Asked to Reserve Open-Top Cars for Hauling Fuel

"Resolved, That the Indiana State Council of Defense recommends to the railroad committee of the Council of National Defense the careful consideration of the proposition of a general order to all railroads to cease furnishing cars for the transportation of material for public road and street building and other work of a similar character until the demand for cars for the transportation of coal is met."

The above resolution, presented by A. E. Reynolds, was unanimously adopted by the Indiana State Council of Defense at its regular meeting, Wednesday, October 17th. It followed the report of H. R. Kurrie that the Big Four railroad was using "perhaps more than half" of the 1,400 open top cars assigned to its lines in Indiana for the hauling of merchandise rather than coal. Mr. Kurrie, in answer to the inquiry of Will J. Freeman, chairman of the committee on coal production, stated that other lines in Indiana are not using a great number, probably not more than 100 in such service.

"If there is more coal than facilities to handle it the railroads are justified in diverting cars to move this coal," Mr. Reynolds asserted.

FEDERAL MAN POWER CENSUS.

A resolution urging upon the federal government a census of man-power that should be requisitioned for agricultural purposes, prepared by Mrs. J. M. Conroy, of the executive committee of the women's section of the council, was presented by Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle and referred to N. S. Squibb, chairman of the committee on industrial preparedness and of the Public Service Reserve. Mr. Squibb stated that William E. Hall, of the federal department of labor is considering the taking of such a census.

On motion of H. R. Kurrie a special committee of the Council will consult with Governor James P. Goodrich in order to avoid a possible conflict in reference to the employment of women in emergency war industries inasmuch as the proposition "involves the employment of women in violation of statutory law."

H. McK. Landon was named to represent the State Council at a conference of the War Camp Community Recreation Service, in Washington, D. C., October 23, on the invitation of Raymond Fosdick of the War Department's Commission and John N. Willys of the Public Service Reserve.

LETTER FROM DIRECTOR HALL.

Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, read the following letter from William E. Hall, national director of the Reserve:

"Honorable Will H. Hays, Chairman State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.:

"My Dear Mr. Hays—Secretary Wilson wishes me to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram, dated October 8, and I wish to acknowledge receipt of your telegram of the same date addressed to me containing your very kind offer of Indianapolis as the place of the National Conference of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve. We appreciate the advantages of Indianapolis, and especially are we grateful for your invitation assuring us of your help in making the conference a signal success.

"The State directors with whom I have consulted are divided as between Chicago and Indianapolis for the reason that for most of them it will mean part of an extra day on the train. Chicago is one night from almost every part of the eastern half of the United States. There are certain decided advantages in holding the conference in Indianapolis. The splendid work you have done and your whole-hearted support of the Reserve work in your State would prove not only an example to other States, but would be a decided incentive to greater effort. Just as soon as we have decided where we will hold the conference I shall let you and Mr. Straus know. No matter what the decision is, please know that we all are deeply grateful for your most kind invitation."

J. L. Keach reported that the special committee including besides himself Frank Wampler had conferred with Captain A. Lys Brown, head of the British-Canadian recruiting station in Indianapolis, and offered the assistance of the council wherever it can be used in furthering the campaign to enroll all British subjects between the ages of 19 and 45, residing in this State, in the Canadian forces.

COAL TROUBLE IN VIGO.

Upon receipt of a telegram from Earl Houck, chairman of the County Council of Defense in Vigo county, announcing the idleness of miners in eleven mines with a loss of production of 15,000 tons of coal daily, in the Terre Haute district and the threatened spread of the disaffection to other mines, the Council appointed a committee consisting of Charles Fox, chairman of the labor committee, Mr. Freeman of the coal production committee and Mr. Wampler of the committee on employers' co-operation to seek to adjust the trouble, and if in their judgment the situation warranted such action to report to Federal Fuel Director Garfield the importance and imperative need of extending to the miners the benefits of any agreement that may have been accepted by their representatives in conference with representatives of the coal operators.

Miss Grace Parker, of New York, representing the national league for women's service addressed the Council in advocacy of the registration of men and women for emergency war service.

"I want to congratulate you here in Indiana," added Miss Parker, "on the perfectly splendid progress being made in all lines of defense work."

H. McK. Landon spoke in support of an enrollment of men exempted from service in the army in a community service organization, wherein service be made compulsory.

William Holton Dye presented a suggestion from George W. Perkins, of New York, that the State Defense organization assist in securing a stock of sheep for Indiana farms, a matter which Prof. G. I. Christie said already has been taken up by the committee on food production and conservation. The proposition was referred to the food committee.

What You Can Do on "Conservation Week," October 28 to November 4.

1. Go to church on "Conservation Sunday," October 28, and hear what your minister has to say about food conservation.
2. Find out why we must eat corn and other things in place of wheat; why we must eat fish and chicken and other things in place of beef, pork and mutton; use less sugar; use less fats.
3. Eat corn bread for dinner every day for eight days. This will give you the corn bread habit.
4. Eat no beef, pork or mutton on "Meatless Tuesday," October 30. Chicken or fish are permitted.
5. Attend "Conservation" speakings on Wednesday, October 31.
6. Study conservation window displays and watch for merchants' conservation sales on "Merchants' Conservation Day," Thursday, November 1.
7. Eat no beef, pork or mutton on "Meatless Friday," November 2. Fish and chicken are "permitted."
8. Sign your country's pledge to save food to help win the war.
9. Get others to sign the pledge card.
10. Hang the food administration window membership card in your front window to help get other people interested in food conservation.
11. Read your copy of "Ten Lessons on Food Conservation" which you will be given when you sign the pledge card.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 10

Editorial Comment

"AS LONG AS I CAN SEE OLD GLORY I AM GOING TO FOLLOW IT."

"I pray I may come back to you, but if I have to go I will go willingly, because I did not join the army to stay at home. I joined to help fight, and as long as I can see Old Glory, I am going to follow it."

The above paragraph is from a letter written by George E. Padgett, grandson of Judge W. H. Padgett, a well known Hoosier. It is one of the short classics that already have come back from France. There is nothing of chauvenism in the devotion this soldier feels to the flag and the cause it now represents in tear-stained, bloody Europe. Rather it represents the self-sacrifice of the ideal soldier of Democracy.

It may be, as has been said, the war has not yet inspired any pretentious literature of lasting quality. But who can deny the tremendous force and imperishable sentiment of such paragraphs as this? What could we add to it? George Padgett probably makes no claims to being a literary genius, but if he is as good at soldiering as he is in putting down in a few words the all embracing purpose of the man in uniform, he should graduate from this war with a high commission.

TOO MUCH TRESPASS.

A prominent citizen of Hamilton County makes the following very pertinent observation:

"A few weeks ago I found a well-bred colt dead in the pasture from a bullet wound. He was dead in his tracks, indicating that it had been a deliberate act of the culprit—his motive, of course, can not be determined. It surely would be better for my country and myself to be able now to put this colt into three fifty-dollar Liberty bonds than to put him into fertilizer."

At this time when reports of depredations are being made from different parts of the State, every farmer should watch closely the movements of strangers upon his land—and in order that he may recognize the stranger his neighbor should, unless business carries him upon another's land, refrain from needless and promiscuous trespass. We always have been guilty of being too free and easy with things which belong to others. We disregard the property rights and boundary lines of land owners generally.

This suggestion may be more timely, in view of the fact that the hunting season is to open within the next few weeks. An Indiana statute requires that hunters secure permission of land owners before going upon their grounds. This law has been generally ignored. Every season the live stock of farmers is killed or crippled by the reckless shooting of hunters. The farmers of the State should look more closely to the enforcement of our game laws. They should effect local organizations and work in conjunction with Deputy Game Wardens, and above all they should keep out of their neighbors' fields and woods, so that when trespassers are discovered, their appearance will give grounds for apprehension and investigation.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 53.

October 11, 1917.

—Indiana Patriot League—

To County Councils of Defense:

As you perhaps know, there is now in process of organization throughout the State a patriotic body of men and women, called The Indiana Patriot League. The principles of the organization are set forth in the following preamble to its constitution:

Preamble. "This organization is formed for purely patriotic purposes; to encourage and stimulate an intelligent support of the Government now engaged in war for the protection of American rights and institutions; to provide methods for striking at open or masked disloyalty; to aid the State and National Government in their policy of achieving a full measure of national efficiency."

The State Council of Defense has formally endorsed the Indiana Patriot League and has pledged its co-operation in carrying out its organization plans, which contemplate, among other things, the formation of similar bodies in all county seats and other cities and towns of over 2,500 population, which shall declare their adherence to the organization formed in Indianapolis.

In order to facilitate the work of the organization it has been thought advisable to use the County Councils of Defense for the purpose of initiating the movement.

You are therefore requested to select from among the citizens of your community one of sufficient prominence and position to enlist popular support, who will agree to take charge of the initial stages of the organization of the Indiana Patriot League in your county seat and the cities and towns of over 2,500 population in your county, and to report the name of such person hither. The person so selected should immediately enter into correspondence with the Indiana Patriot League, No. 936 Lemcke Building, Indianapolis, and he will then be put in full possession of the plans and constitution which have already been adopted.

The Indiana Patriot League has undertaken an important patriotic work which is destined to have excellent results, and it has the entire sympathy and support of the State Council of Defense. You are therefore earnestly requested to give this matter your prompt and undivided attention.

The officers, executive committee and charter members of the organization in Indianapolis are as follows:

Executive Officers—Henry Lane Wilson, President; Samuel M. Ralston and Charles E. Cox, Vice-Presidents; Thomas A. Wynne, Treasurer.

Executive Committee—Henry W. Bennett, Charles E. Cox, Frank E. Gavin, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Robert Lieber, Edgar A. Perkins.

Charter Members—Henry C. Atkins, Alexander C. Ayres, John T. Barnett, Henry W. Bennett, William C. Bobbs, Ernest Bross, Charles E. Cox, Stoughton A. Fletcher, Frank E. Gavin, Alfred M. Glossbrenner, Wm. P. Herod, John E. Hollett, John H. Holliday, Wm. P. Kappes, Sol Kiser, Robert Lieber, Charles Martindale, Winfield T. Miller, Meredith Nicholson, Dr. Thos. B. Noble, James W. Noel, Rev. Owen D. Odell, William A. Pickens, Albert Rabb, Charles E. Remster, Frank D. Stalnaker, Charles N. Williams, Henry Lane Wilson, Eben Wolcott, Dr. G. V. Woolen, Thomas A. Wynne, Philip Zoercher.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Objects of Food Control.

1. Full inquiry into available stocks of food.
2. Inquiry into the actual costs and practices of producing and distributing.
3. Prevention of hoarding of and speculation in foodstuffs.
4. Requisition of food supplies and equipment for handling when necessary.
5. Prohibition of wasteful uses of food.—Herbert Hoover.

British Commission Addresses Council

Sir Stephenson Kent Tells of England's Experience in War Industries.

The presence of the British Labor Commission served to attract a large audience to the meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, October 17, with a correspondingly increased measure of interest. The visiting delegation, headed by Sir Stephenson Kent, made short addresses touching upon the importance of continued and continuing cordial relations between employers and employees during the prosecution of the war with Germany. Sir Kent said:

"We are not here to give advice. Rather we come to give you the benefit of our experience. We have found that we could not successfully conduct the war unless we had a profound peace at home. Employers and employees, capital and labor must work hand in glove. Labor has given up what it had fought for since time immemorial, conditional—and rightly so—upon the promise of the British government that the rights temporarily set aside would be restored and reinstated immediately upon the war's conclusion. The war has grown to be a war of mechanics more than anything else. It cannot be brought to a successful conclusion except with labor's whole-hearted support."

The commission was received by Charles Fox and his associates on the labor committee of the council, and Frank Wampler, chairman of the employers' co-operating committee, and his committeemen. The Rev. A. B. Storms presented them to the Council and visitors present.

Wednesday afternoon the commission was taken for an auto tour of the industrial sections of Indianapolis and elsewhere about the city. At night they met representative employers and wage-earners at informal conferences in which the problems of war emergency industries were discussed in detail.

The members of the commission and their official posts follow:

Sir Stephenson Kent, K. C. B., a member of the Council of the Ministry and director-general of the labor supply department.

H. W. Garrod, deputy assistant secretary of the labor regulation department.

G. H. Baillie, chief technical dilution officer of the labor supply department.

Captain Cyril Asquith, director of the artificers' allocation of the labor supply department.

Merchants' Economy

New methods in merchandising face Laporte housewives when they start on their usual shopping trip to dry goods stores.

October 1st was the date fixed, on which important changes went into effect—rules governing the delivery of merchandise.

Clerks in all five of the large dry goods stores had been instructed there will be only two deliveries a day, one at 10 o'clock in the morning and the other at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Customers who call for special deliveries were charged an extra 10 cents. These rules were effected at the request of the National Council of Defense. Stores all over the United States are conforming to the rules which are put into effect to eliminate waste and to stabilize and standardize dry goods trade. Articles taken out of a store on approval must be returned within three days or they will be charged to the customers account and not accepted.

The matter of carrying home bundles is also being enforced rigidly. Customers can be of great help in putting merchandise on a much better basis if they will lend their co-operation by carrying home their smaller packages.

The Purpose of the War.

"The purpose of the war is to discourage aggression by such a defeat of the German autocracy that no nation will again undertake a war for self-aggrandizement. This purpose requires that the war shall be vigorously prosecuted until it can be terminated in such a way that PEACE WILL BE PERMANENT."—League to Enforce Peace.

Superintendents of Schools Will Assist

Purpose and Need of United States Boys' Working Reserve Explained.

The purpose and need of the organization of the United States Boys' Working Reserve was presented by C. B. Fritsche, Assistant Federal State Director, to the City School Superintendents' Association of southern Indiana at its fall conference held in New Albany, Friday, October 12. The city school superintendents present pledged their full support and co-operation to the work of the Reserve.

Mr. Fritsche impressed his hearers with the fact that they are molding the ideals and fixing the habits of the youth of Indiana, who, in co-operation with the youth of America, will be the hope of the world after this war is over. The boys of the ages of sixteen to twenty years, inclusive, will have a double burden to shoulder: First, the responsibility which in the normal course of events would fall to their lot, and second, the responsibility imposed on them should death claim their older brothers in France.

COUNTY DIRECTORS, ATTENTION!

Federal State Director Isaac D. Straus authorized the following:

"In order that there may be no misunderstanding regarding the purpose of the enrollment of the boys of the ages of sixteen to twenty, inclusive, in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, the Indiana State Council of Defense desires to impress the public that the Reserve is organized under the United States Department of Labor in order to furnish man-power for industries and farms. It has absolutely no connection with any military organization of any State or of the national government.

"Publicity given out by the National Association for Universal Military Training, a non-governmental organization, states:

"The best way to shorten the war is to prepare fully and adequately. If we begin now to register boys of nineteen they will be twenty before they can be got into active service and twenty-one before they would actually be called."

"The registration is solely for the purpose of enumerating boys who may become eligible for military service during the next two years and has nothing whatsoever to do with the United States Boys' Working Reserve. The statement is not to be construed as an official order, there being no law under which there can be universal military training or registration in the United States at this time."

PUBLIC SCHOOLS DISMISSED.

Fred R. Farnum, county director for Laporte county, advises that the schools in Westfield and Clinton township have been dismissed during the past week in order to release the boys to aid in the harvesting of the potato crop.

Mr. Farnum reports that in all his experience as school superintendent, he has never observed the seriousness and earnestness with which the pupils are approaching their work this year. He attributes this to the fact that the youth of Indiana are stimulated by a realization of the responsibility which they owe to society and to their country. Their release from school for the purpose of rendering valuable service will in no wise interfere with their studies, he believes, but on the contrary will improve their scholarship.

CLORE IS SOME PRIZE WINNER.

The following letter, received from one of the boys who has earned a federal bronze badge, should prove inspiring to the youth of Indiana:

"Mr. Isaac D. Straus, Indianapolis, Ind.:

"Dear Sir—I received your letter the 8th and am certainly very proud to have such a letter in my possession.

"I am a farmer boy (since 1912). I was too small to work the first two years, but since then I have made every lick count.

"In 1914 I won first on my acre of corn; I received as the prize a heifer calf.

"In 1915 I raised 5 acres of corn and received a third, and a third on my acre.

"In 1916 I raised 5 acres of corn and captured fourth and first on the acre. My prize this time was a 'Grade Sow.' (I am giving this year two of this sow's pigs as prizes in the corn club.) I also received a fourth and a first in the county and township respectively in the calf club—this calf was from the cow I won in 1914.

"This year I have been in the pig, calf, potato, acre and five acre clubs; my corn looks better than ever before and I have selected 20 bushels of extra fine seed corn.

"In the last four years, I have helped put in and harvest 250 acres of corn—175 acres of oats—75 acres of rye and wheat—20 acres of beans and 75 acres of clover. I have also helped raise and market 400 hogs, 50 cattle and 25 sheep.

"As you say, this gives a person quite a jealous pride to look back over a record like that.

"A great deal of honor is due Mack Reed for help in the Reserve both of us getting 22 'converts.' We are wondering where our lieutenant badges are, but suppose maybe there was some mistake in awarding them.

"Would you please investigate and report to Mack Reed and I concerning these badges? You see we want all the honor we can get because if 'Every American boy opposes a German boy,' we want in on it.

"Yours very truly,

"VERNIS C. CLORE."

CITY BOY MAKES GOOD.

The following letter describes the summer's experience of one city boy, who not only made good on a farm, but has resolved never to spend another summer in idleness:

"Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 9, 1917.

"Mr. Isaac D. Straus:

"Dear Sir—"This letter and acknowledgment of the attention shown me is very late. However, I am still interested in the 'Boys' Working Reserve' and think it is a great thing.

"You and Mr. Fritsche both have asked me for an account of my experiences while working on a farm this summer and I will try, herein, to give you what you have asked for.

"In the first place, heretofore I have always spent my vacations, in summer, at Lake Maxinkuckee and not at work. This year we stayed at home instead. I got restless for a job and asked for one on the farm of Wm. A. Saidla north of Crawfordsville. I had never worked on a farm before, however. I had made up my mind if I did go out I would stick with it. I afterwards learned that the farmer thought I would leave the first day.

"I went out at the beginning of the harvest season and they put me to work right away in the oats field shocking oats. That first afternoon changed my ideas of farming. As I worked from day to day I grew to like it and to really take an interest in my work. Altogether, I helped shock almost one hundred fifty acres of oats. It took us about ten days but we did not work in the oats field all that time. Rain held us back some and we were stopped for various other reasons at other times.

"The people I stayed with were certainly fine to me and I could never complain of the food and accommodations. They were up-to-date in every way and were very progressive. I helped around the house at odd times, doing such things as churning butter, mowing the yard and wiping the dishes—having a good time with it all.

"The two sons of Mr. Saidla run a threshing outfit during the harvest season and at the time we were finishing up in the oats field, they were thinking of going out. There are four hands who go with the engine and separator. They are, namely, the engineer and his water hauler and the separator man along with his 'stacker.' The position of water hauler was open so I asked for it. I was told to be ready on the following Monday morning to pull out, and I was.

"Although my job was no cinch, it was not very hard. I got up usually at five a. m. and helped build a fire in the engine. While the steam was coming up, I had the job of cleaning up the machinery and oiling various parts of it. Meantime I would eat breakfast and go to the barn looking after my team. By the way, I had the best team in that part of the country too. It was a team of bay mares, one was called 'Kit' and the other 'Nell.' Old Kit could out-pull any other horse around there, and Nell was right with her. After cleaning the team up, I would harness them and lead them out to the tank wagon which we always left alongside the engine, and hitch up.

"If we were out of water, I would drive away to the well or stream, whatever the place was I pumped from. On some days when things run smooth I would get as high as five twelve-barrel tanks of water. All of it had to be pumped into the tank-wagon by a double action hand pump. Sometimes when the water had to be carried a mile or so, I certainly had to work and work fast, getting soaked with sweat in the meantime. After going back to the engine, I would fill up the coal box, give the horses a bundle of oats and pile down on my sheepskin, getting in a little sleep. When we would quit for the day, all I had to do was clean out the flues, chop some kindling and then eat supper.

"As yet, I have not said much about our meals while threshing, but they are too important to be left out. I lived 'higher' than than at any other time in my life. We had fried chicken every meal, also pie. And those dinners—the only way a fellow can appreciate them is to get up an appetite and eat one. We always had two kinds of meat and a dozen different vegetables along with good bread, cake and several varieties of spreads and pickles. I was not used to such meals and I ate too much. The next time I go to the country, I will sure watch my eating.

"This experience I have had this summer is the greatest I have ever had. I am of the earnest opinion that any average boy of the city would think the same on going through it. Every city boy should work on a farm and get an idea of what farm life is. This organization, 'The Boys' Working Reserve,' is the medium through which the boy can get that experience. Also at times like these, he is doing the country he lives in a great service. Hundreds of men and boys of the farm have joined our army and somebody must take their places. I saw ample proof of the lack of hands this summer. All the farmers were wanting hands, and just think of the boys that were idle doing nothing but having a lazy good time. Next summer I will be working in the city part of the time and probably will take my vacation hauling water for a threshing outfit.

"I don't know whether this letter is too long or not, but it took all of it to tell only briefly of my experiences.

"I owe you an apology for not writing sooner and if there is any way I can be of some service to the 'Boys' Working Reserve' let me know.

"Yours sincerely,

"ALFRED GLOSSBRENNER."

GREENE COUNTY COUNCIL REPORT.

Bloomfield, Ind., Oct. 11, 1917.

We, the undersigned, a committee appointed by the County Council of Defense for the purpose of investigating the United States Boys' Working Reserve Corps, make this report:

1. We find that the Boys' Working Reserve is non-military in purpose. This is not a scheme to get boys into the army. The United States government does not stoop to such practices. The boys may have to go to the war later, but they will be taken in the regular way and not because they are members of the Boys' Working Reserve.

2. We find that this work will not interfere in any way with the education of the boys or their present employment. The organization is merely an employment bureau. If boys are already employed they should enroll at once and go right ahead with their regular employment. For school boys the work is merely intended as vacation employment. When boys are sent out to work they will be under the supervision of a man who will look after their industrial and moral welfare. The boys may be withdrawn at any time upon the request of the parents.

3. We also find that the Boys' Working Reserve (Continued on Page 7.)

Mrs. Carlisle Has Chosen Committee

Every County and State Wide Organization of Women Represented.

Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle, the woman member of the Indiana State Council of Defense, has completed a general reorganization of the woman's activities. This section was remodeled following Mrs. Carlisle's visit to Washington and conferences there with the women in charge of the departments connected with the Council of National Defense.

The women's section of the Council includes, in addition to the executive committee, heads of the State organizations and County Council women, the following: Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, Mrs. Harry S. New, Mrs. James E. Watson, Mrs. James P. Goodrich, Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge, Mrs. Thomas Taggart, Mrs. B. F. Shively and Mrs. John W. Kern. Miss Marie Chomel is head of the publicity department.

Mrs. Carlisle's Executive Committee includes the heads of various departments of women's work, as follows:

Enrollment and Woman's Service—Miss Julia E. Landers, Indianapolis.

Food Production (Northern Indiana)—Mrs. Jennie M. Conrad, Conrad.

Food Production (Southern Section)—To be assigned.

Home Economies—Miss Mary Mathews, Lafayette.

Child Welfare—Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon, Evansville.

Women in Industry—Miss Mabel Maney, Indianapolis.

Health and Recreation—Mrs. George C. Hitt, Indianapolis.

Food Conservation—Mrs. Carl G. Fisher, Indianapolis.

Liberty Loan—Mrs. Fred McCulloch, Ft. Wayne.

Red Cross and Allied Relief—Mrs. Jessie H. Stutesman, Crawfordsville.

Maintaining Existing Social Service Agencies—Miss Vida Newsom, Columbus.

Educational Propaganda—Mrs. Eliza A. Blaker, Indianapolis.

Work already started by the State Council of Defense and allied women's organizations will be continued under Mrs. Carlisle's general direction. The enrollment of women, instructions in home economies and the conservation of food, the sale of Liberty bonds, Red Cross knitting and first aid, and such other activities as have been engaging the efforts of so many Indiana women are expected to feel the impetus of a stronger, more aggressive organization. The executive committee will include a woman who will represent her sex in industry, particularly as affected by the war emergencies.

Going through the state, Mrs. Carlisle has selected a county head for the general patriotic work to be done, and in addition has enrolled as part of the working executive force the names of representatives of State and national societies having an Indiana membership.

ORGANIZATIONS.

FORT WAYNE COMMITTEE APPOINTED

C. R. Lane, Chairman of the City Advisory Committee, Boys' Working Reserve for Fort Wayne, has appointed the following members to aid in directing the activities of the large number of boys who have been enrolled: A. F. Hall, O. A. Newall, S. W. Greenland, Charles A. Phelps, Louis C. Ward, George W. Beers, C. A. Wilding, A. L. Randall, S. A. Callahan, H. G. Hogan, E. G. Hoffman, Dr. C. O. Rothschild, Dr. E. A. Crull, D. O. McComb, W. E. Gordon, J. J. Ritter, L. C. Dunten, C. R. Lane, Ross F. Lockridge, A. L. McDonald and William Ballou. Fort Wayne leads all cities in the State in enrollment.

Woman's Section, Indiana State Council of Defense

The first meeting of the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense was held at the State House, Indianapolis, on Wednesday, October 10, 1917, at two o'clock in the afternoon. Present:

Mrs. Charles A. Carlisle, Chairman,
 Miss Julia E. Landers,
 Mrs. Jennie M. Conrad,
 Miss Mary Matthews,
 Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon,
 Mrs. George C. Hitt,
 Mrs. Carl G. Fisher,
 Mrs. Fred H. McCulloch,
 Mrs. Jessie H. Stutesman,
 Miss Emma Colbert (representing Mrs. Blaker)
 Mrs. Carlisle announced that the above mentioned women together with several others had been selected as Chairmen of the various Departments of Work of the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense and working in conjunction with the Chairmen of the Departments of work would be the Presidents of the State societies and organizations. Mrs. Carlisle then gave a review, including—

The authority for a Woman's Committee.
 Why have a Woman's Committee.
 Function of a Woman's Committee.

Each chairman was given a list with the county name and address of each representative woman member of the County Councils of the State, together with a list of the State and national organizations represented in the State, which list included the address of the representative officer of that society organization.

Mrs. Conrad advised that at a meeting of the Farm and Garden Association in Chicago, a resolution had been adopted endorsing the drafting of men for labor, and wire had been sent to President Wilson suggesting its adoption by the government.

Her idea was to have registration of men as they do in Germany, and have each farmer and each laborer registered, and when this farmer or laborer takes up work, he should be required to stay at that work for six months, except for a very good reason, and if he does not keep that place he should be required to go to work somewhere else.

In a discussion of the subject, mention was made of the fact that at the time the food question was up before Congress, the woman member, the Hon. Jeanette Rankin, had asked that women be given charge of a great deal of this work and that now instead of some such thing happening, in nearly all the States the food directors are men. Now that we come to the propositions of getting labor to produce food, it seems proper for the women to take steps in this direction. If food prices are high now, and as some of the men have been drafted off the farms, the proposition is going to be twice as hard next summer unless something is done to draft men and compel them to work. It would, therefore, not be out of order for the women to take up the question of drafting farm labor.

Miss Landers moved that the Woman's Committee of the State Council of Defense endorse the drafted labor plan, which was presented by Mrs. Jennie M. Conrad at the meeting of the Farm and Garden Association in Chicago, and that it be adopted in Indiana and presented to the State Council of Defense. The motion was seconded by Mrs. Blaker's representative, voted and carried.

Miss Matthews reported briefly on the work of the Home Economics Department, stating that they had been working all summer on food conservation and had found that the women were extremely responsive during the summer, but that now the problem was to keep up their enthusiasm for next year as the interest seemed to be waning. She said the question of food conservation is getting to be an old story with the women and they are getting tired of having it preached to them, so that the problem now is to keep them interested. Miss Matthews stated that the women are being urged to substitute such foods as can be obtained for those which will necessarily be shipped to Europe.

Mrs. McCulloch, Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee, reported that the counties are all organized and all have their chairman. She has been receiving instructions from Washington and was anxious to call attention especially to the kind of special subscription blanks which the women are using, these blanks being like the blanks used by the men except for the blue line which indicates that it comes through the Woman's Section. Mrs. McCulloch requested that the women be urged in making their subscriptions to the Second Liberty Loan to use this form blank. Mrs. McCulloch stated that, "The Liberty Loan Committee was organized in Washington with Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo as Chairman and Mrs. Antoinette Funk as Vice-Chairman. They work in harmony with the Council of Defense, and because of my connection with this committee, my appointment having come from Washington, I am also a member of the Woman's Section of the State Council of Defense. This same blank is being carried out in all States of the Union."

Mrs. Carl G. Fisher reported on the progress of the work of the Department of Food Conservation in Indianapolis, stating that just recently they had opened up headquarters at 229 North Pennsylvania Street, where they were running an exchange. They are making use of any surplus of any kind that anyone has in the way of foods. They are buying cabbage, potatoes and all other foods and find that they have about fifteen times as many customers as they have stock for sale. All they ask is the wholesale price, plus ten per cent. (10%) to cover their overhead expenses. The main idea is to bring down prices as much as possible and thus reduce the cost of living. They are figuring on getting a carload of potatoes which they hope to sell at $1.35 per bushel. This lowering of prices comes about through the elimination of the middleman.

Mrs. Carlisle suggested that a copy of the Minutes of each meeting be sent to each member of the Executive Committee.

There being no further business to come before the Committee, upon a motion duly seconded and carried, the meeting adjourned until Wednesday, October 24, at 2:30 o'clock.

A Proclamation.

Whereas, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, has by proclamation designated Wednesday, October 24, as Liberty Day, making the afternoon a holiday for all federal employees who can be spared in the interest of the Liberty loan, and

Whereas, The success of the Liberty loan is so vital to the nation that it is the duty of every citizen to support and assist it in every way possible that the war for democracy in which we are engaged may be pushed to a hasty and successful conclusion, and

Whereas, The proper observance of Liberty Day will tend to promote the success of the loan;

Therefore, I Edgar D. Bush, Lieutenant-Governor, acting Governor of Indiana, do proclaim and designate Wednesday, October 24, 1917, as Liberty Day, and urging that wherever possible stores and public places be closed during the afternoon and the people of the city, towns, and county districts of Indiana join in appropriate ceremonies doing everything possible to assist the Liberty loan. I also suggest that the mayors and other local governing authorities co-operate in every way possible to make the observance of Liberty Day a success.

(Signed) EDGAR D. BUSH,
 Lieutenant-Governor, Acting Governor.

Unpardonable Treason.

Utilizing public necessity to make extraordinary profits is the most despicable thing that an individual or a corporation can attempt. Such actions are ethically unpardonable. Not only do they increase the burden of those who are giving sons and brothers to the uncertain destinies of the firing line, but they discredit the cause in the eyes of the people generally. Too frequently we have heard the sinister rumors of shoddy goods and fraudulent dealings linked with defeat and disaster in previous wars.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson.

The German Kaiser and the German People

(Theodore Roosevelt, in Metropolitan Magazine for November.)

It sounds well, for the moment, to say that we war against the German government but love the German people. Yet the antithesis thus drawn is misleading, and the effect of the statement is mischievous. It plays into the hands of the pro-Germans and pacifists, who at once ask "then why fight people we love?" Such a question is difficult to answer; and inasmuch as our going to war can be justified only—although amply—by admitting that we ought to have gone to war two years previously, it is unwise to furnish further ammunition to the foolish or sinister creatures who seek to embarrass the Government by asking why we now make war for causes which during two years and a half we were told did not justify war.

Moreover, the statement, in addition to being unwise, is untrue. There is no such difference between the German government and the German people as is implied. Unquestionably the hideous wrongdoing of the German government today would have struck with horror and amazement the German people of fifty years ago—still more the men of '48, who had faith in the vision of justice and mercy. But the scientific, efficient and utterly ruthless and conscienceless administration which Prussia under the Hohenzollerns has imposed on all Germany during the last half century has completely debauched the German people.

We must remember that serfage did not come to an end in Germany until as a sequel to the wars of Napoleon. The constitution of Prussian society is aristocratic and militaristic to the core, and the guiding and ruling minority of this society has for a couple of centuries been saturated with the spirit of cynical and faithless brutality. It was this ruling minority which, after using for its own end the Tugendbund, and the self-sacrificing idealism of the German popular revolt against Napoleon, instantly betrayed its liberty-loving supporters when once Napoleon was overthrown.

Unfortunately for Germany, of the German leaders of the mid-nineteenth century those who were liberal were pacifist and impractical and they could not make headway against the selfish and brutal but severely practical genius of the men who followed Bismarck. The very docility of the German masses, long accustomed to being ruled, made them easy victims of the domineering, materialistic, hard-headed and coarse-tempered upper classes who rose to the surface as Germany became Prussianized. The autocracy was victorious at home and abroad; its rule was ruinous to the souls of the people, but it shrewdly took care of their bodies; and it completely subdued them to its will. By degrees the intellectuals became as repulsively indifferent to all morality that was not strictly tribal as the militarists themselves; and the masses blindly followed suit.

The attitude of the professors and literary men in this war has been as abhorrent, as utterly vile, as that of the brutes in uniform who have planned and carried out the wholesale murders, the obscene and loathsome cruelties and devastations, the huge slave raids, and the carnivals of destruction in the conquered lands. And the people as a whole have applauded the infamies committed and have enthusiastically supported the authors of these infamies.

In nations as in men there is apt to be a mixture of the Dr. Jekyll and the Mr. Hyde; and able leaders, according to the degree in which conscience and wisdom guide their ability, bring to the fore one or the other type of national characteristic. For half a century in Germany as a whole, and for a much longer time in Prussia, the effective national leadership has been such as to develop efficiency on a basis as fundamentally immoral, both from the international and the democratic standpoints, as that of ancient Assyria herself. The conscience of the German people has been thoroughly debauched. In consequence the German people now stand behind their government and heartily support it in every infamy it commits. The greatest good fortune that could befall the German people would be the crushing defeat of Germany. Until such a defeat occurs, we can only say that unless the German people separate themselves from and condemn and repudiate, instead of upholding, the German government, all right-minded and courageous men must include them in a common condemnation.

Many of our politicians are pavidly fearful of admitting this obvious fact lest they offend the "German vote." Political expediency is right enough in its place; but not when it conflicts with vital national interest. Our people are not to be excused if they fail now to insist that the day for temporizing with avowedly foreign "votes" has passed. We have in this country room only for thoroughgoing Americans. We care not where the man's parents are from or where he himself was born, or what religion he professes, so long as he is in good faith and without reservation an American and nothing else. But if he tries to be half American and half something else, it is proof positive that he isn't an American at all, and the sooner he gets out of the country the better. Some of the German-American papers who fear to commit treason by openly championing "Deutschland," Germany, now try to compromise by preaching devotion to "Deutschtum," that is, Germanism. This really represents no improvement. Germanism is the foe of Americanism, and those who believe in it should go back to Germany, where they belong.

Seed Corn Week Successful

ings and program for the week are under the direction of Ivan T. Beck, Vocational Teacher, E. C. Martindale, Emergency Demonstration Agent, Charles O. Williams, County Superintendent, and Harry B. Macy, President of the Farmers' Food Production Committee. E. F. Murphy, in charge of vocational agricultural classes in the Richmond school, is planning to take the boys out in the country and give instruction in seed corn selection.

Montgomery County.—County Superintendent, Carl C. James, issued the following instructions to the teachers of Montgomery County: "The week of October 15-20 has been designated as seed corn selection week. Montgomery county is expected to select five thousand bushels of seed corn. We recommend that the seventh and eighth grade boys devote three afternoons, the high school boys four afternoons and the vocational classes five afternoons of this week in the selection of seed corn."

Boone County.—E. H. Servies, County Superintendent, sent the following notice to the various schools of the county: "Three afternoons of the week October 15-20, boys will be permitted to help gather seed corn. They shall report to the teacher the amount of time spent and the number of bushels gathered. The teacher is to report to this office the total number of bushels for the school. If reports are satisfactory credit is to be given for attendance."

Madison County.—James W. Frazier, County Superintendent, says that instructions have been sent to all teachers of the county to have the seventh and eighth grade pupils take part in the seed corn campaign during the week of October 15-20.

Blackford County.—A notice was sent to the teachers by M. C. Townsend, County Superintendent, asking the seventh and eighth grade all the high school boys who have access to corn fields to be allowed one-half day from school to go into the fields and select one hundred ears of seed corn. Boys will be expected to bring the corn to school to be exhibited on October 19, after which time it is to be taken home and placed on seed corn racks in a dry place until April 1. Each boy is then expected to test each ear for germination as a part of his school work. A county wide selection campaign by the farmers is also planned. Mr. Ernest Thornburg has been secured to give instruction in each township on the selection of seed corn. Mr. Thornburg is one of the fifteen federal government men who have been appointed to assist in the seed corn campaign in Indiana.

Stauben County.—County agent, H. R. Smalley and County Superintendent, H. L. Shank, in co-operation with the County Board of Education, issued a large number of hand bills urging farmers to select their seed now. "To neglect will help the Kaiser." Stauben county grows annually approximately 1,000,000 bushels of corn. A strong appeal is made to encourage field selection.

Spencer County.—The Spencer County Board of Education met with Superintendent Strassell, to arrange for the seed corn campaign. Simon W. Taylor, of Boonville, addressed the meeting. Arrangements were made to hold three meetings in different parts of the county. Instruction in seed corn selection will be given by Mr. Taylor. The school teachers are expected to attend at least one of these meetings.

FOOD CLEARING HOUSE SUCCESS.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation is pleased with the success of the Food Conservation Headquarters, 229 North Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, under the chairmanship of Mrs. C. G. Fisher. Canned fruits, vegetables, jellies, etc., and the raw products are brought to the headquarters and sold direct to the consumer. This method of buying and selling results in the producer and consumer being brought closer together.

During the first week of operation the exchange sold almost $400 worth of canned goods and vegetables.

Arrangements have been made with the State Fisheries Department to dispose of the fish seined from the Indiana streams through this headquarters. The fish will be placed on sale at 5 cents per pound. Miss Eleanor Ferris will conduct demonstrations on the preparation of fish each day. Miss Boston, one of the United States department representatives who is devoting all of her time to the conservation work, co-operating with the food committee and Purdue University, is arranging for demonstrations throughout the city and county.

The practical side of the work made possible through the demonstrations and the clearing-house project has attributed in no small measure to the success of the undertaking.

FEDERAL BUREAU TO ASSIST.

The quantity and quality of the Indiana onion crop has attracted the attention of produce growers throughout the country. The muck soils of Indiana produce annually more than 1,100,000 bushels of onions. Indiana growers are in need of information concerning the daily market price of onions. At the present time approximately fourteen car loads of onions are being shipped from the onion regions each day.

N. L. Henry of the Federal Bureau of Markets has been secured through Purdue University and the Marketing and Distribution Committee of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation to assist the onion growers. The headquarters will be at Walkerton, Ind. He will not only furnish daily market reports to the growers, but will assist in locating the surplus crop.

"The right is more precious than peace, and we fight for the things we have always carried nearest our hearts."—President Woodrow Wilson.

Three Principles in Food Control Plan

Dr. Barnard Receives Instructions as to Enforcing New Federal License Law from Herbert Hoover.

The following telegram received by Dr. H. E. Barnard has been sent to all federal food administrators by the federal food administration:

"You have already received the President's proclamation putting many food commodities under license, effective November 1. Every person subject to license must immediately obtain and fill out completely an application blank which will be furnished only by the license division of the United States Food Administration, Washington, D. C., on request, together with full instructions as to how to fill out. Advise every one who asks you to write directly to the license division and refer all letters addressed to you in regard to obtaining license or application to the license division. The proclamation itself is a guide as to who is included. For the present hotels, restaurants, confectioners, ice cream manufacturers and bakers will not be asked to secure licenses. Any doubtful questions in regard to this matter or exemptions should be referred to the license division for decision so that practice will be uniform. If licenses are not received by any applicant before November 1 he is to conduct his business in a normal and proper manner. A single company requires only one license and application blank, no matter how many branches it has, provided they are conducted under the same name. If business is carried on in different names or by subsidiary corporations they must each have license. Rules and regulations have been prepared and will be ready to be sent out with the licenses before November 1. Copies will be furnished you. These rules are based on three fundamental principles:

"1. To limit all profits to the normal amount which the licensee obtained in ordinary years. Even if a shortage becomes apparent the commodity must still pass to the consumer at the same reasonable price as though there was a sufficient supply. In non-perishable products every licensee will be required to sell at a reasonable advance over the cost of the particular goods sold without regard to the market price when sold.

"2. To keep all food commodities moving in as direct a line and with as little delay as practicable from producer to consumer and discourage speculation and resales within a trade, in case of all products except cottonseed, fresh fruits and vegetables, cold storage products, canned goods and dried fruits no licensee will be allowed to hold or contract for more than sixty days' supply at one time. This is supplemented by more stringent special rules in some industries and any unreasonable hoarding will be cause for revoking the license.

"3. To limit as far as practicable contracts for future delivery and dealings in future contracts. Except in the commodities mentioned the above contracts for delivery more than forty-five days in advance are forbidden and some special regulations prescribe a shorter time.

"All licensees will be required to give the food administration at Washington monthly sworn reports of their business and their books must always be open to inspection.

"Tell every dealer who inquires to conduct his business with these three principles in mind. The regulations do not attempt to change in any way the customary channels of business or eliminate any dealer who has an established channel of distribution. When regulations are sent out the

of the food administration in regard to their administration and enforcement will be sent to you. You will also be furnished with lists of all licensees in your district and you will be furnished with a tabulated summary of monthly sworn statements which will be required under the regulations. And you will be expected to see that rules and regulations are complied with and we will forward you information we receive upon violation, etc. We are mailing today specimen license application and will send shortly specimen license and copies of regulations.

"HERBERT HOOVER."

1,000,000 for Indiana.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Hoover representative in Indiana, has ordered one million of these cards for Indiana front windows, indicating that number of enrollments in the Hoover food saving organization.

If Food Prices Go Much Higher Our Health Will Be Handicapped

It is easy to figure out ways for cutting down the cost of living. There are many good substitutes for high-priced foods. It is foolish to fear high potato prices while rice and cereals are cheap. But the advice we freely give and readily accept does not fit the eating habits of many poor people. It is the poor that suffer most when food prices advance. The table of the poor man has never been laden with luxuries. He has been accustomed to eating beans, meat stews, cheap fruit, coarse vegetables, bread, milk and fish. And these foods have furnished his family proper nutriment in adequate amounts.

But some of these articles are so high-priced that they have become luxuries. Milk is going higher and higher. It is a simple thing to prove by figures that milk even at fifteen cents a quart is a cheap food. It is a difficult thing to tell the poor mother what other food to cut out from her restricted dietary in order that she may spare the pennies to make up the increased cost of milk.

The man at hard work will never be satisfied with food in tabloid form. He must have bulk. He does not feel well fed unless he eats large quantities of food. The bulky foods are chiefly vegetable in character. That is why every effort to increase the potato crop and the yield of other common, yet valuable vegetables is an imperative duty if we are to avoid an increased mortality and reduced vitality among the poorer classes.—H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Commissioner for Indiana.

Crop Experts Prove Need of Conservation

Government, Completing Survey of Food Stuff Available, Shows Reasons for Saving.

Preliminary reports on America's war crop census prove that America's housewives must conserve wheat very carefully if our European Allies are not to go breadless, according to Chief Charles D. Brand of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Division of Markets.

One hundred and eighty-five thousand answers received thus far from 400,000 queries to crop experts throughout the country show, Brand said, that while the wheat crop is short, there is plenty of corn.

"This proves conclusively," said a Food Administration official today, "that the argument we are using to get the country's 22,000,000 housewives to sign and live up to the conditions of the Food Pledge Card during Food Pledge Week, October 28 to November 4, is absolutely sound.

"We plead with them to save a slice of bread per person per day. We suggest the use of cornbread and other cereals mixed with wheat instead of so much wheat. Brand reports a slight shortage of oats, barley and buckwheat, which confirms our campaign to make corn the chief substitute for wheat."

WE CANNOT BE TOO CAREFUL.

Chief Brand, basing his statement on reports to his division, urged that housewives be careful not to waste food of any kind.

"We cannot be too careful," he declared, "to advise conservation, not only during Food Pledge Week, but at all other times. Buyers should be exact and cautious. All supplies should be handled with care, and economy should be practiced on every side.

"I would say that the potato crop is about half again as big as it was last year. Last year's crop was short. The difference indicated is roughly about a 285,000,000 bushel crop last year compared to a 450,000,000 bushel crop this year.

"The wheat crop this year will be approximately 672,000,000 bushels. Last year's crop, which was shorter even than this year's, was about 668,000,000 bushels.

"Corn production last year amounted to about 2,600,000,000 bushels. We expect 3,200,000,000 bushels of corn this year.

"Rice shows a ten per cent. increase thus far.

"The sweet potato outlook is fine. We should have 23 per cent. more of them this year than last.

"Peanuts have increased immensely this year. Beans also are plentiful."

Chief Brand expects all but about 100,000 of the 400,000 answers to his war crop census queries within the next week. He will then issue a complete and exact statement of what the country's food resources are this year. He feels that the present figures are reliably indicative, however.

Sleeper Wants Coal.

Governor Sleeper of Michigan has organized a committee of business men and manufacturers, whose purpose is to secure, if possible, the shipment of fuel into the State. Governor Sleeper states that the entire machinery of the State's executive offices will be devoted for the next month, if necessary, to securing an adequate supply of coal, to be distributed broadcast at fair prices.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—R. D. Myers, chairman of the County Council of Defense, has named C. L. Walters head of the Adams County Patriotic League. It will be Mr. Walters' duty to organize all interested in order to look after the welfare of the Adams county boys in the federal service and to plan and assist in all patriotic movements and gatherings. Judge E. E. Smith has been placed in charge of the speakers' bureau, which will direct the patriotic and educational campaign in this county. Mrs. Emma Daniels, head of the knitting committee, states that she has sufficient yarn to meet present demands and the women will continue making garments for the soldiers.

The County Council of Defense, the Commercial Association and prominent business and professional men have agreed upon a wheatless Tuesday and a meatless Friday. Every precinct of the county will be asked to co-operate.

Bartholomew County.—Local attorneys and the civilian relief committee of the Red Cross resulted in the adoption by the Bar Association of Bartholomew county of the following:

"Whereas, The members of the Bartholomew county have heartily approve the spirit of sacrifice shown by our soldiers and sailors in giving their services to the country and desire to, in a substantial way, support every line of endeavor having to do with the vigorous prosecution of the present war and to give sympathetic, substantial assistance and co-operation to enlisted soldiers and sailors and their dependents during the pendency of the present war, be it

"Resolved, That the members of the Bartholomew County Bar Association hereby agree and pledge themselves, individually and collectively, to furnish, free of charge, all necessary legal advice and legal services to men enlisted in the United States army and navy from Bartholomew county, and their dependents, when and as requested by the Citizens' Relief Committee of Bartholomew county; and generally to take part in all affairs looking to the successful prosecution of the present war and particularly in all movements for the betterment and improvement of the conditions surrounding enlisted men from Bartholomew county and their wives and dependents."

Marshall Hacker, president of the bar association, is chairman of the Bartholomew County Council of Defense.

Clay County.—The city school board of Brazil has cancelled all business with insurance companies having main offices in Germany. The board has made a statement urging others to adopt a similar policy, saying these companies are taxed heavily at home in order to assist in the prosecution of the war against the United States.

Elkhart County.—Merchants of this county have organized a Commercial Economy League and will curtail useless deliveries, restrict credits and "approvals" and otherwise undertake to reduce the cost of doing business in order that the consumers may buy at lower prices.

Floyd County.—Arrangements are being made for a big military day celebration in New Albany by the executive committee of the Young Business Men's Club. Special invitations are being issued to the farmers of the community to spend the day in New Albany and take part in the festivities. Special committees from representative farmers' organizations are boosting the event. The farmers will form a division in the big parade, a feature of which will be the riding club now being organized among the young women. The Floyd County Horse Thief Detective Association has offered itself to the State government as a home guard cavalry troop.

Gibson County.—Thomas H. Riggs, of Princeton, has been named chairman for Gibson of the Merchants' Economy Board of the County Council of Defense. He expects to call a meeting of retailers soon, at which time the program of the National Commercial Economy Board, relative to curtailing deliveries, eliminating purchases "on approval" and other unnecessary items of expense, will be presented for adoption. Mr. Riggs expects to co-operate with the merchants' economy section of the Indiana State Council of Defense in effecting the savings that have been found possible in other sections of the State. He will name an executive committee to assist him in the work, representing all the important lines of retail trade.

Henry County.—Following is the official roster of the Henry County Council of Defense, with the heads of committees:

Members.—Dr. F. A. Bolser, chairman, Newcastle; Mrs. Estella Loer, secretary, Newcastle; Frank A. Wisheart, Middletown; Dr. F. C. Hess, Cadiz; Frank Hotchkirk, Newcastle; Mr. Wisheart, Millville; Ray C. Morgan, Knightstown.

Chairmen of Committees.—Four-Minute Men, Horace G. Yergin; Finance, T. B. Millikan; United States Working Boys' Reserve, Harry B. Roberts; Home Guard, Albert D. Ogborn; Woman's League for Service, Mrs. Frank Stanley; Public Morals, Religious and Social Forces, Rev. W. W. Wiant; Protection, H. E. Evans; Food Supply and Conservation, County Agent J. P. Prizg; Educational, Superintendent E. W. Llewellyn; Publicity, Walter S. Chambers; Conservation of Fallen Timber for Fuel, W. C. Bond.

Howard County.—Chairman Lloyd McClure, of the Howard County Council of Defense, has secured the consent of Warren R. Voorhis, Joseph C. Herron, Judge B. F. Harness and Conrad Wolf to make speeches on patriotic subjects over the State and has so notified the speakers' bureau of the Indiana State Council of Defense. They will pay their own expenses and fill such engagements as are assigned them.

Chairman McClure has completed the reorganization of the county council, naming James Haworth, of Liberty township, to succeed Ernest Murray, who resigned. The council and its subordinate bodies now include the following:

County Council of Defense—Lloyd McClure, Mrs. Alfred T. Snook, Joseph D. Haworth, Alfred O. Thompson, John W. Johnson, John W. Ellis, Harvey O. Lybrook.

Advisory Committee—Samuel Hollingsworth, Honey Creek; William Newby, Monroe; Milton Harpster, Ervin; Harry Matlock, Clay; John Middleton, Harrison; William Smith, Taylor; Arly Ferrington, Union; Abe Garr, Jackson; Jacob Stahl, Liberty; Glen Carter, Howard; Mrs. John E. Moore, Center; Mrs. John W. Gard, Center; Mrs. Frank Seegar, Greentown; Mrs. Edna Miller, Russellville; Andrew J. Hagib, Center; Clinton Thatcher, Center; John Ferriday, Center; Lewis M. Springer, Center; Michael P. Roth, Center; Albert V. Conrad, Center; Albert A. Charles, Center; George W. Landon, Center; John McIntosh, Center; Frank McCarty, Center; Dr. Omer D. Hutto, Center. Finance Committee—William H. Arnett, Oscar Smith, Harry Davis, Howard Brubaker, Russellville; Dr. E. U. Powell, Greentown; W. H. Arnold, John P. Grace.

Publicity Committee—V. J. Obenaus, Ed M. Souder, John Woody, Russellville; John W. Melton, Greentown; Harry M. Lynch.

Sanitation and Medicine Committee—Dr. Edgar Cox, city health commissioner; Dr. F. N. Murray, West Middleton, county health commissioner; Dr. Earl Freeman, Greentown; Dr. Andy O. Hart, Russellville; Dr. A. W. Holcombe.

Public Morals Committee—Rev. D. H. Shields, Rev. William B. Freeland, Rev. O. A. Smith, Rev. Robert J. Pratt, Rev. John F. Edwards, Russellville; Rev. Norman McClain, Greentown.

Public Protection Committee—Omer F. Brown, Chester Miller, James B. Webb, Harry Brub, Ves Garrett, Greentown; Dan Thatcher, West Middleton; Grant Allison, Russellville.

Manager of Four-Minute Men—John B. Joyce.

Huntington County.—The Huntington County Council of Defense has adopted and promulgated the following resolution:

"Whereas, This committee has in its possession the names of several persons who have been circulating false and malicious reports detrimental to the best interests of our country, be it

"Resolved, That we recommend to the county council that unless such persons immediately cease circulating such reports their names be turned over to the proper authorities for their attention."

The committee also decided to ask all the Sunday-school superintendents in the county to talk a few minutes at the close of the Sunday-school period along the lines of production and conservation of food and utilization of dead and wasting food for fuel.

The County Council of Defense has authorized John Q. Cline, a Huntington attorney, to compile a history of the Huntington county soldiers' part in the present war. He hopes to chronicle the career of each man who goes from the county to fight the Kaiser.

As a war measure to increase the yield of back-yard gardens F. A. Loew, county agent, has asked that Huntington residents put fallen leaves on the garden soil instead of burning them.

Lake County.—Captain H. S. Norton, who has charge of the military affairs of the Lake County Council of Defense, has announced the following officers for the new Gary military company: Captain, H. B. Snyder; first lieutenant, E. D. Sken; second lieutenant, J. T. Schless; sergeants, W. J. Carroll, R. C. Rankin, James Doyne and Jefferson Williams. The company has been growing rapidly and drilling regularly.

Boy Scouts are assisting in the enrollment of housewives in the Hoover food organization. Attorneys Joseph Conroy, John Kelly and D. E. Boone are making four-minute talks in the movie theaters in support of the movement.

High school girls of Michigan City have voluntarily organized a Girls' Working Reserve. Fifty-three have enrolled. The purpose of the organization, which is intended to be purely local in character, is to crystallize into some definite form the work the girls may do to help the country in the war.

Laporte County.—Mrs. William Niles, general chairman of the county organization in the Hoover food enrollment, has established headquarters at the First National Bank, Laporte, and is asking every assistant in the movement to report there promptly with the signed cards, which are being forwarded directly to the State Food Commissioner, Dr. H. E. Barnard.

Miami County.—The market board on the east side of the court house is now in use and is proving to be highly advantageous to the public. On one side of the board is shown what the farmers have to sell and the other side tells what is wanted. The purpose of the board is to bring about closer relationship between the producer and the consumer. The board was authorized by the county commissioners through the request of the County Council of Defense.

Porter County.—Mrs. Louise Sprencell, of Valparaiso, was in town Monday. She related a case where she met a Porter county farmer who wanted to give away a lot of young pigs, the reason being that he had no feed for the mothers. This should be a case for the Council of Defense to look into, says the Chesterton Tribune. If there is such a condition existing to a considerable extent steps should be taken to assist these farmers with money to raise their hogs. With salt pork selling at 40 cents a pound, and going higher, every pig should be raised to maturity. We have no doubt but what the lady mentioned would be pleased to give the county agent or the chairman of the Council of Defense the name of the farmer alluded to. And, by the way, a canvass of the stock in the county should be made, and help extended to those who need it to save their crops and stock.

Shelby County.—Members of the Mary Mott Green Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and of the Domestic Science Club have volunteered to make a household-canvas for putting out the Hoover cards and other conservation literature.

Under the auspices of Ed K. Adams, chairman of the County Council of Defense, patriotic meetings in support of the liberty loan and other activities were held in every township in the county during the past week.

Because of the suggestiveness to the name "Frauen-verein," a local girls' club became the Current Topics Club.

Starke County.—Great quantities of timber have been dug out by the dredges along the Kankakee river. This, the County Council of Defense believes, might be available for use as fuel. A survey has been ordered and the timber may be floated down the river in the event the fuel shortage becomes acute.

Steuben County.—H. W. Morley, of Angola, has been appointed chairman of the Four-Minute Men in this county and has arranged for regular appointments in the movie theaters. He expects also to have four-minute speakers at church, fraternal and social gatherings. He will be assisted by Arthur Wells, of Orland; W. D. Wells, of Fremont; Cliff Johnston, of Hamilton; F. G. Gilbert, of Pleasant Lake, and others to be named later. Former Congressman Cyrus Cline, D. R. Best, A. C. Wood and other men prominent as platform orators have been engaged to speak in the county.

Tippecanoe County.—The Fowler Hotel, the largest in Lafayette and this section of the State, has named Tuesday of each week as a "meatless day." The management announces that it will follow the suggestions of the State and Federal food administrations in whatever particular possible. Already the menu is showing the effect of the Hoover suggestions with a saving to the management without discontent from the patrons and to the great saving of wheat, fats and sugar.

Warrick County.—Mrs. Earl Scales has made a strong appeal for more Red Cross workers. She announces that Mrs. Levia Roth has secured work from the Presbyterian ladies; Mrs. Maude Whittinghill held an all-day meeting of the Mt. Pleasant ladies and Mrs. John Schurmer likewise accomplished good results in the home department work. Two classes in surgical dressings have been organized and are busy. Mrs. George A. Roth, Miss Margaret Weyerbacher, Mrs. Mary Armstrong and Miss Gertrude Weyerbacher spent one afternoon with the women of Yankee-town and as a result made four gallons of apple butter for the soldiers. Mrs. G. M. Shaffer is registering all women who desire to help in the work, and assigning them something to do. The home department recently made a shipment of sheets, pillow cases, nightgowns, bed shirts, pajamas, towels, napkins, handkerchiefs and tray cloths.

Wayne County.—The County Council at a meeting October 22 appropriated $1,000 for the use of the Wayne County Council of Defense. The understanding is that a part of this may be used, with subscriptions from public utilities, manufacturers and others, in equipping the several units of home guards which have been organized in this county and which are expected to be ready for service as soon as given legal authority.

Whitley County.—The Columbia City branch of the United States Boys' Working Reserve has harvested more than 300 bushels of tomatoes and topped 10,000 bushels of onions. A club of high school boys has subscribed for $1,300 in Liberty bonds. Two high school teachers have organized a club consisting of 53 girls, who will knit garments for the soldier boys.

"Conservation" in a Nutshell.

Our allies are about to starve for certain foods.

"Conservation" really means "substitution." We must eat other foods in place of the foods our allies need.

1. Eat fish or chicken, or something else in place of beef, pork and mutton. We must send beef, pork and mutton to Europe.

2. Eat something else in place of wheat. Eat more corn.

3. Eat something else in place of sugar. Use corn syrup and other syrups. Use less sugar.

4. Eat less fats. Broil and boil rather than fry.

Those four simple things are what the food administration wants. The wheat, meat, sugar and fats you don't eat will go to our allies and help win the war. You will save a little and 100,000,000 Americans will save a lot—enough.

County Clerks May Buy Liberty Bonds

State Council of Defense Recommends Investment of Trust Funds in Patriotic Securities.

Clerks of circuit courts in Indiana having trust funds in their possession are called upon by the Indiana State Council of Defense to invest such funds in Liberty loan bonds. Such investment has the sanction of the Indiana Board of Accounts.

At the meeting of the Council, October 24, a resolution was presented and endorsed by Bert Hendren of the State accountant's office. After a brief discussion, in which it was brought out that in some instances from $20,000 to $30,000 of such funds are idle, the resolution was unanimously adopted. It follows:

"Whereas, As a rule each clerk of a Circuit Court in Indiana is the custodian of certain trust funds derived from fees and estates in which funds the county has no interest, and which funds are, customarily, placed on time deposit in banks by such clerks and kept there until a demand for them is made, or until the expiration of said clerk's term of office; and,

"Whereas, Some of these funds belong to heirs in Germany and other alien belligerent countries from whom no demand can be honored until the termination of the present war; and,

"Whereas, It is commendable at a time like this to divert any surplus funds available to the purchase of Liberty bonds; therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the State Council of Defense, That the State Board of Accounts be requested, if consistent with its policy, and if in harmony with the operation of existing statutes, to address a letter to the Circuit Court clerks in Indiana, advising them that in any examinations of their books as they will from time to time make they will accept Liberty loan bonds as an asset in the hands of such clerks against any such trust funds with which they may be charged."

TO ACCEPT BONDS AS CASH.

Copies of the resolution, with a statement of the position of the State Accountant on the matter—that he would consider Liberty loan bonds as cash in checking up the clerks' accounts, were sent out the same day by the Council of Defense in order that the county clerks might have opportunity to subscribe before the close of the loan drive period, October 27. It was the hope of the Council that every clerk in the State with any such funds on hand would apply them to this patriotic purpose.

Charles Fox and Frank Wampler, who represented the State Council in the reception and entertainment of Sir Stephenson Kent and the British war industrial commission, reported that they believed the visit in Indianapolis would result in much good both to employers and employees. Mr. Fox said he believed as a result of what had been said by the commissioners a better understanding will follow between workmen and their employers. He said that the differences between miners and coal operators in the State had been adjusted and the miners returned to work. At the suggestion of this committee the stenographic report of the talks of the British commissioners will be translated and printed for distribution among all interested.

NUCLEUS OF STATE MILITIA.

E. M. Wilson of the committee on military affairs reported that in thirty counties of the State forty-seven companies of volunteer infantry had been organized and in thirty other counties companies exist "on paper." These troops, he said, were expected to form the nucleus of a State guard as soon as Adjutant-General Harry B. Smith works out a legal process under which he expects to invest legal authority in these troops for service wholly within the State.

J. L. Keach reported that he had been unable to discover any marked shortage of food in the State, either from the printed government statistics or from personal observation. He urged the substitution of perishables for staple articles, in line with the Hoover policy of conservation.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson said the affairs of the medical section of the Council are "in a satisfactory condition." He told of his attendance at the conference of war surgeons at Chicago and the recommendations to the government for a medical reserve corps and the enforcement of the quarantine regulations on venereal diseases.

Dr. Emerson said Indiana had already made a start in the standardization of hospitals, with which the government expects to care for the broken men who are brought back from the fighting front. He added that the medical men are now giving attention to the importance of assisting in restoring men rejected for service in the national army, who constitute 31 per cent. of all drafted.

RECOMMENDS AN ORDINANCE.

Dr. A. B. Storms presented for the endorsement of the Council an ordinance designed to prevent vice in jitney busses and taxicabs in Indianapolis, by penalizing the chauffeurs. A penalty of from $10 to $100 for every case wherein such vehicle is rented for immoral purposes was prescribed. The Council recommended the ordinance to the city council of Indianapolis.

An endorsement of an appeal to the ministers of the State, who are being asked to aid the Y. M. C. A. $85,000,000 war fund campaign, was given by the Council on motion of Dr. Storms, after the purpose of the communication and campaign were explained.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Indiana Food Commissioner, representing Herbert Hoover, federal administrator, explained the preparations that have been made for conservation week and of the enforcement of the new licensing law for retail food distributors November 1.

Dr. Barnard asked the State Council to secure nominations for county food administrators, through the County Councils of Defense, which the Council will proceed to do. A statement of the essential qualifications of such officials will go forward to the County Councils, with the request for a nomination.

The boy you cheered when he marched away will stand knee deep in trench mud; he will face poison gas and deadly flame. He will endure all the terrors of modern battle. That's his bit. Your bit, perhaps, is to save one slice of bread a day in order that he may not fight in vain.

What You Can Do in "Conservation Week," Oct. 28 to Nov. 4.

1. Go to church on "Conservation Sunday," October 28, and hear what your minister has to say about food conservation.
2. Find out why we must eat corn and other things in place of wheat; why we must eat fish and chicken and other things in place of beef, pork and mutton; use less sugar; use less fats.
3. Eat corn bread for dinner every day for eight days. This will give you the corn bread habit.
4. Eat no beef, pork or mutton on "Meatless Tuesday," October 30. Chicken or fish are "permitted."
5. Attend "Conservation" speakings on Wednesday, October 31.
6. Study conservation window displays and watch for merchants' conservation sales on "Merchants' Conservation Day," Thursday, November 1.
7. Eat no beef, pork or mutton on "Meatless Friday," November 2. Fish and chicken are "permitted."
8. Sign your country's pledge to save food to help win the war.
9. Get others to sign the pledge card.
10. Hang the food administration window membership card in your front window to help get other people interested in food conservation.
11. Read your copy of "Ten Lessons on Food Conservation" which will be given you when you sign the pledge card.

U. S. FOOD ADMINISTRATION.

Those Not for Us Are With the Enemy

Patriotism Must be Real True Blue, Such as Characterizes Battle Front.

(By B. F. Harris, Vice-Chairman, Illinois State Council of Defense.)

The time has come for a roll call of Simon-pure Americans. There is now no middle ground; he who is not with U. S. and for U. S., is against U. S.

Luke-warm patriotism does not go; it must be of the real true-blue, through-and-through fiery kind that characterizes the battle front.

We have had our doors open wide to the world, and have said "Welcome"; and all the world has come and enjoyed privileges that a citizen or resident of no other country can enjoy. That's why they came, and stayed, and have waxed fat—though not always patriotic.

Because ours is the land of the free, we have not discriminated, as we should, between the man with an honest protest and the man with a treasonable propaganda.

That day is past; war is grim business, and the roll call of patriots is sounding.

Any act that means loss, suffering and death to American soldiers is war on us. Every breath or voice that lacks in fervor, patriotism and support of our boys and the flag to the limit, is unpardonable, criminal—TREASON.

If punishment, swift, sure and rigorous, is imposed on those who oppose the draft, upon those who oppose or interfere with the conduct of war preparations, upon those who speak and work against the flag, belittle our allies and justify Germany, they cannot complain.

We must announce and prove our patriotism; we must denounce and drive out the traitor.

We should be a united people, fighting our enemies at the front in France—not divided among ourselves here at home.

We have drawn the sword in defense of liberty and justice, and no petty peace appeals shall sheath it until the victory is complete, with autocrats and dynasties destroyed.

Every community must make it plain that treasonable talk and acts will not be tolerated, and those who fail to respond when the roll is called for the friends of the flag—can go to the country they support.

On Scientific Research.

Finding it impossible to serve on the committee on scientific research of the Indiana State Council of Defense, President C. L. Mees, of Rose Polytechnic, resigned and Prof. A. L. Foley, of Indiana University, has been elected as chairman of the committee. Prof. John White, of Rose faculty, takes Prof. Mees' place in the membership. Daniel P. Luten, of Indianapolis, is secretary of the committee.

An English Mother's View

The best answer to "peace talk" that we have read is this from a letter to a woman in England from her son in France—her son who had been present at all the frank and sincere conferences with gas and shell and bayonet that have been going on in Flanders since August, 1914:

"To my mind every man killed and every penny spent are an additional reason for fighting to a finish; otherwise what has everything been but utter and outrageous waste? It is wrong to talk about the responsibility of continuing the war, a phrase invented by the Hun; it is a far greater one, by patching up a peace to waste the lives of every Englishman who has been killed—to say nothing of our Allies, and even the Hun, for if we weren't going to beat them, it was waste to kill them."

That is straight thinking as well as straight talking. Until Germany is beaten and knows it is beaten and knows why it is beaten and feels what a beating really means, it will not be a fit member of a conference to bring permanent peace to the world.—Collier's.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 11

Editorial Comment

FOOD MORE ESSENTIAL THAN MONEY.

Soldiers cannot eat money. Neither will money save the thousands of suffering men, women and children in Europe except it be applied to the purchase of food.

With the conclusion of the second Liberty loan campaign attention is now directed to the even more essential duty of the American people, the conservation of food.

For the world's food supply isn't sufficient that every family may purchase and consume as much as it has money to pay for—that is, if others are not to be forced to go hungry, probably to starve.

The United States is today the world's storehouse. Upon the American people, as never before (and perhaps never again), rests direct responsibility for feeding the greater portion of the earth's population. Our allies in the war with Germany have been forced to specialize on the production of munitions of war to the practical abandonment of agriculture. Crops have failed in South America and they have not been up to expectations in many parts of this country. Therefore we must be saving. We must exercise thrift and economy. Not that others may gorge, but that all may be kept alive.

There is enough food, good, wholesome, nutritious food, available to turn the trick. The United States government is authority for the assertion that we have enough if we will use it wisely. We must substitute perishables for the staples so that we may ship to Europe the wheat, fats and sugar that has made up a disproportionately large part of our daily menus.

Next week, October 28-November 4, has been set aside, appropriately, too, as Conservation week. President Woodrow Wilson has officially proclaimed the occasion as one for thoughtful consideration of the food problem and for voluntary enrollment in the Hoover food organization, to the end that the campaign of education necessary to effect the required savings be continued in a systematic way. Certainly the housewives of the country, the mothers and sisters of the fighting men, can well accept the President's statement of the seriousness of the situation. They have given their sons, their brothers and husbands to the care of him as commander-in-chief of the army and navy; they can no less trust his direction of the most effective method of saving these men from a prolongation of the mighty struggle to which this nation has dedicated itself.

Indiana must not fail in her greater duty—the registration of 1,000,000 in the Food Conservation organization under Hoover's direction. It means more in the last analysis than the purchase of the State's allotment of Liberty bonds.

"THIS IS A WAR OF RIGHTEOUSNESS."

"I speak as one who has seen the spirit of the Prussian governing class at work from close by, having at its disposal and using to the full, practically every agency for molding the public mind.

"I have watched it proceed with relentless persistency and cunning to instill in the nation the obsession of power worship and world dominion, to modify and pervert mentality, the very fiber and moral substances of the German people.

"Woe to the German-American, so-called, who in this sacred war, for a cause as high as any for which ever people took up arms, who does not feel a solemn urge to rival and outdo his native-born fellow citizens in devotion to the country.

"Americans of German descent are now summoned to join in our country's struggle against a people of their own blood, which, under the evil spell of a dreadful obsession, have become the enemy of this peace-loving nation."—Otto H. Kahn, of Kahn, Loeb & Co., New York.

Helpful Reviews of Government Bulletins.

WATCH YOUR KITCHEN WASTE is intended for the home manager. It tells how to skim milk, to improve farm butter and to select food. It contains, also, an interesting discussion on how to can fruit without sugar. The article on the Soy beans is timely. These were first introduced into the United States more than a hundred years ago, primarily as a forage crop, but are in "reality one of the most nutritious of the legumes when used as a human food, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Soy beans have been so important for other purposes that until recently they have attracted little attention for food purposes in this country. They are now coming into their own for that purpose, however, and the acreage has been increased steadily in recent years. The dried beans may be purchased now in a number of markets in various parts of the country, often under the name of togo beans. Soy bean meal, a by-product of oil making, is a valuable food and no doubt will come into more general use." The following are pertinent quotations from the bulletin:

"Make it your business to know what foods and how much food your family needs to be efficient."

"Learn how to make the most of the foods you buy."

"Demonstrate thrift in your home. Make saving, rather than spending, your social standard."

LET NOTHING SPOIL, is an original treatment on the use of vegetables and the conservation of perishables. It admonishes the housewife to handle food properly; to guard it from insects and vermin and to keep it away from household pets, a warning that is too seldom observed. The bulletin presents an interesting plan for the reduction of the daily meals and gives suggestions for the use of "left-overs." It gives a list of thick soups, broths and chowders, designated a meal in themselves and suggests numerous combinations that save food material, fuel, labor and time.

"Somebody has to raise everything you eat—do your share," is one of the important sentences in HELP FEED YOURSELF. This bulletin discusses corn meal as a diet, milk and rice. "Although rice has been recognized as a good food in the United States since early colonial times and in some form or other is generally liked in all parts of the country, it has not been given so important a place as a staple article of diet as it deserves. Rice is nutritious and palatable and digests well. It may be cooked quickly without the necessity of troublesome preparation and without waste."

Circuit Judges Enlisted.

The State of North Carolina has enlisted the services of its circuit judges in the cause of national defense. In their journey about the State they act as official sources of information and sponsors for the various propaganda initiated by the Nation and State. This means of information has many things to recommend it. The men whom it employs are well known and respected in the community; their words have the weight of official dignity, yet since they are independent of the organizations working for defense, they must be regarded as fair and unbiased. In all cases it has been found that the value of personal contact is great and, in non-reading communities, indispensable. In this case it is obtained through men whose influence and ability is known.

Estimates How to Store Winter Supplies

Fruits and Vegetables Required During Non-Growing Season for the Family.

A family of five, including two adults and three children under 12 years of age, under ordinary living conditions, should have stored for each month of the winter season the following food supplies; 1 bushel of Irish potatoes; 1/2 bushel of other root vegetables such as carrots, turnips, and parsnips; 25 quart cans of other vegetables; and 20 quarts of canned fruit and preserves. These figures are based on estimates by the United States Department of Agriculture, which adds that most of this should come from the perishable products of the many home gardens of this year.

With these figures as a basis, it is thought that almost any family may calculate its requirements, taking into consideration the length of the winter season in any given locality. Thus, in the South, where food crops may be grown in the fall, the winter allowance may be less than for the far North, where one must count on supplies for several months longer.

There is still time, says the department, for a final drive in canning, preserving, and drying. In using dried vegetables, it may be assumed that a given quantity of dried vegetables is equal to four times its bulk of canned vegetables; that is, one-fourth of a quart of dry string beans when soaked over night is approximately equal to one quart canned.

What This War Means.

(From the New York Police Bulletin.)

The United States is at war with Germany.

That means that every person, whether native or foreign-born, who claims the protection of the American flag is at war with Germany.

War is more than fighting. War is service. War is sacrifice. War is the elimination of self. War is country first and the individual last.

This war will directly or indirectly affect every person living in the United States.

This war will not be won unless every person does his or her part, gives his or her service, makes his or her sacrifice, places self behind the need of the nation.

The flag means freedom for us all, but the flag, in time of war, does not mean freedom of action for the individual.

The flag means restraint, co-operation, obedience, recognition of authority, preservation of law and order.

Most of all it means economy.

It means loyalty in little daily things as well as loyalty to the great principles of our government.

It means the conduct of our lives so that the nation may be hourly strengthened.

It means the giving of our best effort for the universal good.

It means careful living. It means stopping of waste. It means the uttermost use of our resources, our abilities and our strength for the great cause.

It means guarding our talk and avoiding useless discussion.

It means that the United States is first, paramount, supreme, and that the want or pleasure or action of each individual must be subordinated to the fact.

Three cheers for the red, white and blue!

Why We are at War.

We must whip the Kaiser:

To prevent his agents killing our defenseless wives and babies as he is killing them by aerial raids over England.

To put an end to such barbarism as has been inflicted on Serbia and Belgium.

To make the highways of the sea as safe under the American flag as our soil.

To make international treaties binding on big nations as well as little ones, and, finally, TO REMOVE A STANDING MENACE FROM THE WORLD'S CIVILIZATION.

Extension Workers Holding Conference

State Council of Defense Presents Vital Problems Direct to Patriotic Agencies in Indiana.

Through the Extension Workers' Conference held at Purdue University, October 22-26, the State Council of Defense and the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation presented directly to the county agents and other county and State extension workers questions of vital interest.

Michael E. Foley, of Crawfordsville, gave a stirring address on "Indiana and the War Situation." He appealed to the people of Indiana to back up the administration in every possible way in order that the war with Germany might soon reach a successful conclusion. Mr. Foley substituted for Will H. Hays, Chairman of the State Council of Defense, who was unable to fill the engagement.

Ralph W. Moss, Chairman of the Food Committee, discussed "The Place Indiana Occupies in the National Food Program." The food problems as presented by Mr. Moss were further emphasized by G. I. Christie, State Food Director. The problem of food conservation and what is to be done to assist in the conservation of the national food supply was discussed by H. E. Barnard, Indiana Federal Food Commissioner.

Dr. George Mackintosh, president of DePauw University, gave an outline of the Boys' Working Reserve and showed how it would help to solve the labor problem on the farm.

How Indiana could meet the demand for increased live stock production was discussed by Warren T. McCray.

The question of supplying dairy products is of vital concern at this time and "Dairying in the Food Emergency" was presented by Samuel Schlosser.

The Marketing and Distribution Committee has serious problems before it and Prof. Woodbury, Chairman of this committee, opened a discussion on "Important Phases of War Time Horticulture."

The division of the program in which the women were interested was under the supervision of Misses Roberta McNeill and Lella Gaddis.

STATE SEED CORN CAMPAIGN.

Reports are coming to the office of the committee on food production and conservation relative to the success of the seed corn campaign in the various counties of the State. Practically all of the counties are securing through questionnaire cards the exact number of bushels of seed corn selected and stored. Through this source the supply of seed corn is definitely located in each county.

The work of the county agents, county superintendents, vocational teachers and school children have added tremendously to the amount of seed corn selected during the week.

E. C. Stair, vocational teacher in Johnson county, spent several days with his agricultural class selecting seed corn. In one afternoon the class picked and stored 3,000 ears. Mr. Menefee, a teacher of agriculture in Montgomery county, used a very effective method of instructing the boys in the selection and storing of seed corn. One day was spent in the field instructing the class. They were then allowed to go home and select seed corn for their fathers. The town boys were allowed to go home with the farmer boys and in this way every member of the class had some practical work in selecting seed corn. It was required that each boy select and store 800 ears of corn in order that he get credit in school for the work done.

SELECT AND STORE 25,000 BUSHEL.

In Montgomery county, R. H. Chitty, the county agent, reports that they are well pleased with the program of the seed corn campaign and are sure that more corn has been selected in the field this fall than ever before. A standard of 25,000 bushels to be selected and stored by the close of the campaign was set in his county.

County Agent A. T. Morrison, of Fayette county, reports that on account of the corn being late and just beginning to harden the seed corn campaign is still in progress. He estimates that 800 bushels of good seed have been selected up to this time.

G. E. Metzger, county agent of Elkhart county, says that good seed corn in Elkhart county is very hard to obtain owing to the late season and the killing frosts. Notwithstanding, the seed corn campaign went forward with good results. He estimates that enough seed has been selected to plant the needed acreage of the county and in addition a surplus.

HOLD TOWNSHIP MEETINGS.

Harry Gray, county agent of Wells county, reports that the seed corn campaign was observed in Wells county by holding two seed selection meetings in each of the nine townships and an extra meeting in Bluffton. The meetings were attended by 480 school children in addition to the farmers. Each pupil selected and stored from 100 to 200 ears of corn.

R. E. Arnett, county agent of Hendricks county, reports that not more than one-half of the entire corn crop in his county was properly matured before the first killing frost. This decreased the amount of grain suitable for selection. Many farmers were unable to find enough solid seed from their entire fields to plant the next year's crop and in favorable sections a few farmers have an excess. A list giving the name and location of the men who desire seed and those who have an excess is being prepared by the county agent.

Stewart Leaming, county agent of Jasper county, estimates that at this time at least 10,000 bushels have been selected above that normally stored in the county.

CONFERENCE ON HOG PRODUCTION.

The following program has been arranged for the Hog Production conference to be held at Purdue University October 30. This conference is held at the suggestion of the Secretary of Agriculture, David F. Houston. The program has been arranged through the co-operation of Purdue University, the Food Production and Conservation Committee, State Veterinarian and the Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington, D. C., as follows:

10:00 a. m. Purpose of the Conference—J. H. Skinner, Chief of the Department of Animal Husbandry.

Following this talk there will be an opportunity to inspect the swine equipment, herds and experimental stock under the direction of Messrs. Starr and Smith.

11:00 a. m. Swine Feeding—C. G. Starr, Acting Associate in Animal Husbandry.

1:30 p. m. Food Problems—Professor G. I. Christie, State Food Director.

The Hog Market Situation—J. R. Brown, Chicago.

Hog Production Problems—Dr. L. E. Northrup, Indiana State Veterinarian, Indianapolis.

Plans for Increasing Swine Production—Representative of the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The Swine Situation in My Community and How to Increase Production—A round table discussion led by John Brown, Monon, Ind.

BANKERS BOOST LIVE STOCK.

In an effort to co-operate in the movement for more and better live stock on Indiana farms, the Indiana Bankers' Association, at their annual meeting October 10-11, at Evansville, adopted the following resolution:

"In the United States and throughout the world there is a meat shortage. Decreased production, coupled with increased consumption, has brought about an alarming condition. During the three-year period ending December 31, 1916, the swine population of France decreased 38.1 per cent. The swine in Germany during 1915 decreased 31.5 per cent. and so far as can be learned has continued to decrease up to this time. In the United States the decrease from January 1, 1916, to January 1, 1917, was 313,000. Three-fourths of the world's pork and pork products are sent from the United States in normal times and the war has greatly increased this percentage.

"The breaking up of the ranges and the failure to stimulate increased breeding of cattle on smaller farms places beef production in a serious condition. If the demand for beef is to be met it will be necessary to produce feeders as well as fatten for market larger numbers of animals.

"Milk, cream, butter, cheese and other dairy products form a most important part of the food supply. These products are not only economical, but are absolutely necessary for the feeding and proper nourishment of the people. Again, increased use of dairy products as food releases large supplies of staple crops for use of the army and the people of Europe.

"Wool is in great demand. Uniforms, socks and other clothing must be supplied for our soldiers. The present supply is wholly inadequate and must be increased. Farmers must keep more sheep.

"Live stock is also the basis of successful farming. When crops are fed to animals on the farm the major share of the fertility is retained and returned to the land. Increased production of crops depends upon the maintenance of fertility. Farmers must consider and adopt in a larger way live stock farming.

"These problems are important and are prominently before this State. Bankers can assist in their solution, and at this time should use every force at their command to improve conditions.

"The organizing of live stock clubs financed by banks is a practical, helpful work and is to be urged at this time. More than seventy banks have already organized and started the movement. There is opportunity for five hundred banks in Indiana to do a similar work.

"The Agriculture Committee of the Indiana Bankers' Association can co-operate in a helpful way with Purdue University, the United States Department of Agriculture, county agents and the Committee on Food Production and Conservation of the State Council of Defense, and is hereby directed to give all possible assistance."

Tatting is Slacking

(Brazil, Ind., Times.)

Consternation reigned among the Red Cross workers at the headquarters shops Monday. There was much subdued feeling evident. Angry glances were cast. Sharp whispers were heard. Busy women showed signs of irritation and nervousness. The general atmosphere of harmony in the headquarters was lost. What was the cause? Is there a German spy trying to put pounded glass in the bandages? Is there a plan to put an irritating powder in the night shirts of the wounded soldiers?

No, gentle reader, it is not quite that bad, but a woman had come to headquarters WITH HER TATTING, to enjoy the companionship of the hustling Red Cross workers without doing her bit. No one had the courage to subdue her, but the ladies will let it be known that no "slacker work" goes at any of the Red Cross shops.

The Real Issue.

(By Abraham Lincoln.)

That is the real issue. That is the issue that will continue in this country when these poor tongues of Judge Douglas and myself shall be silent. It is the eternal struggle between these two principles—right and wrong—throughout the world. They are the two principles that have stood face to face from the beginning of time; and will ever continue to struggle. The one is the common right of humanity and the other the divine right of kings. It is the same principle in whatever shape it develops itself. It is the same spirit that says, "You toil and work and earn bread, and I'll eat it." No matter in what shape it comes, whether from the mouth of a king who seeks to bestride the people of his own nation and live by the fruit of their labor, or from one race of men as an apology for enslaving another race. It is the same tyrannical principle.

Every Teacher Made An Enrolling Officer

Bulletin from Federal State Director Isaac
D. Straus of United States Boys'
Working Reserve.

BULLETIN NO. 54.

—High School Principals and Teachers, Attention—

1. By virtue of the authority vested in me by the United States Department of Labor, I hereby designate and appoint each high school principal and teacher in Indiana as an enrolling officer for the United States Boys' Working Reserve.
2. Full printed supplies for enrollment of boys may be secured from your high school principal, county superintendent of schools, county director of the Reserve, or by writing to the State headquarters at Indianapolis.
3. The oath of service may be administered verbally by the enrolling officer.
4. Physical examination may be waived, if inconvenient to make.
5. See that all questions contained on the enrollment card are fully answered.
6. Boys who are employed after school hours should enroll in order to qualify for the war service medal presented by the Federal government. They will not be disturbed in their present employment.
7. Enrolled boys who are not employed after school hours will be expected (not compelled) to respond to emergency calls for labor, i. e. corn husking on farms near their homes. They will be paid for this work. (Many Indiana high schools are organizing corn husking clubs with ten or fifteen boys in each club. In some schools where these boys are proficient in their studies, they are released from school on Friday in order that they may devote two days per week to such emergency work.)
8. Please mail promptly or send by messenger the cards of all boys who have enrolled to the local county director of the Reserve.
9. Boys must be immediately released from service upon the written request of parents. Therefore, even though a boy enrolls, he is still amenable to parental control.
10. All boys sixteen years and past, and under twenty-one, whether working or not, are eligible to join the United States Boys' Working Reserve.
11. Federal Award.—Each day spent in agricultural work counts one full credit and each one-half day counts one-half credit toward the accumulation of thirty-six agricultural service credits for which the federal bronze badge, bearing the great seal of the United States, is awarded as a mark of honor. School authorities will kindly keep a record of the agricultural service credits accumulated by each boy and on the first of each month report to the county director and to the State director, the number of credits earned by each boy. These reports will be given some publicity and will undoubtedly create some rivalry conducing to greater activity of the Reserve boys.

INDIANAPOLIS SCHOOLS ORGANIZING.

Pursuant to the passage of the following resolutions by the Board of School Commissioners, the organization of the Boys' Working Reserve in Indianapolis is becoming very active:

First: Approving the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve.

Second: Recommending that the different high school principals and teachers fully co-operate with Mr. Hurrell in securing the full enrollment of all boys eligible, subject to the approval of the Superintendent of Schools.

Third: Authorizing the Superintendent of City Schools to devise such plans and methods as will serve the purpose of this organization locally.

On Wednesday and Thursday, October 24th and 25th, mass meetings held in each high school were addressed by Asa J. Smith, State High School Organizer for the State Council of Defense. Much enthusiasm was manifested and many boys enrolled at once.

A. S. Hurrell, County Director for Marion county, is directing the organization work in Indianapolis in co-operation with Ellis U. Graff, City Superintendent of Schools; George Buck, Milo H. Stuart and E. H. K. McComb, high school principals the Marion County Council of Defense; also A. M. Glossbrenner, Carl Taylor, Sol Kiser, L. S. Weil, Sol Schloss and W. A. Hacker, Assistant County Director for the Reserve.

To defray the expense of publicity, the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association have each contributed one hundred dollars.

The following Indianapolis boys have been awarded the Federal Bronze Badge for work on farms last summer: Alfred Glossbrenner of Manual Training High School, Russel Keller of Technical High School and Robert Chenoweth who graduated from Shortridge last spring and is now a freshman at Purdue.

RESERVE LOSES ANOTHER PATRIOT.

The following letter reveals the patriotic impulse which is not only stimulating the youth of the country today, but the hearts of mothers as well:

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 18, 1917.

Boys' Working Reserve, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sirs—Steve Hampton requests that I write you and inform you that he has enlisted in the Army and is at Fort Harrison, 10th Infantry, Company I.

He is sorry to disappoint you, but proud to know that he can fight for his country. I am also very proud of him as I have taken care of him since his mother's death. I have also taken care of his younger brother, and would be glad if he were old enough to go too. I know that if their mother was living, she would be proud to see them go.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. CHARLES ALLEE,
2120 Allfree Avenue.

DEMAND FOR BOYS IN LAPORTE.

F. R. Farnam, county director of Laporte county, writes:

"The enrollments are coming in quite rapidly and we hope to call for a few more bronze badges in the near future. However, the calls for help far exceed the supply. Corn husking season will soon be here and many boys will be needed for that work. We could place a boy today in a splendid position in the office of the Daily Herald but have no one available at this time."

GREENE COUNTY CONDUCTS CAMPAIGN.

During the past week under the leadership of J. B. Young, chairman of the County Council of Defense, and through the co-operation of M. G. Edington, A. J. Shields, Allen Pace, W. V. Moffit, W. L. Carries, C. E. Davis, Joseph Beasley and H. W. Letsinger, Greene county has conducted a publicity drive in the interest of the Boys' Working Reserve. Every school in the county was visited and at the end of the week patriotic mass meetings were held in Bloomfield, Worthington and Jasonville. Many boys who ordinarily work for their parents joined the Reserve in order to qualify for the Federal bronze badge. Such boys will not be disturbed in their present employment, but agreeable to the policy of the reserve will be urged to remain where they are.

CORN HUSKING CLUBS.

—Bulletin No. 55—

To the Principals of All High Schools:

The corn husking season is near at hand and the Department of Agriculture at Washington urges all farmers to husk and house their corn before severe winter weather sets in.

This will be impossible unless you co-operate with the farmers in your locality by encouraging your high school boys to engage in this work. Therefore, lose no time in organizing corn husking clubs in your locality with ten to fifteen boys in each club. In this manner boys can be sent out in groups to work on Fridays and Saturdays and completely clean up a farmer's crop.

Have this sign painted in large letters and hang in front of your high school at once:

FARMERS

WHO HAVE CORN TO HUSK,
OUR BOYS WILL HELP.

APPLY HIGH SCHOOL PRINCIPAL AT ONCE
FIRST COME FIRST SERVED.

Many high school principals are planning to release boys for this emergency work on Friday in order that they may husk corn two days each week. Such boys, in order to be released, must maintain a certain standard in scholarship. This is offered just as a suggestion.

Each day spent by a boy in husking corn will count as a credit in determining his qualification for the Federal Bronze Badge of Honor issued to members of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve.

Have this notice published in your local papers in order that farmers may know that this labor is available.

Please keep the State office advised of all activity of your corn husking clubs.

Yours truly,

ISAAC D. STRAUS,

Federal State Director,

U. S. Boys' Working Reserve,

83 State House, State Council of Defense,
October 23, 1917. Indianapolis, Ind.

The Fuel Problem in Steuben County

Many counties in Indiana may benefit from the following suggestions published by the Steuben County Council of Defense, on the fuel problem:

"Now that the fuel question is becoming a grave one in Steuben county, because of the difficulty at this early stage of the cool weather in securing coal, it is necessary that every home in the county should use every effort to assist in conserving the supply of available fuel. There is no assurance that local dealers will be able to meet the demands for the coming winter. For the last three years the railroads and industries of the country have been running at maximum fuel consuming rate, and the reserve coal pile of the country has been drawn on until it is now practically consumed, and coal is being rushed from the mines to the furnaces. During this period there has also been a diminution of the other sources of fuel supply, such as wood, gas and oil. There will be many an unanswered appeal for fuel this winter.

"To assist in meeting this situation, it is suggested that people save as much coal as possible by holding off the steady fires until cold weather sets in. In the meantime many a home can be kept warm by burning the trash around the home. There is scarcely a yard that does not have an old board pile, a few old stumps or a dead tree or two which can be converted into fuel for the slightly cool mornings and evenings that we are now experiencing. The old forgotten buck-saw should be gotten out, greased up, and put to work, or a new one may be had for a dollar. Preparing fuel in this good old-fashioned way is the best possible exercise, and beats the new-fangled health exercises a hundred ways.

"Farmers are urged to get all down timber into shape for fuel. They are also asked to give away for the hauling any old stumps and dead limbs which are not in marketable condition. These may keep many a deserving family from suffering. Farmers having wood lots they wish cleaned up in this way may leave their names with the Council Defense Council, and the opportunity to use such wood will be given to trustworthy persons."

Germany is striving to fasten her system on Europe and the world through starvation. You can help thwart Germany's ambition by enrolling as an active member of the Food Administration. Don't be partners of the Prussians.

Dairymen Assist in Pledge Campaign

Indiana Farmers Receive Cards and Reasons Why They Should Sign and Co-Operate.

The dairymen in Indiana are going to do their "bit" to help make the Hoover food pledge card campaign in Indiana a success. This "bit" will consist of a personal appeal to 75,000 wives of Indiana farmers, to sign the food pledge. The dairymen, through their organization, "The Indiana Manufacturers of Dairy Products," have sent a Hoover pledge card to each of 75,000 women in Indiana, with an explanation of what it means to them to sign the food pledge.

It is explained to the farmer's wife that in asking her to sign the pledge card, Uncle Sam has no intention of taking her canned goods or calling on her for any work outside of her home, or forcing her to do anything at all. Uncle Sam really wants to get the promise of the farmer's wife that she will do what she can to substitute other foods on her table for wheat, beef, pork, mutton, sugar and fats. On the card which the dairymen are sending out are shown pictures of the conservation outfit, which is to be given to each farmer's wife who signs the pledge card. This outfit consists of: (1) A book entitled "Ten Lessons on Conservation," which is full of whys and wherefores of food saving—and also the wherebys—with wheat saving recipes and other interesting information. (2) A handsome three-colored window card for the housewife to hang in her window to show that she belongs to the food conservation army of American women. (3) A Kitchen "War Creed," which is a wall card containing the brief outline of the methods housewives can use to help win the war.

The card which the dairymen are sending out contains the following appeal:

"If you will use corn bread part of the time instead of wheat bread it will help Uncle Sam win the war."

"This sounds far-fetched, doesn't it? But it is every word true.

"And there are other little things like this that experts have figured out that you can do, which will help the United States win the war against Germany. They are all little things to you, but BIG things if enough people do them.

"For instance, there is this matter of corn bread. If every family in this country could get along without wheat one day each week, it would amount to a saving of from 80,000,000 to 90,000,000 bushels a year for the whole country.

"See what it means if YOU save a little?"

"Why save wheat? Well, because our allies will starve if we don't send them many shiploads of wheat this winter. Why not send them corn? Because corn spoils on the way across the ocean. Because it takes more room in ships. Because in Europe they don't know how to bake corn bread. And for other reasons.

"Now, there are a lot of interesting facts like this about things you can do to help lick Germany—in your own kitchen.

"The government wants you to agree to try to learn all you can about things you can do in your kitchen to HELP WIN THE WAR. That is why it asks you to sign the food pledge.

"It wants to send you information. It will not take your canned goods, as some folks have rumored. It will TAKE NOTHING. It simply wants to send you suggestions.

"Send in the pledge card and start out now to learn all you can about HOW FOOD CAN WIN THE WAR."

PICTURE THEATRES HELPING.

Wishing to prove their claim that the motion picture theatre is "everybody's school house," over five hundred owners of motion picture theatres in Indiana will take a hand in the big educational job the United States food administration is undertaking in Indiana. The movie men are going to help the food administration tell the people of Indiana why they should eat other foods now in place of wheat, beef, pork, mutton, sugar and fats; and why they should sign Mr. Hoover's food-saving pledge cards.

Frank Rembusch, Shelbyville, who is president of the organization of motion picture exhibitors in this State, is devoting his entire time these days to lining up the managers throughout the State in the proposed work. Slides, films and striking posters will be the medium through which the movie men are going to teach to eat patriotic menus.

Many theatres will show films of the signing of the food bill in the Senate and other scenes in connection with the food conservation movement. Pictures of "Herbert Hoover at home" will be a feature of the films. Several series of slides will be exhibited.

In front of every theatre during "Conservation Week," October 28 to November 4, an attractive six-colored poster with the food administration seal of service and words "FOOD WILL WIN THE WAR—Official pictures of United States Food Administration shown in this Theatre" will be displayed.

All motion picture theatres throughout the State taking a part in this work will receive the official recognition of the food administration and will be given a certificate of membership to place in their box office.

REPORTS BY TELEGRAPH.

Every day of "Conservation Week" reports will be made each day to the woman member of the County Council of Defense who will telegraph the results every afternoon at four o'clock to Dr. H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator, at Indianapolis. Dr. Barnard will in turn telegraph the State returns to Washington, as will every other State Food Administrator, and Washington will announce the total pledges for each State, each day.

MEN MUST BE ENROLLED.

A Washington dispatch says:—"Twelve million of America's 22,000,000 housewives is the minimum number the food administration's army of 500,000 volunteers is sure to enroll in the food-saving campaign during "Conservation Week," October 28 to November 4. Indiana alone has promised a million, which is a much higher goal than most States have set. To get its million pledge card signatures, Indiana will have to enroll a large number of men as well as women.

Congratulates Lafayette.

Harold Braddock, executive director of the Library War Council at Washington, telegraphed his congratulations to the city of Lafayette because it was the first city in the country to raise its proportion of the War library fund. Lafayette has raised about $1,100. Mr. Braddock's telegram follows:

"By your practical demonstration of patriotism, your city is proving to America and to the world that in times of need Lafayette always does its part. The Library war council is inspired by the results you are securing in the Library War Fund Campaign."

Those who had charge of the Lafayette campaign were as follows:

Members of the Lafayette public library board: Dr. George F. Keiper, George W. Snyder, Mrs. W. W. Alder.

Members of the West Lafayette school board: Frank S. Moore, Everett B. Vawter, Arthur Duffy.

Citizens' committee: Mrs. Virginia Stein, librarian Lafayette public library; William M. Hepburn, librarian Purdue University library; Robert F. Hight, Rev. Albert C. Dudley, Rev. George W. Switzer, Sidney H. Saltzgeber, William M. Nye, Timothy J. Connelly, Christian G. Stocker, Mrs. Henry A. Taylor, Mrs. Bernhardt Born, Mrs. George P. Haywood.

Millions of European farmers have left their fields to fight for the safety of America and the world. Those fields therefore haven't been producing much. Ours have. Europe's food has got to come from somewhere. America is the place. It's little enough to ask the individual American to conserve what our fields produce so our European brethren can have plenty and keep up the fight. Save your bit!

Harvesting the Apple Crop

Uncle Sam takes the keenest interest in this year's apple crop, for the fruit must be used to help save wheat and meats for our allies.

The Food Administration is planning a consumer campaign of publicity throughout the country.

This year's apple crop calls for intelligent handling. The latest government reports indicate a crop of about 190,000,000 bushels. That is a little below normal. Good prices are assured for all honestly packed first quality apples and also for honestly packed selected second grades, which government experts say can be put into storage. When the crop is big it does not pay to store second grades, but this year, despite the fact that we cannot ship our usual 2,000,000 barrels of apples abroad, because shipping space is precious, we should be able to get fair prices for all good apples at home.

CARELESS PACKING A HANDICAP.

Careless packing of poor quality fruit has always been one of the chief causes of market instability and unsatisfactory prices to the growers. This year the whole apple industry is co-operating to remove this market handicap. There has never been an apple year such as this one is going to be. Growers have never been able to get together and engage and finance a national educational campaign among consumers to increase apple consumption. This year the situation makes it necessary for the United States government, through the Food Administration, to conduct a consumers' campaign of publicity on behalf of the apple. This campaign will begin while the crop is being sent to market, and will probably continue until the last apple is eaten up late next spring. So the grower has three great incentives for grading, packing and storing this crop with especial care.

THREE INCENTIVES FOR GROWER.

First: It is a good crop and calls for care.

Second: The government will encourage apple eating and apple storage and will discourage apple speculation that raises the prices abnormally.

Third: We must eat up at home more than 2,000,000 barrels of apples which would ordinarily be exported.

To get the best of the crop to the market in prime condition it must be picked carefully at the time of maturity and promptly cooled in temporary storage, and then skillfully graded and packed. Second-grade fruit should not go into barrels or boxes. If it cannot be marketed in bulk in nearby consuming centers, then it should be worked up into by-products along with the culls.

DEPARTMENT TO GIVE AID.

Because the bulk of the crop will be picked by volunteer workers this year, and put into common storage until the grower can find time to grade and pack, there will be an opportunity to give closer personal attention to the grading and packing than might be the case if the crop were handled as in peace times. For the grower who desires instructions in apple packing the Department of Agriculture at Washington has information in bulletin form. These bulletins can be secured free by writing to the department. Growers will do well to obtain a few copies.

Conserving Wheat Flour.

A prominent New York hotel has recently added to its menu a bread containing rye flour and whole wheat flour in addition to white flour. Another method of saving wheat flour which is being well received is to use one part of cottonseed meal to four, five or six parts of wheat flour. A United States Senator not long ago served bread made from these ingredients to several of his colleagues in Washington, and they seemed much pleased with it. Government chemists have demonstrated that flour can also be made from peanuts, dried peas, sweet potatoes, etc., and that such flour can be mixed with wheat flour to make excellent bread.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Foodstuffs Dealers Must Have Licenses

President's Proclamation Calls Attention to Enforcement of Law After November 1.

President Wilson has issued a proclamation requiring all persons engaged in the import, manufacture, storage and distribution of certain fundamental foodstuffs to secure a license from the Food Administrator, November 1.

These embrace meat packers, cold storage warehousemen, millers, canners, elevators, grain dealers, wholesale distributors, retailers doing a business of more than $100,000 per year, who handle the commodities to be set out in the President's proclamation.

It has been the desire of the Food Administration to secure the co-operation of all patriotic men in the various trades so as to eliminate speculation, hoarding, unreasonable profits, wasteful practices, etc., in the great distribution system of the country.

The licensing provision in the Food Bill is limited in operation to the channels of trade which lie between the farmer on the one hand and the retailer on the other, except as it extends to those few retailers who do an annual business of more than $100,000.

COMMODITIES AFFECTED.

The Food Administration has selected about twenty basic commodities, and their products as forming the prime basis of life, and has limited its licensing control to these commodities, and also, in so far as practicable, eliminated the smallest units of business in these staples:

Wheat, wheat flour, rye or rye flour; barley or barley flour; oats, oatmeal or rolled oats; corn, corn grits, cornmeal, hominy, corn flour, starch from corn, corn oil, corn syrup or glucose; rice, rice flour, dried beans, pea seed or dried peas, cottonseed, cottonseed oil, cottonseed cake or cottonseed meal, peanut oil or peanut meal, soya bean oil, soya bean meal, palm oil or copra oil, oleomargarine, lard, lard substitutes, oleo oil or cooking fats, milk, butter or cheese, condensed, evaporated or powdered milk; fresh, canned or cured beef, pork or mutton; poultry or eggs; fresh or frozen fish; fresh fruits or vegetables; canned: peas, dried beans, tomatoes, corn, salmon, or sardines; dried: prunes, apples, peaches or raisins; sugar, syrups or molasses.

PURPOSES OF ADMINISTRATION.

It is the purpose of the Food Administration to effect conservation in the commercial use of these commodities, and to keep them flowing toward the consumer in direct lines through the channels of trade in as economical a manner as possible. The Administration does not wish to disturb the normal and necessary activities of business, and no business factor who is performing a useful function will be expected to surrender that function.

The Administration is, however, charged with several duties.

The producer must have a free outlet and a ready market.

There must be no manipulation or speculation in foods.

There must be no hoarding in foods.

Unfair or unreasonable profits must be eliminated.

Discriminatory and deceptive and wasteful practices which in any way restrict supply or distribution must be stopped.

These are the provisions of the Food Law. The licensing system which was authorized by the law provides a more effective machinery for its enforcement. It must not be thought that these operations become illegal only upon the issue of licenses. They have been illegal since the tenth of August when the law was passed, and numerous cases coming to the attention of the Food Administration have been corrected. The licensing has the effect of giving definition to the provisions of the bill and the practices which the trades should respectively follow in connection therewith.

The proclamation will require all of those

Appeal Made for Food Pledge Signatures During the Week Beginning October 28

Most of the big things in our connection with the war have been accomplished by the typical American device of devoting a special week to a particular thing and making a national drive upon it. We have had liberty loan week, Red Cross week, and volunteer week.

And, now, food pledge week, beginning October 28.

For seven days the press and every possible organization in the country will be directed to the single end of getting the signatures of every man, woman and child in the United States at the bottom of the food pledge. Everybody in the country has heard something about food saving and understands that it is one of the four biggest services necessary to win the war. Everybody is more or less kindly disposed toward food saving—and hopes that the other fellow is carrying out the provisions of the Food Administration, and intends to adopt the wheatless and meatless meal himself before long.

But now the time has come to sign up and do all these necessary things.

At the end of food pledge week the membership of the United States Food Administration should be 100 per cent. of the people of the Nation.

Be ready to "do your bit" that week. It will be the biggest sort of business because it is to help win the war.

handling the commodities concerned to apply for licenses before November 1, upon forms which will be supplied on application to the Food Administration.

LICENSES WITHOUT COST.

Applicants will receive licenses without cost, and the regulations governing those dealing with the commodities licensed will be issued in due course.

After November 1st no unlicensed persons will be permitted to trade in the commodities enumerated in the proclamation. Those who receive licenses will be required from time to time to make reports to the Food Administration on their activities in prescribed form. These reports will be carefully safeguarded so that private information given to the Government in confidence will not be divulged to competitors. Men experienced in the production and merchandising of the licensed commodities will aid in administering the law, and a legal department has been organized to facilitate its enforcement.

While authority is vested in the Food Administration to suspend any license and to impose penalties for violation of the Food Law or special regulations, it is the purpose of the Food Administration to accomplish these ends of public service and war service, so far as possible, not by coercion, but by patriotic co-operation. It has been the expressed feeling of the whole of the many conferences held in Washington that the licensing system operating alike in every part of the country will, in fact, be a protection to the great majority of producers and distributors, as well as to the public, against the operations of those few who unpatriotically seek to exploit the necessities of life.

It has been generally recognized throughout the country that the enormous obligation imposed upon the American people to feed our soldiers at the front and the Allies creates a disturbing factor in trade which allows opportunity to a few to impose burdens upon the many, and that it is of vital national importance that such control should be exerted as will remedy, so far as may be, the economic disturbances incident to the war. The prime purpose of the Food Administration is to protect the patriot against the slacker in business.

May Abandon Basketball.

Military drill as a substitute for basketball, in order that a greater number of students may benefit physically, may be undertaken in the Lafayette public schools, as a war measure. The report of the organizers sent to Tippecanoe by the State Council of Defense says on that subject:

"We found a sentiment to abandon basketball from school athletics and substitute military training as a better adaptation to the possible future needs of our country and perpetuity of independence, while the exercise or athletics would give all school boys an opportunity to become proficient, rather than intensive training of a basketball squad of five while all the balance of the school rise to no higher importance than professional 'rooters.'"

Hasty Conclusions Often Misrepresent.

(In reply to the article of Earl S. Brown in Vevay Enterprise, from J. Francis Lochar.)

It seems some persons imagine Americanism depends on the language we speak and patriotism on the number of American flags we display. The article which appeared in the Vevay Enterprise some time ago, accusing the Germans in the vicinity of Olean, Ind., as being disloyal to their country, was undoubtedly compiled on such grounds. But why draw such conclusions?

In the first place we were not celebrating our annual picnic, as the writer called the meeting to which he referred, but a joint Missionary and Reformation festival. The sole purpose of the meeting was to instill a greater love for Christ and his church on earth, and we felt that this could best be done through the medium of both the German and English languages, without the least intention of giving offense to any one, but simply to accommodate the German-speaking people of the vicinity.

To conclude, that, because no flags were displayed in the grove, "Old Glory" was insulted and disloyalty shown to our country, would seem to the average mind to be a privation of personal and Christian liberty for which this country stands. But outside of this, the Lutheran church (under whose auspices the meeting was held) perhaps more than any church denomination in this country, stands for the separation of church and State, and therefore unconsciously avoids any decorations in their churches and public meetings of the church, that might leave an impression contrary to its teaching.

We, therefore, the representatives of the Lutheran Church of Olean, Ind., deemed it our Christian duty to offer the above reply to the article of Earl S. Brown, which presumingly accused us of disloyalty to our country.

REV. H. A. BARTH, Pastor.

Church Council: J. F. Linkmeyer, Pres.; M. E. Lomatsch, Sec'y; Herman Hunger, Chas. H. Auferheide, Louis Barth.

Reports have come to the County Council of Defense that there was manifest disloyalty in and about Olean, and that there was a picture of the Kaiser displayed on the walls of the Lutheran school house at that place, and demanded that the Council of Defense do something in the matter. I wish to say that I have made an investigation and find that there are no pictures of any kind displayed on the walls of the school, and that I do not find the good German citizens of that community manifesting disloyalty, and at a meeting of the church council on Sunday, October 7, 1917, it was voted that the Stars and Stripes be placed in the school house.

After making the investigation that I have, I wish to report to those who have complained that the charges were unwarranted, and that the Germans of Olean church are true to their country and will do their part to hasten the day when peace shall again be in all the world and wars made impossible.

J. FRANCIS LOCHARD, Chairman,

How the School Children May Help Win the War

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 8, 1917.

Mr. Will H. Hays, State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—We inclose herewith a copy of a letter from a school girl asking what the boys and girls can do to help in the war. Replying to the same is my letter. Upon receipt of my letter a vote was taken by all the pupils in the grades in our city schools declaring that they would abstain from the use of candies until January 1. In addition to that they are writing to other schools in the county, urging that the same steps be taken, and inclosing with their letter the inclosed circular letter. We believe that this will aid wonderfully in the economizing use of sugars. I inclose herewith the copies of the letters for the purpose of showing you the plan we have adopted to economize in the one necessary food article.

The teacher in one of the grades where there are about seventy-five pupils made an investigation as to the amount of candy used the previous week, and found that a fair and reasonable estimate of the amount used by the pupils in that grade was 275 pounds. If the school children in Indiana would refrain from the use of candy until Christmas time what a saving there would be!

Very truly yours,

D. V. WHITELEATHER.

Columbia City, Ind., Oct. 1, 1917.

Hon. D. V. Whiteleather, Chairman Whitley County Board Defense:

Kind Sir—I am writing for the 7A class of the West Ward, and wish to know if there is anything we can do to help win this war? We will be glad to economize and sew for the Red Cross or help in any way. What line of work would you suggest for the boys? They are all ready to help.

Sincerely yours,

KATHRYNE RUCKMAN.

MR. WHITELEATHER'S REPLY.

The reply of Mr. Whiteleather follows:

Columbia City, Ind., Oct. 2, 1917.

Miss Kathryne Ruckman, 308 E. Jefferson Street, Columbia City, Ind.:

Dear Friend—Your letter for and in behalf of 7A class, West Ward, just received.

I want to congratulate your class upon its patriotism. If all adults would make an honest effort to ascertain what can be done to win the war, then join with the girls and boys of this country in doing the things necessary, it would not be long until the return of peace, and the principles for which we are fighting become the foundation of every government of earth.

My dear girls and boys, there is much that you can do to assist in winning this great war. The people of France, Belgium, Italy, Russia and England who are fighting the common enemy with us, have but little food. The quantity is so reduced that the various governments parcel it out, giving a limited amount to each family. Our people have plenty. We would have more if we would take care of all the food products grown. Almost daily an appeal comes from one or more of these countries asking us to divide our food stuff with them in order to prevent the starvation of girls, boys, women and men. The last appeal came from France asking the United States to send her 100,000 tons of sugar between now and January 1. We have just enough in our country to last our people until a new crop is ready for use. Unless we furnish France the amount she desires, for at least two months her people will have no sugar. Our government is asking her people to get along with less so that we can divide with the hungry people across the water. In order that our government may furnish this necessary food to the people of France, won't all the girls and boys of 7A class, West Ward, refrain from eating candies until Christmas time?

As stated above, a large quantity of food stuff is going to waste because our people do not take the proper care of it. Girls and boys can assist their parents in gathering, canning and drying fruit and vegetables and otherwise preserving them. This is done for home use so that we need not depend upon the products of our great canning industries for home consumption. If we do what we can to win the war, we will gather, can, or otherwise preserve enough of the fruits and vegetables to supply our respective families, so that the products of the canning industries can be exported and fed to our boys in France and the hungry allies.

You all remember that the onion crop in this county, in part at least, was likely to be lost because of the scarcity of labor. Many boys, and some girls, went to the onion fields and assisted in the harvesting of this crop. This was a patriotic act. By so doing, the crop will be preserved and can be used for the feeding of the people at home as well as abroad.

Many things like the above can be done by the boys and girls of this country. The Red Cross is an institution organized for the purpose of furnishing the soldier boys necessary clothing and necessary food. They are now busily engaged in knitting socks and making other articles that will bring comfort to our young soldiers. You might be able to assist in making some of these necessary articles. If not, you certainly can assist your mothers at home so that they might be able to devote a couple of hours each day to Red Cross work.

Let us therefore be economical in all things; let us be patriotic to such an extent that our patriotism will enthrone others; let us be alert, looking for something to do for the betterment of humanity. Do not understand that you should neglect your school work to do these things. You are now preparing yourselves and laying the foundation for your future life. Be likewise enthusiastic in this so that your high ideals may be reached. Very truly yours,

D. V. WHITELEATHER,

Chairman County Council of Defense.

$50 Liberty Bond Will Help Country Win the War.

The proceeds of one $50 Liberty Loan Bond will purchase:

Thirteen 18-pound shells for destroying submarines.

Four 5-inch shells for same purpose.

One hundred pounds of smokeless powder.

Eighteen gas masks for a like number of soldiers at the front.

Enough coal to drive a destroyer 120 miles.

Enough gasoline to drive a submarine destroyer 150 miles.

A sailor's uniform outfit.

Four months' subsistence for a soldier.

Patriotic Schools

Horace Ellis, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has received the following letter from Harry L. Nixon, superintendent of the Dunkirk (Ind.) schools:

"The pupils in the German class of our high school today voted to buy a Liberty bond and to dispose of it as follows: To give the annual interest on the bond to the American Red Cross Society; to turn over the bond to the board of school trustees to be expended, when the bond shall mature, in the purchase of a statue of some American hero, to be placed in the building that shall house the Dunkirk high school at that time. They further stipulate that the statue purchased shall be the bust of some man or person who shall become prominent as the result of America's part in the present conflict with Germany, if it be possible to choose one man of more importance than any other. If not, the board to use its judgment as to the person to be represented.

"Seventy-five per cent. of our teachers have also signified their intention of buying at least one bond each.

"Perhaps the above may offer a suggestion to your department for furthering the teaching of patriotism in the public schools of Indiana."

Potatoes Replace Cereals in Food

Furnish Starch and Make Possible the Elimination of Bread from Diet.

Americans, if they would think of the humble potato as a "breadstuff" rather than merely as a "vegetable," would find that they could spare much bread from their diet without inconvenience, the dietetic specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture point out. The potato—Irish or sweet—differs from almost all other common vegetables in that it supplies important amounts of starch, and starch is the chief food element we get from bread. Green vegetables, with which potatoes often are classed, supply little or no starch and energy, and are valuable in the diet principally for the mineral substances and acids they supply and for giving bulk to the diet. Potatoes, of course, supply valuable mineral substances useful in the building up, repair and regulation of the body, but they have won their great place in the diet of a large part of the world because they supply starch which otherwise would have to be obtained from cereals.

MORE POTATOES, LESS BREAD.

The more potatoes you eat the less bread you need at the same meal. Potatoes, of course, contain a larger percentage of water than does bread, so that weight for weight they are not equivalent to bread as a source of starch and energy. As a general proposition, however, one medium-sized potato (six ounces) would supply about as much starch as two medium-sized slices of bread (about two ounces). Five parts of potato are equal to one part of cereal in a mixed diet. Therefore, those who make potatoes an important dish safely can cut down the amount of light or hot bread, wheat mushes, or macaroni they eat at that meal, and yet supply their bodies with this important food—starch. Wherever potatoes are locally plentiful or relatively cheap, especially in the case of the early or summer crop which does not store well, housewives are urged to use them plentifully at all meals as a substitute for wheat.

THE MORE POTATOES YOU EAT, THE LESS BREAD YOU NEED AT THE SAME MEAL.

France's Necessity the Standard.

The sincere hope of every American who believes that this country went into the war from the humane motives described by the President in his address to Congress must be that when beaten Germany appeals for a conference we will not be persuaded by any consideration into pressing upon our allies terms that will endanger their future peace and well being. The people of this country have not formulated their wishes in regard to the future in Europe, and they do well to leave the matter to the good sense and chivalry of the nations that have long lived under the menace of the German invasion.

The people of France know what to expect of a Germany able to renew its vigor and reconstruct its instruments of conquest. They have been brought face to face with the monstrous conception which Germany calls military necessity. They want no more of it. Let them determine the means by which Germany can be prevented from again bringing down this horror upon the head of her neighbors.

The civil necessity of France should be the measure of the punishment of Germany for the crimes of which she has been guilty under the name of military necessity.—Collier's.

Wants His Freedom.

"Now, boss, I's ready to go anywhere dey wants to send me," said a dusky citizen in a southern city on registration day, after performing his patriotic duty. "Boss, jes' anywhere! But I ask jes' one thing and dat is don't put me in no cavalry." "Why do you draw the line on the cavalry?" asked the registrar.

"It's jes' like dis: When I's told to retreat, I don't want to be bothered with no hoss."—Everybody's.

Inventory of Food in American Homes

Government Asking Housewives What They and Their Families Eat.

What is said to be the first comprehensive record of the Nation's diet, from by far the largest number of individual household pantries, is now under way, through the co-operation of the American housewife. She is telling what her family has on hand on a given date, what it needs to eat for a week, and what its monthly ration is. This she is doing to help along the war emergency food survey now being conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture.

ENLIST SERVICES OF 10,000.

An army of 10,000 women is enlisted in the work, and to each has been sent a letter from the department together with blanks for the inventory of food on hand and for the record of a week's total of food used by the family.

President Wilson, in approving the plans of the Secretary of Agriculture for the survey, said that "authoritative information concerning the Nation's food supply is a matter of consequence at all times and is of peculiar importance at the present moment." All who are assisting the department in making the survey are rendering valuable patriotic service. It is felt that the inventories of stocks on farms, in storages, and in retail establishments, which are also being taken at this time, will be understandable only in relation to the rate of food consumption. The interpretive figures, therefore, are being given by the women of the country, and their statements will guide the governmental agencies and the public in making plans to increase the production of certain food, to promote efficient distribution of these products, and to direct the campaign to better conserve and use them.

WHAT IS LISTED.

The inventory is of all stocks on hand on the pantry shelves, in the storage bins, the refrigerator, or the kitchen cabinet. This is accompanied by a list of the members of the family, their ages, and occupations.

There is also a weekly record of meals served to home folks and to guests, with the kinds and quantities used. These include the foods used from the household stocks and those produced at home, from the home garden for example, as well as those purchased. Mothers are also asked to report the candy, cakes, and ice cream which are bought and eaten in addition to the regular meals. This will probably require considerable co-operation on the part of the children who have pennies to spend.

Fifty-four items are included in the records of food on hand, although it is not supposed that any family will have an entry under each one of the 54 classifications. The classifications themselves are further subdivided, as in the case of fresh meats, salted meats, bakery products, fresh vegetables, and the like, under which separate items are to be listed. For example, under fresh meat would be listed pork, veal, lamb, beef, and so on. The same classification is used under the record of food consumed in a week.

THE FAMILY RECORD.

In the family record the name and address of the family is given, but not for publication. Each housewife will tell whether the family lives in the city or country and will give the total family income. She then lists the members of the household by sex and age and occupation, and will tell the number of meals which they eat at home and those which they may eat away from home during the week in which the record is kept. Meals prepared at home but eaten elsewhere, such as lunches taken to work, are considered home meals. Where there are children in the family the approximate quantity of milk used daily by each of the children under 7 years of age is also recorded.

It has been stated that the only survey which is in any way equivalent to this one now being taken was made some 20 years ago on a limited scale. It has been considered the one authoritative source of such information, although standards and costs of living have advanced materially since it was taken.

Course in Democracy for American Schools

American school children will soon have put before them material for "education in democracy" at the request of President Wilson, through the co-operation of the Food Administrator and United States Commissioner of Education, P. P. Claxton.

A series of bulletins entitled "Lessons in Community and National Life" will be issued to pupils of all schools, calling attention to the necessity for conservation of food and other national resources. They will serve the further purpose of training pupils in recognition of their rights and obligations in the democracy in which they live.

LETTER BY FOOD ADMINISTRATOR.

The Food Administrator has addressed a letter to school authorities, outlining the plan as follows:

"To the Superintendents and Principals of the Schools of the United States:

"In keeping with the plan outlined by the President, the United States Food Administration will co-operate with the Department of the Interior in issuing through the Bureau of Education a series of bulletins which will contain 'Lessons in Community and National Life.' These lessons will serve the very urgent immediate purpose of calling attention to the necessity of conserving food and all other resources of the nation. They will serve at the same time the broader purpose of training pupils in the schools to recognize their rights and obligations in the co-operative society in which they live.

"I urge all school officers to promote with vigor this plan for the more definite and comprehensive teaching of democracy.

"Faithfully yours,

"HERBERT HOOVER."

Your plans for dinner, Mrs. Housewife, are just as important in their way as General Haig's plans for a night attack. Haig aims to get the maximum of results with the minimum of material. He uses plenty, but he doesn't waste any. So should you. That's the way you and Haig will win this war.

Sign Your Country's Food Pledge—This Is It:

CUT OUT CAREFULLY ALONG THIS LINE

Pledge Card for United States Food Administration

If You Have Already Signed, Pass This On To a Friend

TO THE FOOD ADMINISTRATOR:

I am glad to join you in the service of food conservation for our nation and I hereby accept membership in the United States Food Administration, pledging myself to carry out the directions and advice of the Food Administrator in my home, in so far as my circumstances permit.

Name _____

Street _____

City _____

State _____

There are no fees or dues to be paid. The Food Administration wishes to have as members all of those actually handling food in the home.

Anyone may have the Home Card of Instruction, but only those signing pledges are entitled to the Membership Window Card, which will be delivered upon receipt of the signed pledge.

Cut this out carefully and send it to the Federal Food Administrator, Room 20, State House, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Do not send it to Washington. Send it to Indianapolis.

This is the same as the pledge card, and just as official. Do not sign this if you have signed a pledge card. Do not sign a pledge card if you sign this.

When you send this in, with your name and address, you will be sent free: (1) a handsome three-colored window membership card to show that you are trying to live up to the suggestions of the food administration at your house; (2) an interesting and valuable book of suggestions and recipes, entitled "Ten Lessons on Food Conservation"; (3) a wall card to hang in your kitchen, entitled "The Kitchen War Creed," to show you how you can help win the war in your own kitchen if you wish.

And the food administration will mail you other helpful things later, perhaps.

To sign this card is a patriotic privilege. It will make you a leader in your neighborhood in the task of saving certain foods for our soldiers and our allies.

Sign this card. Show Mr. Hoover you are with him. Hang out your window membership card when it comes. Read the interesting literature that will be sent you.

The government is not going to ask for your canned goods or for anything else, because you sign this card. You incur no obligations. You merely promise to study the problem of "food saving to win the war" and do what you can to help.

Oh, Man! How You Frighten Us!

(By Mrs. S. E. Boys, in Plymouth Republican.)

The other day I ran across a statement which quite effervesced the religious exaltation with which I have been plunging into Food Conservation the past few months. It was written before the ban was placed upon the manufacture of whisky, much of it goes into tobacco products, large amounts are wasted in trade wars.

O man! And you have been laying the responsibility of the war upon us saying that the war must be won by food, and the conservation of it was up to the women.

My, how our inflation has been pumped up! There has been so much "free air" (about the 20 per cent.). First came the newspapers; flashing, in flaming headlines which flared clear across the front page, the startler: "Seven billion dollars worth of food wasted in American kitchens." We women sat up and took notice.

Then came Bryan and brass bands, reasoning with us and thrilling us. We were impressed.

The bugaboo was flaunted before us, threatened our families with starvation IF we did not fill every available can, bottle, jar and jug. We got busy.

First, last and always there is Hoover, George Ade & Co. goading us into thrift. We respond.

We have gardened and canned and dried and stored until we are blue in the face and our hands resemble nutmeg graters. The other day I was petting the baby, rubbing her plump little back, when she piped up, "Don't scratch me!" At last the miracle is performed and we have a minute to catch our breath and think and it comes over us: Was it necessary? Have we taken ourselves too seriously? And—by the way—

WHAT ABOUT THAT EIGHTY PER CENT.?

True, whisky is fluked. We don't remember hearing that beer and wine are suppressed. How much food stuff goes into the making of the stuff and how much food is there in it after it is made?

How about the valuable fields of the South where the weather is so fine: Has the usual acreage of tobacco been cultivated?

Those trade wars, those wastes in transportation, those big-scale losses: Have they been effectively dealt with?

And right here in Marshall county where the papers have been so full of stimuli to the women and where we have cultivated vacant lots, worked in the fields, farmed the back yards, served thickweed salad, made meatless mince-meat, concocted tomato-peeling soup, canned watermelon rind preserves, and gone to seed generally on thrift; have you men been equally aroused?

Of course you have worked hard, you always do, and we love you and wouldn't want to see you in the predicament of Sid Stebbins who couldn't finish whitewashing the back-yard fence because he ran out of chewing tobacco. We couldn't be happy unless you are happy; but, say, why don't you get a county agent and double up the crops with half the effort? They say it can be done by sweetening the sour spots, draining the boggy places, rotating the crops, sowing only certain seed, and giving the proper chemicals to the depleted soil. They say a county agent can tell you how.

That would save considerable sweat of our brows and we could be your sweet little wives. We want to welcome you to your hearthstones with merry serenity and not be all keyed up with strenuousness to conserve the last beggarly scraps. Then if we should relax a bit and even waste a fraction of our 20 per cent. we would still be some considerable to the good.

Really now, think hard about that 80 PER CENT. and the HUNDRED PER CENT. more which might be!

Girls Study Telegraphy.

Miss Mary Johnston, state chairman National League for Woman's Service in Louisville, Ky., who is co-operating with W. G. Phillips, traffic manager and chief operator of the Western Union at that point, has established four classes of twenty-five girls each to fit students for government jobs in telegraphy. Louisville also has thirty-six students enrolled for the study of wireless telegraphy, classes in motor driving, and a committee which is specializing in railroad maintenance work in preparation for the long hours which railroad men will work to handle the war freight.

A Woman's View of the War

(Mary Roberts Rinehart in the American Magazine.)

"Had I been allowed to vote, I would have voted for war. I hate war with a terrible hatred. I fear it with the cringing fear that only mothers know. I do not believe that war is good for a country. I do not believe in war at all.

"Yet I would have voted for this war, as a surgeon cuts to cure a sore that will not heal.

"So, had we the vote, we would give our sons, as we are doing, with a God-speed. But we would say to the government with the strength of our millions what now we are begging fearfully, outside of the closed doors of government. And something like this we would say to the men who are representing this country in the Senate, the House of Representatives, and the various departments of government:

"These be our children you are taking from us. The cause is just. It is only right that they should go. But although they are but units to you, to us they are life itself. Therefore:

"What will you do for them when they have gone out to fight?

"Will you give them time to train, or are you going to send them, undisciplined, against the most highly trained fighting men in the world?

"Are you allowing petty jealousies to hold up the legislation we need? Are you playing politics? Are you posing for the public? Is this thing in your souls, or only in your mouths? Are you working for the nation or for re-election?

"If there are weaklings in control of vital situations, will you get rid of them now, or will you wait until their blunders have cost us those we are giving?

"We are giving everything we have. What are you giving, in labor, sincerity, high purpose and sacrifice?

"You are talking to us about conservation of food. What are you doing to conserve the lives we are putting in your hands?

"After all it comes down to one question from the women of America—only ten words to voice a million prayers:

"Are you ready to give our boys a fair chance? "That is not only a question. It is a prayer, for all the mothers of this country. Surely, dear God, it is not much to ask."

More Wheat Wanted.

We need more wheat in this county for next year, and it is believed there will be more than this, though there is no source of information in the county.

This year there was no chance to increase the yield, because the wheat had all been sowed long before war was declared. The 1918 crop, therefore, is the one which may be increased. It is regrettable that there has been no concerted effort to increase the wheat crop of 1918 as there has in so many other counties.

From what inquiries we have been able to make there seems to be a general tendency to increase the acreage, and it is believed that there will be a much larger acreage than last year, with a consequent bigger yield. The fixed and stable price is the strongest inducement that could be made to the farmer to sow wheat.

We have noticed also that the ground where wheat has been sown has been prepared with special care and is a beautiful sight wherever seen. Many pieces of wheat are now up and looking as fine as can be.—Plymouth Republican.

Graft on Anesthetics.

Chain letters are being sent to employees of the several government departments soliciting money for purchasing anesthetics. The objectionable part of these letters state that—

"Owing to the scarcity of anesthetics, operations that cause indescribable pain have to be performed daily without their aid to mitigate suffering. We are making an appeal to you to subscribe 24 cents toward purchasing chloroform to use in the hospitals of the allies. Please send a copy of this letter to four of your friends and number it * * * Do not fail or the chain will be broken and the good cause defeated. Send the money to * * * New York City. It is hoped to raise this number to 500 so as to help in making this effort a success."

These letters have been referred for verification to both the representatives of the English and French governments, who state positively that the assertion on which this appeal is based is absolutely without foundation.

More Reasons Why We Are at War.

Beginning with today, no more prisoners are to be taken. All prisoners are to be put to death. The wounded, whether armed or not, are to be put to death. Prisoners, even where they are organized in large units, are to be put to death. No living man is to be left behind us.—Gen. Stenger's order of August 26, 1914.

I have also bayoneted a number of women. During the battle of Budenwiler I did away with four women and seven young girls in five minutes. The captain told me to shoot these French sows, but I preferred to run my bayonet through them.—Letter from Johan Wagner, Bavarian soldier, to his betrothed, March 16, 1915.

Anyone who cannot bring himself to approve from the bottom of his heart the sinking of the Lusitania, who cannot conquer his sense of the monstrous cruelty to countless perfectly innocent victims * * * and give himself up to honest joy at this victorious exploit of German defensive power—such an one we deem no true German.—Pastor D. Baumgarten.

And such self-convicting testimony by the Germans themselves could be multiplied by the hundred.—Ex.

It is impossible that anything but benefit can come to the American family which signs the Food Administration Pledge.

Hoover's Career

From office boy in 1895 to national food administrator in 1917 for the United States and perhaps for all its allies, is the brief history of "Bert Hoover," now Herbert C. Hoover.

The gap of twenty-two years in which "Bert" passed into "Herbert" is filled with many incidents of world-wide renown.

Twenty-two years ago Bert Hoover began his business career as an office boy in the employ of his uncle, Dr. Minthorn, who had charge of the Oregon Land Company, at Salem. After a thorough trial the uncle said with conviction that as an office boy Bert was not worth $35 a month, which he had been receiving.

But Bert was equally firm in his conviction that he was easily worth $35 a month and more. That was the start, and the office was left behind, with Stanford University as the goal. There young Hoover attained his degree by working his way through college.

As an engineer his success is well remembered by westerners in Arizona mining operations. His fame in solving intricate mining problems spread and he was called to Australia and later to England, with bigger jobs always in sight.

Then the greatest task of his life came in the feeding of the war-stricken Belgians. His work in Belgium made impossible the selection of any other man for the solving of America's greatest problem of the war and the Salem office boy was called to the White House and given charge of the world's food supply.—Educator-Journal.

A Mistaken Viewpoint.

We can not help feeling that some of our public speakers handle the war situation from an entirely mistaken viewpoint, in asking sympathy for the German people under their so-called oppressive government. We do not understand that the German people are asking for any of our sympathy. One of the outstanding traits of this fine race of people is their absolute loyalty to their government. The German people are just as capable and intelligent as any people on earth and if they were not satisfied with their form of government they would change it. For more than forty years Germany has waited for "Der Tag," (The Day)—meaning the time when all the world would be subject to German domination—"Deutschland Ueber Alles." It is true, we should not hate the German people, but we ought to realize that our soldiers will have to fight something more than the Kaiser's shadow.—Fremont (Ind.) Eagle.

High Schools and the War.

The lure of high wages must not take boys and girls from the high schools if Indiana is to do her part, both in winning the war and advancing the interests of the country following the war. "The attendance in high schools should be increased, and more boys and girls should be induced to remain until their course is completed," is the warning being sent out by P. P. Claxton, federal commissioner of education. Chemistry, physics, manual training, domestic arts, domestic science and similar subjects should be featured. And above all, the high school graduates should go on to college and university.

The skyscraper goes up stone by stone, brick by brick, foot by foot, day by day, slowly. There is no other way to build it. Europe's war food shortage must be made up by individual Americans through saving bit by bit, ounce by ounce, day by day, persistently. There is no other way to do it.

"Your sacrifice of blood and money will be in vain, we shall go hungry and a great cause will be lost unless you stand guard each day in your home over your supply of wheat, meat, fats, sugar and milk."—HERBERT HOOVER.

Traitors Working to Prevent Enrollment

State Council Has Reports of Specific Cases in Which It Will Endeavor to Secure Redress.

Emphasizing the importance of the work that county food directors will be called upon to do, Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Indiana food administrator, again appealed to the Indiana State Council of Defense, at its meeting October 31, to urge County Councils to make nominations for these important posts. Dr. Barnard said the enforcement of the federal licensing law which will control retail prices for firms doing a gross business in excess of $100,000 per year, tomorrow, November 1, makes more imperative the selection of a competent county director. He stated that the food administration through publicity channels expects to effect what will amount to a "black-listing" of all retail groceries that ask an unfair profit for their goods and are not within the scope of the federal license law.

Up to noon Wednesday only thirty-nine of the ninety-two counties had made a recommendation and as a result the tardy County Councils received a very pointed and emphatic telegram from the State Council of Defense, directing that they get busy and nominate a qualified food administrator at once. These nominations will then be investigated and if found satisfactory, will be commissioned by the federal food administration.

Dr. Barnard also stated that there is an evidence of organized opposition to the food card enrollment. In Albion, Ind., he said school children whose mothers had signed cards had returned to school with the information that their mothers declined to display the cards for the reason that a man, whose name is now said to be in possession of the department of justice, had informed them that the display of these window cards spotted the house for "the Germans who would get them" when the enemy soldiers came into the town. Dr. Barnard said Mayor McClellan of Auburn said the rumor is persistent there that the government will fix a maximum price for hogs of $10 to $12 per hundred weight and that as a result the food enrollment campaign is seriously handicapped. Miss Mary E. Culbertson of Richmond, secretary of the Wayne County Council of Defense, telegraphed, Dr. Barnard said, that "Rumors are traveling faster than the food card agents and that it is difficult indeed to persuade people that they are not signing something over to the government when they sign the food enrollment cards."

The State Council will make thorough investigation of the facts upon which these false reports are based and in turn report the names of the guilty to the agents of the department of justice, who have been assigned to stamping out sedition of this character.

Dr. Barnard reported an appeal to Indiana farmers to produce more sugar beets to relieve the sugar famine had been met with the discouraging statement that with the price of corn advanced 250 per cent. and of sugar but 50 per cent., there was little likelihood of the sugar beet acreage being increased to make room for corn. The only Indiana sugar beet factory reported that it cannot increase its output, which is 13,000,000 pounds of sugar per year.

At the suggestion of G. I. Christie, chairman of the committee on food production and conservation, the State Council referred to the national administration at Washington the resolutions adopted by hog growers of the State, in conference at Purdue, that the government establish a ratio between the price of hogs and of corn, and that prompt action is necessary if Indiana is to increase its hog production 20 per cent. next year.

The matter of endorsing the organization of a Girls' Working Reserve from high school students who agree to devote two hours per week to a patriotic activity, as done under the direction of Mrs. Southgate in the Michigan City, Ind., high school, was referred to a committee, who will investigate and report.

At the request of Charles Fox, chairman of the labor committee, the Council also will investigate the action of members of the Gibson County Council of Defense, who were reported to have interested themselves in the matter of the removal of the Sexton Garment Company from Princeton, Ind., following the proposed formation of a union by its employees. The Garment Company has government contracts which it is said to have transferred to Fairfield, Ill., leaving the Princeton plant and eighty-five girls idle.

It was reported by Mr. Kurrie that the federal government had issued an order, effective November 1, consistent with the resolution adopted by the Indiana State Council of Defense, September 17, that no open top cars be used for the shipment of automobiles, merchandise, stone or other building material until the coal car shortage has been relieved.

The report of Charles W. Fairbanks of the committee to which was referred the matter of taking action relative to the showing of "atrocity pictures" in moving picture theaters, was that there is no occasion for action by the Council. The report was approved.

At the suggestion of Isaac D. Straus, to whom was referred the question of endorsing the Junior Training Camp, the Council will await a statement of the attitude of the United States Department of Labor, with whose activities in connection with the United States Boys' Working Reserve the junior training camps might conflict.

Enemy Propaganda.

The unscrupulous propaganda for enemy votes naturally eschews all allegiance to truth or conscience: It is designed to appeal to the unthinking and it is formulated to convince those who are prone to subscribe to anything that appears in large print.

One of the favorite enemy doctrines is that the United States will be open to invasion, if not destruction, if we send our troops to France. It seems to have a kind of superficial verity, and it has aroused considerable popular apprehension for that reason.

It is hardly necessary to refute this particular bit of misinformation. A moment's thought will persuade any one that the United States is developing the greatest military machine the country ever had. No matter how many units we send abroad, we shall still have more soldiers in training than our ideas of national defense ever conceived as necessary.

This kind of thing is just a sample of the methods and results of kaiseristic propaganda in the United States. We shall have to be on our guard against all varieties of distortion of fact. We must not allow ourselves to be deluded by palpable falsehoods.—Chicago Tribune.

America is requested to save fats to make the German ranks thin. That will do it and you can help. Use a third of an ounce less every day. Every square meal you save for the boys in the trenches and their folks back home brings Kaiserism that much nearer moral starvation.

Housewives Exempt From Hoarding Law

Food Administrator Calls Attention to Provisions of License Law Effective November 1

Special pains have been taken by Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Indiana food administrator, and by the Indiana State Council of Defense, to make it clear that the federal food administration specifically excludes from the list of food hoarders who may be made to feel the penalty of the law which becomes effective today, the housewife who has preserved perishables from her own garden or orchard, or which she has purchased and expects to use in substitution for staples during the approaching winter. Dr. Barnard's warning against the hoarding of staples is further emphasized, however, in his statement exempting the patriotic housewife from the provisions of the bill. This statement serves to answer many questions that have come to the State Council of Defense and should serve as a guide to hundreds of Indiana housewives who have been curious and fearing imposition by unauthorized individuals and statements.

"The government encourages and never criticizes the housewife who has conserved her own supply of perishables. The rule against hoarding applies peculiarly to such staples as sugar and flour.

"If the housewife has been accustomed to purchasing sugar in five-pound lots and buys by the hundred weight, or if she has been accustomed to buying flour by the twenty-four-and-a-half-pound sack and takes to buying by the barrel, then certainly she may be justly charged with hoarding, but not otherwise."

Directing attention to the penal clause of the new bill prohibiting hoarding, Dr. Barnard says:

"This law does not apply only to dealers in food-stuffs. It says any person, and it is just as much a violation of the law for a housewife to buy more sugar than she needs as it is for a wholesaler to buy canned goods or sugar for the purpose of holding them for higher prices.

"Any information as to the practice of hoarding on the part of individuals or dealers should be reported to me at once. An investigation will be started promptly by the department of justice on any complaints made by retailers against wholesalers or on information supplied by individuals against individuals or dealers."

The section fixing the penalty for violation of the hoarding provision of the food control bill follows:

"That any person who wilfully hoards any necessities shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned for not more than ten years or both. Necessaries shall be deemed to be hoarded within the meaning of this act when either held, contracted for or arranged for by any person in a quantity in excess of his reasonable requirements for use or consumption by himself or his dependents for a reasonable time."

Languages.

Poilu had taught Sammy a few simple French sentences.

"Now," said Sammy, "I will reciprocate by teaching Poilu a few simple United States sentences."

So he gave Poilu this one to ponder: "Blackie, my side kick, is white clear through, but he's a raw, half-baked piece of cheese."—Ex.

Patriotism in Indiana

Benton County.—In a final successful drive on behalf of the Liberty loan, Congressman Will R. Wood and the Rev. U. G. Leazenby of Fowler made a speaking tour of Benton county. At a meeting at Fowler Judge Charles J. Orblison of Indianapolis was a speaker and medals were presented to the following Boy Scouts who had made records in selling Liberty bonds: Dan Hinckley, Harold Martin, Lawrence Morehouse and Lloyd McNeely. Successful patriotic meetings were held not only at Fowler, but at Boswell, Earl Park, Big Pine school house and at the New Atkinson farm. Benton county "went over the top."

Special services were held Sunday by the Fowler Methodist Church in honor of boys who have gone to the colors from among the families of the congregation. The service was a public expression of the community's interest in the welfare of the soldiers. Prof. C. W. Steele spoke on "The Community and Our Boys." The service developed into a patriotic demonstration.

Boone County.—Lebanon Red Men, at a pie supper, auctioned a pumpkin pie for $30.75. The amount was increased to $40 and $20 was contributed to the men of Company H, at Hattiesburg, while $20 went to the mess fund of the Boone county men in the National Army now training at Camp Taylor, Louisville.

Roy Comely of Lebanon has enlisted in the first "gas and flame" regiment formed in the United States and has gone to Washington to report for duty. The "gas and flame" regiment includes chemists, chemical workers, powder men, experienced mechanical engineers and the like. Mr. Comely has been employed in chemical research work.

Charles Slusser of Lebanon is captain of the new Boone county company of Home Guards. Forrest Worrell is first lieutenant and Thomas McCoy of Whites-town is second lieutenant. The first sergeant is Jesse Blubaugh of Mechanicsburg. The organization will soon begin regular drills at the Lebanon armory.

Blackford County.—W. C. Niece, chairman of the Blackford County Council of Defense, and Mrs. Charles Ritter, secretary, have arranged for a supply of yarn to be used only in war work and to be provided at a price $1 a pound under the price charged by Hartford City merchants for the same material, or $2.00 per pound.

Mrs. Charles Ritter of Hartford City, head of the Hoover food conservation campaign in Blackford county, is working out a speaking campaign, including Millgrove, Roil and Montpelier, being assisted by Miss Esther Lupton and Miss Pauline McGeath.

Cass County.—Under the direction of Mr. Charles Miller, the Cass county representative of the Indiana Food Commission, all the hotels and restaurants in Logansport have become members of the United States Food Administration and are co-operating with the food conservation authorities in war work.

Logansport young men are being asked to join a new battery to become a unit in the new Indiana artillery regiment. Lieutenant Middleton of Culver, working with Mayor Guthrie and Benjamin Porter of Logansport, is interested in seeing Logansport add an artillery outfit to her infantry organization which now is in camp in the far South.

Children of Washington school, Logansport, having on hand a fund raised to buy school equipment, voted to put the money into Liberty bonds and to wait for the equipment.

Clay County.—Under able leadership the Red Cross forces of this county are actively at work and are reorganizing with the expectation of refurbishing their activities in the coming year. The Clay County Red Cross has just elected new officers in accord with instructions from the national headquarters, elections everywhere being set for the same day. John G. Bryson of Brazil acted as head of the nominations committee.

Ninety per cent. of the workers at the plant of the Clay Products Company, Brazil, bought Liberty loan bonds. A committee of workmen served notice on the management that they would refuse to work with one man who had refused to buy a bond on the ground that he "did not want one."

One of the first Sunday-schools in Indiana to buy Liberty bonds was the First Presbyterian Sunday-school of Brazil, which put $500 in Uncle Sam's hands for war work. The purchase represents almost $1 per capita of members in the school. Other Sunday-schools have been challenged to surpass this record.

Two hundred Clay county merchants, from all parts of the county, pledged themselves to support the Hoover food administration in the war-time conservation of food supplies. This patriotic action was taken at a rousing meeting called by Kruzan & Co. at Brazil. Harold Acheson acted as chairman. Rev. E. Garfield Johnson made an effective speech on the demands of the war period and on the practical work to be done back of the army and navy in winning the war. Hugh Stevenson spoke for the Liberty loan. More than twenty-five merchants agreed to make special window displays for educational effect during Food Conservation week.

Though but one man turned out for a Liberty loan meeting at Hurricane school house, Posey township, the one patriot bought Liberty bonds to the amount of $100 and paid cash. A Brazil newspaper described the meeting as "the smallest yet held in Clay county."

To stimulate production of farm products, an agricultural exhibit was held at Brazil as a novel feature of the celebration of All Hallowe'en. Many Clay county farmers and gardeners entered sample products for prizes. The affair was directed by County Agent Crowe.

Decatur County.—Twenty-five hogs, turned into a tract of one and nine-tenths acres of corn and soy beans, in twenty-two days gained 955 pounds. The experiment was worked out at the farm of John W. Crise at Forest Hill. Mr. Crise estimates the crops can be made worth $150 an acre.

The Tri Kappas at Greensburg are collecting old trinkets of gold or silver, the precious metals to be refined and turned into a fund for training airmen and equipping army hospitals. Gall Boyd, Bonnie Applegate and Mabel Welsh are leading in this work.

Mrs. W. G. Fraley, wife of the county clerk of Decatur county, has received a letter of thanks from First Lieutenant Earl E. Moore of the First Indiana Artillery, now on the way to the west front with the famous Rainbow Division, acknowledging the receipt of socks knitted by Mrs. Fraley, and in which Mrs. Fraley put her heart at the time the socks were delivered to the Red Cross. Clerk Fraley at the same time received an Indianapolis publication containing a picture of Lieutenant Moore, and Deputy Fred Smith, who is an old friend of the artillery officer, was able to identify the recipient of the socks supplied by Mrs. Fraley. It was one of the war's pleasant and instructive coincidences.

Delaware County.—The war-time food problem figures largely in Muncie at this time. The matter of a city market is being worked out on a permanent basis, and it is expected that the municipality will enlarge its activities in co-operation with the producers of the county to insure larger production and adequate distribution of products at fair prices. The public is taking a lively interest in a general discussion of the city market and its functions.

Scoutmaster Matthews of the Boy Scouts of Muncie gave several hours to a careful drilling of Boy Scouts in salesmanship before sending the Scouts out to sell Liberty bonds. One argument used by a Boy Scout was as follows: "President Wilson has sent me to you for the purpose of requesting that you purchase a Liberty bond so America, by oversubscribing the second issue of the bonds, will show the German Kaiser and his allies that we mean business." This line of argument, earnestly persisted in, made the Boy Scouts a big factor in the remarkable Liberty loan record made by Delaware county.

Dubois County.—County Superintendent Robert E. Eckert asked his schools to observe Food Conservation week. The teachers throughout the county passed the cards. Special interest was taken at Dubois and Birdseye, and these communities sent in a large number of signed cards. Superintendents Fogleman and Huntwork of the Cuzco and Birdseye schools also reported sales of Liberty bonds during the week. Superintendent Hutchison of the Huntington schools has scheduled a lecture course, the proceeds of which are to go to the Red Cross. A couple of weeks ago Miss Wilson, superintendent of the Jasper schools, had an appropriate patriotic program in honor of the dedication of the new dagstaff at the school building. Superintendent Hemmer of Holland is a member of the Food Conservation Committee and is a tireless worker. Superintendent Helen Rose of Ireland is on one of the Red Cross committees. The schools are for the flag.

Elkhart County.—The Elkhart County Bar Association has offered its services to the Elkhart County Council of Defense and has named a committee of lawyers to help in war work. On the committee are Anthony Deahl, chairman; Lon W. Vail, Lloyd L. Burris, Judge J. L. Harman, Robert E. Proctor, William B. Hile and E. B. Zigler. Special efforts are to be made to cover the county with a speaking campaign. Mayor Smith and E. B. Zigler of Elkhart and Mayor Spohn and G. E. Metzger of Goshen are in charge of the speaking campaign, and addresses are to be delivered in schools, churches and other public places throughout the county on behalf of America and the war against Kaiserism.

The Goshen News-Times reports that ten Amish families near Nappanee, being refused exemption from war service, declared their intention to refuse to provide school books and schooling for their children. County Superintendent A. E. Weaver wrote to the defiant families to notify them that prosecutions would follow promptly on their failure to comply with the law in a given time.

Floyd County.—Speaking under the auspices of the National Council of Defense, Congressman W. E. Cox addressed a big patriotic meeting at New Albany on "The Issues of the War." Mr. Cox's speech aroused great enthusiasm and gave new impetus to war work organization in Floyd and surrounding counties.

The New Albany Mothers' Club has received a letter of hearty thanks from men of Troop D, now at Hattiesburg, Miss., attesting the soldiers' appreciation for useful gifts sent to camp by members of the club. The New Albany outfit also has been kindly remembered by New Albany citizens, who sent a supply of smoking tobacco to the training camp, and a letter from the soldiers expresses thanks to these citizens.

Floyd county is working on a $304 fund to provide comforts for National Army men from the county who are at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky.

Walter B. Creed has been made president of the New Albany Red Cross Society. Mrs. Charles W. McCord is vice-president, Mrs. Charles Hartley secretary and Dr. R. W. Harris is treasurer.

Fulton County.—J. F. Dysert, a Rochester merchant, demonstrated his practical patriotism by pledging himself to invest $10 in Liberty loan bonds for each dollar taken in by his store in three days of a local, intensive Liberty loan campaign.

Hamilton County.—Westfield has held a patriotic meeting to encourage enlistments in the new Second Indiana Artillery now being formed. Walter J. Tingle of Indianapolis accompanied Guard officers to Hamilton county to help push the recruiting work.

Hendricks County.—Eighteen Conesteville women already have organized a sewing circle which meets weekly to work for Hendricks county soldiers now in the service of the flag. The circle is growing every week and a large volume of work is being turned out.

Women of Hendricks county who have offered their services to the government for the making of army shirts have been notified through Mrs. Mary J. Christie of the Hendricks County Council of Defense, that when sufficient shirting material is available for use a sewing station for the making of army shirts probably will be established at Danville.

Henry County.—Representatives of the federal government and of the Indiana State Council of Defense have been here recently to look into reports of anti-American activities secretly carried out in Newcastle. Posters put out by recruiting officers have been destroyed at night. It is promised that the next offender in this connection will be caught and adequately punished under the law of treason.

Howard County.—Six Kokomo women are making four-minute speeches in the movie theaters of that city, urging citizens to loyal service in the war. Especial emphasis recently has been given in these speeches to the vital importance of the Liberty loan. The women speakers are: Mrs. Laura Bennett Stokes, Miss Marie Ingels, Mrs. O. M. Anderson, Mrs. Frank Rosseter, Miss Martha Kummer and Mrs. A. T. Snoko.

The O. E. S. Auxiliary and the Presbyterian Missionary Society have done away with the serving of refreshments at their meetings, the action being in line with the food conservation campaign during the period of the war.

With the appointment of William H. Turner as coal administrator and the earnest activity of the coal committee, composed of O. H. Buck, James Davis, O. C. Smith and Secretary Will H. Arnett, the prospects for a sufficient supply of coal are becoming brighter. Already the committee has held several meetings and is making a thorough survey of the coal situation in Howard county preparatory to action.

Lloyd McClure, chairman of the Howard County Council of Defense, has made an appeal to the farmers who have any quantities of food to sell to report to him so that the defense council may act as a clearing house for the producer and consumer. Thus far several farmers have taken advantage of this arrangement.

Huntington County.—John Myers, a farmer of the northern part of the county, has offered to supply Huntington residents with beef in quarters at 16 cents a pound; pork shoulders and sides at 22 cents, and hams at 25 cents, and the County Council of Defense, through its chairman, Peter Martin, is taking orders to be filled by Myers. Pork chops have been selling for 25 cents a pound retail.

Johnson County.—Every Johnson county soldier has been presented by the Johnson County Council of Defense with a souvenir bronze lapel button bearing a shield and carrying the legend, "U. S. National Army 1917—Johnson County."

Lagrange County.—The County Council of Lagrange county has set aside $500 to be used by the County Council of Defense for war work in the county.

Mrs. Alice M. Ballou has succeeded Mrs. Anna Patten as the woman member of the Lagrange County Council of Defense. Mrs. Patten resigned.

Lake County.—One hundred Lake county men in charge of the second drive for the Y. M. C. A. war fund will get together the night of November 7 at the Hammond Country Club to plan the work. The Calumet district committee is headed by George Hannauer as chairman and the district includes Whiting, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor, Gibson and Hammond. The district is to raise $35,000 for the Y. M. C. A. war fund.

Exemption boards in this county have been highly complimented on the fairness and efficiency with which they have done their work. Only two men passed by the local boards have been rejected on re-examination at Camp Taylor.

Seven Crown Point Boy Scouts have been awarded medals by the United States government for good work done on behalf of the Liberty loan, first issue. Each of the boys sold more than ten bonds. The same boys, with many additional active Scouts, have done splendid work in helping dispose of the second set of Liberty bonds.

The wife of Mayor R. O. Johnson of Gary is head of a committee of women which has done good work in that city on behalf of the Liberty loan.

Madison County.—Women of Madison county who knitted socks for Madison county men in the National Army, now at Camp Taylor, Kentucky, put post cards in the socks and asked that the recipients acknowledge receipt of the supplies. Mrs. Edna Lockwood was the first to receive a reply, her card coming from Victor Perry of Company D, 334th Infantry. Mrs. A. T. Dye, Miss Edna McCarr and others have since received acknowledgment cards showing that the socks were properly distributed by Sergeant Sidney James, in whose charge the socks were placed by Mrs. J. W. Sansberry of the Madison County Council of Defense.

Anderson women organized to sell $40,000 worth of Liberty bonds. Following their "drive," the women reported, at a big, "meatless" dinner, that they had disposed of $218,000 worth of bonds, and that their goal was set far above that remarkable figure.

Marion County.—With a woman assigned to get signers on her own block, Indianapolis women are working for 75,000 food card signers within the capital city.

J. E. Rogers, a federal worker on behalf of the movement to provide recreation and amusement for soldiers in training camps, recently issued a statement in which he said that the city of Indianapolis had more than done its part in providing high-class entertainment for the men at Fort Benjamin Harrison. He also said the Indiana State Council of Defense had manifested greater efficiency than any other he had visited.

Marshall County.—The county farm in Marshall county is being made very largely a self-sustaining institution. As a part of the war work at the county farm, more than five hundred bushels of potatoes have just been stored, along with more than fifty bushels of winter apples. Hundreds of gallons of canned products are on hand, and fifty-two gallons of apple butter is but one item in the list. The year will show more than $5,000 worth of farm products harvested and sold from the county farm.

Montgomery County.—The Community Association, under the leadership of a committee composed of Frank R. Jones, Robert Tinsley, P. L. Hans and F. A. Turner, on Wednesday and Thursday last week made two "Get Acquainted trips" through Montgomery and portions of adjoining counties, visiting from twelve to fourteen towns each day. The trips were made by automobile and the parties numbered about fifty, headed by the Wabash College band.

The object of these trips was to get better acquainted with the people of the surrounding towns and occasion was taken to boost the Liberty Loan. Each automobile carried either a mounted Liberty Loan or a mounted Food Conservation poster. On account of the drive for the Liberty Loan being on the following speakers: John C. Snyder, supreme scribe of the Tribe of Ben-Hur, and president of the Community Association; Prof. L. N. Hines, superintendent of the Crawfordsville public schools; Judge Jere West, circuit judge, and C. W. Coons, secretary of the Community Association, placed special emphasis on subscribing for Liberty bonds. In a number of the towns visited the school children were dismissed to hear the speakers, and they particularly were asked to see that their parents bought Liberty bonds. Other campaigns mentioned by the speakers were the coming campaign for the Y. M. C. A. army fund and also the coming Red Cross fund campaign. Reports from the towns visited stated that very effective work was done in securing support for the second Liberty Loan.

The third trip which was staged this week carried two soldier members of the proposed battery unit which is to be organized in Montgomery and adjoining counties. These men spoke briefly on the need of voluntary enlistments in this new unit. Each man who went on these trips returned enthusiastic as to their value, not only for their value in getting acquainted, but also their worth in the support of the various issues of a patriotic nature which are present or which are to come before the people of this section of Indiana.

Porter County.—Chesterton citizens, led by E. L. Morgan of the Porter County Council of Defense, have organized a Home Guard company. Thirty-five men signed the roster of the Guards at the first meeting. A patriotic meeting has been held to arouse interest in the Home Guard and to get recruits to fill the organization to regulation strength for muster into the State's service as militia.

Lewis E. Myers has been re-elected chairman of the Valparaiso chapter of the Red Cross. The organization has branches at Chesterton and Hebron and has 2,467 members. The organization is taking up the work of "Home Service," or civilian relief, and has sent Mrs. Ina Cunningham to Indianapolis for a six weeks' course of training in the work.

Mrs. Maude M. Johnston has resigned as the woman member of the Porter County Council of Defense and her place has been filled by the appointment of Mrs. C. M. Boucher.

Randolph County.—The Women's Liberty Loan Committee, aided by the Tri Kappa Sorority, held a successful patriotic meeting in a Winchester church, the chief address being by Judge F. S. Caldwell. The women in charge as local chairmen of the Liberty bond sales for the county were: Mrs. Reba Hoover, Lynn; Mrs. Lillian Mitchell, Mrs. Alda McFadden, Ridgeville; Mrs. Granville Reynard, Union City; Mrs. Walter Zeigler, Farm-land, and Mrs. G. C. Markie, Randolph county chairman.

Ripley County.—The young people of Osgood gave a benefit entertainment for the Red Cross, gaining $49.15 for the cause. Thaddeus Brenton directed the affair and a theater was given free of rent by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Damm.

The Ripley County Council of Defense has been working on a project for an excursion by special train out of Lawrenceburg to Camp Taylor, Louisville, to carry friends of southeastern Indiana soldiers for a visit to the men in camp. Dearborn, Ripley and Jennings counties are interested.

It is planned to provide a sweater for each Ripley county man in the military service.

Citizens have been asked to report to the County Defense Council all timber either standing or down that is for sale or to be had for use as fuel. This work is being pushed under the direction of the State Council of Defense.

Rush County.—For the Rush County Council of Defense, A. L. Gary, chairman, is conducting a rush campaign to induce corn growers to cut fodder and store the product instead of leaving the stalks stand in the fields. In a recent statement Mr. Gary says one-third of the food value of corn is in the stalk, and that where the stalk is left standing a large part of this value is lost. Rush county farmers, in conference, have discussed various crop-conservation problems, especially the matter of increasing the number of beef cattle to be fed the coming year.

St. Joseph County.—One "wheatless day" each week is being observed at the lunch room of the South Bend high school, corn products being substituted. Candy has been cut from the stock kept for sale at the lunch room as part of the movement to save sugar.

The following have been elected to serve as the executive committee of the St. Joseph County Chapter of the Red Cross: Rev. C. A. Lippincott, Mrs. D. L. Guilfoyle, Victor F. Jones, A. L. Hubbard, Rev. John Cavanaugh, J. D. Oliver, C. C. Hanch, Clem Smogor, F. E. Hering, T. H. Brandon, Mrs. V. H. Jones, Miss Eva Hotzenpiller, Miles W. O'Brien, E. T. Bond, A. R. Erskine, William Hupp, Mrs. L. Levan, Samuel Parker, Samuel Adler, F. W. Keller, and for the branch chapters—Elmer Stull, North Liberty, Ind.; H. M. Hall, New Carlisle; Mrs. Charles M. Curtis, Osceola; Mrs. Cora Kolier, Walkerton.

Mrs. Laura A. Romine of South Bend, mother of Otis Romine, now at the officers' training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, baked thirty apple pies for the members of the Fourteenth Infantry company, to which her son belonged. The men gave an apple pie blowout and formally voted their appreciation of one war mother's thoughtful contribution.

Seven South Bend soldiers at Camp Taylor, who were reported by the South Bend News-Times to be without camp comfort kits, were promptly supplied by five patriotic South Bend women. The women who acted immediately on the newspaper's hint were: Mrs. B. W. Kocher, 320 Berwick street, White Haven, Pa., two kits; Mrs. C. J. Ash, two kits; Mrs. Howard Sitter, Mrs. Lafayette Le Van and Mrs. Albert A. Fredericks, all of South Bend.

The South Bend Realty Board bought a $100 Liberty bond and set about the innovation of a plan under which realty dealers of that city agree to take Liberty bonds in payment for property.

Sullivan County.—The greatest patriotic meeting held in Sullivan county since the war began, with the exception of the first demonstration in honor of the men of the National Army, was held at Sullivan, October 21. More than 1,000 patriotic citizens marched in a parade preceding the meeting and almost 3,000 heard the speeches. Lee Ellis and Mrs. O. B. Harris were in charge of the parade. The meeting was directed by Ransom W. Akin, chairman of the Liberty bond organization. Will H. Hays, chairman of the State Council of Defense, was the speaker of the occasion.

Will A. Thompson of Sullivan has been appointed chairman of the Merchants' Conservation Committee of that city and is hard at work organizing for war service. George C. Hale of Sullivan, a chemist, teacher of chemistry at Indiana University, has gone to the colors, having volunteered for duty as a chemist. He has reported for duty at the United States Arsenal, Dover, N. J.

Tippecanoe County.—Mrs. Stanley Coulter, wife of the Dean of Purdue University, is at the head of the renewed movement for the advancement of the Hoover food conservation organization among Tippecanoe county women, working under Mrs. Charles B. Stuart of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense. With Mrs. Coulter are Mrs. Charles B. Kern, Mrs. C. W. Bone, Mrs. Virginia Stein, Miss Emily Meligs, Mrs. A. M. Kenyon, Dean Carolyn Shoemaker, Rev. U. G. Leazenby, J. M. Horner, C. V. Peterson, R. F. Hight, F. A. Burtisfield and J. O. Beck.

A permanent city market for Lafayette is one of the problems to be worked out by the augmented Tippecanoe County Council of Defense under J. O. Beck, chairman. Judge Caldwell has named the following additional members of the county defense organization: Stanley Coulter, Henry Rosenthal, A. E. Werkhoff, James Rae, W. V. Stuart, A. L. Kumlir, Thomas Bauer, Otis Crane, C. V. Peterson, Edward Watson, Walter Ball, W. B. Foreman, George P. Haywood, George Baxter and Thomas Duncan.

Lafayette Lodge No. 51, Knights of Pythias, bought a $1,000 Liberty bond.

Vigo County.—Earl Houck, acting on the request of the State Council of Defense, has enlisted the following Vigo county speakers to assist at their own expense in the speaking and educational campaign being conducted in Indiana as a part of the war work: Congressman Everett Sanders, Judge A. L. Miller, Thomas O'Mara, Thomas Gallagher and Felix Blankenbaker.

Wabash County.—Women of Wabash recently presented a service flag to Wabash lodge of Elks, No. 72, in appreciation of the lodge's patriotic co-operation in war service work done by the women. The flag carries a star for each Wabash Elk now in the service, the men thus honored being the following: J. K. Yarnelle, Kenneth Vigus, Dr. L. E. Jewett, Dr. F. M. Whistler, Dr. W. A. Domer, W. S. Pressler, H. J. Rodibaugh, V. G.

Sheller, Clarence Dye, Laurence Stewart, Cedric Stewart, J. Warren Adams, Albert Smith and Harry Pfell.

The flag is the work of Mrs. Ed. Vigus and was presented by the following: Mrs. Charles Blount, Mrs. Arthur Carpenter, Mrs. William Braden, Mrs. John Kalsar, Miss Lettie Swartz, Mrs. Otto Ebbinghouse, Mrs. James Wilson, Mrs. Eva Pettit, Mrs. T. F. Vaughn, Mrs. Morton Stultz, Mrs. H. H. McNamee, Mrs. Joseph Teague, Mrs. Howard Jones, Mrs. Fred Walter, Mrs. T. W. McNamee, Mrs. Homer Jones, Mrs. T. L. Stitt, Mrs. Edward Bridges, Mrs. Louie Hyman, Mrs. Ed. Vigus and Mrs. John A. Bruner.

The women will add a star to the flag for each additional Elk who goes to the colors.

Washington County.—The Washington county defense organization has been completed and is actively at work carrying forward the tasks assigned to it by the Indiana State Council of Defense. The following committees have been appointed:

Advisory Committee—Lewis Dennis, O. K. Hobbs, Theodore Wilson. Financial Committee—Arthur McClintock, V. T. Reid, E. F. Boggs. Publicity Committee—Mrs. H. C. Hobbs, John G. Martin, H. E. Smith. Legal—Harvey Morris. Sanitation and Medicine—Dr. Irvin E. Huckleberry, Dr. J. E. Rhett, Arthur Robertson. Food Supply and Conservation—C. N. Lindley. Survey and Organization of Man Power—Professor Orin Hopper. Labor—H. M. Trueblood, chairman; Samuel Mitchell, Floyd Brannaman, Wm. Bowers, Lee Vellom, George Gasoway, Willis Mull, Edward Moisinger, Manson Shanks, Edgar D. Bush, Leander Patton, Fred Allen, I. O. Grimes. Military Affairs—Heber L. Mensaugh, Protection—John Tatlock, Frank Hudson, Chas. Winslow, S. G. Thompson, John Stratton, Granville Chastain, John Weir, Clyde Schleicher, P. H. Gill, Frank Beck, Claude Stone, John Cravens, Lafayette Shock. Public Morals—W. H. Rudder. Educational Section—Professor R. E. Cavanaugh, Carson Peden, Mrs. Harvey Morris. Women's Activities—Mrs. H. C. Hobbs. Socks for Soldiers—Mrs. Josephat Morris, Miss Nellie Lusk, Mrs. David McBride, Mrs. Ira Houston, Mrs. Alpha Sullivan, Mrs. Edward Connor, Mrs. Joseph Elrod, Mrs. Greeley Thompson, Mrs. Chas. Rutherford, Mrs. James W. Gill, Mrs. Edward Motsinger, Mrs. Edgar D. Bush, Miss Grace Wright, Mrs. Anna C. Coombs, Mrs. Dora Denny. Woman's Hoover Card and League for Service—Mrs. Frank Hudson, Mrs. Winnie Payne, Miss Elizabeth Lusk, Miss Clella Hiles, Mrs. F. P. Cauble, Mrs. Ora Chastain, Mrs. E. E. Wiggs, Mrs. O. L. Cauble, Mrs. Edgar D. Bush, Mrs. Fred Knox, Mrs. Anna C. Coombs, Miss Lillian Denny, Mrs. John Weir. "Four-Minute Men"—James L. Tucker, chairman; Emmet Mitchell, W. W. Hotel. Organization of the War Mothers—Mrs. Jerry Jamison, chairman.

White County.—A county-wide meeting was held in a theater at Monticello to arouse interest in the campaign for the conservation of food during the war. In charge of the meeting was a committee as follows: B. Goodman, chairman; W. H. Hamelie, William Anheier, H. E. Elder and Ed. N. Thacker. The speakers announced were: M. M. Rodgers, J. Francis Ashley, F. L. Hovis, L. D. Carey and Emory B. Sellers. Miss Louise Miller, director of music in the Monticello schools, directed the patriotic music at the big demonstration.

In Black Watch Regiment 14 Years

Following the green, black and blue colors of the Black Watch Tartan uniform worn by Captain A. Leys Brown into the British Canadian Recruiting Station in the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, Daniel MacKenzie, a veteran of the famous Black Watch Regiment, which was organized in 1667, and has participated in every Britain war since that day, re-enlisted under the emblem of the British Lion this week. Mr. MacKenzie is a veteran of three former campaigns—the Egyptian, Zulu and Boer war.

Captain Brown reports that thirty enlistments of British subjects have been accepted at his station during the past two weeks.

He is very anxious that full publicity be given to the activities of this recruiting mission of this country. Only British subjects are eligible. Britains, Canadians, Scotchmen and Irishmen are requested to fill in the following blank and mail to his headquarters:

Captain Leys Brown, 116 West Washington St., Indianapolis:

I am a British subject and would like further information regarding enlistment in the British or Canadian forces.

Name .....

Address .....

Age .....

America will deserve to lose this war if, through unwillingness to practice small economies, it fails to save the food necessary to keep our allies in the fight until victory is won.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 12

Editorial Comment

The Indiana Bulletin is not copyrighted. It is intended solely as a purveyor of patriotic inspiration through the reported patriotic activity of County Councils of Defense and the various committees and sections of the Indiana State Council of Defense. It is published with no other end in view than the dissemination of information that will serve the cause of the State and Nation in the war with Germany. Newspaper editors, librarians, teachers, public speakers and others are invited and urged to avail themselves of any suggestions or informative data found in the columns of the Bulletin.

The publicity bureau under whose direction the Bulletin is prepared and published welcomes suggestions for adding to the efficiency of the publication and welcomes contributions along the lines suggested.

AS A FUTURE BENEFIT.

America's place in the industrial competition of nations that will follow peace will be determined in large part by the response that the American people make to the food pledge week campaign.

"When this war is over," Food Administrator Hoover declared recently, "Europe will find herself with a reduced standard of living, with a people greatly disciplined in all directions and in a position to compete in the world's markets in a way that they never have been able before. We shall also face a world with a reduced consuming power, and unless we can secure some discipline in our own people, we will be in no position to meet that condition when peace comes."

The idea that the purpose of food saving is not alone the present one of feeding our Army and the allies is further developed by the belief of the Food Administration that wars are paid for out of the savings of the people. It is pointed out that the decision is up to the American people right now, whether they are to help pay for the present conflict out of the savings of today or after the war by mortgaging the future of the people. A saving of 6 cents a day per person will amount to $2,000,000,000 a year.

THE SCHOOL TEACHERS' DUTY.

The Indiana State Council of Defense has made a special appeal to Indiana teachers for continued and enlarged patriotic activities and for sustained, intensive war work. American unity will win our war. Full co-operation by all educational agencies is vital.

The first business of the American school is Americanism. The finest product of our educational system is an informed, inspired and well-rounded patriotism. The teacher is at the heart of the system which supplies red blood for the body of intelligent public opinion. Our war task will be performed efficiently when our people work together understandingly. The teacher, more than any other agent of Americanism, is in a position to make the people understand the national peril, and the teacher, more than any other force, should be able to influence the American home to see and to do its duty in the war crisis. The press, the pulpit, the State and County Councils of Defense, the official agencies of government can help, but it is the school that sends the daily message of Americanism home to the people.

There can be no higher service than that offered by the teacher who gives each young American in his care a daily patriotic message of loyalty for the home. It is absolutely vital to our cause in the war that this patriotic instruction shall be put first in school work as in all other work. The message of Americanism must go home to the people.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 56.

October 25, 1917.

To County Councils of Defense:

Dr. H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Director for Indiana, requires a food director in every county in order to properly execute the very large duties resting upon the food administration. He suggested to the State Council of Defense that the County Councils of Defense be requested to nominate the county food directors.

By proper action taken at the meeting of the State Council yesterday, I have been authorized to ask the County Councils of Defense in each county to nominate such a man.

I cannot too strongly emphasize the importance of the position. The powers of the food administration are tremendous and the importance of the matter cannot be overstated.

In making your selection you will, of course, use the greatest care. I will be glad if you will do this at once, sending the name to the State Council office right away and we will take it up with Dr. Barnard.

Following is a memorandum of the suggestions which Dr. Barnard has made at our request as to the qualifications which the man ought to have who is recommended. These are sent for your consideration.

—Memorandum—

1. A man of mature judgment and who commands confidence of business associates and citizens.

2. A man who has training in business, preferably in handling foodstuffs as a wholesale or retail merchant or as an executive who has been in close touch with the food industry. The nominees should be able to give the time required for the work so that the government business will always take preference over personal affairs. He should be financially able to do what will be required of him without compensation save for actual expenses incurred. He should live in the center of the county, or that part of the county from which he can most readily get in touch with other towns and cities. It must be possible to reach him by long distance 'phone whenever necessary.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 57.

October 27, 1917.

To County Councils of Defense:

Your attention is directed to our Bulletin No. 56 of October 25, requesting you to nominate a county food director.

Several counties have taken action pursuant to this Bulletin by appointing a food director and advising us that their appointees are ready for instructions as to their duties.

We beg to emphasize the fact that the appointment of the county food director must come directly from Washington and these appointments will not be made until a thorough investigation is made of the qualifications of the men nominated.

Therefore, will you please merely select a man whom you think would qualify, discover (in an indirect manner) whether or not he will be willing to serve, and then recommend him to us.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

INFORMATION BULLETIN NO. 58.

October 27, 1917.

To County Councils of Defense:

For your information we quote the following telegram received today by Dr. Barnard, State Food Director, from Herbert Hoover, National Food Director:

"Washington, D. C.

"Barnard, Food Administrator, Indianapolis, Ind.: "Am informed widespread conspiracy exists to destroy animals in stockyards. In view tremendous loss of food by recent fire at Kansas City stockyards, urge you to get in touch with all stockyard companies in your State and emphasize importance their largely augmenting watch service and other fire protection. Also believe governors should have principal yards patrolled by home guards. Above also applies to grain elevators. Serious loss of wheat and barley in recent Brooklyn fires must not recur.

"HERBERT HOOVER."

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

PROFITEERS, BEWARE!

Food price manipulators and profiteers will have the trained men and resources of the secret service to cope with, it is announced. Herbert C. Hoover, federal food administrator, has asked President Wilson for the services of the corps, and it has been granted.

Mr. Hoover'll Get You.

(Apologies to James Whitcomb Riley.)

Mr. Hoover's creed of saving's come to our house to stay;
It makes us scrape our plates off clean and watch the crumbs that stray;
We're learning to eat every bite of beets and peas and beans
And using lots of veg'tables like cabbages and greens.
For we want to aid the allies and help our cause along,
And assist the little nations and do it good and strong.
So you better watch your eatin' and mind what you're about
Or Mr. Hoover'll get you
Ef you Don't Watch Out!

You mustn't go to market and order lamb or veal,
You help the Kaiser if you do and from the allies steal;
For lamb grows into mutton and veal would soon be beef,
If you're only using "grown up" meat you'll give the French relief.
Then most of us eat too much meat for our own good. I guess
'Twould help us and the allies, too, to get along with less.
So watch what you're a' buyin' and cut the young meat out
Or Mr. Hoover'll get you
Ef you Don't Watch Out!

All summer fruits and veg'tables he's urg'in' us to can,
And even on the slightest waste he's surely put a ban.
Don't turn your face away and sniff when mother serves you hash,
'Twill not only aid the Belgians, but increase your stock of cash,
And when you use the scraps and bones for making stews and soups,
It's really helping quite a lot to feed our valiant troops.
Save the allies from starvation and yourself from having gout
Or Mr. Hoover'll get you
Ef you Don't Watch Out!

Gary Boys Awarded Reserve Decoration

Bronze Badges Now Proudly Worn by Large Number of Steel City Patriotic Youngsters

Many Gary boys now wear medals won by doing war work as members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. The medals were awarded recently, following reports of farm and shop work performed by the young patriots.

Much interest followed the public award of these medals made in the Gary Y. M. C. A., October 26, when Horace Ellis, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, in a patriotic address praised the service of the members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. George M. Pinnock arranged the meeting, which was presided over by Captain H. S. Norton, chairman of the Council of Defense of Lake county. R. M. Ladd, federal director for the Reserve in Chicago, presented the medals to the boys.

A central figure at the meeting was Henry J. Cecil, Jr., of Gary, the first Indiana boy to earn a Boys' Working Reserve medal. Mr. Cecil worked on a farm and later in a steel mill.

Gary now is credited with having the largest number of boys in any city in the State who have been awarded the federal bronze badge, the last report showing eighty-eight boys thus honored. Several members of the Gary organization have qualified through service for medals, but are too young to receive the decoration. Indiana still leads in the number of boys enrolled in the Boys' Working Reserve.

The following are the Gary boys who received medals: Rodman Elton, R. Broad, Edward J. Davis, Raymond Mathews, Joseph Butterfield, P. A. Conde, Russell Whitaker, Sam Sostock, Curtis Coons, David E. Lilienthal, Alfred Jackson, Myer Gordon, Henry Griffin, Joseph Dobizski, Melvin Wootin, Andrew George, Dominic Scavillo, Mike Vahary, Frank Gramaglia, Joseph Altonare, Stanley Zilinski, Edward Butler, Harold Cogley, Alexander Sabatore, Thad. Comer, Howard Bargfeldt, Joe Evans, Glen Moffat, George Child, Russell Garrett, Harry Panos, Frank Tarchala, Tony Marsalek, Walter Prakurat, Curtis Clifford Dils, John Donko, Louis Frondorg, William Johnson, James A. Wright, Percisfor F. Harmer, Bernard Szold, James Orin Hamilton, Arnold C. Erlandson, John J. Einsele, Raymond Crowley, Dale Schlotfeldt, Matt Watson, Harry Schraeder, Weldon J. Smith, Edwin J. Pearson, Victor Reling, Howard J. Weaver, Luthrell Thompson, Joseph Sunich, Dennis J. Gordon, Robert E. Hickman, Daniel Kelly, J. L. Kelly, Phil Kelly, Harry B. Michael, Bernard Sayles, Alcy Bauer, J. D. Shipley, Jacob Francis Schoadt, Elton Freeman, Ward L. Railsback, Daniel Guild, Floyd C. Wattles, Harry Philip Brand, Oscar Strom, Herbert R. Pelke, Louis E. Pelke, Joseph Dedmond, James Gilbert Rankin, Louis Pasovac, August Holm, Adrian Larson, Gus Vaffas, George Donvis, James Taylor, Clinton Brazal.

BOYS' RESERVE RENDERS SERVICE.

That the Boys' Working Reserve of Indiana is rendering an important service in connection with food production in the State is evidenced by the reports coming in from many counties.

In Bartholomew county the boys have been harvesting beans; in Jennings county, apples; in Laporte county, potatoes.

In Clinton county the boys have been harvesting tomatoes and filling silos; in Marion county the boys have been doing truck garden work; in Noble county, topping and pulling onions; in Montgomery county, threshing grain and harvesting tomatoes.

In Fountain county the boys have been doing all kinds of farm work; in Whitley county, topping onions and harvesting tomatoes; in Washington county, selecting seed corn, and in St. Joseph county, picking grapes.

"Corn Husking Clubs" are now being organized in many high schools and boys who join such clubs, provided they maintain the required standard in scholarship, will be released on Fridays from school in order to devote two days each week to such emergency work. E. M. Services reports that each high school in Boone county now has a "Corn Husking Club."

SERVICE CAMPS ENDORSED.

At the second conference of the State Advisory Committee of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, October 31, at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, a resolution was passed endorsing farmers' service camps, similar to the one financed and conducted by the Columbia Conserve Company, in Marion county, last summer. Forty boys lived in this camp and worked the farms adjacent, and on the whole the service that they rendered was highly praised by the farmers who employed them. The resolution passed Wednesday urges other canning companies, companies which conserve food, owners of large estates and neighborhood farmers grouped together to institute and maintain similar camps during the coming agricultural season.

Isaac D. Straus, chairman of the committee, announced that the War Text Book, which has been under preparation, is now about ready for the printer. Agreeable to the patriotic offer of the Bobbs-Merrill Company of Indianapolis, this book will be printed at absolute cost and will be distributed free of charge in all the high schools of the State, the expense being borne by the State Board of Education.

The committee endorsed this book, it being the opinion of those present that the study of voluntary war measures as presented therein, and particularly the United States Boys' Working Reserve, will stimulate activity in food production and will help solve the enrollment problems of Reserve directors throughout the State. This book will consist of the following chapters:

I—Introduction: Patriotic appeal to educators by Dr. Horace Ellis and Professor R. E. Cavanaugh, Assistant Secretary of Educational Section of State Council of Defense.

II—"Food Production," by Professor G. I. Christie of Purdue.

III—"Farm Mechanics," by Professor Paul W. Covert of Manual Training High School, Indianapolis.

IV—"Food Conservation," by Dr. H. E. Barnard.

V—"Home Economics," by Miss Mary L. Mathews of Purdue.

VI—"United States Boys' Working Reserve," by William E. Hall, National Director, Washington, D. C.

VII—"Autocracy and Democracy Compared," republished through courtesy of the Philadelphia School Mobilization Committee.

A resolution was passed requesting that President George L. MacIntosh of Wabash, in co-operation with Professor G. I. Christie of Purdue and Guilford M. Wiley, principal of the high school of Greensburg, send out a questionnaire to school, college and university authorities of the State, asking them to define their attitude toward the proposed plan of releasing high school and college boys in April and May to aid Indiana farmers in their spring planting. Dr. MacIntosh called attention to the fact that unless farmers of Indiana are supplied with help of some kind to aid them in their spring planting, that they will not need these boys in harvest time.

Professor G. I. Christie and Z. M. Smith of Purdue and Professor H. S. Gruver of Indianapolis were appointed on the committee to devise practical plans that will provide an agricultural teacher for each county to aid in teaching the boys who have enrolled in the Reserve some of the rudiments of agriculture during their school year.

Professor E. U. Graff, superintendent of schools of Indianapolis, told of plans for enrolling boys in the Reserve in Indianapolis schools, and E. D. Maple, County Director for Sullivan county, gave a very interesting account of the methods used in his county in enrolling 701 boys out of a quota of 530.

A. C. Marts of Pittsburgh, Pa., told of the plan of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. for enrolling 100,000 American boys pledged to earn, save and contribute $10 each to the Y. M. C. A. war fund before April 1, 1918. Indiana's quota is 5,000 boys. This plan was endorsed by the committee.

Those attending the meeting were: Samuel

Sharp, Columbus; T. C. Cravens, Martinsville; B. O. Wells, French Lick; N. F. Fultz, Anderson; Edgar D. Maple, Sullivan; Henry B. Walker, Evansville; William A. Batey, Kokomo; A. S. Hurrell, Indianapolis; G. L. MacIntosh, Wabash College; Clarence B. Kessinger, Vincennes; William P. Hapgood, Indianapolis; G. I. Christie, Lafayette; E. U. Graff, Indianapolis; S. O. Belzer, Indianapolis; Carl Stoltz, South Bend; N. Epstein, Frankfort; W. A. Hacker, Indianapolis; Guilford M. Wiley, Greensburg; Elbert M. Murphy, North Salem; J. J. Pettyjohn, Indiana University; W. S. Bittner, Indiana University; A. C. Marts, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Red Cross Activities

The Red Cross department of civilian relief authorizes the following list of "Don'ts" for the guidance of home service workers in approaching the dependent families of soldiers:

It is as important to remember the things that ought not to be done as to keep in mind the things that should be done. A number of "don'ts" follow:

Don't overwhelm people with questions before they have had a chance to say what they want to say.

Don't suggest to them the answers that they should make. This is often done unconsciously.

Don't forget that their own hopes and plans are more important than any single fact that the home service worker wants in order to make her report or her record complete.

Don't encourage the children to talk about things that concern their elders—about the family difficulties, income, and so on.

Don't let the children come to the office with messages and requests except when there is a real emergency and no older person can possibly come.

Don't discuss the affairs of a family; don't tell the facts that come to your attention in the course of home service work to any outsider.

Don't give confidential information about the family when making inquiries.

Don't make inquiries of the present neighbors or do anything that will expose the family to gossip. Protect them as you would your own family from anything that would hurt their self-respect.

Don't venture to make permanent plans on a first visit.

Don't fail to discover whether there is immediate and urgent need of relief and to make some temporary provision for supplying it before waiting to make further inquiries.

Don't fail, however, to inquire (before paying the first visit, if possible) what other agencies, including churches, are interested.

FAMILIES RED CROSS HELPS.

The following is authorized by the Red Cross department of civilian relief:

When does a family properly come under the care of the home service section?

Home service applies to the families of men in all branches of the service—Regular Army, National Guard, and National Army; to the families of sailors, marines, and men of the Engineering and Aviation Corps; and to the families of men and women attached to hospital units as nurses, doctors, orderlies, and ambulance drivers. It also has to do with the families of the soldiers going from this country to join the allies and with families of civilians who have been wounded or killed as the direct result of war activities, as, for example, from the torpedoing of a merchantman by a submarine.

If a family belongs to any one of these groups it obviously may claim the care of the Red Cross. All that is necessary is that the fact of the enlistment of one or more of the members of the family be established.

If American women fail to do their part in this war it will be their first failure. President Wilson says the most vital part they can play is to enroll as members of the Food Administration and "cheerfully accept its direction and advice."

Sock Shop Suspends After Good Record

Scarcity of Yarn Interferes with Continued Patriotic Activity by Miss Boyd's Section.

SOCK SHOP RECORD.

Wool bought and paid for, July 1 to October 1.....	$4,000.00
Needles bought same period.....	1,239.83
Knitting machines (2).....	34.00
Printing, telephone, typewriter, etc. ....	75.00
Refunds .....	450.00
Socks sent to Rainbow Division.....	3,612 prs.
Socks given to Medical division.....	450 prs.
Socks given Lily Base Hospital No. 32 .....	70 prs.
Socks in storage to be given when needed most .....	2,600 prs.

Because of the inability of the sock shop to secure yarn, operations of this important section of the Indiana State Council of Defense have been temporarily discontinued. Should those in charge be able to refinance the shop, it may be reopened in January. Its record during the few months of its operation is one of the remarkable achievements of Indiana's war preparation.

The sock shop, under the chairmanship of Miss Mary Helen Boyd of Indianapolis, set out to knit 4,000 pairs of socks for the Indiana men who were called into service. Centers were organized over the State and it was soon apparent that the quota would be supplied before September 1, the date set for the completion of the task. However, the knitting continued with the result that at the cessation of operations there was not only a very comfortable surplus of knit socks, but the section had the satisfaction of having turned over to the Red Cross, for emergency use, 1,000 pairs of socks, imperfect in some slight detail, thus rendering them unfit for use by marching men. For these socks the Red Cross reimbursed the section at the price of the wool merely, and the money so obtained was used by the section to pay for more wool. In this way the Indiana women not only fulfilled their promise to the first Indiana regiment, but helped the Red Cross needs as well. The section now has 2,600 pairs of perfectly knit wool socks, which they are preparing to give to the next Indiana boys to go to the front.

Financed altogether by voluntary contributions, the sock shop has effected a substantial saving to the federal government, and also has guaranteed foot comfort to the thousands of Indiana soldiers now drilling in training camps and en route to the firing line in France, where the rigors of a severe winter make the strong wool garments a most acceptable part of their equipment.

The time required and the expense and difficulties attendant upon an attempt to return the socks that were not exactly up to the War Department's specifications, was the important consideration in turning the socks over to the Red Cross. This organization used them for convalescents and men not required to march or drill, for whom they were as acceptable as any others. No Indiana troops were deprived of socks, however, in order that the Red Cross society might have this allotment.

All available yarn for knitting is at this time in the possession of the Red Cross and none available for volunteer knitters, Miss Boyd says. In an effort to effect a conservation of the available supply of yarn, women knitters are asked to discontinue knitting fancy sweaters, scarfs and other personal adornments at this time, when every ounce of available yarn is seriously needed to save the fighting men from the rigors of a severe climate. Women also are asked to save their odds and ends of yarn in knitting. These bits of yarn are valuable, Miss Boyd says, and may be the means of staving off actual suffering in the army, once they have been rewoven and made into useful and comfortable garments.

Miss Boyd and her committee have benefited by generous concessions from merchants who have sold and delivered yarn and needles at actual cost to them. The Havens-Geddes Company, L. S. Ayres & Co., H. P. Wasson & Co. and the Wm. H. Block Company have been among the principal contributors to the sock shop success in this particular.

Miss Boyd's executive committee, which shares the credit for the work done, included the following: Mrs. William Coburn, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Kryter, who has done effective work in organizing and instructing knitters; Mrs. Hervey Bates, Jr., Mrs. Sol Meyer and Mrs. Edward Brennen, who received and distributed socks; Mrs. Louis Levey, Mrs. Carl Walk and Mrs. Robert W. McKisson.

Many women have been taught to knit and others interested in the work of the sock shop by Miss Esther O'Neil of the State Life building.

"This has been a wonderfully gratifying bit of work," said Will H. Hays, chairman of the Indiana State Council of Defense, in reference to the sock shop. "It was quickly and effectively organized, did its work well and unselfishly and deserves the unstinted thanks of all patriotic citizens for what it has done. The State Council certainly appreciates the things accomplished and extends its thanks to Miss Boyd and her associates."

"One of the best results accomplished by this organization," said one of its staunchest supporters, "has been to awaken a keen interest in the women of the State, enabling them to knit socks perfectly, and it is to be hoped that these women will continue to knit for our soldier boys all winter."

Merchants' Economy

The Council of National Defense has sent the following to the several State councils:

Our previous bulletins of July 9 and July 31 dealt with the broad problem of economy in retail deliveries. We write now to urge a special means of economy—the establishment of co-operative or central delivery systems.

The commercial economy board recommends the institution of such systems as a measure of war economy in the larger towns and in small and medium sized cities. The board designates as "co-operative" those systems jointly owned and operated by the retail merchants themselves and as "central" those owned and operated by an individual, firm, or corporation to serve many merchants. Either system permits the deliveries of a whole community to be made with a greatly reduced force. Ordinarily they allow a reduction of 50 per cent; and this will, in the aggregate, release many thousands of men for other useful occupations, especially if coupled with a reduction to one delivery a day over each route. Either system, if carefully organized, makes better service possible.

PROGRAM RECOMMENDED.

The following program is recommended:

1. Existing co-operative or central systems should be extended. In a majority of cases by no means all the merchants of the community have joined the movement. Personal and intensive work by the representatives of your council will be necessary to bring in all the merchants and allow these economies to achieve their full success.

2. In places where co-operative systems have previously existed and have been discontinued, whether by reason of actual failure or otherwise, your council should at once find out the causes of discontinuance, remedy them if possible, and work to re-establish the system.

3. In places where individuals or organizations are known to be interested in co-operative or central systems your council should immediately consult with them and strive to convert their interest into the actual creation of a system.

4. The momentum thus gained should enable your council to carry the movement for co-operative or central systems into other cities and towns of appropriate size.

5. Wherever possible all delivery service should be reduced to one trip per day over each route.

Christmas Boxes to Soldiers November 15

Easy Matter if Americans Will Observe a Few Simple Rules, Advises State Council.

Making certain that letters will reach American soldiers now in active service in Europe is an easy matter if letter-writers will follow a few simple instructions, advises the Indiana State Council of Defense.

There is a standard form of address for all men in the army service abroad and this is how the War Department wants all letters addressed (substituting the correct name, company and regimental or other designation in place of the one used here):

"John Smith,

"Co. K, 18th Infantry,

"American Expeditionary Forces."

No other address is allowable. Be careful to set down the name, company initial and regimental number plainly and correctly. Then attach a United States two-cent stamp for each ounce or fraction of an ounce. Foreign stamps must not be used.

In the upper left corner of the envelope place your own name and address. In other respects the mail will be handled subject to the same regulations that control mail service in the United States.

Christmas packages intended for soldiers in France should be shipped on or before November 15, should be limited to seven pounds and the postage rate is 12 cents per pound. Such packages should be plainly marked "Christmas Mail," the complete address of the person for whom intended and in the upper left-hand corner the address and name of the sender. Every package should be wrapped so as to admit of easy inspection, as no package will be dispatched without a certificate of inspection indicating that it contains no prohibited articles.

THE END OF A HOOVER DAY.

I.

I have come to the end of a meatless day,
And peacefully lying in bed,
My thoughts revert in a musing way
To the food which today I've been fed.
When I think of the cheese and the beans and fish
And oysters I've had to eat,
I've no regrets for the "good old days"
I really didn't miss the meat!

II.

I have come to the end of a wheatless day,
I have eaten no cookies or pie,
I have had no bread that was made with wheat;
It was made out of corn or rye;
And I liked it so well that when war is past
And a glorious victory won,
I'll keep on observing "wheatless" days
And I'll eat "corn pone" for FUN!

—A. V. C.

Aged Minister Does His Bit.

"At any rate you may take it as a token of my effort, at seventy-four, to do my bit in defense and propagation of Americanism," writes the Rev. John Poucher of the Orleans Methodist Episcopal church, in reference to an inspired sermon he preached to his congregation and especially to Avey N. Baker, a young member who has since joined the new national army.

"Never in all history," spoke the Rev. Poucher, "has there been a worthier object to which refined and brawny humanity may be devoted."

That pound of wheat flour YOU save every week will weigh very heavily on the Kaiser's mind.

And just as you say that you will not change your style of living a starving baby dies in France.

Hog Breeders Want Fixed Price Ratio

Resolutions Passed at Purdue Meeting Directed to Attention of Federal Administrator.

Indiana hog breeders and feeders, together with live stock and market specialists from Purdue University, United States Department of Agriculture and the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, passed the following resolution at the Hog Production Conference held at Purdue University October 30:

"The United States Department of Agriculture urges the farmers of Indiana to increase the number of hogs 20 per cent. in 1918. This is a reasonable and practicable increase. Be it resolved, That we urge Indiana farmers to keep a large number of brood sows and with the best possible care and feed to increase the pork production of the State in order to meet the necessary demand.

"The sacrificing of light, unfinished hogs and good brood sows is an economic waste to be discouraged and owing to the unusually large number of light and unfinished hogs that are now being shipped to the markets, we recommend that county agents, whenever possible, take a census of the swine producers and the swine operations, and that they establish and maintain an information bureau or clearing house so that farmers who are unable to finish their hogs may sell them to farmers wishing to buy them to feed.

"In this connection we heartily commend Dr. Northrup's work in supplying the demand of farmers for feeder hogs and by vaccinating pigs at the Indianapolis stock yards so that they may be returned safely to the country to be finished on the farm.

"Owing to the great unrest of farmers, occasioned by declining prices and the uncertainty of the future prices for hogs, and in order to stimulate the breeding of more sows for spring farrow to meet the emergency of the nation in a time of war, we favor establishing a price ratio between corn and hogs immediately which will assure the producer a reasonable profit. The present emergency demands immediate action.

"We urge the United States Department of Agriculture, Purdue University, the State Veterinarian and the State Food Committee to exert every possible effort in a campaign to have farmers adopt this program."

The Indiana State Council of Defense voted to direct the resolutions to the attention of the federal food administration, urging prompt action if the desired results are to be obtained.

DEPARTMENT TO ASSIST.

At a conference immediately following the hog production meeting Director G. I. Christie and representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture discussed ways and means for putting on a hog production campaign in Indiana. The United States Department of Agriculture offered to assist by furnishing two men to co-operate with State forces and fifteen men for two weeks in a lecture campaign.

IMPORTANT MEETING CALLED.

A meeting of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation has been called for 1:30 p. m. Tuesday, November 6, to determine on a program for co-operating in the hog production campaign in Indiana.

The committee on seed stocks will meet in the morning of the same day.

URGED TO RAISE MORE HOGS.

At the hog production conference held at Purdue Prof. C. G. Starr said that in the experimental work at Purdue during the past summer a determined effort had been made to find a substitute for corn. He stated that in the past corn has been a relatively cheap and common feed and experiments dealt with the supplementing of corn rations in order to cut down the amount necessary. Today we are facing a problem of whether or not we can afford to substitute for corn rather than supplement it, he said.

Professor G. I. Christie pointed out that about 85 per cent. of the corn is fed to live stock each year, whether it remains in Indiana or not. He said: "If our people are going to feed this amount can not our Indiana farmers feed this grain right here in our own State? The demand for corn in European countries is not going to be great because corn does not lend itself to shipping as does wheat, but the demand for fats is going to increase and this demand must be met through corn. We might just as well set our face to the job of 'licking the Kaiser,' and we are being called upon to do our share by producing food and supplies for our fighting men and their families."

FARMER NOT A SLACKER.

At the twelfth annual conference of the Agricultural Extension Workers held October 26 at Purdue University the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, The Chicago Daily Tribune and some other leading papers of the country have editorially stated that farmers will not fight, buy bonds, nor pay an income tax and implies that the farmer is a slacker, and that work for stimulating food production is being misdirected. Be it

"Resolved, That we, the agricultural workers and farmers of Indiana, in annual conference assembled, do protest against such statements as being untrue and unfounded, as well as unjust, to the men who often in the absence of sufficient labor are struggling long hours daily that sufficient food may be produced to feed the misinformed journalist and the opulent food speculator as well as the industrial worker and the army and the navy defender of our liberties."

CHRISTIE ADDRESSES TEACHERS.

Food supply and what the schools can do to assist in production and conservation received attention at the annual State teachers' meeting, November 1-3. Three addresses were given by G. I. Christie, State Food Director, as follows:

Agricultural Section, Tomlinson Hall: "Our Food Supply."

Vocational Agricultural Teachers, Y. M. C. A.: "How Vocational Teachers Can Co-operate in State Work."

Home Economics Section, K. of P. Hall: "Conservation, Our Quota."

Buy Labeled Seeds.

The Department of Agriculture authorizes the following:

Buy labeled seeds is a suggestion of the Department of Agriculture. In the case of field and forage crop seeds, including cereals, corn, cowpeas, and soy beans, the label securely placed on the sack or container should convey the following information:

1. Name of seedsman.
2. Kind of seed.
3. Proportion of pure live seed present, with month and year of germination test.
4. Country or locality of origin in the case of the following imported seeds: Beans, soy beans, Turkestan alfalfa, and red clover from southern Europe and Chile.

Following conferences with the Department of Agriculture, the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association and the American Seed Trade Association at their conventions this summer approved furnishing the above information with all lots of field seeds of ten pounds or over. Later seventy-seven seedsmen, including most of the larger dealers, have individually agreed to adopt this plan.

Supplements the Creed.

A supplement to the "Box Car Patriotism" creed recently printed in the Indiana Bulletin has been proposed by a Purdue University professor. The educator shipped his household goods from Worthington to Lafayette and the shipment reached him after a seemingly interminable delay, during which he later ascertained the car had been routed over an Ohio railroad. He, therefore, proposed to add to the notices which have been nailed on box cars:

"Move me directly to destination.

"Don't sidetrack me needlessly.

"Don't lose me on the way."

Patriotic Press Comment

The going away to war of Dr. France, Gibson county's veterinarian, has been hard on the dogs of Gibson county. Technically every dog is wearing a muzzle and perhaps will be until the Kaiser is caught. They couldn't even take part in the chase for him, literally, without being prosecuted under the order issued by the veterinarian.

An idle man these days is a disloyal man. There is no other way to figure it. Every bushel of grain conserved means one more spike in the Kaiser's coffin and every idle man means that just the amount of his ability is not going to be harvested. The loafers should be put to work either by persuasion or force—and they are not all located in Vincennes, Mt. Carmel, Evansville and other surrounding cities.—Princeton Democrat.

CLEANING THE TEMPLE FOR THE OLD GODS.

"Germany is morally bankrupt. Its people do not know, are not allowed to know the real situation, and their war leaders, steeped in blood and crimes so terrible that neutrals and even enemies on this side cannot bring themselves to realize their awfulness, have staked their all in the determination to win this war or destroy the world in doing it. It can end in but one way. Human freedom and the rights of peoples to live their own lives will never die. Autocracy must perish, yet when the divine right of kings is thrown into the doctrinal scrap heap and the Hohenzollerns and junkers are forced to make way for the subjects they so miserably represent, I hope to be able to rally a few friends to the aid of a stricken people. Against the scorn and derision of the entire world, they will need a helping hand to live down the disgrace."

The above words, strong indeed, are not the unconsidered words of an English toady, but of one whose sixty-nine years, backed by the highest traditions of the Rhine land, have been years of ardent love for the land of his fathers—Germany. No local German-American needs an introduction to Dr. Christian Sihler. Here he was born almost seventy years ago. Here his father wrought at Concordia. And through all the years Dr. Sihler has spoken the German tongue in his home. He has loved the German poets—Goethe, Schiller and the rest. He has steeped himself in German science. He has made himself thoroughly representative of German culture in the highest sense of the word.

And to make the opinion expressed by the doctor * * * all the more impressive, he was in the beginning of the international conflagration an intense partisan of his father's people. He, too, believed that the war was instigated by the enemies of the fatherland. He, too, thought that the aim was the destruction of Germany. He, too, shared in the feeling of thousands who are not German but who love fair play that the stories of cruelty charged against the Kaiser were the fabrications of the propagandists.

But Dr. Sihler investigated. He kept his head. And he set about to learn the truth.

And now, having concluded his investigations, he has expressed his verdict in the paragraph quoted above. And so strong are his convictions that he has now abandoned his work to devote himself to the dissemination of the truth among the people of German extraction who have not investigated.—Ft. Wayne Journal-Gazette.

Conservation of Milk.

A statement from the National Food Administration, forecasting a reduction in the price of cattle feed, holds out the hope that there may be a means of preventing excessively high prices for milk and butter fat. The milk and dairy cattle situation is being given careful attention by the federal government. An investigation into the cost of producing and distributing milk is expected to disclose large opportunities for economies that will be recommended to the various State Councils, it is said.

If you think it better to whip Germany in Europe, rather than fight her here, help feed our allies and keep them in the fight. Sign up as a member of the Food Administration.

Coal Figures Given Council By Woollen

Normal Consumption by Domestic Users in Indiana is Six Million Tons, Says Administrator.

Domestic coal consumption in Indiana is normally 6,000,000 tons annually. To date only about 2,200,000 tons have been distributed in the State, leaving an apparent shortage for distribution among householders of the State 3,800,000 tons. These figures are from a statement made to the Indiana State Council of Defense by Evans Woollen, Indiana fuel administrator.

Mr. Woollen added that "the Indiana situation is receiving the very best attention from the highest officials of the Pennsylvania railroad" who are in the coal field, in person, directing operations.

Mr. Woollen and his advisory committee met prior to the meeting of the State Council of Defense and considered a "tentative program based upon the experience of the past ten days." He said the survey is being made by competent people. Practically no coal from other States is now coming into Indiana, which ordinarily received 40 per cent. of its supply from out-State sources. He said jobbers had reported that they have had practically no coal for distribution for three months.

The production of coal at Indiana mines has increased 10 per cent. over last year, Mr. Woollen stated, which would indicate that the fuel famine is not due to a shortage of production as from a disproportionately increased consumption.

In connection with Mr. Woollen's statement H. R. Kurrie, president of the Monon railroad and a member of the fuel director's advisory committee, stated that his railroad is not carrying as much coal as it has capacity for the reason that the mines are not producing it. He said the consumption of coal on the railroads has increased 20 per cent. over last year and that industries now working day and night are consuming far more than that proportion of increase.

Knitters, Attention!

Certain persons are industriously circulating reports that the war knitting now occupying the time of thousands of the women of the State is useless effort. One ill-informed newspaper correspondent declares that the woman knitter "is criminally wasting herself."

The State Council of Defense desires to correct this misinformation positively and to serve notice on all persons and newspapers who are discouraging knitting to forthwith desist from so doing.

The published statement that the government furnishes the soldiers and sailors all the knitted articles specified is not true. The only knitted items furnished by the government to the soldiers are the ordinary commercial machine-made socks. While some other articles are made available, these must all be purchased individually by the men.

The American Red Cross declares that the need for knitted socks, sweaters, mufflers and wristlets is imperative and calls upon the women of the United States to exert themselves to the utmost in this regard.

A cablegram from Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, representing the American Red Cross in France, states the situation so clearly that further comment is unnecessary. Major Murphy says:

"Last winter broke the record for cold and misery among people here. There is inexpressible dread of the coming winter finding us without supplies to meet the situation. We urge you on behalf of our soldiers and those of our allies who will suffer in their frozen trenches, and also thousands of French and Belgian refugees and repatriates being returned through Switzerland to France. Everyone here looks to America to begin shipping at once 1,500,000 of each of the warm knitted woolen articles already requested. They must come before cold weather, and in view of the shortage of fuel and other discomforts they will be of inestimable value in both military and civilian work."

INFORMATION BULLETIN NO. 59.

November 1, 1917.

To the County Councils of Defense:

(Attention, Woman Member Thereof)

The following bulletin has just been received from the Council of National Defense and your attention is particularly called thereto:

Council of National Defense,
Washington, October 6, 1917.

Woman's Committee,
1814 N Street, N. W.

Mrs. Charles A. Carlisle, Chairman,
Woman's Section, Ind. State Council of Defense, 131 South Taylor St., South Bend, Ind.

—Relation of National Organizations—

Whereas, The function of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense, appointed by the Council of National Defense, is primarily to act: (1) In an advisory capacity to the Council, and (2) to the official clearing house of all organizations of women to co-ordinate their activities in a co-operative manner throughout the United States, and

Whereas, The Woman's Committee is recognized as the official government agent through which all women's organizations may work out their own programs, in no way losing their identity or curtailing their activities thereby, and

Whereas, Through the Woman's Committee the government may at any time require concerted action of the women's organizations to carry out a specified piece of work according to uniform instructions laid down by the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the undersigned presidents and chairmen of national organizations, and members of the Woman's Committee, urge upon their State presidents and chairmen the importance of getting in direct relationship with the chairmen of the Woman's committee in their respective States, so as to express through this service their unflinching loyalty to their country in this time of crisis. It is further

Resolved, That all unofficial registrations made for the purpose of enrolling women members in any individual association shall be called enrollment of members, and that all registrations taken by the Woman's Committee, acting through the State divisions, under the authority of the Council of National Defense, shall be known as official registration.

Signed:

Maude Wetmore, Chairman of the National League for Woman's Service.

Mrs. Philip N. Moore, President National Council of Women.

Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, President General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Carrie Chapman Catt, President National Woman Suffrage Association.

Mrs. Joseph R. Lamar, President of the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America.

—Use of Railroad Ties for Fuel—

To County Councils of Defense:

The State Council of Defense is advised by the superintendent of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburgh that the Pennsylvania company is very willing to allow its old cross ties and other wood which can be used for fuel, but which cannot be made use of by the railroad company, to be taken away by those desiring it, providing they will remove it from the railroad property at no cost to the company.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

The women and children of our allies in Europe know hunger in its most bitter forms. There is no need that the women and children of America should be hungry. They may eat abundantly—but wisely and without waste—and still save the women and children of our allies from the extremes of hunger. That's why every woman is urged to enroll as a member of the Food Administration.

The person who wastes food during war time is helping the enemy.

If you want Germany to win this war, waste food—use up the food needed by those who are fighting her.

Millions of women and children in Europe—our allies—can be saved from bitter hunger if you will eat one slice less of wheat bread each day.

"A nation which declares war and goes on discussing whether it ought to have declared war or not is impotent, paralyzed, imbecile, and earns the contempt of mankind and the certainty of humiliating defeat and subjection to foreign control."—Ethiù Root.

Already

BY MARY H. KROUT

(For the Indiana State Council of Defense)

Through the hush of long silence again and again,
O'er the rush of the wind and the roar of the sea,
We hear far away the fierce shouting of men—
In a vision—the forecast of conflicts to be.

One turns a white face, as he falls, to the sky,
O'er which a dun battle-cloud hangs like a pall;
Ten drop by his side, then a score, and we cry,
"They are ours, and already they answer death's call."

Already we mourn them in anguish and tears—
The first pangs of sorrows the stricken shall know—
Those who in the dimness of desolate years
Must bear, with no respite their burden of woe.

The child of its father bereft; she, whose son
Went down in the trenches; the bride of a day—
Grief has found them already, ere scarce has begun
The need that has summoned our hosts to the fray.

We count not the cost though a thousand hearts break
But we ask as we wait for some sign of the end;
Will the laggard arise, will the sluggard awake,
Will the Nation our cause to the finish defend?

Hark! The Nation replies, speaking out of the night:
"My ships crowd the seas, and my legions are there
To swell the thinned ranks, and like creatures of light
Are my squadrons afloat, high above them, in air."

"I called and they came, from the East and the West,
From the North and the South, and as one made reply,
With souls all aflame, my bravest, my best:
'All ready! All ready! to live or to die.'"

15,000,000 Bushels of Corn May Be Saved

If United States Revenue Department Will Consent to Removal of Restrictions.

Much of the Indiana corn crop damaged by frost, approximating 15,000,000 bushels, may be saved if the federal government approves the plans which were presented at the weekly meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense by N. E. Squibb. Mr. Squibb and A. E. Reynolds, also of the State Council, have just returned from Washington, where they conferred with the United States internal revenue authorities in an effort to secure the removal of certain restrictions in the laws which will permit of the handling of this soft corn by distilleries, turning it into commercial alcohol and stock feed.

Mr. Reynolds informed the Council that he believed there would be found upon investigation that "the federal food department and people generally have been badly fooled" with the apparent size of the 1917 corn crop. He said he believed that the 1917 crop will not exceed 50 per cent. of the government estimates and that the selection of seed corn in Indiana is going to prove a very difficult task.

A committee consisting of A. W. Brady, Charles Fox, Frank Wampler, George Ade and W. G. Irwin was named to pass upon the contents of the new patriotic text-book being prepared for compulsory use in the high schools of Indiana.

A Public Service Reserve will be organized in Indiana under the direction of the United States Department of Labor. N. E. Squibb is chairman of the committee which will submit detailed plans for the furnishing of skilled men in industries as government needs require.

Indiana physicians will be called into a conference in Indianapolis Saturday evening to hear an appeal for approximately twice the number of medical men for the United States service as are now available. Dr. Charles P. Emerson told the Council that probably one-half of the eligible Indiana physicians are likely to be called into the service. Dr. H. Jump of the surgeon-general's staff will present an illustrated lecture for the physicians of the State at the meeting.

The proposed plan of organizing high schools of the State who are willing to devote two hours each week to some exclusively patriotic work into a Girls' Working Reserve was endorsed and referred to the women's section for execution. The origin of the Girls' Reserve was in Michigan City and the plan was detailed to the Indiana State Council of Defense by Mrs. Southard of that place.

What It Is; Where to Find It

The Indiana Bulletin, published every Friday by the Indiana State Council of Defense, is a "live wire" of information on what Indiana is doing in the national crisis and how the citizens of Indiana can best co-operate in the national plans. You will find this bulletin at the library each week. It gives just the news you are looking for and you will be repaid if you take time to examine it.—Brook Reporter.

"Eat less candy. The Allies need the sugar," says the Food Administration. "All right," our patriotic farm boys and girls are saying, "nuts and popcorn are better anyway."

United Brethren in Patriotic Attitude

State Church Congress Issues Statement of the Duty of Its Membership.

Ringed resolutions pledging hearty support to federal and State authorities in waging a war to "make the world safe for Christ" were passed by the Indiana State Congress of the United Brethren church, recently in session in Indianapolis. The war statement follows:

"Today, as in '61 to '65, the Church of the United Brethren in Christ is an organization of brave, sincere, Christian men and women, loving God and home and native land, but ready and willing to march away in defense of the American principles of liberty, deeming it their God-given privilege to engage in the struggle which shall sound the death knell to arrogant, Godless autocracy and to share in the world dissemination of those American liberties and principles—the common lot of our humblest citizen—but enjoyed by so few across the sea.

"The Church of the United Brethren in Christ believes the world should be made safe for Christ and his religion and they believe the Christian church in America should give their lives and their means to make it so. They believe all Christians must be patriots. Love of God and love of country go hand in hand. A blow for America in this world war is a blow for God's kingdom.

"The church of the United Brethren in Christ believes no nations or governments practicing the atrocities of the central powers of Europe can be animated by human principles, much less by Christian kindness, nor does it believe such nations or governments have any part in God's scheme for the Christianization of the world.

"The Christian nations and the Christian peoples are not to be destroyed at this period in the world's history by the hordes of mammon now overrunning the battlefields of Europe.

"God and the world now look to America to rekindle the fire to reanimate the spirits of Christian humanity, to sweep the battlefields of Europe clean, proclaiming to Europe and the world—America, with her men and her money, come in the name of butchered women and children, in the name of Christian citizenship, honor, truth and national integrity, with the stars and the stripes and the cross of Christ—one and inseparable, the one destroying the last vestige of dishonor and cruelty, the other bearing the purest religion to the bereft and saddened world—the hope of the ages yet to come.

"In this hour of national and human crisis, when the foundations of the world seem so uncertain, when we stand at the brink of the bottomless abyss, when the world seems war mad, and the sun has almost forgotten to shine, the Church of the United Brethren in Christ points the leaders of our State and nation to the promises of God, and pledge to them the membership and means of their denomination in the superhuman task ahead of them. If God is with them, who can be against them?

"In President Wilson and Governor Goodrich the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, in this hour of peril, renew their faith and their allegiance, praying that their burdens may be borne by all, their responsibilities shared by all, that the priceless heritage of peace may be enjoyed by all."

It looks very much as though the "Watch on the Rhine" was in need of extensive repairs.—Deseret News.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—Boys of Scout Troop No. 1 of Decatur obtained Liberty Loan bond subscriptions amounting to $13,650. Nine of the sixteen Boy Scouts enlisted in the work sold more than ten bonds each, thus earning the bronze medal offered for such work. Charles Downs, Francis Brentlinger, Robert Kalver, Glen Patterson, Thaddeus Hocker, Herman Myers, William Gay, Dwight Thornburg and Lowell Smith are entitled to the war service emblem. Some of the boys already had won the emblem in the campaign for the first issue of the war loan. These lads get a service bar.

Allen County.—Entertainments for patriotic purposes in Allen county will not be given in future save under permits issued by the Allen County Council of Defense, and such entertainments will not be approved by the Defense Council unless the entire net proceeds go to patriotic projects. The public is being urged to refuse to be exploited by so-called patriotic "benefits."

Chairman W. H. Schelman of the County Council of Defense is at the head of a committee which is to compile a roster of honor of all Allen county soldiers and sailors.

Financial aid is to be extended by the County Council of Defense to the Boys' Working Reserve in Allen county.

Bartholomew County.—A supposed incendiary fire at Jonesville which destroyed a grain elevator and a considerable quantity of wheat is being investigated by the authorities on the theory that the torch may have been applied by enemy agencies.

Charles A. Bookwalter of Indianapolis was the speaker at a big rally at Columbus in connection with the drive for pledges and signatures of patriotic co-operation in the food conservation movement. Under Mrs. Herrlot C. Overstreet, the women of Bartholomew county worked effectively. School children helped greatly in getting food pledge cards signed.

Joseph V. Hilger of Columbus has been successful in getting business men to assist in the conservation work.

Blackford County.—The Home Guard company being formed in Hartford City has held several successful meetings, obtaining recruits from several Blackford county towns, including Eaton and Montpelier. The company recently made a trip in a body to Montpelier to meet with patriotic citizens and to obtain new members.

Boone County.—The sum of $10,500 is to be raised in Boone county as its share in the big war fund for the Y. M. C. A. Boone, Fountain and Montgomery counties are in a district to work together for the Y. M. C. A. fund from Nov. 11 to 19. George T. Miller of Lebanon is in charge of the Boone county drive, with L. B. Smelser secretary of the county's organization and J. W. Witt, treasurer. A joint meeting was held Saturday night at Crawfordsville by the three counties. Boone sending thirty delegates. Preliminary meetings were held in the churches of Boone county Sunday afternoon. Dr. W. Teachout and W. A. Collins of Crawfordsville were among the speakers.

Lebanon coal dealers are reported to be co-operating closely with C. F. S. Neal, the new Boone county fuel director. Mr. Neal is asking consumers to report their needs and to work in conjunction with the fuel administration and the dealers.

Lebanon will at once put up three powerful electric signal lights for the guidance of airmen making night flights across Indiana from one training camp to another. Mayor John B. Shelby has received instructions from Gen. George O. Squires, chief signal officer of the United States army, to place the lights. The route of the practice flyers passes over Lebanon, Jamestown, Linton, Pittsboro and Brownsburg, and all cities for forty miles on either hand are to put out signal lights.

Carroll County.—Willis Gish, a farmer near Camden, announces in the Camden Record that he will give away wood for fuel to all comers if they will clear away the brush as they go.

William H. Bradshaw, recommended for coal director for the county, co-operated with the State fuel administration at once in bringing about coal shipments to Rockfield and Rossville, where acute needs were reported.

Cass County.—George A. Custer of Logansport, who has been acting captain of the Home Guards, has been elected captain of that organization. Sixty members of the guard attended the first formal meeting. C. C. Bennett is first lieutenant and W. L. Filley is second lieutenant. Members of the uniform ranks of various Logansport societies are joining the guard company and it is now well on the way to successful enlistment and acceptance by the State for State service in time of emergency. Members have agreed to buy their own uniforms. An armory is to be rented for drill purposes.

Rapid progress is being made in the formation of a new battery of the new Second Indiana Artillery in Logansport. Lieutenant Basil Middleton, a Spanish-American war veteran, an officer of long experience in the Indiana National Guard, and three years a military instructor at Culver Military Academy, is to be the commanding officer of the battery. Registered men are eligible to membership in the new guard organization.

W. O. Pierson of Galveston is organizing a company of Home Guards at that place.

Clay County.—An opportunity is being given to Clay county men who come under the selective enlistment law to get into the Second Indiana Artillery now being formed by the Indiana National Guard for federal service. A meeting held in Brazil to start recruiting for a local unit in the artillery achieved good results.

The fuel administration has taken note of the plan adopted by the First Methodist church of Brazil to save coal by cutting out evening meetings of various sorts which made unnecessary demands on the fuel supply. Meetings formerly held at night through the week are grouped Thursday afternoons. The fuel saving is considerable. The plan is being formally urged for adoption all over the State. The saving on fuel for gas and electric light and heating promises to be enormous.

Dearborn County.—Service flags, furnished without cost by the Dearborn County Council of Defense, are being displayed on all sides by those who have relatives in the military service. Citizens who are entitled to show the service flag have been urged to call on Chairman W. H. O'Brien at Lawrenceburg, head of the County Council of Defense. The Council urges that the flying of the service flag is at once an eloquent lesson in loyalty and a rebuke to disloyalty.

Delaware County.—Miss Genevieve Hanna of Muncie has been made a member of the Delaware County Council of Defense. Miss Hanna has been active as the head of the women's branch of the Defense Council.

County headquarters with a worker in charge are to be maintained by the County Defense Council, and the county fuel and food administrators will have their offices with the Defense Council. For the time the defense work will be sustained by voluntary contributions, the county council not being asked for an appropriation.

Several semi-military organizations and others in the county are being asked by the County Defense Council to contribute squads and individual recruits to a Home Guard unit in the county. Progress is being made. The Rotary Club has been assisting.

H. A. Brown is at the head of a special committee of the Defense Council to arrange with various secret and fraternal orders for patriotic meetings. The women of the county have been looking after a series of patriotic demonstrations in churches, Sunday-schools and in other assemblages.

The Muncie Franchise League has been active in the Hoover campaign for unification and co-operation among Indiana women in the food conservation movement. A recent meeting of the league was turned over to the women's branch of the Delaware County Council of Defense and the work of getting signers for the pledge cards was organized. Captains were named for each block in the city, and block meetings were held. Mrs. Fletcher Meeks of the Franchise League was prominent in the work. Will F. White, chairman of the Delaware County Council of Defense, urged the League to active effort, denouncing as treasonable the neglect of this duty on the part of American women.

Dubois County.—Mrs. H. C. Knapp, head of the Huntington Red Cross shop, calls for a large number of additional workers in the surgical dressings department. She urges women and girls over 15 to assist in this work, which has become doubly important now the American soldiers are under fire.

Women and girls of Ferdinand, under Mrs. A. F. Gussell, have sent in a large quantity of knitted work.

Fulton County.—Cabbage growers in Fulton county, working through the Farmers' and Merchants' Association of Rochester, have been trying to assemble fifteen to eighteen tons of cabbage to be shipped to the Wabash Canning Company's plant as a part of the local food conservation work. Rochester reports 9,000 heads of cabbage on hand.

Some 1,000 bushels of apples, produced by the Orchard Developing Company, but damaged by frost, are to be saved by being made into cider and jelly. The concern harvested more than 7,000 bushels of patriotic fruit.

The Rochester Sentinel pays editorial tribute to Mrs. Perry Heath, secretary of the Fulton County Council of Defense, declaring she has set an object lesson of patriotic devotion to every citizen of the county.

The Fulton county fuel director, acting as a volunteer pending confirmation, is urging farmers to make good use of down timber for fuel in place of coal to relieve the acute fuel shortage in cities and towns.

The Rochester Sentinel editorially calls attention to the fact that while the Fulton County Council of Defense has called on several speakers for active work as four-minute men, no speeches as yet have been made. The Sentinel reminds the orators that the government is ready to supply the material needed for preparing the patriotic speeches desired by the defense movement.

Success attended the patriotic week conducted by the Fulton County Council of Defense. The week closed with a large meet at the Methodist church at Rochester. One of the best meetings of the week was that at Fulton, where Prof. Shuman Davis was the speaker, and he was also the orator at the closing rally. Meetings were held in all parts of the county.

Floyd County.—Military Day in New Albany Thursday, November 1, was the big patriotic event in Floyd county thus far in the war. The affair was in honor of soldiers from the county, and Company M of the 35th, with the regimental band from Camp Taylor, Louisville, joined the parade. Veterans of the civil war and men of the Spanish-American service were in line and a detachment of high school boys appeared, garbed for farm work, as members of the Boys' Working Reserve. The school children marched as a body. The celebration proved to be a tremendous source of inspiration along patriotic lines.

A monster night meeting capped the day. Hon. John H. Weathers and G. A. Weinmann were the speakers, and Dr. A. P. Hauss presided. The affair was under the charge of the New Albany Young Business Men's Club.

Gibson County.—Shipping boxes for Red Cross supplies from Gibson county Red Cross shops are made by high school boys at Princeton. Since the first shop was opened August 15 other shops have been started at Oakland City, Fort Branch and Owensville, with auxiliaries at Heights Chapel, Somerville, Francisco and Patoka. Many sewing units are working in Princeton churches.

M. J. Weiborn, E. B. Funk, Alva Levi and T. B. Paxton have been re-elected directors of the Gibson County Red Cross.

Grant County.—The national military home, near Marion, was the first institution in Indiana to get relief through the fuel administration.

The town of Swayzee, where David Long reported the schools closed for lack of coal, was relieved promptly.

Greene County.—Speakers who made a preliminary canvass of Greene county on behalf of the food conservation drive reported only a few communities where interest was lacking. Organization effort at once was started to bring all Greene county up to the flag. Under Dr. J. B. Young of Worthington as chairman, the Greene County Council of Defense is pushing defense work along every line. An organization committee now is busy arousing interest in one or two farming sections where indifference to the food production and conservation work has been reported.

Hamilton County.—Westfield people gave a successful Liberty Day parade and flag raising, the school children being prominent in the celebration, and the flag being raised on the school ground. Addresses were made by Judge Cloe and R. S. Truitt of Noblesville, and pledges were taken for Liberty Bonds. Under Trustee G. G. Hochstedler, a township war work organization was formed.

Henry County.—The Henry County Council, in called session, appropriated $1,000 for the County Council of Defense to be used in war work within the county. This action is being taken by other counties which have not heretofore provided funds for emergency defense activities.

The Henry County Council of Defense has opened headquarters in the Union block, Newcastle, and will have a stenographer constantly in charge. All branches of war work in the county will use the offices. Myer Heller, State merchant representative on conservation, the county fuel and food administrators, and the women workers will hold forth from the new headquarters. The Red Cross is in the same building.

Jesse D. Smith has been named by the County Council of Defense of Henry county to act as chairman of a new patriotic committee for work in Newcastle. Mr. Smith will choose his co-workers. This branch of defense work, recommended by the State Council of Defense, is to be given to the Americanization of foreign population in manufacturing centers.

Howard County.—Mayor George W. Stidger of Kokomo and Secretary W. H. Arnett of the Kokomo Chamber of Commerce were appealed to for help in pushing, November 5 to 10, a movement to raise $2,400 as Howard county's part of a war camp community recreation fund.

One of the potent factors in the success of food conservation week in Kokomo was the systematic campaign made through the theaters by the four-minute women.

The Howard county chapter of the Red Cross has reorganized with Henry C. Davis as chairman, Mrs. J. C. Patten, vice-chairman; Frank McCarty, treasurer, and W. H. Arnett, secretary. Mrs. Patten succeeds Mrs. George Bruner. Members of the executive committee were elected as follows: Henry C. Davis, Mrs. J. C. Patten, Mrs. L. C. Hoss, Mrs. G. D. Jay, Mrs. J. G. Kneppie, Mrs. John Toomey, J. D. Kelley, Dr. W. J. Martin, Frank McCarty and W. H. Arnett. Miss Nelle Coxon, chairman of the surgical dressings committee, made a call for additional workers.

Jasper County.—Unlimited quantities of timber to be worked up into cord wood is the report from McCordsburg, Rensselaer, Parr and Fair Oaks, according to an advertisement for wood choppers put out recently by James Walter, manager of the Lawler ranches, Rensselaer.

Jay County.—The sum of $300 has been set aside for the use of the County Council of Defense, this action being taken by the Jay county council. This action relieves the Defense Council members, who for some time have been bearing defense work expenses out of their own pockets.

Lake County.—Serious milk shortage has been prevented by patriotic action of milk producers in adjusting prices and settling a dispute which for a time threatened to tie up the milk supply indefinitely.

Gary is organizing one of the six Home Guard companies soon to be taken into the new State militia for State service during the war.

Lake county has 2,000 men in American khaki, a battalion of Serbs has gone to European battlefields from the county. The Polish legion has sent a company across, the Czech-Slovak population furnished recruits for a legion and a recruiting office now is open for the British. The Gary Times says: "We are slightly cosmopolitan around here."

Mrs. Jennie Conrad, who operates a farm of 5,000 acres in this county, is enthusiastic over the reception accorded her plan for a drafted labor army as a war measure. Mrs. Conrad would select loafers by law to perform necessary labor behind the lines. Her idea has been endorsed by the Woman's Farm and Garden Association. Meeting at Chicago and by the women's branch of the Indiana State Council of Defense.

Lagrange County.—Mrs. Alice Ballou of Lagrange is the new woman member of the Lagrange County Council of Defense, taking the place of Mrs. A. M. Patten of Topeka. Acting on a suggestion from the State Council of Defense, Mrs. Ballou has named a "war mother" for the county, her choice being Mrs. H. M. Herbert. The latter is selecting a committee of war mothers, one from each township, to act for the county in looking after soldiers from the county who are motherless or without home folk. Permanent headquarters have been opened by the Red Cross in the Willard building, Lagrange.

Fuel authorities are working on the fuel problem at Sturgis, where the schools have closed because of a lack of coal.

Laporte County.—Dave Shinitzky, a Laporte Boy Scout, who sold eighteen Liberty bonds for $2,500, is to get a government war service medal. Arthur Roule is another Laporte Boy Scout who earned an emblem for selling bonds.

Marion County.—Contributions are being taken for a fund with which the now famous "Sock Shop" in Indianapolis is to be reopened and continued active in providing army socks for Indiana fighting men. More than 4,000 socks were knitted and supplied to Indiana soldiers, 1,000 pairs were supplied to the Red Cross for the price of the yarn and 2,600 pairs of socks now are on hand for later contingents of Hoosier marchers. The movement has been assisted by workers in many "sock shops" established in various parts of the State.

The Marion County Council of Defense has called on the Indianapolis school commissioners and the public library authorities to weed out of the school system and out of the library all books which carry anti-American and pro-German propaganda. The Council reports at least one decidedly objectionable pro-German book which has been circulating out of the Indianapolis public library.

Montgomery County.—Waveland reports 162 members of the Red Cross with $800 raised for war work and a large supply of garments made. Through a misunderstanding, according to the Waveland Independent, the Crawfordsville Red Cross has improperly ignored the Waveland organization and brought about a situation which for a time threatened to lead to the disbandment of the smaller body. Harmony now is being restored.

Ohio County.—Successful patriotic meetings have been held at several points in Ohio county. At Rising Sun, Aberdeen and Hartford speeches were made on various phases of the war work. Dr. W. A. Mills of Hanover college spoke at the final meeting of the drive at Rising Sun. Prof. Jesse W. Riddle of the Lawrenceburg schools also spoke.

Owen County.—Morgan township Sunday-School workers gave a successful benefit entertainment for the soldiers of the county at Olive Hill church.

The Owen County Democrat is urging farmers to adopt the plan of co-operative purchase and operation of the more expensive farming implements which can be made to serve on many farms the same season. The policy is urged as especially advisable as a war measure.

Pike County.—Women of the Red Cross at Algiers gave a pie supper the night of Saturday, Nov. 3, the purpose being to raise money with which to buy yarn to be used in knitting socks and comfort garments for soldiers. The affair was a big success.

Porter County.—Mrs. C. W. Boucher of Valparaiso has been named to take the place of Mrs. Maude E. Johnston of Valparaiso as the woman member of the Porter County Council of Defense. Mrs. Johnston will remove to San Diego, Cal., where her son, Edward Johnston, is in training for military service. Mrs. Johnston has been active and effective. The Chesterton Tribune says the appointment of Mrs. Boucher by Judge Loring is approved all over the county.

Randolph County.—The County Council of Defense issued a strong and impressive argumentative statement through the local press to the people of the county urging especially the co-operation of the women in the food conservation movement. Randolph county was asked to "prove her loyalty by her complete support of the Red Cross and Hoover Food Administration."

Albert L. Hodgson, county agent, is doing his part to help solve the coal problem by urging that farmers who own wood lots having fallen timber or old tops available shall use the wood for heating purposes and thus lessen the huge extra demand on the coal supply.

Eleven branches of the Red Cross in Randolph county are doing active work. The county chapter recently shipped three large boxes of supplies.

Ripley County.—Batesville citizens contributed $130 to the War Library Fund and sent book-plates in with the contribution. A letter of commendation and thanks has been received by Miss Sophia Nickel, who had charge of the campaign in Batesville.

Chris. Nieman, Christian Neufarth and Edward H. Behmer of Batesville have issued a press statement asserting their Americanism and declaring that stories as to their alleged pro-German acts or words are utterly false.

Red Cross workers at Versailles, Osgood, Milan, Sunman, Cross Plains, Napoleon and Batesville have been highly commended for good work by the State officers in charge of women's work for the Red Cross. Minnie E. Wycoff is Ripley county supervisor of Red Cross activities.

The Ripley County Council of Defense issues a call for reports on down timber or old tops of trees which can be used for fuel. Those who have timber suitable for firewood, either to sell or give, are reporting to J. Francis Lochard at Versailles. Mr. Lochard is chairman of the County Defense Council. He expects Ripley county to do her part in saving coal by using wood for fuel this winter.

The Versailles Baptist church has placed a large placard in the church building, and on the card the names of Ripley county soldiers are being placed as a "Roll of Honor." The card is decorated with the national colors.

St. Joseph County.—George Ganser of Mishawaka now has three sons in the army. Bernard Ganser is in France, George, Jr., is at Camp Merritt, N. J., and word has just been received that Simon Ganser, the third son, has enlisted in the 35th company, 166th depot brigade, at Camp Lewis, Washington.

The fact that a red-haired boy from South Bend fired the first shot from an American big gun and wrought deadly execution in the German ranks has stirred St. Joseph county war work in a most definite way. Though his name has not been made public, that red-headed gunner has put St. Joseph county on the patriotic map with a bang.

Scott County.—Citizens of Scott County have been congratulated on the work done for the Liberty loan, the sum of $85,550 being subscribed. The county's minimum had been set at $63,500.

Army bed sack material is being used in large quantities by Scottsburg women who are working for the government quartermaster's sub-station. Mrs. Charles Ardrey has been helping in the distribution of materials, and boys and women use all sorts of vehicles, go-carts, barrows and small wagons in handling supplies and finished product.

Scott county farmers are turning to long-neglected wood lots for a fuel supply to take the place of coal.

Shelby County.—Troop 5, Boy Scouts, Shelbyville, has voted to buy a service flag in honor of the troop's former Scoutmaster, J. A. Riser, who now is in the army.

P. S. Lowe, a teacher in the Shelbyville high school, who has gone to Camp Taylor as a soldier, was tendered a farewell by the school. Teachers and pupils provided Mr. Lowe with a service kit and sweater.

The Shelbyville high school, faculty and pupils, worked out a plan to buy a $100 Liberty bond. The pupils agree to deny themselves, and each pays 3 cents a day for ten weeks, the principal to become a part of the school endowment fund.

Steuben County.—Angola Boy Scouts sold $2,000 worth of Liberty Bonds. Frederic Graf earned a government medal. Other Scouts who helped were Roscoe Crissinger, Wayne Swift and Joseph Weicht.

E. S. Croxton, aided by the Steuben County Defense Council workers, put the county "over the top" and sold more than $250,000 worth of bonds.

Mayor T. J. Creel joined the Steuben County Council of Defense to recommend Fred A. Emerson for Steuben county fuel director.

Tippecanoe County.—The office of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense is to be kept open every day. The secretary was empowered to employ an assistant to stay on the office job. The Defense Council has chosen an executive committee composed of C. M. Murdock, Richard Sample, Walter Ball, W. V. Stuart and J. O. Beck. Speakers were chosen to talk on conservation in all the Lafayette moving picture houses every night of food conservation week. On the speakers' committee were George P. Haywood and W. V. Stuart. Among the speakers were Mayor Thomas Bauer, Congressman Will R. Wood, State Senator Alva O. Reser, Dean S. Coulter, T. F. Moran and W. S. Kepner.

The Tippecanoe defense body has taken cognizance of reports of seditious utterances and has asked that reports of such cases be made to J. O. Beck or W. B. Foresman of the Council to be forwarded to the federal authorities for drastic action.

Mayor Bauer and W. B. Foresman are on a special committee to safeguard the community against the reported enemy conspiracy to destroy live stock and crops.

Vanderburg County.—The Warrick circuit court has disbarred Frank LaMonte of Evansville from the practice of law. Mr. LaMonte, candidate for mayor of Evansville on the Socialist ticket, was charged with disloyal and seditious utterances directed against the selective enlistment law. Mr. LaMonte admitted he had declared the United States had no right to send soldiers abroad and that he had talked against the law under which the national army has been created to defend America. Friends of LaMonte packed the court room at Boonville the first day of his trial, but citizens of Boonville and their families took possession of the court room at the second day's session.

Evansville is to have one of the six Home Guard companies soon to be sworn in by Adj. Gen. Harry B. Smith of the Indiana National Guard for service within the State as militia.

Wabash County.—A patriotic meeting has been arranged for the night of Friday, November 9, at North Manchester under the direction of the Wabash County Council of Defense. The Crystal theater was donated for the purpose by W. J. Slrk. Judge Herman D. Wilkie of Elwood, a thoroughly loyal American citizen of German descent, who has a real message of patriotism, was the chief speaker. J. W. Winesburg, Grover Orr, John Isenbarger, L. P. Utschel and Thurl Little had charge of the meeting on behalf of the County Defense organization. The North Manchester Woman's Club acted as hosts to Miss Blair, Purdue speaker on the program. Other workers were: George Garber, W. J. Slrk, Harry Palmer, W. E. Billings, W. F. Shaffer, Dr. Ira Perry and Charles Wright.

Warrick County.—Herbert Hoggatt, a farmer near Boonville, has set a good example by producing 608 tons of alfalfa from 100 acres. He has been offered $12,000 for the crop. The war time importance of this feed crop makes Mr. Hoggatt's record notable.

The Yankee town auxiliary to the Red Cross has made and filled seventeen comfort kits for the boys from Anderson township who are in the service.

November 19 a new class in surgical dressings is to begin a course in Boonville, under the supervision of the Red Cross.

Wayne County.—The Milton Red Cross chapter here has elected Mrs. E. C. Denny, chairman; Mrs. George Wagner, vice-chairman; Mrs. R. W. Warren, secretary, and Mrs. W. L. Perkins, treasurer. The following committee chairmen were named: Mrs. Gran Bragg, surgical dressing; Mrs. Wilbur Elwell, hospital garments; Mrs. Albert Newman, civilian relief; and Mrs. O. H. Benson, membership.

Centerville people responded to the Red Cross call and patronized a "penny supper" given for the benefit of the society, $40 being realized. A Cambridge City company will be included in the new volunteer State militia.

White County.—The Chalmers Despatch, in telling how that community went "over the top" for 11 per cent of its resources to buy Liberty bonds, declares "loyalty reigns supreme" at Chalmers.

The Chalmers Red Cross gave a masquerade benefit one night recently and raised a considerable sum for the cause.

"German Efficiency"

Pro-Kaiser and anti-war propagandists reveal their lack of "German Efficiency" in the frequency with which they get themselves pummeled or "pinched."

In the interest of more efficiency the Independent has condensed the methods of the most successful practitioners of disloyalty into ten rules for carrying on traitorous propaganda at least personal risk.

Most of all of these rules so accurately describe the arguments which nearly everybody has heard from one or more of the traitorous-minded that they are worth frequent perusal. The rules are:

- I. Assert on every occasion that "Wall Street" made the war. Never mind explaining when, how or why.
- II. Get in all the sneers you can at any profession of ideal motives. If you can find any flaw in our democracy say that "we are just as bad an autocracy as Germany." Place the war in as sordid a light as possible.
- III. It is dangerous to denounce the United States directly. But rake history from end to end for mud to throw at the allies. Especially, twist the lion's tail.
- IV. Profess great concern lest sending food to Europe will starve America. Support every embargo movement that applies to the allied nations and none that does not.
- V. If the President asks for any extension of power rave about "dictatorship" and the "overthrow of the liberties for which our fathers, etc."
- VI. Spread rumors that the allies are going to betray us or take advantage of us as soon as we are deeply enough involved in the war.
- VII. Accept conscription in principle but hammer its working in every possible way. One good way is to start scares about revolutions and internal disorder as a pretext for keeping a large part of the army at home.
- VIII. Demonstrate that the enemy is unconquerable and victory hopeless. Play the "candid friend" and act as a depressant.
- IX. Be very jealous to prevent "entangling alliances" and be much concerned about the Monroe doctrine if we "mix ourselves in European quarrels." A permanent league of nations would embarrass your junker friends if they remain in power after the war. Germany can only hope to conquer other nations if they act selfishly and in isolation.
- X. WHEN DRIVEN TO MAKE AN UNEQUIVOCAL STATEMENT PROTEST YOUR LOYALTY AND THEN CHANGE THE SUBJECT.

Cut this out and hand it to the next pacifist or lukewarm friend who tries to start an argument.

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 13

The Indiana Bulletin is not copyrighted. It is intended solely as a purveyor of patriotic inspiration through the reported patriotic activity of County Councils of Defense and the various committees and sections of the Indiana State Council of Defense. It is published with no other end in view than the dissemination of information that will serve the cause of the State and Nation in the war with Germany. Newspaper editors, librarians, teachers, public speakers and others are invited and urged to avail themselves of any suggestions or informative data found in the columns of the Bulletin.

The publicity bureau under whose direction the Bulletin is prepared and published welcomes suggestions for adding to the efficiency of the publication and welcomes contributions along the lines suggested.

Editorial Comment

HELPFUL AND PATRIOTIC.

One of the most interesting as well as one of the most helpful and patriotic features to be found in Indiana newspapers in this war time is the array of letters from red-blooded, loyal and devoted Indiana soldiers and sailors now training in the various branches of the service.

It is a fine thing for the folk back home to get a clear idea of the soldier's part in the great war. It is a good thing for the home people to be told by the soldiers what the men at the front have a right to expect in the way of backing behind the lines.

Local newspapers cannot publish too many of the manly messages from patriotic fighting men. The complaints are singularly few. The demands for co-operation on the part of all the men and women left behind are insistent and fully justified. The men in khaki are making the supreme sacrifice. Their families have joined them in that sacrifice. It is up to the civilian population generally to show its appreciation by performing to the full every war task set by the great emergency. It takes many men back of the line adequately to support one soldier at the front.

Adequate support for the soldiers means that all citizens at home must help until it hurts in financing the war, in Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. work for the armies, and in food and fuel conservation and production, as well as in the safeguarding of homes, properties and industries behind the firing line.

DEFINING TREASON.

In calling on Delaware county women to sign the Hoover food conservation pledge cards, Will F. White, chairman of the Delaware County Council of Defense, defined treason and put the issue of Americanism squarely to the women.

Treason, he declared, is defined as "giving aid and comfort to the enemy." The Indiana woman who refuses to sign the Hoover pledge card and to do her part in the conservation of food supplies and in the prevention of waste in time of war "lends aid and comfort to the enemy."

Those who do not wish to be classified as giving aid and comfort to brutal military autocracy; those who do not wish to be classified as obstructing and hampering the fight now being waged for democracy and for American safety, security and for the perpetuity of American liberty will do all they can do to help make America effective in every possible way.

One big, vital element of America's great strength in the war for righteousness is her food resources and possibilities. It is the duty of every man and woman to take every measure for the conservation and enlargement of our food supplies. We not only must supply our armies and ourselves, but we must provide huge stores for the civil population and for the armed forces of our fighting allies, who thus far have borne the brunt of the war.

British Subjects Wanted

The following men are wanted by the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, which has opened a depot at 116 West Washington street, Indianapolis: Men between the ages of nineteen and forty-five for the British and Canadian infantry; skilled and unskilled for the Forestry Corps; skilled men for the Railway Operative Corps; skilled men for the Royal Flying Corps for the following work: Acetylene welders, blacksmiths, carpenters, coppersmiths, motorcyclists, motor drivers, engine fitters, motor fitters, engine room storemen, millwrights, milling machinists, metal turners, tinsmiths, cabinet makers, vulcanizers, male clerks and stenographers. For these skilled services special rates of pay have been arranged according to the work which a man is best qualified to do.

Skilled men for the inland water transport branch of the Royal Engineers as follows: Crane drivers, telephone linemen, quarrymen, stevedores, engineers, marine and motor seamen, marine firemen, boiler makers and electricians. These men are employed on inland waters in France and Mesopotamia and will be accepted between the ages of nineteen and fifty-six if physically fit for the duties which their work requires. This is for immediate service overseas.

Men for construction corps: Able seamen and stokers for the naval service.

This gives an opportunity to all British citizens in Indiana to take their place by voluntary enlistment alongside their comrades overseas.

In the early part of the war France and the British navy paid the necessary price to stop the German hordes while the small British army were unable to do more than hold their part of the line while gathering their strength. Today the British army is carrying on the heavy offensives and men of British blood in all parts of the world are rallying to the flag.

Members of County Councils of Defense and all other patriotic citizens are requested to co-operate with the mission in locating British subjects who might be included in this call. They are asked to report the names and addresses of all such subjects within their jurisdictions.

Merchants' Economy

Herbert Hoover, federal food administrator, has authorized the following:

"In the present movement for reasonable profits on staple foods the retail grocer will find many opportunities for readjusting his prices on the odd-penny basis. Sales of groceries have been hampered for years by the so-called round prices; that is, prices in even nickels and dimes.

"Odd-penny prices have been used to build up the sales of department stores and mail-order houses and are just as effective for the small retail stores.

"An interesting adaptation of the odd-penny price is being made by a cigar corporation to meet increased revenue taxes on cigars, cigarettes and tobacco. Articles which were formerly sold for 5 and 10 cents are priced variously at 6, 7, 8, 11, 12 and 14 cents to maintain both the standard quality and size of package."

"Women and children first," is the German motto when making an aerial attack.—Washington Herald.

Military Day at New Albany

Indiana communities should more and more organize for patriotic service. Nothing should be overlooked. One of the most effective methods of arousing enthusiasm and active patriotism was that employed at New Albany November 1, when "Military Day" was made a memorable occasion by the people of Floyd and surrounding counties.

Floyd county soldiers, 117 strong, clad in khaki and marching with the precision acquired in intensive training at Camp Taylor, over the Ohio river in Kentucky, were central figures in a monster patriotic parade, and high officers of the big training camp were guests of the city of New Albany.

All the school children marched, veterans of other wars stepped to the music of war and high school boys were in line in farm uniforms, bearing the hoes of patriotic home service. The spectacle was inspiring and helpful in a large degree.

One of the functions of the County Council of Defense in its locality is to take the lead in organizing such timely and stirring demonstrations as that at New Albany. Many cities already have done splendid work on this line. Indiana cannot have too many public manifestations of her loyalty and devotion to country in the war period.

Food News Notes for Libraries

For the purpose of keeping the libraries of the country fully informed of the progress of the food conservation movement, and to encourage their efforts to aid in the work, the food administration has begun publication of a series of monthly bulletins entitled "Food News Notes for Libraries."

In the first bulletin, which has just been issued, Mr. Herbert Hoover, food administrator, says:

"The libraries of our country are so organized as to keep in touch with all of our people. Many of you are already performing real service for the country along the line of food conservation. To encourage those who are now at work and to stir to endeavor those who are forgetting the national necessity for food conservation, because of their absorption in other things, the food administration will establish a direct communication with you through a series of monthly 'Food News Notes for Libraries.'

"This will enable you to know the food facts that are to be stressed over that particular period and will give you suggestions as to lists of books and pamphlets and other usable material and where it can best be obtained.

"We ask for your loyal support and we feel sure that you will give it."

Patriotic Peppergrams

American-made dyestuffs are reported to be winning world markets. American-made killstuffs and foodstuffs will win the world war and make world markets safe for business.

Every American soldier carries eighteen pounds of metal in his marching kit. It's the mettle in the American soldier's own make-up that will open the road to Berlin.

The school is a radio station of rational patriotism.

Never has there been a greater need for red blood in our educational system.

Speaking of Liberty bonds, if every patriot will buy and buy it will mean a sweeter by-and-by.

Uncle Sam has his weather eye on the woman who is knitting a sweater for herself.

Hindenberg says Germany was "forced into the war." America will force her out of it.

Germany has won no battle in this war where she met man for man and gun for gun, and she's getting no better fast.

Freedom of speech is important, but it is not the only freedom worth talking about.

Justice to Farmer in Hog Production

Statement of Policy of Federal Food Administration Issued on Ratio of Price of Corn.

Herbert Hoover, federal food administrator, has telegraphed G. I. Christie, director of the Indiana committee on food production and conservation, that the following statement authorized by Joseph D. Cotton, of the meat division of the United States food administration, represents the policy of the administration:

"The main purposes of the food administration as to hogs are:

"To see that the producer at all times can count on a fair price for his hogs so that it will be profitable to him;

"To see that the farmer increases the number of hogs bred;

"To limit the profit of the packer and the middleman; and

"To eliminate speculation.

"All these purposes are necessary, because we must have more hogs so that the ultimate consumer can at all times get an adequate supply of meat at the lowest feasible price.

"We shall establish rigid control of the packers. Fair prices to the farmer for his hogs, we believe, will be brought about by the full control which the Food Administration has over the buying of the allies, our army and navy, the Red Cross, the Belgian Relief and the neutrals, which together constitute a considerable factor in the market.

"The first step is to stop the sudden break in prices paid for hogs at the central markets. Those prices must become stable so that the farmer knows where he stands and will feel justified in increasing hogs for the next winter. THE PRICES, SO FAR AS WE CAN AFFECT THEM, WILL NOT GO BELOW A MINIMUM OF ABOUT $15.50 PER CWT. FOR THE AVERAGE OF THE PACKERS' DROVES ON THE CHICAGO MARKET UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

"We have had, and shall have, the advice of a board composed of practical hog growers and experts. That board advises that the best yard stick to measure the cost of production of the hog is the cost of corn. That board further advises that the ratio of corn prices to hog prices on the average over a series of years has been about twelve to one (or a little less) in the past.

"When the ratio has gone lower than twelve to one the stock of hogs in the country has decreased. When it was higher than twelve, the hogs have increased.

"That board has given its judgment that to bring the stock of hogs back to normal under present conditions, the ratio should be about thirteen.

"Therefore, as to the hogs farrowed next spring: We will try to stabilize the price so that the farmer can count on getting for each 100 pounds of hog ready for market thirteen times the average cost per bushel of the corn fed to the hog.

"Let there be no misunderstanding of this statement. It is not a guarantee backed by money. It is not a promise by the packers. It is a statement of the intention and policy of the Food Administration, which means to do justice to the farmer.

LETTER ON SEED CORN.

The following letter was sent to bankers, grain dealers and millers, county agents, emergency demonstration agents, assistant county agents, members of the corn growers association, seed corn committees in the various counties, State food committee and agricultural papers. The contents of which is of the greatest importance just at this time.

At a recent meeting of the Indiana Seed Stocks Committee, which is working under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the Committee on Food Production and Conservation of the State Council of Defense, it was clearly shown that the condition of seed corn in the corn belt is serious. A letter from the Seed Stocks Committee of Iowa says:

"We are finding seed corn very bad here. In fact, we do not know just what course to take to supply enough seed for next year's crop. Less than two-thirds of the farmers had the seed saved from the field when it was caught by the first freeze, and any that was left in the fields after October 6th is from one-third to two-thirds worthless."

Reliable data from the Bureau of Crop Estimates show that not more than 20 per cent. of the Indiana corn crop is suitable for seed. In other words, only 40,000,000 bushels of the 200,000,000 bushel crop can be used for seed purposes. This means then that many farms have no corn fit for seed and that some counties have less than five per cent. of the whole crop in a state sufficiently matured to warrant saving for planting. The corn crop in a large part of Illinois is equally bad and is demanding attention.

With these existing conditions Indiana farmers must act at once if they are to have seed corn for next spring. They can not afford to wait in the hope some neighbor or seed corn man will have seed for sale—corn should be selected now. If a farmer does not have suitable seed in his crop he should locate a supply and arrange to secure it immediately.

Again, many farms have corn of good quality that should be selected and properly stored for seed. The Seed Corn Committee of the better farming association should take immediate steps to locate these fields and arrange with the farmer to select and store a large supply of seed corn. This will take a little time and perhaps a little direction, especially in preparing a suitable place to store the corn. He may need too some assurance that this more is necessary and that the seed is needed.

If Purdue and the U. S. Department can help your people in this work, call upon them. Some big work has to be done if sufficient seed corn of high quality is ready for the 6,000,000 acres to be planted in 1918.

It is known that a campaign for seed corn has already been waged in your county and that many farmers have acted on the suggestions. It is also known that thousands of farmers have not taken any steps whatever to save seed corn. Do not let the work stop until there is assurance that a sufficient supply of high class seed is stored for the next crop.

Call your people together, present the facts, organize for work and take the first big step for a bumper corn crop for 1918. The amount of seed corn needed to plant the 1918 crop in your county is shown on attached sheet prepared by Geo. C. Bryant of the United States Bureau of Crop Estimates. The country demands the food—we must make good.

Give this matter all the publicity possible in your papers.

FOOD EXCHANGE IS RUSHED.

The producer and consumer are both benefited through the Food Conservation Headquarters at 229 North Pennsylvania Street. The headquarters is rushed with demands. Fruits and vegetables of all kinds are handled in large quantities every day. The rapidity with which the products sell is shown by the fact that one day during the week a carload of potatoes was sold and a ton of cabbage lasted only six hours. One hundred dozen eggs, 80 pounds of butter and $100 worth of fish were disposed of last Saturday.

Mrs. Carl G. Fisher, chairman, said that producer and consumer whether large or small were beginning to see the advantage of selling through the exchange. This has attributed to the success of the undertaking. Mrs. Fisher also said that they are in a position to handle much more produce and wished to appeal to growers to sell direct to consumers through this medium. The producer sets his own price and a charge of 10 per cent is made to defray operating expenses. The producer therefore receives a satisfactory price and the consumer pays a price less than he would ordinarily.

POTATOES NEEDED FOR SEED.

Indiana this year grew 125,000 acres of potatoes. If a similar acreage is planted next year approximately 1,500,000 bushels of potatoes will be necessary for seed. It is known that a large amount of potatoes planted are not true to name. Again, a large per cent. of these potatoes are affected with diseases.

It is very important that seed of suitable variety and quality be located and properly stored before the main crop is placed upon the market.

CLOVER SITUATION SERIOUS.

The clover seed situation is serious. A large amount of our clover still remains in the field unthrashed. The yield in the northern part of the state has been small. We find too that a majority of the seed has been bought up and is being held by the dealers. The present price indicates that the supply is short and that high prices will have to be paid next spring.

HOME DEMONSTRATION WORK.

The home demonstration work is gaining in prominence. At the Food Conservation Headquarters demonstrations are held four days a week to interest leaders in ways and means of saving meat, wheat, sugar and fats. The war will not be won through saving money but through the proper saving of food, which means substitution.

Miss L. M. Boston and Miss Eleanor Ferris, representatives of Purdue University in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture, are in charge of this work. All classes of people are being reached. The first demonstration was given October 31 to fifteen colored people. The second demonstration was attended by sixty people. Efforts are being made to interest the various organizations, such as church, parent teachers, improvement associations, etc., to send in three or four representatives to get the instruction which is given by Miss Boston. After the organization representatives have received their training they are expected to volunteer to teach ten other people in their community.

These volunteer demonstrators are certain to wield a powerful influence in helping to save food through substitution.

Teaching housekeepers to teach each other and to help themselves is the aid of the Home Demonstrators.

Quick Food Producers.

Dairy and poultry products as factors in the home work which will win the war are being urged for especial attention by an organization started at Worthington, Greene county, by Charles W. Jean and the C. W. Jean Company, dealers in poultry and dairy products.

Mr. Jean urges that the "quick food producers" should not be ignored while farmers are being asked to raise more beef, more wheat and more corn. It requires two years to prepare beef for use. It needs nine months for wheat and six months for corn to mature.

In the meantime, eggs, poultry and dairy products are produced quickly and can be made very largely to supply the places of meats and cereals.

At a dinner given by Mr. Jean at Worthington a definite organization was formed, and this organization is to be extended to many counties surrounding Greene county. Bankers have been interested, and will help in the work of financing dairymen in enlarging their herds and in increasing their product. The organizing committee is made up of Claude Gregg, W. C. Bretz, E. H. Baker and W. A. Rhyan, representing four counties. The new organization will exert itself for the stimulation of the war-time business of largely increasing the volume of poultry and dairy products. The C. W. Jean company, as its part of the work, is increasing its capacity 200 per cent.

Red Cross Desires Home Service Work

Urgent Need Set Forth by Division Director in Letter to Chapter Chairman.

The importance of every Red Cross chapter organizing a Home Service Section, without waiting for an urgent need for it to arise, is set forth in a letter from one of the division directors of civilian relief to the chairman of a chapter in his division. The review of reasons for immediate organization in all chapters is of general interest. The letter, in part, follows:

"Relative to your statement regarding the Home Service Section, I trust you will reconsider your decision not to organize such a committee unless urgent occasion arises for it.

"We cannot tell what faces us in this field and it may turn out, as you say, that your civilian relief committee might be called upon to give very little relief to dependent families of soldiers and sailors, but the Red Cross is pledged to home service in every case where needed throughout the country and I sincerely trust that every chapter will organize and equip itself for it.

"If you have read the Manual of Home Service carefully you realize that the Red Cross does not contemplate financial aid to the families of enlisted men as its main contribution to them, but rather, intelligent friendly service. If your chapter is to carry its part of the burden and the opportunity of this great organization—no matter how few dependent families of enlisted men you may now have in your community—you should organize your civilian relief committee and its section on Home Service.

"By no other means can you fix the responsibility for Home Service; and without a group charged with this responsibility there will be soldiers' children dropping out of school, and others deprived of timely medical treatment; there will be soldiers' wives who are wheedled out of their income by shrewd agents or cheated out of it by fakirs; and there will be soldiers' homes broken up during their absence by temptation or misfortune of one kind or another which the strong will and informed mind of a friend at hand might have overcome. There is a real task for helpful friendship in every community from which soldiers have gone, and from which more must go.

Who Knows the Most—These Men or You?

(By Thomas S. Jones, Chairman Harrison County Council of Defense)

In discussing the war issue and especially the question of Food Conservation, the necessity for close co-operation of all citizens and the absolute duty of every citizen to endeavor to comply with every request that the national government, through the President and the various government commissions, is making to the people, we find a tendency on the part of many of our citizens to regard these requests as foolish and unnecessary. We find further an idea prevailing that the war will be of short duration, and that those of us who are working in co-operation with the government are foolishly and needlessly aroused.

We ask such persons to stop and think a minute, reflecting as to whom the national leaders are that are most vigorously urging the necessity of all the measures advocated by the Council of Defense and war workers at this time.

There are living two ex-Presidents of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft. The patriotism of neither can be doubted; the broad experience, the expert knowledge of both is conceded. Neither of them is of the political faith of President Wilson, yet day after day and night after night they are speaking in city after city of this country, appealing to the people of the country, irrespective of party affiliations, or of creed, to support every measure advocated by the government. In every speech they warn the American people of the great danger to the government in this present crisis, of the necessity for conservation of every resource, and of the necessity of great sacrifice by every citizen. There are living in this country two men of different political faith who have been candidates of the great political parties for President of the United States—men of ability, of great information and experience, who have polled the votes of millions of American citizens—Charles E. Hughes and William J. Bryan, and these men day after day and night after night are speaking to their fellow citizens, appealing as do Taft and Roosevelt, for support for the government in its time of need.

There are in Indiana two men who have been and one of whom now is Vice-President of the United States, Charles W. Fairbanks, and Thomas R. Marshall, and these men are co-operating with the government and endorsing the measures of the government.

There is in New York a master mind, a man who for clear intellect is probably unequalled in the United States, a man who has been a United States Senator; a man, who is probably the most brilliant Secretary of State the Republican party ever produced, with the possible exception of James G. Blaine, and this man, Elihu Root, having been to Russia as a special representative of President Wilson, having probably more extensive acquaintance with international affairs than any man in the whole United States, is appealing in every speech he makes for the support of the government and its present plan during this war, and is saying in plain, unvarnished language that he who fails to comply with the request of his government in this hour of need is nothing less than a traitor.

There are men, such as Bishop Bell, the great Methodist churchman, and Cardinal Gibbons, the great Catholic leader, who likewise have made a study of the situation and are giving their time day after day in speaking for the government and sounding warnings equally like those of Roosevelt, Taft, Bryan, Hughes, Fairbanks, Marshall and Root.

It is not fair to presume that such men as these are alarmed without cause; it is fair to presume that they have some knowledge of the needs of the hour. It is fair to presume that they have not united thus in supporting the government for any other reason than that of purest patriotism. It is even fair to presume that they know more about the great questions arising out of the war than some of our street corner loafers, who can so easily dispose of these questions when they arise for discussion. We ask, therefore, from the people of this county for their co-operation and earnest support of every measure advocated by the government upon the advice and with the approval of the able men referred to in this article and of hundreds of others of marked ability and equal patriotism.

"The service called for presents a delicate and difficult task, all too frequently left undone or poorly performed for those who in peace were soldiers of a common land and a common good. The value of service is commensurate, not with the desire to serve, but with the knowledge and the power to serve. Those who have the desire can improve their knowledge and their power. If you will organize your civilian relief committee and its Home Service section, we will send literature to their members and encourage them to home study. Red Cross preparedness for Home Service must be commensurate with that of the army for military service. The President has said 'The American Red Cross is the official recognized agency for voluntary effort on behalf of the armed forces of the nation and for the administration of relief,' and also that 'civilian relief will present a field of increasing opportunity.'

"Let us prepare our division in this respect on a parity with the other divisions and thus do our part to stretch the Red Cross arm of mercy and sustaining strength into every nook and corner of America.

"Is not this also true—that none of the time and thought given to this subject can in any event be wasted? It will express itself in one form or another in various philanthropic activities of a community.

"The response which we are receiving from our letter requesting all chapters to organize this department is encouraging."

The following hints to Home Service workers are authorized by the American Red Cross department of civilian relief:

"Aside from the money relief, aside from the maintaining of standards, there is an endless number of friendly services—each one small in itself, but making, in the aggregate, the difference between success and failure. Here are a few such taken from the records of Home Service now actually being done:

HELPING CHILDREN WITH LESSONS.

"Explaining their lessons to children who fall behind in their classes.

"Seeing that the child in need of medical care actually goes to the dispensary and that the instructions there are understood and carried out. This often means having a home service worker accompany the child.

"Trying to understand by patient talks, and by seeking advice elsewhere, the child who is just beginning to be wayward and disobedient.

"Giving the children and the grown-up folks opportunities for good times—not as war families or war children, but individually and quietly, or in their own natural groupings.

HELPING TO THE RIGHT JOB.

"Fitting people to the right job and helping them to stay fitted by trying to find out where the job pinches.

"Seeing that insurance policies don't lapse. If the man has always attended to paying the premiums, his wife or mother may be careless about this.

"Encouraging the people who have more ready money than usual—some will have—to spend it with good sense and to save some of it, if possible, for the time when service pay stops.

"Protecting the recipient of pay and allowance checks from the wiles of the installment man and from unscrupulous sales agents.

"Getting the best legal advice for families in the complex problems that are sure to arise in war times."

Reserve Conference Called for Chicago

Indiana County and City Directors, Advisory Committee and Others Will Attend Meeting.

Word has been received by Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director, that the national conference of directors of the United States Boys' Working Reserve will be held in Chicago December 7 and 8. W. E. Hall, national director, advised that, while Indianapolis was favorably considered, Chicago was selected because it is more accessible and also in holding the meeting there the plans and purpose of this organization can be brought definitely to the attention of the many farmers who will attend the International Stock Raisers' Association, which meets in Chicago the same week.

All county and city directors for Indiana, members of the State advisory committee, educators and school authorities are invited to attend this conference. The program will be announced later.

DUBOIS COUNTY PATRIOT.

Cyril M. Wilson of Jasper, Ind., has the distinction of being the first member of the Reserve in Dubois county to earn the federal bronze badge. Young Wilson is a war patriot, being the proud possessor of a Liberty bond, and also a member of both the Jasper Red Cross Society and the Junior Red Cross Society of the Jasper high school. His activity in helping to organize the Reserve in his locality is stimulating enrollment very much, according to William Melchior, county director for Dubois county.

CORN HUSKING CLUBS.

With the approval of the State Council of Defense, many corn husking clubs are being organized among the high school boys. Each club is to be made up of ten to fifteen boys who, when the emergency demands, are to be dismissed from school on Fridays in order to husk corn on both Fridays and Saturdays. When a request is sent in for farm labor a team or club is assigned to this particular farmer. The boys are to receive regular wages from the farmers for the two days' work, which work is also applied as credit toward awarding bronze service medals to the members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. Many boys have signed up as members. This plan of work is made necessary by the shortage of farm labor due to many boys being called to the colors, and is being promoted throughout the United States by the Department of Agriculture and the State Council of Defense for Indiana.

CARELESS PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

On several occasions reports have reached the State Council of Defense of the indifferent attitude of certain public officials toward the various voluntary war measures, the successful prosecution of which the federal government continually urges. Indifference on the part of public officials is to be deplored and deliberate obstruction will be exposed. In one county an assistant prosecuting attorney and in another county certain township trustees are reported to have deliberately advised against the enrolling of boys in the United States Boys' Working Reserve and to have endeavored to create the false impression that the Reserve is a war measure, and boys who enroll in it will be taken from home for military service. Nothing could be farther from the truth.

RESERVE MAN-POWER.

The United States Boys' Working Reserve is briefly defined by National Director Hall as follows:

—What Is It?—

A reserve of man-power for industries and farms.

—Who Organized It?—

It is a national movement, organized under the statutory power of the United States Department of Labor and under the direction of the State Council of Defense for Indiana.

—Who Are Eligible?—

Young men in college under 21;
Boys in high school over 16;
Every boy, employed or idle, 16 to 20 years of age, inclusive.

—What Obligation Does a Member Take?—

(a) If already engaged in productive employment, to remain where you are and work faithfully.

(b) If in school, to remain there but study harder; also unless your parents have other plans, to devote your odd hours to emergency work and your vacations to productive employment, preferably on farms.

(c) If idle, to seek productive employment at once in your own neighborhood. If unsuccessful, notify the Reserve and an immediate effort will be made to find employment for you.

—Do Parents Lose Control of Their Sons Who Enroll?—

No! The furlough, or discharge, of any boy must be granted immediately upon the written request of his parents or guardian.

—Why Should a Boy Enroll?—

Modern warfare is between nations, not armies—therefore,
"Every American boy at work opposes a German boy."

VERMILION COUNTY.

W. J. Malcomb, county director for Vermilion county, reports that the Reserve is very active in the Cayuga high school. The boys realize that the Reserve will be a real factor in winning the war and last week organized a corn husking club with the following boys as charter members: Paul Newman, Carl Betson, Albert Henderson, Walter Dickerson, Claude Earls, Lester McShanog, Clarence Lloyd and Earlie Royse.

HOW TO QUALIFY FOR THE FEDERAL BRONZE BADGE.

All members and directors of the United States Boys' Working Reserve are urged to familiarize themselves with the various activities through which Reserve members may earn the federal bronze badge. The qualifications necessary, as related below, are in entire accord with the resolutions passed by the national committee in Washington, August 24, 1917, and became effective October 1, 1917.

FAITHFUL SERVICE REWARDED.

In recognition of faithful and honorable service rendered by the Reserve members, the United States Department of Labor has issued a war service medal known as the "Federal Bronze Badge." The boy's ambition should be to earn the national badge of honor, which is of bronze, and bears the great seal of the United States and the inscription, "Boys' Working Reserve, U. S. A.," together with an individual number for each boy, which number is recorded in Washington opposite the boy's name. He can earn this federal bronze badge in any of these three separate units: the Agricultural Unit, the Industrial Unit, the Vocational Training Unit.

AGRICULTURAL UNIT.

If he has worked on a farm during the year 1917 for at least three weeks and has been loyal and steadfast in such service, he will be awarded the bronze badge. After January 1, 1918, if he works on a farm, and if he renders satisfactory service for at least thirty-six days, he will be awarded the bronze badge and will become an active member of the Reserve. Half days or full days devoted to emergency work will count toward the accumulation of the thirty-six days of service for which the badge is awarded.

INDUSTRIAL UNIT.

In the Industrial Unit he must have worked faithfully and earnestly in some industry which is considered to be "essential" by the United States government in helping the nation in the prosecution of the war and for a period equivalent to sixty days of eight hours each subsequent to enrollment. The Federal State Directors will inform High School Directors and teachers and the Enrolling Officers just what industries are considered to be "essential."

VOCATIONAL UNIT.

In the Vocational Training Unit it is necessary that a boy shall subject himself to training in spare time, or in school hours, under the direction of his teachers, to fill a position where he will work at something which is of real help to his country in the present crisis. When he has so fitted himself, and when he has entered upon the actual work for which he has been trained, he is awarded the badge immediately. Until he has received the bronze badge he is known as a member, and afterwards as an active member of the Reserve. A boy need not choose, at the time of his enrollment, the particular unit in which he is to serve.

RECOMMENDATION FOR AWARD.

The federal bronze badge will be awarded to any member of the Reserve upon the proper recommendation being made by the County Director or High School Director to the Federal State Director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, 83 State House, Indianapolis, Ind. Such recommendation should set forth:

Name of Reserve member.....
Address .....
County .....
Work performed—give sufficient detail.....
Time employed .....
Recommended by .....
Address .....

Printed recommendation cards will be supplied to directors upon request by the Federal State Director at Indianapolis.

Patriotic Press Comment

The newspapers are willing to devote all possible space for the promotion of patriotism. Don't ask undue free space for any other projects in these war times, however. Have a heart and remember it costs like thunder to run a newspaper these days.—Alexandria Press.

The resolution adopted by the State Council of Defense favoring the investment of trust funds now held on deposit in banks by Circuit Court clerks in Liberty bonds should, if there is no legal impediment, be put into practice. This would put idle money to work in the most useful way in which it can just now serve the country and bestow it as safely as is humanly possible. When the time comes for it to be turned over to the proper owners many of them doubtless will be willing to accept such bonds, and for those who would prefer the cash, the bonds can readily be converted.—Shelbyville News.

Fuel Administrators Notice.

November 6, 1917.

County Fuel Administrators:

It has been suggested by several that a conference of the County Fuel Administrators here would be helpful. Accordingly one is called for Tuesday, November 13, at 1 p. m., in Room 234, East Court Room, on the second floor of the Federal Building.

Patriotic Pamphlet on Business of Living

Government Will Undertake to Educate Rising Generation on International Relations.

In order to bring the lessons of patriotism and of national and international relations within the comprehension of children, the instruction in conservation which is to be given in American schools this year at the instance of President Wilson will begin with and emphasize home and local problems. A series of lesson leaflets will be issued monthly by the food administration and the Bureau of Education throughout the present school year.

During the past summer the food administration supplied its bulletin, "Ten lessons on food conservation," for courses given to adults in every State university and agricultural college having a summer session or teachers' institute. These courses emphasized the fact that the food problem will remain as a permanent factor in our community life.

FOR THE RISING GENERATION.

President Wilson's recommendation that school children be enlisted to study problems of community and national life was instantly approved by students of conservation. The food administrator and United States Commissioner of Education P. P. Claxton were designated by the President to secure the support of school authorities. The plan is to educate a rising generation that will know better than its predecessors how to conduct the business of living.

The lessons will consist of reading matter to be put directly into the hands of the pupils. Leaflets of thirty-two pages each will be issued every month from October to May. Each month's issue will be divided into three lessons, printed separately, one for the three upper classes of high school, another for the first high school class and the seventh and eighth grades, and a third for the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

FOR USE IN READING LESSONS.

These lessons will be used for reading in English classes, and for material for discussion or compositions. The subject-matter is so closely correlated with geography and history that it can be profitably used at least one hour a week in periods drawn from the allotment made to these subjects. It can be used in civics or current-topics work, or can justifiably be given a place on the program as a major course in itself.

By beginning with the simple relations and processes of the home, the editor of the leaflets, Professor Charles H. Judd of the University of Chicago, expects to work outward from a center familiar to all pupils into wider fields that they know little of.

About one-fourth of each of the sections of the first leaflet will utilize the experience of the war by showing the interdependence of members of a modern social group. The war lessons will take up topics such as the following: What the war has used up; what the war prevents men from producing; new needs which have grown out of the war and have been met by invention.

FIRST-LESSON FEATURES.

The first lesson in the October leaflets takes up conditions brought about or made acute by the war. Lesson I in section A, for high schools, points out how war involves co-operation and economy. France, withdrawing her artisans, chemists and engineers from the firing line, is an example of intelligent co-operation. The first lesson in section B, for upper grades, discusses the effect of war on the commerce in nitrate; and in section C, for the intermediate grades, the subject is "The War and Aeroplanes."

The section for use in the upper classes of the high school will contrast the life of a frontiersman with that of a modern city dweller. The section for the lower grades will deal with the things society makes and uses.

SMALL COST TO PUPILS.

It will be possible to supply during the year 256 pages of reading matter to each pupil at an aggregate cost of 8 cents, and to a teacher 768 pages for 24 cents. Reprints can be ordered from the Superintendent of Documents at Washington when desired in bulk. Small schools are asked to consolidate their orders through county superintendents or State departments of education, and money orders are required with the orders. It is recommended that teachers secure all three sections each month, no matter what grades they teach, in order to be thoroughly familiar with all printed matter furnished. Teachers are asked to pay special attention to supplementary reading matter indicated in the leaflets.

Teachers Pledge to Support the State

Indiana Educators Agree to Their Duty to Government in Time of Emergency.

Patriotic and practical war resolutions were passed by Indiana teachers in the recent convention of the Indiana State Teachers' Association. The resolutions committee in its report urged:

1. The necessary modification of organization and administration of schools, of the course of study, and of methods of instruction, as a basis for relating school work much more closely with actual life needs.
2. Physical education, including the work of medical inspectors and school nurses.
3. The teaching of patriotism by a variety of methods adapted to the various degrees of maturity of the children in the schools.
4. Training children to realize the benefits of genuine thrift and conservation of all the individual and national resources.
5. Prompt organization and further development of the most important forms of vocational work.
6. Advisable alterations in the length of the school day, week and year, with provisions for part-time work and continuation schools.
7. Wider use of school plants.
8. Renewed effort to lift and keep State and local school positions out of politics.
9. Conserving the health, morals and special talents of the children of the State.
10. Legalizing the office and defining the duties and authorities of superintendents of city schools.

The duties of teachers are set out in a preamble as follows:

"The Indiana State Teachers' Association, in annual convention assembled under conditions of an unprecedented world crisis, recognizes with increasing alarm the seriousness with which this crisis threatens the very existence of all that is most dear to the hearts of the lovers of freedom and righteousness; appreciates most deeply the efforts of our national, State and local governments to hurry to the support of the allies in this herculean task of permanently subduing the common enemy of enlightened humanity; and pledges its loyal and vigorous support to the President of the United States, to the Governor of Indiana, to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, to the State Council for National Defense, to the State Educational Council, and to all activities of the national, State and local administrations in their struggle to win this war for our country and for the allies in order that present world progress may be protected and that future progress may be assured.

"We rejoice that the people of the United States have responded so heartily to the call to patriotic service. We recognize that the young men whose faces are perforce turned temporarily from their homes and country toward the foe are making supreme sacrifice in our common cause, and that our sacrifice, however great, in money, and in time, cannot equal that which they are making. We dedicate ourselves therefore to renewed and persistent effort to support our President and Congress, not only in their efforts to assure the utmost financial support in the winning of this war, but also in their efforts to make impossible the pernicious and traitorous effect of disloyal words and actions, or of disloyal indifference to the call of service.

"In our eagerness to subdue a powerful and ruthless enemy we must not blindly weaken our future efficiency. The greatest assets of a modern civilization are its high ideals and its children. War is prone, as we have realized only too well from the results of the present struggle, to disregard and trample on the rights of the weak. It is our paramount duty therefore to do all in our power to keep before the youth of the country the noble ideals that light our way in the present gigantic struggle and to keep unsullied the high standards of right conduct that we have as our greatest inheritance from our fathers; and that these ideals may be preserved through our just but regrettable conflict, we call upon our State and upon the nation to keep inviolate the bulwarks of safety to our children, erected through the enactment of our slowly and dearly bought child welfare laws. The temptation will be strong to gain an immediate result at the cost of the physical vigor of our children and of their school training.

"We must remember that our future defense depends upon our enlightenment and upon our physical health. We believe therefore that it is a patriotic duty of the whole nation to get even a larger number of children in school than ever before, to hold them longer than ever before, and to see that their patriotism is aroused to the point where they feel that they are doing neither their duty to themselves nor to their country unless their daily achievement in their school work is all that they are capable of making it. Those who in the judgment of our governmental and school authorities are mature enough and strong enough physically, should be urged to respond to the country's call for additional service—a war service in the fields and in the shops and factories. This service should not be in lieu of but in addition to the patriotic service of furthering their educational advantages. In war time preparation should be made both for war times and for times of peace. These are war times and times of sacrifice. We should all be willing to give up temporarily a part of our daily leisure and of our periodical vacations. Children can do the same under guidance, and thereby add materially to the work of the world without jeopardizing future national intelligence and stamina.

"In the presence of our existing unprecedented need we pledge ourselves to renewed and extraordinary effort to the end that the nation's war program may best be served. In order that our schools may be strengthened both for war and for peace, we recommend increased vigilance on the part of the State's educational forces along certain lines that have been receiving consideration in the past, and the appointment of committees to make intensive studies of certain of these things and report conclusions and recommendations to the 1918 meeting of this association."

America's Problem.

Direct from the United States Food Administration at Washington comes this word to Minnesotans:

"Our problem is to feed our Allies this winter by sending them as much food as we can. America is the great reserve behind front lines. Wheat, beef, pork, dairy products and sugar must be shipped by the millions of tons.

"Our solution is to eat less of these and more of other foods of which we have an abundance, and to waste less of all food."

Here are ways all of us can help:

Buy less; cook no more than necessary; serve smaller portions.

Use local and seasonable supplies.

Patronize local producers and lessen the need, and cost of transportation.

Preach and practice the "Gospel of the Clean Plate."

Don't starve yourself, of course. And don't limit the plain food of growing children.

But watch out for waste in your community. Don't eat between meals.

EAT PLENTY, BUT WISELY AND WITHOUT WASTE.

Every pacifist speech in this country made at this inopportune and improper time is, in effect, traitorous.—W. G. McADOO.

Women of Indiana Preparing for War

Registration for Such Emergency Work as Their Experience and Willingness Justify.

One week after its organization W. W. Gifford, of the Council of National Defense, requested the appointment of three women to confer with the Woman's Power committee. The Council of Defense in ten days afterward organized the National Woman's Council, and in April the women's committee of the Council of National Defense was established at the capital with Dr. Anna Howard Shaw as chairman. State and local chairmen were then named and private organizations of women interested in patriotic activities were co-ordinated.

The registration of Indiana women for patriotic service began very soon after the outbreak of the war with Germany. It was one of the first major activities of the Women's section. Registration cards were issued through the women members of the County Councils of the State. The cards contained a statement of the object of the registration, as follows:

"To co-ordinate and standardize the work of the women of Indiana along lines of constructive patriotism, this effort is being made to secure the registry of the women who are ready to volunteer their services in time of emergency."

The form of the card followed. It asked first for the name, and full address of the signer, with the date. Age, and nationality of parents were asked and blanks left for an indication of whether any member of the family was in the service of the United States army or navy. The questionnaire which followed covered education and experience, asking specifically for ability as a linguist. The availability of the signer for voluntary and paid work was asked, present occupation and whether anything was being done for Red Cross, French relief or Navy league work.

By a checking system the signer then was expected to set forth the lines she thought herself best fitted to follow in the event there came a call as outlined. Social and Welfare work, including factory inspection, social club work, housing and feeding, industrial workers, industrial canteens, railroad station canteens and co-operation in caring for the families of militia-men (visiting and investigating); Commissariat, cooking and purchasing; Agricultural, gardening, poultry raising, dairying; Industrial, shops, factories; Medical and Nursing, assistant in hospital, making home supplies; Motor driving; General Service, executive, stenography, card cataloging, sewing, mending, knitting, laundering, scrubbing, clerical work, telegraphy, switch-board, signaling and filing.

In order that there be no misunderstanding as to what these classifications mean, it might be well to make a few explanations here. Under the head of Social and Welfare work is the classification "Factory inspection." This applies to working conditions within the factory and not to the examination of big machines and power transmission, nor to the output of the factory, where women and girls are employed there is often occasion, too, to inquire into the moral safeguards that have been provided by the employer. "Housing and Feeding" also means an inquiry into the conditions under which factory or emergency war workers live and are fed. Industrial canteens often are established in factories or nearby, and they too must be kept sanitary, prices reasonable, and properly supervised. Social club work means community work—seeing the poor have sufficient recreation and are

Line Up!

It ain't the guns, nor armament,
Nor funds that they can pay,
But the close co-operation
That makes them win the day.

It ain't the individuals
Nor the army as a whole
But the everlastin' team work
Of every bloomin' soul.

rendered as nearly contented as possible. Railroad canteens have been found necessary where the workmen are subject to long hours and are taxed to the limit of their physical capacity. Soldiers, too, are fed at railroad canteens while enroute under orders. Visiting the families of men in the federal service, providing them with food and clothing where needed in order to maintain a good morale both at the fighting front and at hospitals is highly essential in war time.

Under the "Commissariat" classification comes the ability and willingness to cook for canteens. Purchasing includes buying supplies for canteens. Industrial work means only such work as the signer may have experienced in shop or factory and would willingly perform again. Medical and Nursing work and motor driving, which are now very common in Europe, among women, are duties that must fall to American women with the continuation of the war.

It should not be understood that the government is asking anyone to work without pay where their financial ability does not justify. Nor is it asking any woman to work her entire time if she has other obligations. It desires such women as will work all or part time, and wants to know whether they expect pay or not.

Secretary Millhouse, of the Indianapolis civil service board, asks as soon as our registration is complete, that he be permitted to use the names of all women who have been stenographers. Why? To enlist them for free service? No indeed. The government wants stenographers. It wants them so badly that it is paying from $100 to $250 more per year for beginners than ever before. So here is a practical use of this registration. Uncle Sam will pay these women well. He needs them and there must be many who can serve if they will.

In conclusion the question was asked what part of signer's time might be expected if she were to be called upon and whether she would willingly leave home and go to any locality assigned.

It is quite clear that the entire proposition was and is voluntary. The absence of either federal or State law calling for such a census forced the registration officers to depend upon their ability to make the average woman understand that the signature bound the signer to absolutely nothing except what she was ready to do voluntarily and from patriotic motives. The usual enemy opposition developed and such statements as the one which conveyed the suggestion that this was a "draft of women"; that the government would later require women to perform such tasks as she admitted she was able to perform; that the information put down on the cards would be used by conscription boards as an evidence of the woman being able to support herself should her husband be called on for army service; and others equally traitorous and more maliciously false became common. It is even now the deception, misrepresentation and ignorance of the women of Indiana that is retarding the success of this highly important work.

England had been in the great war less than

Soldiers Tell How Lies May Originate

Corporal Says Enlisted Men Given Garments Knit by Red Cross Perhaps Sell Them.

Silly and absurdly false stories of Red Cross sweaters "sold" to soldiers are completely refuted by soldiers themselves. It is not difficult to show that where a sweater is "sold" to a soldier it is merely a case where some thoughtless recruit has disposed of his Red Cross gift sweater to a camp-follower who has sold it elsewhere to some other soldier who can see the value of the garment.

As the sweaters are being issued free to regiments that have been ordered to the front, those regiments which are still waiting for orders and for sweaters, provide a market where the peddler can sell the goods he may have picked up in the expeditionary forces.

Corporal Paul T. Cunningham, a Kentland, Ind., man of the regular field artillery, writing from Camp Robinson, Wis., flatly denies that Red Cross sweaters have been sold in that camp, and says further that enlisted men have been issued the knit goods ahead of commissioned officers. In a letter to Mrs. Cora Garland, supervisor of the Red Cross Shop at Logansport, Ind., Corporal Cunningham says in part:

"I was somewhat surprised to get such a communication as yours and I assure you I am very glad to get the opportunity to contradict the rumors afloat that soldiers have to purchase the knitted articles that the Red Cross is furnishing the army. I can very emphatically say that nothing of that kind has happened in this camp and there has been two regiments equipped with sweaters, socks, mufflers and wristlets. Not only that, but the enlisted men have all been equipped before the officers.

"All these articles are very useful and also much appreciated by the soldiers, although we are furnished with plenty of warm clothing by the government such articles as these will go a long ways towards making life bearable in the trenches. The ones they are furnishing these articles to now are those nearest ready to go to France. Our regiment is all packed up and awaiting orders for movement to the Eastern coast and then for France. We are all anxious to get over there and see what is going on and we also realize that the sooner Uncle Sam gets a million over there the sooner it will be ended.

"Even though this is the Regular Army and made up of men from all over the country, there are about 35 per cent. of this battery from Indiana, which certainly makes a good showing for the Hoosier State.

"Again stating that I am very much pleased to get this chance to thank the Red Cross for my share in the fruits of this wonderful work and assure you all of us would like to do."

One benefit of the war is that it has induced consumers to study foods and food values.

Practical Patriotism.

Aden J. Steel, a Bloomfield, Greene County, coal dealer, has announced that as a war measure of patriotism he will supply fuel at cost to all mothers and wives in Bloomfield who are dependent on soldiers.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams.—The churches of Monroe, Adams county, joined by a patriotic meeting and the meeting was attended by an immense crowd.

Decatur county boys with Battery A, 139th Field Artillery, at Hattiesburg, have made an accounting through the old Adams County Bank, Decatur, for money sent by the home people to be used as a company fund. The sum of $1,350.88 was placed to the account of the soldiers. Leo E. Ehinger, treasurer for the soldiers, is making periodical reports to the home folk. The list of checks includes the cost of an ice box, $5.93 for eggs, $7.20 for meat bought on route southward, and $4 for ice cream, with $50 for stock in the regimental exchange or store. This gives a practical illustration of the things for which company funds are expended. The report shows that the expenditures for eatables were refunded by the federal government.

Dr. Harry Erwin of Huntertown, son of the late Chief Justice Richard K. Erwin of Ft. Wayne, of the Indiana Supreme Court, has gone to the colors as a captain in the medical corps. Mrs. Erwin and her five-year-old daughter will live at Huntertown. Captain Erwin went to Ft. Oglethorpe, Georgia.

Military drill after school hours is an innovation at the Decatur high school. The boys and girls have been organized in companies and give fifteen to thirty minutes each evening to the rudiments of military training, under the command of their teachers.

Decatur women are taking a lively and growing interest in Red Cross work. As many as twenty-two workers are busy daily and the force is increasing rapidly. The Shakespeare Club gives each Wednesday to the work. Mrs. J. R. Horton, Mrs. E. B. Adams and Miss Tillie Meibers are assistant teachers. Five workers are busy in the garment-making section under Miss Gertrude Holthorpe.

Allen County.—With the approval of the Allen County Council of Defense, the University Club of Ft. Wayne gave a college-military spectacle, "The Army and Navy," for a purely patriotic purpose—the creation of a fund to be used in war work. The three performances were successful. The Allen County Council of Defense has created a special committee which handles the matter of benefits for patriotic purposes, declining to give sanction to any but those which give all their proceeds to patriotic service.

Osteopaths of Indiana, in convention at Ft. Wayne, discussed and made plans for giving free treatments to men who are rejected by the army examiners for physical defects. It is suggested that in many cases these physical defects may be remedied and the men made fit for military duty.

Commander Fred M. Freeman of the United States navy, a Ft. Wayne man, was in command of the Alcedo, a patrol boat recently sunk by a U-boat. Friends and relatives are seeking information as to the safety of Commander Freeman, who visited Ft. Wayne a few weeks ago.

Bartholomew County.—Mrs. Arthur W. Mason of Columbus is the new War Mother for Bartholomew county. Mrs. Mason selected the mother of a soldier in every township to co-operate with her in war work. The War Mothers are expected to show a livelier interest in food conservation and other war activities because of the fact they have sons in the service. The following are the War Mothers for the county: Mesdames William Morrison, Edgar Diewert, Mary Gant, Vestal Folger, John Decker, John Sublette, Eliza J. Lostutter, William Muir, Thomas Cox, Simeon Norton, Theodore Templeton, John Ogilvie, Philip Stillabower, Jennie Newsom and Harvey Carr.

M. O. Reeves, Bartholomew fuel director, toured ten towns in the county and found coal needed in all the communities. At Nortonburg a car of coal had just arrived and seventeen teams were on hand to haul the fuel to the chilled consumers.

Mr. Reeves took charge of the distribution of coal sent to Columbus for emergency relief, the fuel being sent from Knox county. J. H. Garver, a local dealer, handled the supply at $4.50 a ton. Columbus organized a fuel relief committee through the Chamber of Commerce and enabled Mayor Volland and the Council of Defense and the fuel administration to get an accurate line on the fuel needs of the city.

Joseph V. Hilger, a Columbus merchant, is urging that in view of the large volume of patriotic knitting being done for soldiers, and the vital need for the sweaters, socks and other articles being made, the government ought to regulate and control the cost of yarn just as it controls food and fuel prices.

Benton County.—Boswell's Roll of Honor, bearing twenty-nine names of young men from the town who have gone to the colors, was read at a patriotic meeting at the Christian church following a flag-raising. The Roll of Honor as printed in the Boswell Times is as follows: Homer Winslow, Robert Lynch, Guy Freeman, Sigel Freeman, Earl Hunt, August Arnett, Robert Vice, Walter Smith, Herbert Dice, Charles Walters, Emmett Scanlon, Harvey Fix, Clifford Hankins, Allen Eberley, Edward Fenters, Paul Riley, Frank Bradley, Albert Ford, Howard Flack, Robert Smith, Ray Mallen, Lloyd Delzell, Oliver Cook, Guy Dodson, Ezra Phillips, Charles Burton, Dr. R. C. Erb, Dr. H. H. Hubbard and Dr. F. B. McAdams.

The M. E. Ladies' Aid Society of Fowler subscribed for $150 in Liberty loan bonds.

Mrs. Sarah Robertson has contributed $25 to the Boswell Red Cross. The Embroidery Club gave $5. The local chapters' rooms are open three days a week and expert workers are doing much work in the homes.

Blackford County.—The Blackford County Home Guard Company already is attaining proficiency in drill and its seventy-five members have been drilling in public. The command is partly equipped with rifles. New members are being enlisted daily and the unit hopes to be mustered in soon.

The Blackford County Council of Defense recommended J. L. McGeath for county fuel administrator and Mr. McGeath now is actively in charge of the coal situation. While it has been suggested that dwellers in the country use wood for fuel, it has been found difficult to get wood choppers to make the timber available. Farmers are being urged to haul wood to town and are being assured of good prices.

Boone County.—The county drive in Boone for the Y. M. C. A. war fund is led by George T. Miller, L. B. Smelser and J. W. Witt, with W. J. DeVol as a member of the Indiana War Fund Campaign Committee and Mitchell Tillotson as a member of the Indiana Y. M. C. A. War Committee for Men and Boys. Mr. Tillotson has been put in charge of the young men and boys for the Boone drive. The executive committee, each assigned to a township, includes: W. H. Parr, Rev. C. A. Parkin, E. M. Services, Rev. A. L. Ward, E. C. Guillon, Roy Adney, Rev. O. H. Carmichael, W. J. DeVol, H. G. Brown, Rev. R. H. Kent and W. T. Hooton. With a publicity committee and special teams for Lebanon and Center township, the Boone county outfit has been doing great work.

The federal authorities, through C. I. McIntosh, are working for the co-operation of Boone county officers in the placing of a federal agent in the county who shall work for the government with the farmers and stock raisers for the increase of production and the conservation and distribution of crops in war time. Where the county already has a county agent, he is made the federal representative.

Cass County.—Plans are being worked out for obtaining uniforms without delay for the new Logansport Home Guards. The organization has an armory and is drilling regularly under Captain George Custer. The Logansport outfit is rapidly getting in shape to be mustered into the State militia for war service within Indiana.

Men who come under the selective enlistment law but who already are in the service and so not subject to draft, are being listed here with the Cass county exemption board so as to avoid confusion and to prevent the publication of the names of soldiers among those reported as failing to respond under the draft law.

Clay County.—One of the most enthusiastic patriotic meetings recently held in this part of the State was that at the German Reformed church, Stearleyville, where $10,000 worth of Liberty loan bonds were taken by German-American farmers. Rev. E. Garfield Johnson made the appeal and was assisted by John H. Riddell, Marvin McCullough, Jerome Bogle and William Wallace.

Herman W. Dietz has been chosen by the federal government to serve as assistant superintendent in a gun plant at Detroit. Mr. Dietz was subject to the selective enlistment law and he was asked to serve where he could be more useful than he would be in the army.

Dearborn County.—Mrs. John Stier of Aurora has been named to organize the War Mothers in Dearborn county, the work being under the direction of the State and County Councils of Defense. Mrs. Stier is selecting a War Mother for each township in the county, and their duty will be to look after the well-being and comfort of the soldiers and sailors from their respective townships, under the supervision of Mrs. Stier. It is expected this movement, which has been tried out in Canada, will prove to be helpful in many ways. The War Mothers also are counted on to help in defense work, food conservation, and the like.

Dubois County.—Huntingburg has sent $125 to Dubois county men who are training at Camp Taylor as part of the "mess fund" supplied by the home people for the comfort of the soldiers.

Cannelton and Jasper have also sent forward a like sum. The people of Cannelton sent two boxes of sweets, 130 quarts, to the boys from Dubois.

Floyd County.—New Albany is to organize a company of Home Guards. E. V. Knight, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, has been asked by Adjutant-General Harry B. Smith to handle the project. Mr. Knight is a colonel on the military staff of Governor Goodrich.

Scarcity of material for making shirts is reported at the New Albany branch of the quartermaster's depot, and no additional seamstresses are being employed.

Everett Gliddehaus, a window trimmer in New Albany a few years ago, and now a warrant officer in the navy, has been assigned to duty as an ensign, a commissioned officer, in the naval aviation corps.

Fountain County.—The County Council of Defense of Fountain county recently received a supply of yarn and Attica women have been calling for supplies with which to carry forward the "Socks for Soldiers" work. Mrs. D. C. Reed is in charge of the work, assisted by Mrs. Rachel Levor.

Christmas boxes to be sent to Fountain county soldiers in France have been packed by Attica women. Shipments are to be made by November 15.

The Attica schools have conducted a class contest in raising funds for the Red Cross. The high school sophomores gave "Freckles" at the Messner opera house, the proceeds to go to the movement. The Seniors gave an entertainment and the eighth grade pupils used the opera house in giving a show for the Red Cross cause.

The Attica Tribune reports that false reports have been circulated by pro-German agencies in an effort to obstruct the campaign to get Hoover food conservation card signers. The effect, however, has been to stimulate interest and conservation activities as the women have learned the truth.

The Attica high school junior class boys gave a minstrel show at West Lebanon, repeating the success achieved in the first performance in Attica and realizing a good sum for the Red Cross.

Gibson County.—As one method of utilizing the part of the Indiana corn crop which failed to mature and which was caught by the frost, County Agent R. R. Marshall of Gibson county is working with other county agents in the southern and western part of the State to induce cattle growers in the West to bring in cattle and feed them for market in the Wabash valley section, using the soft corn to produce beef. It is pretty well understood the distillers are not going to be able to handle all the soft corn in making industrial alcohol.

Soldiers from Gibson county now with Company E of the 335th Infantry at Camp Taylor are to receive "mess funds" from the people of the county at the ratio of $2 for each man. A recent appeal for funds met with a prompt response. The Gibson county men are thrown with Pike county soldiers, and the two counties have been in friendly rivalry in providing a company fund.

Hendricks County.—The Masonic lodge at Plainfield has turned the lodge dining room, parlor, club room, kitchen and other space over to the Red Cross chapter to be used as headquarters and as a working place where more than two hundred women are to carry on war work. The Masons will furnish heat and light for the Red Cross shop without cost. The Woman's Club and the Friday Club have put aside their club programs for the year and will give their time to Red Cross work, thus adding some one hundred workers.

Working twice a week since September 13, the Cloverdale chapter of the Red Cross has completed 516 garments.

Henry County.—Patriots are being card-indexed by the Henry County Council of Defense, the plan being to keep a card record of the contributions made to various war funds by the individual. When defense workers solicit in future they will know what the citizen approached has done in the past for his country, for the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. or other movements. Citizens are to be rated according to ability to serve their country in a substantial way, and the workers will be governed accordingly. The cards with their records are private and will be treated as confidential by the Defense Council. When the index of patriotism is completed, however, it will tell what each man has done and what he is able further to do for his country.

Jackson County.—Patriotic citizens of Seymour and vicinity have been successful in refuting false reports circulated by enemy agencies and efforts to impede the Hoover food conservation campaign have failed. It has been found that when the people are fully informed they gladly sign the pledge cards and join the work of substituting other good foods for the wheat and meat that must be sent in large quantities to sustain our armies and our allies and comrades abroad during the war emergency, when America is the great reserve force.

Jay County.—J. C. Hood of Portland, Jay county food administrator, is taking measures to protect grain elevators, stock yards and other centers where food supplies are held.

Knox County.—Vincennes has attracted attention because of the remarkable success of the class in telegraphy, organized in the public schools in response to the government's demand for a large number of operators for service during the war. Inquiries have come from all directions and other cities are seeking to adopt the Vincennes plan. The Indiana State Council of Defense, educational section, is making a special investigation of the Vincennes school of telegraphy with a view to adapting the ideas obtained in furthering similar activities elsewhere in the State.

William French, a Knox county farmer who some time ago refused to buy Liberty bonds, exclaiming, "To hell with the Liberty bonds," changed his mind and his attitude when confronted by a penal farm term as an alternative, and paid cash for a bond. Mrs. William Allen Cullop, wife of the former Second district congressman, reported the case to Mayor James M. House of Vincennes, who called French in and wrought the patriotic transformation.

Kosciusko County.—Miss Julia DeSloovere, a native of Belgium, now a resident of Syracuse, has taken out naturalization papers and will become an American citizen. Victor DeSloovere, a brother, formerly employed in Syracuse, now is in France as an American soldier with the expeditionary forces. This young Belgian-American's name now is on the Roll of Honor of those from Kosciusko county who have gone to the colors. Another brother is in Holland, where for three years he has been a prisoner of war. His wife has just been freed from a German prison, and a ten-year-old niece also has just been permitted to leave the prison in Germany. The child's mother literally starved to death two years ago.

in the war zone occupied by Germany.

Syracuse Red Cross workers have just made a large shipment of Red Cross supplies to Ft. Wayne headquarters and are preparing to make another shipment December 1.

Laporte County.—The Laporte Chamber of Commerce held a patriotic meeting at which Captain A. F. G. Gam-mack, a surgeon in the British army, talked on "The War As I Saw It."

Julius C. Travis has been named to take the place of Andrew J. Hickey on the exemption appeal board for the First district of Indiana. Mr. Hickey has served well for four months, as secretary of the board, at a large sacrifice of his law practice, and in accepting his resignation the federal government paid high tribute to his unselfish and capable work.

The part of the church in winning the war is the central subject of a series of sermons preached at the Sauk-town church by Rev. J. H. Clark, pastor of the Christian church at Rolling Prairie. Unique meetings have been held, opening with short talks by various defense workers on war subjects, the sermon following, and dealing with religion and service to mankind and country. J. D. Harper spoke at one of these meetings on "The Farmer's Bit." In "The Boy's Bit," County Superintendent Farnham discussed the war work of the Boys' Working Reserve.

Lee L. Osborn is in charge of a movement to organize a battery in Laporte. Captain Basil Middleton of Cul-ver, who is working on a battery at Logansport, is assisting in the promotion of the movement in Laporte county.

Speakers in twenty-two churches of Laporte county spoke Sunday, November 11, for the Y. M. C. A. war fund, preliminary to the county drive which is to continue until November 19. The speakers were: Dr. H. H. Martin, Captain A. E. Trevitt, R. N. Smith, Howard McLane, H. W. Worden, C. V. Shields, H. B. Darling, C. W. Pettit, P. A. Tennis, E. F. Schafer, R. A. Overholser, J. D. Harper, F. R. Liddell, F. A. Pribbenow, Carl Everett, F. W. Kloockslem, E. H. Guenther, Dr. P. T. Wilcox, E. J. Fishbaugh, H. P. Kelsey, F. J. Pliner, O. E. McCarver, K. M. Andrew and D. LeB. Goodwin.

Madison County.—The County Council, in special session, has set aside $700 for the use of the Madison County Council Council of Defense in the furtherance of war work. This makes $1,000 thus far appropriated for the work in the county.

Investigators are at work to run down falsehoods circulated in Anderson, especially among the women, which untrue statements were to the effect that socks knitted by Madison county women for soldiers were being "sold to the soldiers" instead of being given to the men in khaki. Mrs. J. W. Sansberry, in charge of the Madison County Defense Council's "Socks for Soldiers" activities in Anderson, has tried vainly to trace these false reports to their sources. The effort to hinder the defense work apparently is systematic. The socks go free to the soldiers and many have been knitted by women who supplied the yarn, while others have been made of yarn provided out of the Defense Council's yarn fund.

Marion County.—Indiana admirers of the late James Whitcomb Riley have just completed a $2,000 fund with which a Riley ambulance is to be supplied for the Italian battle front. The last $5 of the fund was contributed by Elizabeth and Edmund H. Eitel, niece and nephew of the poet.

Miss Mary Kappes is the first Indianapolis girl to enlist as a canteen worker with the Red Cross. These workers pay their own expenses and serve without pay. They must speak French and be able to mend and cook and in other ways minister to the needs of soldiers on furlough back of the trenches in France.

Cards have been provided here in lieu of service flags, the cards to be displayed in the windows of the homes which have sent men into the army or navy. The cards, which are supplied by the Third district conscription board, bear a flag, a service star, and the words "A man from this house has gone to the colors."

Directed by the Rotary Club, a street corner drive has been carried forward with large success in Indianapolis. Cash registers in charge of young women are on the corners and the contributor to the war camp recreational fund seen his offering "registered up" by the solicitor. H. McK. Landon of Indianapolis, at the head of the quest for $40,000 as Marion county's share of the fund, set a fine example by becoming a "War Daddy" to look after the wants of an entire Indiana company of 240 men.

The sum of $250,000 is being raised as Marion county's portion of the Indiana million which is to help create the big Y. M. C. A. war fund.

Marshall County.—Fifty dollars is the share being raised by the town of Argos for the war camp recreational fund. D. R. Grossman has had charge of the task of raising this money.

Monroe County.—A Roll of Honor is being prepared, bearing the names of all graduates and former students of Indiana University, and the record will be hung in the student building, Foundation Day.

Montgomery County.—Waveland Y. M. C. A. workers organized a patriotic meeting preliminary to the drive for the war fund, with Raymond Ross of Crawfordsville as the speaker. Mr. Ross has seen hard service on the west front with the French flying corps and now is invalided home.

Wabash College, Crawfordsville, has completed the raising of $1,000 as its part of Montgomery county's quota for the Y. M. C. A. war fund.

Captain C. A. Wray is recruiting officer for the new battery being organized in Crawfordsville. Crawfordsville expects to get a battery of her own for service in the new Second Indiana Artillery. Almost 100 men have signed.

Comfort kits for soldiers are to be made in large numbers by Crawfordsville women. The W. Y. L. T. K. Needle Club has voted to forego its Christmas tree and will devote the fund to making and filling soldier kits. Mrs. H. B. Williams of Mace, wife of a medical officer, has collected $9.20 to be used in buying material for filling the camp kits. At Ladoga the women are completing twelve such kits and Waynetown is to provide two dozen. The boys and girls of the Junior High School, Crawfordsville, have been making scrap books to go with the kits.

Students of Wabash College, Crawfordsville, are buying their own uniforms and are taking military training in large numbers. The suits are of corduroy and are suitable for campus wear as well as for drill.

Posey County.—Three patriotic meetings were held in Posey county under the direction of the Posey County Council of Defense. Chairman Thomas of the County Defense Council presided at the meeting at Poseyville. Community singing of patriotic songs, conducted by Professor Schlafer of Indiana University, was a feature. The speaker was State Senator D. Frank Culbertson.

Ripley County.—The first patriotic literary club in a district school in America is the record claimed for the Perkins school in Ripley county, where Mrs. Emma Terry, the teacher, originated the plan and carried it out. The purpose of the club is to urge all school patrons and pupils to a further performance of full duty to their country in the war emergency. Patriotic subjects are assigned for special study and discussion, and opportunity is given to develop literary talent and patriotism together.

The Ripley County Council of Defense has taken in hand a project for supplying knit sweaters to soldiers from the county.

St. Joseph County.—South Bend has an "auxiliary" to a headquarters company in which South Bend men are serving, and this back home organization is working on a plan to send boxes of "extras," delicacies and comforts to the boys at Hattiesburg, Miss. Carl Nethercutt, back from the southern camp on furlough, spoke at a recent meeting of the auxiliary and told of camp life and training methods.

In a speech to Mishawaka women who are doing Red Cross work, Mrs. Mariette Fauve of Ft. Wayne especially emphasized the need for continuing the knitting of winter woollens for soldiers in the trenches. She commended Mishawaka women for the quantity and quality of their work.

Wives and daughters of the members of the Loyal Order of Moose will add their organized forces to the Red Cross workers' army in Mishawaka. Between 150 and 200 of these women have arranged to take up systematic Red Cross work.

Nine-year-old Arthur Newell Rumpf, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Rumpf, South Bend, saved his pennies from the time of the call for the second Liberty loan, and when the issue went on sale the lad appeared with $1 in pennies, nickels and dimes and bought a $50 Liberty bond, making his first payment.

One hundred volunteers are being sought by the Third Indiana Infantry, now an artillery unit, with the idea of making the command entirely a volunteer organization. South Bend has been asked to provide fifteen volunteers for the headquarters company, which is largely a South Bend outfit. Dr. E. G. Freyermuth of South Bend is active in the drive for recruits in northern Indiana for the old Third, which recently has been restored to its former make-up under Colonel George Freyermuth.

Shelby County.—Community singing of patriotic songs was a big and popular feature at the first number of the Citizens' Lecture Course at Shelbyville. Professor H. L. Bland led the singing.

Shelby county women, headed by Mrs. Samuel Kennedy of Shelbyville, are knitting socks for soldiers from the county, and the first shipments of knitted goods have been sent to the fighting men in the camps. More than fifty soldiers are on the list of beneficiaries of this activity. The women meet weekly and carry forward their patriotic work in their homes every day.

In the Shelbyville schools the custom of saluting the United States flag each day has been made the permanent rule.

Steuben County.—Rev. E. B. Masters of Ft. Wayne spoke at a patriotic meeting in Angola on behalf of the Y. M. C. A. war fund. Other meetings were held throughout the county.

Fred A. Emerson of Angola, Steuben county fuel director, aided by Bert Sprague, head of the coal dealers' organization of the county, brought the dealers together for a joint meeting with the fuel committee, which is back of Mr. Emerson. The fuel organization is backed by the County Council of Defense, and it is expected all concerned will co-operate in solving the fuel problem.

The Defense Council is to have a committee on soldiers' welfare.

Sullivan County.—With $418,800 subscribed, Sullivan county went $13,500 over her Liberty loan bond quota. The Boy Scouts proved to be a real factor in the work. Ransom W. Akin was chairman for the county in the bond sale drive.

Sullivan county is raising $448 to go to the soldiers for "mess fund" purposes. The sum is large because the number of Sullivan county soldiers is large and the fund is $2 for each soldier.

Switzerland County.—Twenty Vevay young women have formed the "Sammy Pen Club," the duty of each member being to write to three soldiers every week, the answers from the front to be read at the meetings of the club. To raise money to pay postage and other expenses the young women gave a market November 10.

The Vevay Red Cross has established new headquarters in the Deposit Bank building. J. P. Ward has been elected chairman; R. N. Tirey, vice-chairman; C. C. Shaw, treasurer, and Miss Alice Young, secretary. New directors are Francis M. Griffith, E. M. Stevens and R. M. Copeland.

R. M. Campbell, Vevay, has charge of the movement to raise in Switzerland county $134 to be sent as a "mess fund" to soldiers from the county in the camps.

Especially interest has been aroused by news that John F. Butters of Vevay is in the trenches in France with Pershing's forces and that he has been under fire.

Tippecanoe County.—A patriotic demonstration and parade was given at Lafayette in honor of a contingent of volunteers going forward to the regular army from Tippecanoe county. The party included five recruits from Purdue University and was made up of men who are to serve with the aviation corps and the field artillery. The Purdue band turned out as escort to the volunteers.

Jefferson high school boys, 187 out of 250, have agreed each to earn $10 by April 1 next for the Y. M. C. A. war fund.

Vanderburg County.—People of Evansville and Vanderburg county paid tribute in a huge memorial meeting to Private James B. Gresham of Evansville, first Indiana soldier to lose his life on the battle line, and one of the first among Americans engaged in trench warfare in Europe. Mrs. Alice Dodd, widowed mother of Private Gresham, is the first beneficiary in the United States under the new insurance act, which provides for the dependents of soldiers who are killed in battle. Earl G. Klenck of Evansville, who admitted having spoken disrespectfully of the American soldiers in the trenches, took oath before a United States Commissioner that he would wear the American emblem on his breast and fly the flag at his store during the war, and further, he bought a Liberty loan bond.

Vermillion County.—Charles T. Evans, clerk of Vermillion county, invested trust funds in his care in Liberty loan bonds to the extent of $1,000. This was done under the suggestion by the State Council of Defense, with the assurance by the State Board of Accounts that the State would regard Liberty bonds as assets against amounts charged to county clerks on account of trust funds.

Vigo County.—Terre Haute women and girls to the number of 375 have been knitting for Indiana soldiers and sailors, and especially for men who have gone into the service from Terre Haute. A knitting committee was created in September, and this organization merged its activities with that of Mrs. J. M. Hodges, who was named by the State Council of Defense "Socks for Soldiers" organization, in this way facilitating the buying and distribution of materials and co-ordinating activities. The wool committee has bought 1,140 pounds of wool to be made into knitted garments. Some 800 pounds of yarn are yet to be delivered and recently the work was impeded by the lack of material. At last accounts the wool committee had $78 on hand with which to pay for yarn ordered. Sixteen dozen wool knit articles, sweaters, scarfs, socks, etc., were sent to Indianapolis late in October.

In addition to the knitting the Terre Haute Red Cross has sent forward hospital supplies to the value of $1,700. Approximately $60,000 has been subscribed and almost $50,000 has been paid in for Red Cross war work in Terre Haute. The Red Cross now has 6,462 members in Terre Haute.

High tribute is being paid to the memory of the late Spencer F. Ball of Terre Haute, who died suddenly while actively engaged in patriotic work. The death occurred at a factory where Mr. Ball was getting subscriptions for the Y. M. C. A. war fund. He was subject to heart attacks, and overworked himself in his country's cause. Mr. Ball was a fine type of the useful and energetic patriot, serving with utmost industry back of the lines. He will be seriously missed by the war workers of Vigo.

Wabash County.—J. C. Reynolds of Wabash is to go to Washington to serve in the War Department as an office assistant. Mr. Reynolds formerly had a position in the Census Department. His son, Hubert Reynolds, is in the United States marines and is training at Paris Island, S. C.

Wayne County.—Dr. E. R. Churchill of Richmond has been made chairman of the Wayne County Council of Defense in place of Walter Butler, who has resigned because of ill health.

Wells County.—Work has been begun at Bluffton on the formation of a battery to become a unit in the new Second Indiana Artillery.

White County.—The Chalmers Red Cross Society raised $76.40 for war work by giving a masquerade party as a benefit, the opera house being donated and refreshments being contributed by the people.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 14

Editorial Comment

Captain Amundsen, heroic Norwegian explorer, makes his personal protest against Germany's war policy of murder on the high seas. Captain Amundsen, decorated by Kaiser Wilhelm and by the imperial German government for his achievements as the discoverer of the South Pole and of the Northwest Passage, has formally returned to the German government the Prussian crown order of the first class, the Bavarian Luitpold medal and Kaiser Wilhelm's own gold medal for art and science. The brave and humane Captain Amundsen, in returning these German awards, most effectively emphasizes his hot indignation against the war machine that destroyed peaceable Norwegian sailors in the North sea October 17. Captain Amundsen personally refuses to continue to be neutral when piracy attacks his people, no matter what uniform the murderous freebooters happen to wear.

The only pertinent criticism of governmental agents in time of war is an honest showing that responsible officials are not doing their present duty as it should be done. The demand is for entire fidelity, the utmost efficiency, tireless loyalty and unselfish devotion. This applies no less to the citizen than to the public officer. The patriot who waxes impatient as war problems rise to tax and test American patriotism and American grit is called on to consider how he, himself, is performing war duty, and whether he is making for himself a better record than is being made by the officers he criticizes. On the whole, it is the war-time business of every American, whether in public or private life, to do his best on his own part and to encourage his fellow workers to their best efforts by co-operating in every possible way to push war work to splendid success and to carry the flag forward to early victory. It is the war-time business of all Indiana citizens to help the Indiana State Council of Defense in the great and vital task of co-ordinating the patriotic activities of the commonwealth with a view to efficiency and effectiveness in the war work back of the lines as well as at the front.

You!

This war is surely getting personal. Do YOU realize how essential YOU are to it? From the southland of YOU-uns and YOU-alls to the bleak region of the YOU-kon and even past YOU-tah to the home of the YOU-kalele, comes the call to do YOUr part by buying YOU. ## Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN No. 64.

November 8, 1917.

To the County Councils of Defense:

VERY IMPORTANT

It is absolutely necessary that there be designated in every county where it has not already been done, the committee on PROTECTION. This may be a member of the County Council, or some other individual, or a group of individuals.

Their duty must be to proceed as quickly as possible to definitely locate all instances of disloyalty, all direct or indirect propaganda of discouragement, or actual hostility to any war measure, and to get this information to this office as quickly as possible.

We have a great many specific instances in counties where efforts have been made to prevent the signing of the Hoover cards; to prevent the registration of women; to prevent attendance at meetings; to prevent evidence of patriotism in school children, to encourage celebration of German victories, etc. These are all acts of treason and will be treated as such.

We actually have had instances where men are going about impersonating Government officials and taking canned fruit from cellars. If these men can be detained until the arrival of a United States marshal, they will be summarily dealt with.

We are taking steps here to handle all such matters. If a committee has been appointed for the purpose of PROTECTION in every county, let that committee get busy at once and carefully look out for any such actions and report the same promptly to this office. The Government has detailed a special representative here to work with the State Council of Defense in the handling of these matters.

Please act very promptly in this.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

D. A. R. Favors Abstinence from Smoking and Drinking

Indiana Daughters of the American Revolution gave their recent meeting in Indianapolis very largely to patriotic discussion and action having to do with the furtherance of practical and helpful war work in the present national and world emergency.

The patriotic organization went on record as a positive force in pushing the war time food substitution and conservation movement, the war loan, proper instruction in patriotism in the schools and war activities such as those supervised by the Red Cross and other organizations that work with the Councils of Defense. The D. A. R. took a stand in favor of establishing special days when the men as well as the women in civil life shall give up small indulgences and contribute money thus saved to the country's cause in the war. The question of "smokeless days" and "drinkless days" for men thus became a nation-wide proposition.

It was announced that the D. A. R. in the nation is to invest $100,000 in the next issue of Liberty Loan Bonds. Service and the promulgation of patriotism were declared by Mrs. Henry A. Beck, State regent of the organization, to be the two prime purposes of the D. A. R. "Women's Work in the War" was the main address, by Dr. William Chalmers Covert, of Chicago. Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indianapolis, addressed the meeting, as did the Indiana Federal Food Administrator, Dr. H. E. Barnard. Dr. Barnard presented the matter of production, saving and proper substitution of corn, potatoes and other good foods for wheat and meat as one of the plans by which America is to decide the war for democracy against military autocracy.

Every Loyal Citizen Be On Guard

(By W. D. BOYCE.)

It has come to the point in this country where every true, loyal American must keep his eyes and ears open and use his head to detect disloyal men or women. I am sorry to say that in the opinion of well-informed people, an average of one out of every twenty persons in the United States today is disloyal, and at least one out of every 100, if they received their just dues according to the laws of our country in time of war, would be subject in case of court-martial to the death sentence. This is a pretty strong statement, and our government has been quite lenient. We are a republic and have a democratic form of government. According to our constitution we have the right of free speech, but this constitutional provision does not hold good in time of war, and every one who talks or acts against his own country or government and in favor of the enemy's country or government is disloyal, a traitor and subject to execution.

It is impossible for our government to have secret service men planted in every nook and corner of the country. Therefore, it becomes necessary for every loyal citizen of the United States to protect his government by becoming himself a secret service man and report to the authorities not what he "thinks" but what he actually knows of any act of disloyalty or spy work.

Nearly every intelligent person is familiar with the rules of evidence in court. If you were a sworn witness in court and a lawyer asked you what you knew about the case and you said you "believed so and so" or you "had heard so and so," the judge would rule your evidence out as incompetent. But if you said, "I saw this man do that," or "I heard this man say that," your evidence would be competent and would be allowed to go before the jury. In giving information against those who are disloyal or spies we must be subject to the rules that would admit testimony in a court. There is no use taking up time with what you believe or with hearsay about any one who may be suspected.

Nine-tenths of the real good information that our government receives today comes from the loyal volunteer workers. Every person in this country is either with or against our government. There is no neutral ground. Any person in this country who is against our government and our allies is a spy on the patriotic people of the United States and should either be imprisoned or shot. The fact that a man is a citizen of the United States does not make him loyal to this country, and, of course, the fact that a man is not a citizen does not make him an enemy.

If you can't raise a pig, save one. You can do so by eating less pork.

Girls' Canning Club Does Splendid Work

Chandler, Warrick County, Organization Includes Twenty Patriotic Young Hustlers.

More than 400 quarts of jellies, fruits and vegetables have been canned and put by for winter by the Chandler Canning Club of twenty girls at Chandler, Warrick county. This patriotic service was performed by girls ranging from 12 to 16. The work has only been started. It is expected the Chandler Canning Club next year will be bigger and still more effective for America's cause in the war.

Warrick county women, as indicated by the activities of the girls of Chandler, realize the meaning of the Food Administration's campaign, which seeks the substitution of various good foods and products for the wheat and meats that must be shipped abroad to feed our armies, our allies' fighting forces, and the population of the countries with which we are comrades in the war. Canned goods are important factors in the substitution program.

Last June, at the Chandler school house, Miss C. M. Beall of Purdue University gave a canning demonstration, and several girls seized the idea of a canning club. Miss Lelia Taylor, Boonville teacher of cooking, was called in to help. Township Trustee Katenhausen of Ohio township co-operated, in a practical way, by providing a cooking stove at the school. Part of the canning was done at the club meetings at the school house, but most of the work was done by the girls in their homes. With the arrival of each fruit or vegetable as the season advanced, the girls got together for a demonstration covering the particular article which was ready to be canned at the moment.

The progressive canning campaign proved to be a splendid educational experiment as well as a means for adding largely to the conservation of food and to the local work of patriotic food substitution.

Twenty Chandler homes are better supplied than formerly with canned apples, tomatoes, corn, beans, peas, rhubarb, blackberries, raspberries, gooseberries, cherries, strawberries, peaches, mangoes, grapes, plums, beets and carrots. Variety as well as quantity of product has been the motto of the Chandler Canning Club for 1917 and under all has been the spirit of patriotic service. Some of the girls made catsup and canned sweet potatoes, while a dozen varieties of marmalades and jellies were added to the stores. Pickles and sauerkraut also were on the list of articles put up.

These twenty girls preserved sufficient food to supply three quarts to every selected soldier from Warrick county, with much to spare.

At the Warrick county fair the booth maintained by the girls of the Chandler Cooking Club attracted general attention and praise. The girls displayed more than eighty cans of foods put up by the club and won several prizes.

Miss Lelia Taylor, Instructor of the Chandler Canning Club

One important result of the summer's work of the girls of Chandler is the starting of domestic science teaching in the Chandler school. The Chandler Canning Club is growing in size and other such clubs are being started all over Warrick county and beyond. The twelve girls who were able to complete the summer's canning campaign were:

Hettie Howard, Elizabeth Johnson, Winifred Deane, Vesta Elder, Hazel Carey, Mary Wilson, Nellie McKain, Ruth Leigh, Jesse Leigh, Stella Brammer, Ruth Hall and Bessie Roberts.

George N. Reed, Warrick county agricultural agent, has taken a helpful part in the canning club's work, preparing an account of its activities for the Boonville Standard, which paper, in its turn, did its bit in spreading the good word.

Merchants' Economy

Grocers at Laporte have projected a central, co-operative delivery system to deliver goods to customers four times a day. The plan is to be put in effect November 19. The grocers are organizing their co-operative system on the theory it will mean economy and efficiency in food distribution. The idea is to make four deliveries a day as regularly as mail is delivered, at 8:30 and 10:30 a. m., and at 2 and 4 in the afternoon, the city being covered in 45 minutes.

The Laporte adaptation of a plan already in use in several cities was arrived at through the efforts of the Laporte Chamber of Commerce, the Grocers' Association, and was organized by F. C. Bass and H. G. Hauck.

Women of Indiana Preparing for War

two years before the reduction in man-power became so pronounced that women were called upon to do new and unheard of tasks. As a result there was much unnecessary wastage. There was more than that; there was a positive sacrifice of physical strength; moral conditions degenerated; and the entire social system was threatened with disruption. The public morale was saved by the eleventh hour recognition by the government of its duty to properly select and locate women workers, safeguard them both as to the industrial requirements, hours and most important of all morals. We do not want to make the same mistake England made. We will have little excuse for our failure to take advantage of her unhappy experience. Accordingly we must prepare, for there is every argument in favor of expecting the same loss of man-power here that was experienced there.

In England today the women are volunteers. We were told by a member of the British Industrial commission which recently visited Indianapolis, that the skilled women who are doing skilled men's work, get the same rate of pay. The woman who does the same piece work as a man is paid the same as the man. There is a certain percentage of women who work by the day in emergency work, they are paid by the day, a fixed sum, on order of the government, which varies as they become more useful, they not being so readily adapted to more general tasks which sometimes makes the man's pay a little more.

American women must be ready when the call comes. Her right to labor and her right to an equitable wage cannot be questioned by thinking people. She can best serve in the lines in which she has had experience and training and the government can throw its protection about her only when it is in position to determine just where she will fit best. This the registration will disclose. This is why we are asking Indiana women to indicate their fitness, their training, their willingness and why we want these facts registered and catalogued so that should the call come we can say in chorus "Here we are, take us."

—And This in Indiana!

Wanatah, Laporte County.

One of our High School teachers who spent the last week-end in Wanatah visiting the organizer of the Red Cross there, reports that conditions there are very bad.

There are a few loyal workers, but most of the citizens will take no part in the Red Cross work, and the pastor of the Lutheran Church has urged his people to have nothing to do with the Red Cross. She thinks he made the statement from the pulpit that they were not to dare to do Red Cross work, but is not absolutely sure that this was the way it was done.

The majority of the women refuse to sign food conservation cards, insisting that if they do their canned goods will be taken away and they themselves will have to go to France.

One man went into a barber shop wearing a liberty bond button. The barber seemed surprised to find the man had bought two bonds, and replied to a question as to whether he (the barber) had bought any, "I should say not. It's just buying ammunition to shoot your own head off."

Various lies are being circulated about the young lady who is at the head of the Red Cross.

The people are strongly pro-German, and they brag that the "federal officers came down and jacked them up, but didn't put anything through."

Michigan City.

Many prominent women in Michigan City are refusing to sign the food conservation cards. Some at least are of American ancestry, well-educated, and not at all pro-German that anyone ever heard of. One prominent, pig-headed, elderly American insists that the whole idea of food conservation is bosh; that we may need to save in three or four years perhaps, but not now; that this wheat saving is perfect nonsense, as there is more wheat than we can possibly use. I do not know the returns from our High School cards, but if the native born are talking that way, what must the Germans be saying?

Capt. Hugh Knyvett Brings Message Direct

Australian Describes His Experience In Three Campaigns and Calls on Women to Support the War.

HIGH SPOTS IN KNYVETT'S TALK.

England is doing more in proportion to her population to win this war than any of her colonies.

We (the Australians and colonial troops) are fighting in our own defense, nothing less.

When Germany invaded Belgium and France she violated the cardinal principles of civilization and free government.

French girls were raped in public as a matter of fixed German policy.

You can't tell me the German people are not behind their government; they forced their government into this war.

We call upon you to support your government not because your government is in the war, but because your government is right.

The only way we can prevent this happening again is to punish the German people so that they will never again be able to come back.

The man or woman who would talk of peace with Germany before Germany is brought to her knees is no real friend of peace.

Englishmen have always fought their government when it is wrong and always will continue to do so, but we are unanimous in this because our government is absolutely right.

Germany is a cancer in the body politics of the world; think what a sane, clean world we will have when the cancer is cut out.

We have set up a new standard of citizenship for men and women today—it is the standard of courage, of sacrifice.

Women of Indiana, members of the section of the Indiana State Council of Defense, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Anna Studebaker Carlisle, heard an inspired message from the fighting front in France in the assembly room at Ayres', November 8, when Captain Hugh Knyvett of the Australian army addressed them. Captain Knyvett's appearance marked the high tide of a State-wide meeting of the section, which was called to perfect the organization that will direct the activities of Indiana women during the continuation of the war with Germany.

"As an indication of the importance we attach to the work of the women and as an indication of the interest of the chairman of the section, Mrs. Carlisle, in the work she has undertaken with the assistance of you women, I want to present to you Captain Hugh Knyvett of the Fifteenth Australian Infantry," said Will H. Hays, chairman of the Indiana State Council of Defense, in introducing Captain Knyvett. Mr. Hays added that Captain Knyvett is intelligence officer of his regiment, had served through three campaigns—in Gallipoli, Egypt and France—was wounded twenty times and "is the most interesting man England has sent to us since this war began."

Captain Knyvett said he was in this country for the purpose of combatting "insidious German lies." He declared that while Australia, Canada and other British colonies had contributed men and supplies to the war, they are not one-fourth of the British troops at the front and that England is preparing still many more to maintain the battle line in France.

Captain Knyvett said that four million English women are doing the work of men since the war began, and of these two millions are engaged in war work. "It is because of what these women are doing at home that the English army in France is fighting so well, and it is because of these women that there will be no peace until Germany is brought to her knees.

"We went into this war not to fight for England. England is amply able to fight her own battles, thank you," said Captain Knyvett. We are fighting in our own defense, nothing less. We instinctively recognized as soon as Germany invaded Belgium and France that she had violated the cardinal principles of civilization and free government and that sooner or later our own Australia would feel the iron heel of the invader unless she be stopped in France.

"We went into the war with no feeling of bitterness in our hearts against the German people. We didn't believe the atrocity stories that had been circulated about the conduct of the German troops. We engaged in the Gallipoli campaign against the Turks. We liked the Turks. We found them brave men and still respect their fighting qualities. We never heard of a Turkish atrocity. Then we went to France. And you cannot conceive the horror of our awakening. We know that you have heard only the less revolting of the stories of German beastliness. I have read the diaries of German soldiers for two years. I have read letters on prisoners, and none but a fiend could conceive the brutishness of this people. I read a letter from a soldier addressed to his sweetheart, in which he described the butchery with the bayonet of seven women in five minutes. 'The officer told me to shoot them, but I preferred to use the bayonet,' this monster had written."

Captain Knyvett then related how he had established as true the outrages upon French girls in public as a German propaganda measure, designed to intimidate and shatter the morale of the French people.

"You can't tell me the German people are not behind their government in these bestial things. They are behind their government and they will never blame it for getting into the war. If they blame it at all it will be for getting into the war too late.

"We call upon you to support your government not because your government is in war, but because your government is right," said Captain Knyvett, and he added that the man or woman who would talk of peace before Germany is brought to her knees is not a real friend of peace.

Mrs. Carlisle was hostess to more than one hundred of her fellow workers at a luncheon prior to the meeting addressed by Captain Knyvett. Prior to the arrival of Captain Knyvett, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank of the Illinois State Council of Defense reviewed the organization of the National and State Councils and told of the results accomplished in Illinois.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, State food administrator, then urged the women to make a grand finish of the Hoover food enrollment campaign, thanking the section for what it had already accomplished and informing the women that the duties of the county food administrator have nothing whatever to do with food conservation, which problem remains their own.

Patriotic Peppergrams

The Otwell Star reports a hen which is busy mothering a litter of kittens. This hen is in a class with that other purposeless female who crochets dollies in war times instead of knitting socks for soldiers.

A Missouri visitor, having nothing else to do, last summer hoed around a volunteer pumpkin vine on the Pike county (Ind.) farm of E. R. Craig. Eleven pumpkins weighing 236 pounds have just been harvested from this volunteer vine. Which shows what a little patriotic hoeing will do.

Y. M. C. A.—Biggest letters in the soldier's alphabet.

Russia has her bolsheviki and America has her bosh-spreaders, all working for the kaiser.

Perhaps "boche" is the short and ugly German for bolsheviki.

Substitute other good foods for the wheat and meat our armies and our allies must eat, and help make the fighting forces effective in winning our battle.

Agents of decency must combat agents of evil everywhere, and right there's where the Y. M. C. A. war work comes in.

What are you doing for the boys in khaki who are doing their utmost for you? This is a war time question every citizen must answer, and the one adequate answer is action.

Mental Health as Affected by the War

Conference called for December 13 to Consider Important Problems Relating to Defectives.

"Mental Health and the War" is one of the chief topics for discussion at the conference of the Indiana Society for Mental Hygiene, to be held December 13, in Indianapolis. The State committee on mental defectives will join the conference, under a call made by T. F. Fitzgibbon, Columbus, Ind., and Rev. Francis Gavisk of Indianapolis.

The first session will be presided over by Will H. Hays, chairman of the Indiana State Council of Defense, and at this meeting Dr. S. E. Smith, superintendent of Easthaven, Richmond, Ind., will take up the subject of "Mental Health and the War." Dr. Smith is a member of the medical section of the State Council of Defense.

The need for exercising the utmost care in preventing mental defectives from getting into the army and navy will be emphasized. The man who is mentally twisted, deficient or uncertain has no place in the fighting forces in the present war, which puts the most severe tests on the human mind.

Much has been done and much is being done, to guard the armies against the mentally deficient recruit. Psychological tests are being made in all the army camps to weed out those who are not dependable, and to get rid of those who temperamentally are unfit for the responsibilities and strains of military service in such a war as that now being waged.

It is expected that the joint conference will be helpful in many ways in solving the problems arising out of the war and its effects on the mental health of the people. There are to be discussions touching mental health in home and school and mental health as a community problem. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon, of Evansville; Mrs. S. C. Stimson, of Terre Haute; Miss Louise Payne, of Vincennes; Judge W. C. Duncan, of Columbus; Dr. George S. Bliss, of Ft. Wayne; Dr. Kenesha Sessions and Dr. David C. Peyton, of Jeffersonville.

Window Card an Evidence of Loyalty

(By Dean Stanley Coulter of Purdue University)
We are in a state of war!

Whether we like it or not, the fact remains. There is only one thing to be done—to win the war and to win it quickly.

There are only two types of people in the United States today.

Those who are helping win the war, and those who are helping the enemy.

There are only patriots and traitors.

Two classes of people are helping win the war. Those who are serving through sacrifice in the trenches and cantonments and those serving through sacrifice at home.

Loyal obedience is as imperative on the part of those at home as of those in the trenches.

Food will win this war.

Our soldiers must be fed, our allies must be fed.

If these brave men who are making the supreme sacrifice are fed, we must obey orders.

We must conserve the foods they need; we must use substitutes if this war is to be won.

If we do anything else we are traitors to our country in her time of opportunity.

Especially does this call come to the women of the United States.

Are they big-hearted enough, self-sacrificing enough, loyal enough to obey the call?

Let every home in Indiana show the window card as evidence of our loyalty.

Comfortable barns keep dairy cows warm far more cheaply than high-priced feed.

Patriotic Meetings Will Cover Indiana

If Plans of Speakers' Bureau Are Approved by Joint Committee of State Council of Defense.

Three thousand patriotic meetings in Indiana in the coming year, with speakers sent from the National and State Councils of Defense, working together for the spread of war truths and for the awakening of the citizenship to patriotic duty, is one project now being worked out by the Indiana State Council of Defense through the public policy and the finance committee, operating jointly with the speakers' bureau and the educational section.

The plan was outlined at the weekly meeting of the State Council Wednesday. The Indiana plan of maintaining a speakers' bureau in connection with the State Council of Defense has just been adopted by the National Council of Defense, and the national bureau has begun to send speakers out over the country.

Indiana Defense workers now are getting ready to enlarge the activities of the speakers' bureau and to coordinate under the bureau the future series of speaking campaigns and educational and patriotic drives in Indiana. It is the purpose to make it possible for the Defense Council's speakers' bureau to supply speakers for various war activities and to centralize the work so as to avoid confusion and duplications of effort. A library service is planned to supply unified material for the use of speakers.

The proposed plan calls for $11,800 to be set aside by the State Council of Defense for the coming year, to this sum being added $11,800 provided by Indiana University, $3,700 by the State Normal, and $2,000 by the League to enforce Peace and $2,000 by the National Security League.

Evans Woollen, for the finance committee, submitted a plan for financing the activities of the State Council of Defense by issuing State obligations in denominations of $1,000, the paper to be offered to all the banks in Indiana and to bear interest at the rate carried by the then last previous issue of the Liberty Loan Bonds. The plan was adopted.

The State Council of Defense up to this time has borrowed $25,000 at 4 per cent. and the finance committee reported $1,655 of this sum on hand.

Steps were taken to organize a system under which the present multiplication of solicitations for money contributions may be so handled as to centralize funds and prevent the continual round of fund raisers. A. W. Brady, Will G. Irwin and Evans Woollen were named on a committee to work out plans for coordinating fund solicitations.

Chairman Will H. Hays, of the State Council of Defense, reported a plan now in use at Peoria, Ill., and being investigated by the Vigo County Council of Defense. Under the reported system the citizen specifically subscribes to a central fund a certain sum per month. Out of the central fund is to be drawn the county's quota to be contributed to the "drive" of the hour.

In Vigo county, it is said, $15,000 a month can be assured by this method, thus doing away very largely with wholesale solicitation, and with chain letters and other forms of fund-gathering now in use.

Chairman Hays suggested that some plan ought to be adopted for restricting solicitation to agents and agencies and movements officially approved by County Councils of Defense. This proposed movement, which is to be considered by the public policy committee of the State Defense Council, with a report to come at the next meeting, is intended to inform the people what funds are approved by the Defense Councils.

Mr. Hays announced the inauguration of a series of daily 11 o'clock conferences of workers in the headquarters of the State Council of Defense, and invited members of the Council to attend these meetings.

Warning letters to disloyal persons, the warnings to go from the State Council of Defense direct to the offender, may be employed in future as a means of discouraging sedition and to check disloyal talk and acts. The matter now is with the committee on public policy.

The suggestion that the State Defense Council send warning letters to the disloyal came from Huntington county. It was shown that active work is going forward in all the counties of Indiana for the immediate completion of committees on protection in connection with the County Councils of Defense. George Harney, formerly editor of the Crawfordsville Review, has been put in the field to organize the protection forces.

Preliminary steps were taken for the handling of the problem presented in every community by those persons who consume but do not produce. How to draft the common loafer and make him a war worker is one of the defense measures to be worked out by a committee of the Defense Council. Early action is sought.

Will J. Freeman brought up the matter of obtaining an opinion from the attorney general on the Indiana miners' qualifications law, with a view to removing the existing bars which prevent a new-comer in the coal field of Indiana from taking out a permit under which he might work as a miner pending the monthly session of the board which issues certificates to qualified workers.

Charles Fox opposed the plan, saying Indiana coal miners do not wish to see the miners' qualifications law set aside. He said the law was enacted to protect human lives by requiring miners to show they were experienced workers before permitting them to go into the mines. He said he could not agree to any plan for "letting down the bars."

On Mr. Fox's motion the matter was referred to Fuel Director Evans Woollen and his advisory committee, all of whom are members of the Council.

Louis C. Schwartz, of Indianapolis, business representative of the machinists' organization, reported to the Council that three Indianapolis firms, engaged in war work, while advertising widely for mechanics, refused to hire union men who applied for work. Mr. Schwartz asked the State Council of Defense to take up the matter. He said the unions did not demand the closed shop, but he urged that the generally accepted policy of putting aside the union or nonunion dispute for the period of the war, be called to the attention of all concerned.

F. J. Dillon, business agent for the pattern-makers association, Indianapolis, reported to the Council that while manufacturers throughout the State were observing the war-time policy of no discrimination between union and nonunion workers, a group of Indianapolis concerns persistently had been discriminating against union men, and that these firms were engaged on war contracts. He said the demand for speed on the contracts compelled the firms mentioned to increase their working forces, but that instead of hiring union mechanics who have their homes in Indianapolis, an effort was being made to bring in nonunion workers from outside.

Messrs. Schwartz and Dillon offered to supply information and to cooperate with the Council's employers' cooperation committee in straightening the Indianapolis situation.

Dr. Charles P. Emerson reported that the Government is to require 90,000 physicians for war service, and said that Indiana would be asked not only to fill out her quota under the call for 22,000 doctors, but would be expected to provide her part of the larger medical reserve now being organized.

Dr. Emerson urged that physicians accepting commissions in the military service should continue their practice and make no change in their way of living until called for duty. The Government gives two weeks notice. Many physicians who have accepted commissions, selling their autos, disposing of their practices and altering their household plans, have been compelled thereafter to wait many months for the call to action. It is now understood there will be no further call until January 1.

Special publicity was suggested in this connection, and Dr. Emerson also suggested that educational publicity ought to be employed to refute the absurd pro-German stories of the early days of the war, when America was flooded with the story that "60,000 doctors had been killed in the war," and that the average life of a doctor at the front in France was "twenty-one days."

The facts are, according to the records, that only 268 British doctors were lost in three years and two months of war, out of 12,000 in active service. One pro-German tale told of 420 doctors killed in one day at the battle of the Somme—more than actually were killed in more than three years of fighting.

George D. Lindsay of Marion called the Defense Council's attention to a political article in an Indianapolis newspaper in which article it was charged that Marion's mayor was elected by the "disloyal vote." Mr. Lindsay denounced the story as "a base slander" and urged the Council to take measures to prevent such articles from being printed. The matter was referred to the committee on public policy after Frank Wampler had suggested that the Defense Council, in his judgment, probably did not have the power to attempt a censorship of the press. He suggested that the matter in discussion was between the people of Marion and the newspaper.

Section on

Co-operation with States

Mr. Will H. Hays, Chairman,
Indiana State Council of Defense,
State House,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Mr. Hays—We cannot let your letter of October 25 to Secretary Baker, which was shown to us, pass without saying in return that every report which comes to us from Mr. Hitchcock has emphasized the splendid reception given the British Labor Administrators in Indianapolis, and the energy and wisdom with which plans were made by you for their conferences. We are ever so grateful to you for helping to make their visit to your State such a thorough success.

Very truly yours,

GEORGE F. PORTER,

Chief of Section.

Shall We Be Satisfied With Only a Reflected Glory?

By WILLIAM A. RAWLES,

Assistant Dean, College of Liberal Arts,
Indiana University.

It is said Indiana University has sent 500 men to serve our country in this war. We speak of this proudly and hug ourselves with smug complacency and think WE have done a great thing. Why should you or I, personally, take any credit to ourselves for the self-renunciation of these men? We did not send them. They have freely and willingly GIVEN THEMSELVES with all their hopes and ambitions. The vital decision was THEIRS—Not ours. THEY have made the sublime sacrifice—not we. What REAL sacrifices have we individually, made? What changes in our mode of living have we been forced to adopt? The honor which is ours is only a reflected glory.

Did the going of these men sap the university of all its virility? Has the war taken all the golden grain and left only the husks? Has the spirit of high endeavor burnt out and only the ashes remain? I think not. We who are left cherish the same noble sentiments of love, loyalty and sacrifice.

Let us make our potential strength ACTUAL. Let us demand the PRIVILEGE of having a part in the great enterprise. Let us take our small offerings of Ten or Fifty Dollars and lay them on the altar beside their munificent sacrifices. Let us do it now. Then only may we claim a small share of the honor.

Boys Husk Corn; Helping Farmers

High School Principals Co-Operating With Harvest by Organizing Reserve Clubs.

This year, as never before, high school boys are planning to co-operate with farmers all over the State. On account of the scarcity of labor the farmers in many localities have been hampered in their corn husking and local high school authorities are taking steps to give them aid.

Following the suggestion that comes from the State Council of Defense, corn husking clubs are being organized in the various high schools for the purpose of sending boys out in groups on Friday afternoon and Saturdays to aid the farmers in this important work.

Under the direction of Professor Rosenberg the following boys, who are members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, organized a corn husking club last week: Waverly Hesson, Frank Maston, Byron Stewart, Theodore Kauble, Frank Johnson, Cyril Hurst, Clark Brackney, Everett Grismere, Donald Ricketts, Bert Downes, Bruce Lowe, Robert McKee, Carl Allen, Robert Lane, Albert Callahan, Wilburt Bee, Melvin Coffman, Harry Black, Paul Weathers.

Ten of these boys answered the first emergency call on Saturday, November 10, and after a full day's hard work, for which they were paid, returned home conscious of the fact that they had made their initial contribution toward aiding their country in its prosecution of the war.

Huntington county reports that two high schools, under the leadership of Professors G. W. Vickery of Bippus and J. A. Kramien of Huntington, have organized corn husking clubs, and that local farmers are glad to avail themselves of the boys' help in this important work.

In South Bend thirty high school boys responded to the call from the farm of C. A. Carlisle to shuck corn Friday and Saturday, November 9 and 10. Reports received by Isaac D. Straus, Federal State Director of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, indicate that farmers are welcoming this boy labor and many of them are learning, much to their surprise, that town and city boys can and will render efficient and effective service when properly instructed in the tasks to which they are assigned.

TEN DOLLAR PRIZE FOR RESERVIST

No County Director so far has approached the record established by Edgar D. Maple, County Director for Sullivan county, when he enrolled 705 boys, although the quota for his county was only 530. He reports that a new drive is being planned for the month of December, and through the assistance of boys who have already enrolled in the Reserve, he hopes to double the number of members. As an inducement to boys who are active in this enrollment work, he has offered a prize of $10.00 to the Reservist who secures the largest number of boys during the December drive for members.

For agricultural service, coal mining, and work in "essential industries," eighty-three Sullivan County boys have been honored with the Federal Bronze Badge.

Although Mr. Maple is a busy banker, he has found time to make the Sullivan County Reserve organization the most successful in Indiana. His motto is, "This war will be won by busy men," and the example he sets should prove an inspiration to every reserve director and enrolling officer in the State.

VIGO COUNTY DRIVE FOR MEMBERS

During the past week under the leadership of James M. Propst, County Director for Vigo county, and Benjamin Blumberg, City Director for Terre Haute, a drive for new members in the United States Boys' Working Reserve has been conducted. The campaign opened Monday, November 12th, with full publicity in local newspapers, and a two days' tour of the schools of the county, during which speeches were made by the directors and by Asa J. Smith, State high school organizer.

James M. Tilley, assistant director, and the following advisory committee is aiding in the organization work in the city of Terre Haute:

John B. Wisely, Elks Lodge; W. M. Leeds, Rotary Club; S. H. McClary, Chamber of Commerce; Robert Prox, Jr., Chamber of Commerce; George S. Wyckoff, Boy Scouts; Mrs. Flora Gulick, Boys' Club; Mrs. John R. Crapo, City Schools.

Mr. Propst, County Director, reports the following Enrolling Officers have been devoting a large part of their time to the campaign:

Warner Lowe, New Goshen, Ind.; Helen Rankin, 1653 N. 8th St., Terre Haute; Edgar Hunt, R. F. D. "B," Terre Haute; B. D. Moreland, R. F. D. "C," Box 200, Terre Haute; Leroy Fair, R. F. D. "E," Terre Haute; Leslie Childress, Fontanet, Ind.; Adam L. Bowles, R. F. D. "D," Terre Haute; Paul F. Boston, Lewis, Ind.; Walter H. Winkenhof, Prairie Creek, Ind.; Fred Fenton, R. F. D. "A," Terre Haute; John Henderson, Riley, Ind.; Walter W. Harvey, R. F. D. "A," West Terre Haute, Ind.; T. V. Pruitt, West Terre Haute, Ind.

JOHNSON COUNTY BOYS HONORED

Upon the recommendation of Warren J. Yount, County Director of Johnson County, the following boys have been honored with Federal Bronze Badges for agricultural service rendered last summer and this fall:

Oren Spicer, Clyde Peirce, D. Karl Mullendorse, Howard Breeding, Chelsea Dinn, Leebert Miner, Edmund Peirce, Robert E. Gaphart, Lawrence Dyson, Edward Campbell.

Mr. Yount reports that the Reserve is now making good progress, and parents who in the beginning objected to having their boys enroll, are now enthusiastic over the organization, because they understand its true purpose and plan is to stimulate their sons in their work at home, and not take them away contrary to the wishes of their parents.

Potato Seed Stocks For 1918 Important

Unless Concerted Effort Is Made to Locate Them the Demand Next Spring Can Not Be Met.

Seed for next year's crops is of greatest importance, especially in the light of the present serious condition of the seed stocks. Unless a concerted effort is made to locate and store seed potatoes now the demand for seed next spring can not be met. With the view of presenting the facts of the situation and the need for immediate action, the following letter has been sent out by the Indiana Seed Stocks Committee to the county committees on food conservation, vocational teachers, county agents, seed dealers and potato growers.

"At a recent meeting of the Indiana Seed Stocks Committee, which is working under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture, the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation and the State Council of Defense the absolute necessity of locating and conserving an adequate supply of seed potatoes for next spring's plant was clearly shown.

"The growers of Indiana were unable to obtain 1,500,000 bushels of good seed potatoes last spring and the result was that great quantities of diseased and improperly stored seed stock were planted. There is every evidence that the acreage for 1918 will be greatly increased. Not less than 3,000,000 bushels of first class seed stock should be immediately located if the maximum yields required in the present crisis are to be secured and the losses of last season are to be avoided.

"In the effort to obtain seed stock last year the kind and quality finally became no object. Late potatoes were sold for early sorts and many unusual diseases caused entire fields to be destroyed. Abundant supplies of suitable seed stocks are now available if they could be properly stored and saved for seed purposes.

"Late planted, late harvested potatoes which were not damaged by weather conditions and which are not harboring dangerous diseases will make ideal seed stock for next season's main crop.

"These supplies should be promptly located, inspected for freedom from dangerous diseases and the best of storage conditions secured. Poor storage will ruin good stocks before planting time. A uniform temperature about 35 degrees F. is best for seed potatoes.

"These potatoes will be sold unless a vigorous effort is made to prevent it. The present prices are higher than at this time last year and may go considerably higher before spring. The growers should be urged to dispose of the poor seed stock only.

"County Committees on Food Production and Conservation, Vocational Teachers, Garden Supervisors, and other agencies should attempt to locate suitable seed stocks free from disease and urge that they be saved for seed and not disposed of. Also urge the importance of good storage conditions. Newspapers are urged to emphasize the importance of this matter.

"The Vegetable Sub-Committee of the Seed Stocks Committee, Prof. L. Green, Chairman, and the Departments at Purdue stand ready to give all assistance possible.

SHEEP CAMPAIGN SHOWS RESULTS

The drive for more sheep on Indiana farms is showing results. The Food Production and Conservation Committee has succeeded in locating several sources of sheep outside the State. Since the agitation began over 3,000 ewes have been placed. 2,200 Lincoln Rambouillet and Shropshire Rambouillet ewes, one year old, weighing 95 to 110 pounds have been located at Wolverine, Michigan. Prof. G. G. Stam, of Purdue University, reports that he has examined these sheep and finds them to be in good condition. These ewes are being sold for $17 each in carload lots. It is hoped to add many thousand more to the Indiana flocks by the middle of December.

PLANT FOOD FOR 1918

The question of supplying the necessary commercial plant food for the 1918 crop is a big problem before Indiana.

State Food Director Christie has called a meeting at the State House, December 6, to discuss plans for 1918 which will help to solve some of the difficulties. The meeting will be attended by the State Food Committee, representatives of Purdue University, the State Agricultural organizations, Cannery Association, and the various interests which sell plant food in Indiana.

THANKS NEIGHBOR

Every newspaper in Indiana has been flooded since the war began with all sorts of matter, and most of it was duplicated. Duplications cost a great deal of money but they never seem to cease. The same mail may bring the same letter in three different envelopes. In view of this practice of waste it is good to know that the Indiana State Council of Defense is trying to save money, even in this respect. The council issues a weekly bulletin and it calls attention to the fact that as some people are on more than one board or committee, the publication may be duplicated to them. "In all such cases," the Indiana Bulletin says, "the State Council of Defense will consider it the duty of the recipient to report the receipt of more than one copy, to the end that the mailing list may be corrected and all duplications omitted."—Columbus Republican.

War Conferences to Commence in Indiana

Opening of State-Wide Patriotic Campaign
Tentatively Planned for December 12 and 13

Indiana is to have a State-wide war conference, probably December 12 and 13, with both general and sectional meetings of defense workers, and with a cabinet member as one of the speakers. Two other orators of national eminence will be on the program, and the whole is to be under the direction of the State Council of Defense, its speakers' bureau, and the National Council of Defense co-operating through its own speakers' bureau.

Chairman Will H. Hays of the State Council of Defense is assisted in preparing for one of the first of a series of forty-eight State War Conferences—Indiana being chosen to take the lead among the Central States—by a Defense Council committee made up of Will J. Freeman, Dr. Charles P. Emerson, Frank Wampler, Rev. A. B. Storms, Charles Fox, A. W. Brady and James L. Keach. This committee has been asked to give its entire time to the War Conference preliminaries.

The National Council has asked the Indiana Council of Defense to send in a list of twenty-five men of national reputation, and out of this list the National Council's speakers' bureau will supply orators for the big Indiana rally of patriotism.

Included in the great meeting will be the County Councils of Defense and their committees and sections, the food and fuel administrations, the War Mothers, the various patriotic organizations which have been raising funds for war work, public officers of all grades and the defense workers generally, men and women. The workers in specific lines of patriotic activity will hold their sectional meetings and deal with the many problems that are to be worked out in all parts of the State.

In furtherance of the Indiana plan for 3,000 patriotic meetings within the State in the coming year, the State Council of Defense formally approved the budget suggested by the speakers' bureau through J. J. Pettijohn, chief of the bureau. The State Defense Council is to furnish $11,800, to which is to be added $11,800 supplied by Indiana University, approximately $3,700 by the State Normal, and other sums from State and national sources, the estimate being $46,000 for the year's speaking activities directed from the State Council of Defense. The Indiana speakers' bureau system has been adopted by the National Council of Defense.

Monthly statements are to be furnished showing the cost of the enterprise from month to month.

William Green of Ohio county addressed the Council of Defense on the good effects of educational work done in particular neighborhoods as proved in the recent drives for war funds in southeastern Indiana. He told how indifference had been literally driven out of many sections of Ohio county and Switzerland county by the force of patriotic earnestness and direct appeal.

In line with the idea that the time is ripe to bring about a square line up in Indiana of those who are for America and those who fail to see or do their duty in the war, the big War Conference is to be made the opener for a general patriotic drive throughout the State.

Frank Wampler, chairman of a committee

The War Situation

Will H. Hays, chairman of the Indiana State Council of Defense, submitted the following prepared statement at the meeting of the Council November 21:

"Since the last meeting of the Council, I have attended a conference in Chicago of representatives from several States with officers of the Council of National Defense.

"I have had occasion to talk at length with several of the most responsible sources of information just back from European fronts, together with several of those in Washington in immediate touch with the entire war situation, and the result of these conferences and my own conclusions I want to give to the Council in this manner:

"The necessities are absolute, and the work attempted and accomplished to date is but the beginning and the beginning only of the most seriously consequential activities.

"There is absolutely nothing in which any of us can be engaged as important as this work.

"There is no further doubt whatever that the burden of winning the war is going to rest very largely, if not ultimately, entirely on this country.

"It is impossible for me to emphasize too strongly the responsibilities that rest upon us all. Work and more work and still more work will be sent to us from Washington.

"I do not make this report with any idea that there will be any weakening of the line at this point—Indiana—but to advise you of the situation as the result of my very deliberate judgment.

"I most earnestly urge you all to make your plans for the future in such a way that more time can be given by each of us and more responsibilities be assumed by us all."

WILL H. HAYS.

factories in Indianapolis, reported that two of the concerns denied the report that they had discriminated against organized labor. The Council of Defense instructed the special committee to call employers and labor men together for a patriotic consideration and discussion of the industrial situation and the vital importance of harmonized and fully manned industry for the advancement of war work, especially in industries engaged in manufacturing war materials.

It was informally reported to the Defense Council that Evans Woollen, fuel administrator, and his advisory committee had decided not to ask the attorney general to review the opinion of a former attorney general with a view to issuing special permits to coal miners under a new and liberal construction of the miners' qualifications law.

The Defense Council asked for an early report on the proposed plan now being worked out by a committee, for a systematic censorship by State and County Defense Councils on certain minor solicitations for funds for patriotic purposes. It is the purpose to protect the public against fraudulent solicitations such as are being reported from time to time. A committee of each County Council of Defense is to pass on various solicitations and officially approve worthy movements, issuing credentials to solicitors or agencies that command sanction. No time is to be lost in putting the new system in effect.

Plans for creating central war funds, to be maintained by monthly subscriptions, and to be used in the counties from time to time to meet the counties' quotas for various sorts of war work, are to be referred by the Indiana Council of Defense to the National Defense Council. While the big drives for such large enterprises as the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and the Liberty Loan are found to be helpful in rousing patriotic interest and activity, there is a growing feeling that it may be feasible to work out a system for co-ordinating certain worthy lesser solicitations under the supervision and direction of the local Defense Councils, and under a national scheme or policy.

The matter of continuing the Indianapolis exchange directed by Mrs. Carl G. Fisher, for the

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—Red Cross gauze compresses are being specialized under Marie Connell, Helen Niblick, Mrs. Roy Miller and Miss Tillie Meibers.

French Quinn of the Adams County Red Cross forces has been called on to put the Adams county push in a "cleanup" campaign of counties that have not yet completed the work set for the June drive for funds. Rev. W. Paul Marsh of Decatur has been sent into the service of Arthur Bentley, director of the Indiana Red Cross.

Allen County.—North Indiana's fourth and largest shipment of Red Cross supplies has gone forward from Fort Wayne. The shipment was packed in 116 cases, the value of the goods being more than $25,000. The consignment was the largest yet sent from the Cleveland division of the Red Cross.

Henry Beadell, fuel director for Allen county, secured recently a shipment of sixty-six carloads of soft coal to meet the county's fuel emergency. Many citizens who formerly used hard coal now are heating their homes with soft coal or with wood, all under the advice of the Defense Council and the Fuel Administration.

Captain W. C. Farnham, now on the way to France, is one of the first of the Fort Wayne physicians entering the army to reach the fighting zone.

Fort Wayne clubs got in on the big Y. M. C. A. war fund with generous contributions, including: Commercial Club, $2,597; Elks' Club, $469; Friars' Club, $321.50; One-Hundred Per Cent. Club, $828; Kiwanis Club, $878; Real Estate Exchange, $842; University Club, $875.70; Rotary Club, $1,327.50; Quest Club, $3,728; and Men's Club, $10,035. Rev. Herman Joseph Aierding, Catholic bishop of Fort Wayne, gave $100 and a like sum to the Knights of Columbus war fund.

Bartholomew County.—A Columbus grocer's suggestion that saloon men co-operate with other business men and with County Fuel Director M. O. Reeves to save fuel has been taken under consideration in Columbus, and the idea is expected to be passed on to other counties and to the State Defense Council for general application. The plan is to close saloons at 8 p. m. A movement is on in Bartholomew county to close all stores at 6 o'clock to save fuel.

A special Red Cross matinee is to be given at Crump's theater, Columbus, December 7, the entire proceeds to go to the Red Cross war fund. Manager C. E. Rogers readily agreed to put on the special benefit at the suggestion of A. L. Erlanger and E. F. Aibes of the local Red Cross theatrical committee. W. G. Irwin, president, and Miss Louise J. Mason, secretary of the Columbus chapter of the Red Cross, will co-operate.

Judge Marshall Hacker, chairman of the Bartholomew County Council of Defense, is active in pushing a "boosters'" automobile tour of the county to get recruits for the Home Guards.

W. C. Duncan of Columbus has been made Bartholomew county chairman for the United States Public Service Reserve.

Benton County.—The Benton County Council of Defense has taken measures to keep tabs on the unemployed and idle with a view to giving all an opportunity to render service in the war emergency. Jobs are to be obtained for those who desire to work and those who do not show a desire to be useful will be assigned to duty.

A special matinee, with official war pictures, was given at Fowler for the benefit of the Red Cross, the Fowler theater being donated for the purpose by Manager LaFountain.

Canvassers for the Hoover food conservation pledge card campaign report many women in Benton county who have been misled by pro-German propaganda into the false notion that the government plans to seize canned goods and draft women for war work outside their homes. The Benton County Council of Defense is being aided by the local newspapers and loyal citizens in clearing away the "tear-gas" let loose by enemy influences.

Blackford County.—A Montpelier coal dealer who is co-operating with County Fuel Director J. L. McGeath, instructs his wagon men to refuse to unload coal where they find the consumer already has in his bin sufficient fuel to last ten or fifteen days. One load of coal was carried past four customers before it was finally unloaded where it was needed. Coal dealers are making weekly reports on coal sold and delivered.

Mysterious deaths among the milk cows at the dairy of John Hennepman, near Montpelier, are being investigated. The feed has been sent away for analysis on the theory that poison has been used in killing the milk producers.

Boone County.—J. A. Hogshire of Lebanon has taken the place of Carre E. Davis as chairman of the Boone County Council of Defense. Mr. Davis withdrew because of the press of personal business after giving unstintingly of his time and energy to defense work.

C. F. S. Neal, Boone county fuel director, says now is the time to get rid of those Carolina poplar shade trees which prove to be a nuisance every fall. Mr. Neal has set an example by converting into fuel all the poplars in front of his properties in Lebanon.

Boone county defense workers are preparing data to show "Who's Who" in the world of patriotic contributions. Those who have contributed to various needs are to be listed and those who have failed to contribute are to be reported.

At a meeting of the Lebanon Business Men's Association all present pledged themselves to help in every way to save coal. Unnecessary rooms are being closed off. Gas and electricity are being used sparingly, many people going back to coal oil lamps for lighting and wood for heating. Merchants are doing away with window lights. A committee is working on this line of conservation, the members being: C. O. White, Mark Adler, Winslow Jones, Louis Akerman, Frank B. Woolley and J. W. Shumate.

Carroll County.—Farmers in Carroll county have made a good showing as Liberty bond buyers.

Carroll county is raising $248 as a "comfort fund" for soldiers from the county.

Carmen people subscribed $1,085 at one patriotic meeting for the Y. M. C. A. Sergeant Reed McClain, fresh from Camp Taylor, told of the army work of the "Y. M." The committee in charge of collections included: Dr. B. F. Wray, C. C. Orabod, C. E. Baker, Perry Rule, David Shanks and Dr. C. M. Kennedy.

A movement is being urged to get fifty Carroll county high school boys to agree to earn $10 each between now and April 1, the money to go to the Y. M. C. A. war fund.

Delphi Sunday-school children are to do without candy at their Christmas entertainments in order that the supply of sweets for the boys in the army may not be curtailed.

Cass County.—The Logansport Pharos-Reporter has in progress a voting contest among "War Mothers," the plan being to give the war mother who gets the most votes in the community a free trip to the army camp where her son is in training. There is lively interest in the affair and many war mothers are being voted for.

Charles S. Davis, son of George B. Davis, postmaster at Logansport, having been released from the national army, is completing his dental course and will re-enter the service as a dental surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant.

H. H. Hildebrandt, Merle Wall and Carter McDonald, soldiers from Cass county at Camp Taylor, returned home long enough to tell the home folk of the good work being done by the Y. M. C. A., and of the need for keeping the "home fires burning."

Logansport's municipal Christmas tree this year will bear no candles and the toys will be limited to the very little children. The restrictions are required by war conditions.

Clark County.—Women of Jeffersonville and Clark county are getting into war work with energy under the direction of Mrs. Nathan Sparks of the Clark County Council of Defense. A meeting has been held to start a women's organization with which all patriotic Clark county women are to affiliate for war duty. Mothers, wives and sisters of soldiers are entering into the organization in large numbers.

One plan suggested by County Agricultural Agent Hugh Stevens has to do with the creation of a position for a woman county agent to work with the regular county agent during the war to stimulate the garden movement, the canning and conservation campaign and the vital movement for the substitution of corn and other good foods for wheat and meats during the war.

Clay County.—Rabbits as a substitute for pork and beef in time of war mean more pork and beef for armies and allies. As a result of the demand for rabbits in Clay county, the price of rabbit meat jumped from 20 cents each to 35 cents apiece. The food administration in Clay county points out that in spite of the rise in the price it is the patriotic thing to use rabbit meat rather than pork or beef so as to release the latter products for army and navy and for our allies.

The Brazil Aerie of Eagles is flying a service flag which bears twenty-one stars for the members of the organization who are in the military service. The Narcissus Club made the flag at Red Cross headquarters. Many Brazil homes now show service flags.

Sour milk has become a regular article on sale in Brazil stores since wheatless days have created a demand for corn bread, in which sour milk is an ingredient. Wednesday is "Sour Milk" day in Clay county.

Clinton County.—The sum of $1,000 has been appropriated by the Clinton County Council for the County Council of Defense and war work in the county. The Council of Defense asked that $1,500 be set aside to pay a county agricultural agent, but this suggestion has not yet been adopted. Rev. H. L. Crahn, chairman of the County Council of Defense; M. D. Boulden, county superintendent of schools, and Frank Coulter of the Defense Council, urged that the county agent be provided for as a war measure for the stimulation of crop production. Councilmen Lipp, Orr and Mundell opposed the plan.

Crawford County.—Teachers of Crawford county have been asked to contribute to the soldiers' "comfort fund" by County Superintendent Harrison Toney. Leavenworth teachers sent in $40.

Red Cross workers in Crawford county are out to increase the ranks of the society to 1,500 by Christmas. The county chapter, with branches at Alton, Leavenworth, Milltown, Marengo and Eckerty, started its new membership drive with 533 members already on the roster. S. A. Beals, chairman of the county Red Cross, has representatives in all parts of the county receiving contributions and memberships as follows: L. A. Helm-brecht, English; Elmer Merriells, Leavenworth; D. S. Deuchars, Alton; John B. Funk, Milltown, and W. J. Hawkins, Marengo.

Delaware County.—Women are well organized for defense work in Delaware county. The women's branch of the County Council of Defense has a complete prenet organization. In the Hoover food card campaign the women have systematically card-indexed and tabulated the women of the county and have made a record of slackers as well as a showing of the patriotic women.

Muncie boasts of one of the best equipped headquarters in the State for its Red Cross and French Relief work, combined. The new headquarters occupies six rooms on the fifth floor of the Johnson block. A large lodge room has become a sewing and cutting room for the Red Cross and French relief, and part of the room is used for a packing department. A room is used for knitting and another is exclusively occupied by the makers of surgical dressings. Mrs. John Gibson is head of the surgical dressings section and Miss Lee Von Miller is in charge of the sewing room. Many large shipments of supplies already have been forwarded.

Davless County.—Through the local papers a special demand has been made on food dealers in Davless county that they shall co-operate with Benjamin Allen of the food administration in practicing economy and in observing meatless and wheatless days. The people generally are doing their parts and the merchants have been quick to respond.

Dearborn County.—Christmas cheer for all Dearborn county's 254 soldiers is to be provided by an organization directed by the war mothers and the County Council of Defense, assisted by the Camp Fire Girls, the Boy Scouts, the Tri Kappas and others. Mrs. J. H. Stier of Aurora, Dearborn county's war mother, is at the head of the work.

Service flags for Dearborn county families who are represented in the military service are being made by Aurora under the direction of Miss Julia Spaeth by women of the Welcome and Ruth lodges, Daughters of Rebekah. These service flags are to be supplied free through the County Council of Defense, W. H. O'Brien, Lawrenceburg, chairman.

Sidney Long, a Lawrenceburg soldier, made an appeal for the Y. M. C. A. war fund at the M. E. Sunday-school and as a result an offhand special collection was taken for the fund and $250 was pledged where $100 had been sought.

Dearborn county is taking especial measures to look after the following men now in France: Carl Rist, David McAllister, Albert A. Lommel, Edward Fitzgerald, Dan Kennedy and Edward Lingg.

Decatur County.—Mrs. Edward Kessing of Greensburg is the county war mother for Decatur county, and she now is engaged in organizing the mothers of soldiers for war work. A war mother for each township is the first move in the new organization.

Rev. F. Z. Burkette of Greensburg, in charge of the Red Triangle district of ten counties, which includes Decatur county, is being congratulated on the showing made—40 per cent. above the district's quota for the Y. M. C. A. war fund.

Child welfare work during the war has been put in the hands of a special committee in Decatur county, this step being taken by the County Council of Defense. The committee includes Mrs. Jethro C. Meek, Mrs. Harrington Boyd, Mrs. Hugh Wickens, Mrs. Joseph Moss, Mrs. C. T. Groullef, Miss Sue Kemble and Miss Rebecca Dally.

Children of the Presbyterian Sunday-school in Greensburg have voted to do their part in the food saving movement by doing without candy at the Christmas entertainment this year.

DeKalb County.—Pro-German propagandists in DeKalb county attempted to use a falsehood to the effect that soldiers must pay for all the benefits they obtain from the army Y. M. C. A. This lie was promptly nailed by soldiers who know what the "Y. M." means in camp.

The executive committee of the DeKalb County Council of Defense, by resolution, has asked all persons to report to the Defense Council all those who circulate or repeat false statements slandering the Red Cross and misrepresenting the work done by the Red Cross in the war. Mayor J. Y. McClellan of Auburn is working with the Defense Council and will aid in the prosecution of offenders. The policy of the Defense Council has been stated in the press over the signature of L. G. Whitten, chairman, as a solemn warning to pro-German propagandists and to the thoughtless ones who aid the Kaiser by peddling his stupid and absurd falsehoods.

Mrs. G. W. Clark of Ashley has printed a card in a local paper denouncing slanderous reports circulated there and has refuted the untrue statements made by the Kaiser's dupes and enemy gossips.

Elkhart County.—The Soldiers' and Sailors' Welfare League of the southern exemption district of Elkhart county is raising $414 with which to provide a New Year's offering for the 207 soldiers from the district. The chief task at this time is the compilation of a complete and accurate mailing list of the men. The money already is practically all in hand.

Twelve boys of the Elkhart high school have been working as a special committee to induce 200 other boys to agree each to earn $10 between now and April 1 to be contributed to the Y. M. C. A. war fund. On the committee, which is working with George Carhart and Principal S. B. McCracken, are Russell Poyser, Marion Hite, Creighton Showers, Lloyd Swartz, Paul Schuler, Richard Bressler, Kenneth Neff, Bruce Hall, Buell Loucks, Robert Harter, Arthur Klister and Edgar Shepherd.

Floyd County.—The branch government depot at New Albany is to do its part in supplying 2,000,000 bed sacks for the army, and this work will mean employment for many women who have been working on army shirts. It is understood the immense shirt contracts may be filled in a short time, but the bed sack demand will call for all the workers available.

New Albany is maintaining in the Y. M. C. A. building one of the many schools of telegraphy organized recently to provide the government with the thousands of telegraph operators who are needed in the war emergency.

Fountain County.—At Attica, where large quantities of wood are being substituted for coal as fuel, an effort is being made to utilize the wood ashes for fertilizer for gardens and fields. The return of the wood fire is expected also to revive the backyard ash barrel, with its by-product of lye and the resultant spring output of soft soap derived from "soap grease" saved in the thrifty kitchen.

Sergeant Chase McDermont of Attica, now at Camp Taylor, helped in the Y. M. C. A. war fund drive in Fountain county. Sergeant McDermont is a moving picture man and has charge of the picture machines at a "Y. M." hut at the big army camp.

Fulton County.—Akron, Kewanna and Rochester Red Cross workers have sent forward a large consignment of supplies and now are working on a second shipment. Mrs. O. M. Hendrickson, vice-chairman, and Miss Edna M. Roth, secretary of the county chapter, have had charge of packing and buying materials. In Rochester systematic sewing is being done by the Christian Ladies' Aid, the Baptist Auxillary, the Tri Kappas and the Sewing Club, and members of the La Do Zee Club; the Senior Bridge Club are busy knitting. The Methodist Ladies' Aid, the Woman's Club and the Eastern Star Auxillary each made one complete "hospital equipment" for the Red Cross, each outfit being valued at $25.

Thomas Reeve and Grosvenor Dawe, the latter the Fulton county fuel director, are spending their Saturday afternoons in the woods cutting timber for firewood to take the place of coal. They are organizing Rochester business men for duty as wood choppers and it is expected that sawbuck clubs of men and boys will become the regular war-time thing.

Boy Scouts at Rochester performed a useful service in getting signatures for Hoover food cards. The persistent and enthusiastic boys have been found to be effective in discouraging attempts by slackers to evade duty. Among those who helped with the pledge card drive were: Winston Robbins, Orville Whitmer, Hugh Kirkendall, Ernest Johnson, Charley Richardson, Baker Kilmer, Byron Bailey, Bud Carlton and Cecil Jones.

Gibson County.—The Gibson County Council of Defense has opened headquarters at the county court house, Princeton, and the same offices will be used by William Weese, county fuel director. Mr. Weese is to act as assistant secretary to Lawrence Sullivan of Hazleton, who is secretary of the County Defense Council. The headquarters will be open a part of each day.

Gibson county women are working on a plan under which they may send to Jeffersonville for a large quantity of material, make the goods into army shirts and deliver them in large lots back to the government depot. In this way it is hoped to employ a large number of women who formerly were employed by the Sexton Garment Company, now removed.

Grant County.—George D. Lindsey, publisher of the Marion Chronicle, whose son is in the aviation section of the navy, has joined the Home Guards, and editorially urges other business men to do likewise. He points out that the Home Guards is not a place for the young men, but calls for service on the part of the older citizens who cannot get into the army.

W. H. Mitchell and Elsworth Harvey are new members of the Grant County Council of Defense, taking the places of Captain Albert Boley and Frank Beshore, who have resigned.

Greene County.—Cyrus E. Davis served as county chairman for the Y. M. C. A. war fund drive in Greene county, and with him as an executive committee were: Arthur T. Mayfield, Jasonville; Joseph Moss, Linton; Z. P. East, Worthington; John Davidson, Lyons, and C. O. Yoho, Bloomfield. The secretary-treasurer was O. F. Herold. The workers went out and got more than $9,000.

Twenty high school girls at Lyons, Greene county, some weeks ago gave a play and earned $52. Of this sum $23 is going into Christmas boxes for Greene county men, Indiana University boys, in the military service. Each girl is to send a comfort kit and a personal gift to a soldier. The girls are under the leadership of Miss Ada Davidson, now a student at I. U.

Greene county was allotted $246,000 in Liberty loan bonds. She actually subscribed for $593,000 worth.

Hancock County.—George H. Cooper, county chairman for the Y. M. C. A. war fund campaign, and James N. Goble, vice-chairman for Hancock county, were tireless in pushing the work, and held meetings in all parts of the county to organize the forces of patriotism for the raising of Hancock county's quota. All townships exceeded their allotments.

A benefit was given in the rooms of the Temple Club by young women of Greenfield, the proceeds going to the Red Cross. Greenfield is having a series of entertainments for the Red Cross.

Harrison County.—Escorting a truck load of provisions for the Harrison county soldiers at Camp Taylor, a caravan of Harrison county folk in motor cars made a trip to the big camp one day recently. Relatives of soldiers who do not own cars were taken on the trip in contributed motor cars. The affair was organized and carried through by a committee headed by Thomas S. Jones of Corydon, chairman of the Harrison County Council of Defense, and including Ben S. Applegate, chairman of the Harrison county chapter of the Red Cross, Lew M. O'Bannon and Frank Self.

Hamilton County.—Horace Brown, Hamilton county fuel director, took over for public use a carload of coal in the railroad yards at Noblesville and distributed the fuel where it was most needed. The sick and needy were first served.

The Westfield Red Cross sewing room in the public library is kept open Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, and the number of workers is steadily increasing.

Henry County.—Middletown canvassers for the Y. M. C. A. war fund report that as a rule the citizens who refuse to contribute to the fund are of the wealthy class of country residents who have failed to inform themselves as to their duty in the war emergency.

Letters sent out from the Henry County Council of Defense brought in a large response in the drive for the Y. M. C. A. war fund. The mail request was supplemental to the personal canvass. George M. Barnard of Newcastle was chairman for the county in the successful campaign. A patriotic meeting set for Straughn was called off when it was learned that the Straughn neighborhood in a day had raised its full Y. M. C. A. quota and did not need prodding. The County Council of Defense took an active part in pushing the fund.

Howard County.—Ralph Lockwood of Kokomo is working on a project for the formation of a battery made up entirely of Kokomo men, the unit to be made a part of the new artillery regiment being organized by Captain Gavin L. Payne of Indianapolis. A large number of men already are in line for the new battery.

W. H. Deltmeyer of Kokomo, recommended by Chairman Lloyd McClure of the Howard County Council of Defense, is the new county food administrator. His assistants are: G. W. Smith, Greentown; Carl Wadman, Russiaville; C. B. Tudor, Oakford; Harry Kern, Center; J. A. Pickering, Hemlock, W. T. Barber, Cassville, and M. H. Ramseyer, West Middletown.

Huntington County.—Philip Shaffer, a farmer near Warren, Huntington county, gave a horse to the committee soliciting for the Y. M. C. A. war fund and told the workers where the animal could be sold. The horse brought $60 and the money was credited to Mr. Shaffer as a cash contribution.

Harold Feightner, city editor of a Huntington morning paper, and a product of the officers' reserve training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, is engaged in organizing a battery to be made a part of the new Second Indiana Field Artillery, now forming. The drive for enlistments in the battery is being extended to counties surrounding Huntington county.

Jasper County.—B. F. Feendig is the Jasper county fuel director, with Moses Leopold as an assistant and with a county-wide advisory committee. Mr. Leopold is a member of the County Council of Defense, and the appointment of Mr. Feendig was recommended by the County Defense Council.

B. Forsythe was made food administrator for Jasper county at the suggestion of the County Defense Council. J. M. Sausser of the Defense Council has been serving without pay as organizer of a Home Guard company.

Jay County.—Red Cross work at Pennville shows a large recent acceleration following a meeting in which a drive was started for new members and additional workers. L. R. Cartwright of Portland, head of the Jay county chapter, explained Red Cross needs and purposes at the meeting.

W. A. Thomas and Charles O. Weimer headed the Jay county drive for an $8,000 Y. M. C. A. fund, and their thorough and active organization made a good record.

Johnson County.—A smallpox quarantine at Greenwood interfered with a complete canvass of the homes of the town for Hoover food card signers. The delayed work now is going on with satisfactory results.

W. W. Aikens of Franklin has been re-elected president of the Johnson county chapter of the Red Cross. A county meeting is to be held to stimulate interest, the plan being to have a speaker who is fresh from the battle front and who can tell at first hand of Red Cross activities and needs in the field.

Kosciusko County.—Warsaw patriots are organizing a Home Guard company. Walter Brubaker, at the suggestion of the State Council of Defense, called a meeting and some sixty men signed the company roster, as follows: Allan S. Widaman, George Hossler, D. A. Bowman, Charles Hillings, Clayton Howe, Glenn Smith, Harry F. Craygo, Norman E. Haymond, Bertram Shane, Walter D. Hoyer, William K. Lichtenwaiter, Maurice Brubaker, Keith P. Hankins, O. R. Deaton, R. H. Clover, Bert Sellers, D. J. Thornton, Francis McConnell, Marvin Hawkins, W. A. Winebrenner, Roy King, Clarence Rabbitt, Everett W. Cox, Lester Atchison, Harry A. Nye, H. W. McWhorter, James Hilschman, Bramwell Williams, John L. Trish, Charles W. Deardorff, George Masten, Charles E. Wheeler, Fred Mathews, Claude Hartman, C. W. Douglass, Al Sloan, George Piper, L. L. Andrews, C. E. Nichols, Walter Brubaker, A. F. Carteaux, L. H. Huffer, B. F. Deaton, Erwin N. Cook, J. H. Pittenger, Evin Evans, George R. Gill, H. Kehler, Carl R. Hartman, John G. Hansman, Joseph Fields, George Bid-dicome, L. G. Randell, Ralph Sigler, Perry Easterday, P. W. Bergen, R. O. Nusbaum, Robert E. Pletcher and Harvey B. Gerard.

Lagrange County.—As war work goes on and one "drive" follows another, the people of Lagrange county demonstrate that they are steadily getting better organized for efficient service. In going after $6,000 as the county's share of the Y. M. C. A. war fund, the people were found to be awake and wholeheartedly ready to work as well as give liberally. The war has gone home in Lagrange county, according to the Lagrange Democrat-Call.

Mrs. F. J. Dunten of Lagrange is in charge of the work of preparing Christmas packets for American soldiers. One consignment of fifty packets has been sent forward.

Lake County.—One center of patriotic activity in Lake county is the new Polish recruiting station where volunteers in large numbers are being taken for service in the Polish army.

Lake county commissioners have given Scoutmaster Joseph Brown authority to get ropes needed to raise and lower the American flag on the court house at Crown Point, and Boy Scouts are to raise and lower the banner each day.

Laporte County.—One of the "hits" of the Y. M. C. A. war fund drive in Laporte county was the speech of Albert Gavit of Gary, who has just returned from France, where he served an enlistment in the French ambulance corps, on the Verdun front. Mr. Gavit is a son of former Senator Frank Gavit. He will return to the front with the American forces.

The Rotary Club of Michigan City has taken in hand the task of digging potatoes on a large scale as a war measure and to save the local crop.

Michigan City women are organizing knitting clubs to do Red Cross work. The West Side Knitting Club, just formed, is headed by Mrs. Otto Watson as president. Fred C. Krueger has given the club a store room for its use. Rudolph School has donated a stove and S. Karpen & Son have given a ton of coal to the club.

Mrs. Frank J. Pitner of the Laporte County Council of Defense says that one woman out of every four in the county has signed a Hoover food card. The work is still being pushed.

Mrs. Edward C. How and Mrs. J. B. Shiek are "war mothers" for Laporte county, on the recommendation of the Laporte County Council of Defense.

Marion County.—Three new batteries are drilling in Indianapolis preparatory to being mustered into the new artillery regiment of the Indiana National Guard. "Sammy Backers" in Indianapolis are sending player piano rolls to Camp Taylor to Company L, 334th Infantry, which company has a player piano in its quarters.

The Marion County Council of Defense has brought action at the Indianapolis city library to retire from circulation several pro-German books. This County Defense Council also has passed resolutions condemning the "picketing" of the White House in war time by alleged suffragists.

Acting on the suggestion of the National Council of Defense, Indianapolis merchants are working on a campaign to induce shoppers to do their buying early, thus doing away with "rush" hours and the extra force required to meet abnormal conditions.

Mayor Joseph E. Bell of Indianapolis has served notice that Captain Fritz Kreisler, violinist, will not be permitted to appear in the city. Kreisler is a captain in the Austrian army and his earnings go to America's enemies. He is being barred out of many cities.

Miami County.—The Miami County Council of Defense now occupies quarters in the court house.

Volunteer speakers from Miami county are A. H. Cole, E. P. Kling, Dr. J. W. Hoyt, C. Y. Andrews, John F. Lawrence and Frank D. Butler, and these men will be available to make patriotic speeches anywhere in the State at the call of the speakers' bureau of the State Council of Defense.

The County Council of Defense has called on the school authorities to supply volunteers from among the teachers to assist in compilation work demanded by the conscription board.

Montgomery County.—Master Howard Herron of Crawfordsville made and sold ice cream and cleared $6 for the Red Cross.

Eighty-five high school boys at Crawfordsville pledged themselves to earn $10 each by April 1 next for the Y. M. C. A.

Street lights are being turned out at Crawfordsville after midnight as a war-time, fuel-saving measure.

E. E. Ames heads a new Patriotic League in Montgomery county. The Community Association has given the new league the use of the association's rooms.

Parke County.—The Rockville high school students are making Christmas packets for the soldiers. The boys are earning the money to purchase the material for the packets, and the girls are making the gifts and wrapping them for sending away. Each Christmas packet costs about $1.25.

Red Cross sewing and knitting forces, under the leadership of Miss Margaret Kirkpatrick, Mrs. A. H. Stark, Mrs. Howard Maxwell, Mrs. Allen Brockway, Mrs. T. H. Catlin and Mrs. F. W. Leatherman, are doing good work. There have been made and shipped from this shop 3,500 garments since June. The county has more than one hundred accepted knitters who are busy with their needles.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the
Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Student's Food Pledge Card for Wisconsin.

The students of the University of Wisconsin and the various colleges of the State will be given an opportunity to become members of the U. S. Food Administration. Inasmuch as the regular membership card was prepared for the head of a household, the students could not sign this card. The Wisconsin committee prepared a pledge card which is being circulated at the various institutions of higher education of the State. Already the boarding houses, clubs, fraternities, and restaurants having an exclusive college patronage are observing the meatless Tuesdays and the wheatless Wednesdays, but the student who signs the special Student's Food Saving Pledge card obligates himself to a more rigorous abstinence than does the average householder. A copy of the card follows:

"I promise as a volunteer member of the Food Administration to keep the meatless Tuesday and the wheatless Wednesday pledge, and in addition I promise:

1. To have at least 7 wheatless meals a week,
2. To have at least 7 meatless meals a week,
3. To use at least one less pat of butter a day.
4. To omit between meals ice cream, candy, and other luxuries.
5. To cut the use of candy at least one-third."

WHERE PATRIOTISM COUNTS.

The Indiana State Council of Defense through its chairman has had frequent occasion to express its appreciation of the support given the Council by the newspapers of Indiana. The Publicity Committee of the Council has recognized the loyally patriotic attitude taken by Indiana publishers on all important matters, and continues so to do.

Without detracting the least from the credit due the metropolitan press of the State, the Publicity Committee, in behalf of itself and of the Indiana State Council of Defense which it represents, feels in duty bound here to publicly record its sincere gratitude to the publishers of the smaller papers, the weeklies, of the State, for the intense loyalty they have manifested. In spite of the increased and increasing cost of production these publishers have generously given of their space and of their capacity for the furthering of patriotic measures. They have boosted, editorially and in their news columns, every proposition that had for its purpose the promotion of the nation's cause. This has often represented a greater proportionate sacrifice, too, than the generosity of the more advantageously situated who has contributed hundreds, or perhaps thousands of dollars in cash.

The publishers of the small town papers in Indiana, going directly into the homes, in many cases as intimately as a personal letter each week, have recognized their duty to the government, and although often at a cost of friendships as well as dollars, have unflinchingly stood in the ranks of those who are fighting freedom's battle. They deserve the only reward a "real newspaper man" asks—the consciousness of having done his duty, no matter what the cost. There be the honor and praise due to few civilians in this crisis.

Production of Hogs Promises Increase

State-Wide Campaign for Twenty Per Cent. More Pork in 1918 Meeting With Encouraging Response.

The hog production campaign, under the direction of G. I. Christie, State food director, for a 20 per cent. increase in Indiana is on in full swing. It is the largest live stock campaign ever waged in Indiana. In order for the State allotment to go over the top it will be necessary for many of the counties to make considerable more than a 20 per cent. increase. The work is being supported by the federal bureau of animal industry, Purdue university, Food Production and Conservation committee, and the State Council of Defense.

Prof. J. W. Schwab, representative of Purdue university and the United States Department of Agriculture, said: "The results to date have been most gratifying. Since the beginning, November 8, sixteen speakers have been at work giving special lectures on current problems on hog production. Up to November 17, forty-seven counties in the main hog producing sections of the State had been reached. Approximately 240 meetings have been held with the attendance running as high as 400 to a meeting."

The patriotic appeals which are being made to the farmers, together with the announcement by the Food administration of the stabilized prices, are causing hundreds of farmers to take brood sows out of the fattening pens to be used for breeding purposes. In Daviess county one farmer pledged to double the number of brood sows formerly kept. He does not care whether he makes a profit or not, his object being to raise more meat for the boys at the front.

In Montgomery county, Mr. Chitty, county agent, said: "After the first week of our campaign I was convinced that our farmers could increase the hog production 20 per cent. in this county by giving the proper care to the fall pigs and brood sows without one sow being added to our herds." An educational campaign is being pushed along this line through the township chairmen who were appointed in the beginning of the hog production campaign. Maurice Douglass, acting for the United States Department of Agriculture, has been assisting the county agent in the lecture work through the township organizations. A hog survey of the county will be completed this week. Mr. Douglass says, "Montgomery county will easily make a 35 per cent. increase."

Following a meeting in Shelby county a farmer who usually has eight to ten brood sows pledged to increase his herd to 100 sows. County Agent R. G. East reports that 500 farmers attended the six meetings held to date.

W. K. Gast, emergency demonstration agent, is pushing the work in Cass and Howard counties. In these counties the County Councils of Defense furnished the money to advertise the campaign. Circular letters and placards were distributed to every farm home by farmers, business men and school children. All the meetings ran high with enthusiasm, approximately 100 attending each of the meetings held to date. A total increase in brood sows promised for the two counties so far is 303.

The fall drive in this campaign will be continued until Friday, November 23. By that time 75 of the best hog producing counties of the State will have been reached.

Seed Potato Survey

A survey of the State which will definitely locate the sources of seed potatoes and arrange for their holding and storing is in progress under the direction of the Indiana Seed Stocks committee of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation. The serious shortage which existed last year must not be repeated. It is estimated that 3,000,000 bushels will be needed for the 1918 spring planting. The survey contemplates a rigid inspection of all seed in order to eliminate dangerous diseases and undesirable varieties. The Indiana potato yield was reduced 20 bushels per acre this year due to the use of poor seed.

The National Seed Stocks Committee has been solicited for assistance in carrying out this work. Seven men have been assigned to Indiana to locate the seed supply and to carry out the details of the survey. Wm. Stewart of the United States Department of Agriculture and an authority on potatoes, will devote several days in Indiana to the organization of this campaign. The following men are assisting as special representatives: C. C. Osborne, W. S. Roebuck, Oliver Kline, D. B. Johnson, Henry Paulus, J. G. Boyle and W. A. Withrow.

An Agent For Every County

G. I. Christie, State food director, attended a meeting at Chicago, November 19 and 20, composed of the agricultural extension directors from the north and west division of the United States. The meeting was called at the request of Secretary Houston, United States Department of Agriculture, to discuss plans for placing a county agent in every county in the United States. Secretary Houston was represented by Assistant Secretary Carl Vrooman.

War Conferences to Commence in Indiana

sale of excess canned products, was referred to the Marion County Council of Defense, the matter being a Marion county concern.

Food Administrator H. E. Barnard reported on a recent conference held with the National Food Administration at Washington, and urged that the State Council of Defense emphasize the vital need for maximum crops next year and the following year, and the need for immediate preparation. Dr. Barnard made it plain that the central states are to supply a large share of men and foodstuffs for the winning of the war. He especially urged a larger production of pork in Indiana, declaring that the United States is falling by 45,000 tons a month to meet the pork needs of the allies and the war victims to whom the United States is supposed to send relief. Belgium went without pork and lard last month because the American shipments failed to reach requirements, according to the Washington report.

The State Council of Defense approved the expenditure proposed by the Indiana State Board of Education for a patriotic text book for compulsory use in all Indiana high schools, the book to go to the pupil without cost. The text of the book is to be passed on by a committee of the Defense Council. The authors and chapter headings or subject-matter already have been approved. A message from Governor James P. Goodrich expressed his approval of the text book plan.

Herbert C. Hoover, National Food Administrator, has asked for a copy of the Indiana patriotic text book, and other states have made inquiries with a view to adopting the Indiana idea.

Isaac D. Straus, head of the United States Boys' Working Reserve in Indiana, announced that his department later would ask for $25,000 with which to push its proposed system of agricultural training camps where high school boys may fit themselves for useful work on farms.

Reported overcharges by elevator men in Wayne and Fayette counties were referred to the food committee for investigation and report.

Middle West Alert.

"We were very much gratified to have our plans for war conferences and the formation of speakers' bureaus unanimously endorsed, and to be assured that they will at once be put into operation. Certainly the State Councils in the Middle West are alert, and there is no part of the country better organized behind the war."—George F. Porter, Chairman Section on Co-operation with States Council of National Defense.

Soft Corn Problem Cause of Concern

Indiana Farmers Confronted by Big Question of Locating Sufficient Seed for Next Season's Planting.

What can be done with the soft corn is a big question before Indiana farmers at the present time. R. G. East, County Agent for Shelby county, reports that his county has at least 800,000 bushels of soft corn. J. A. McCarty of Purdue University, in charge of the five-acre corn growing contest work, says: "Up to the present time we have received 165 ten-ear samples of corn from five-acre plots located in twenty-five counties in various parts of the State. Not over twenty of these samples would be suitable for cribbing. The eleven men judging these plots are estimating that it will take from 78 to 90 pounds of corn to the bushel."

Prof. Robbins of the Agronomy Department, in analyzing some of the five-acre samples, found the grain to contain from 25 to 48 per cent. moisture, the per cent. of moisture in the cob often running twice as high.

On twenty-five representative farms in Montgomery county Joseph I. Helms, emergency demonstrator, and Ralph Chitty, county agent, estimated the merchantable corn to average 43 per cent. of the crop; only one farm in the county running as high as 85 per cent.

Nothing can be gained by husking corn in this condition unless it can be utilized at once. If put in cribs it will spoil. The elevators are not able to handle it until it is dry enough to shell. Artificial drying is not a practical proposition. Undoubtedly the best way to dispose of the soft corn is to feed it as rapidly as possible.

Farmers desiring to secure light weight hogs to which they can feed the soft corn are urged to get in touch with the county agents.

MAY BE FED TO CATTLE

Dean Skinner, chief of the animal husbandry department of Purdue university, says that much of the unmerchantable corn may be safely fed to cattle and hogs, provided the animals are gradually accustomed to it.

The condition of the soft corn varies greatly. Farmers must use judgment in feeding soft corn and if in doubt try it out with a few inferior animals, before feeding it in a large way.

Corn is still drying in the field and in many cases it will be best to leave it on the stalk as long as possible. When the corn must be cribbed or taken to the elevator it can be much improved by careful sorting. A very soft ear may serve to spoil much corn that would otherwise keep.

The serious condition of the corn crop only emphasizes the need for the selection of seed for 1918. The special seed corn week campaign resulted in a large amount of good seed being located in a number of counties. H. A. Demmore, school superintendent at Montmorency, succeeded in gathering and storing 110 bushels of high quality seed corn through his class of fifty boys. Ross Atkinson, acting county agent in Vanderburg county, selected and stored 653 bushels through the schools during seed corn week. He reports that only one-half of the school districts have been heard from. R. S. Fouts, emergency demonstration agent at Greencastle, reports 3,061 bushels of good seed selected. While these various amounts of seed corn already selected during special seed corn week will amount to several thousand bushels, it will only be a small part of the one million bushels of seed which will be needed for next year. The bulk of the seed is yet to be selected and stored.

In a determined effort to locate good seed corn the Food Production and Conservation committee has under way a campaign which will locate every field of solid corn in the State. On November 19 sixteen men, working three days in a county, started in northern Indiana to make a survey in every community to locate fields of desirable seed corn. Farmers and others with mature corn are urged to select and store as much as possible. When the survey is completed a list will be published, giving the name and address of farmers having seed corn, as well as the quantity, variety and price.

A Call to the Women of America to Guard the World's Commissary

—THE OFFICIAL BULLETIN—

Women of America, your country is at war against the world's mightiest military power.

We entered it when all the nations holding Germany at bay were throwing in their man power and money power, spending their millions to end this war by winning it. And still Germany was not defeated.

We entered it when, with their farm folks in the trenches, the fields of our allies were being plowed and sown by the women. But there were not enough, though they worked from dawn till dark.

Those crops have been pitifully small. The usual outside sources of supply have been cut off and our allies must depend on us. The women will work and the soldiers will fight to the death, but against hunger they are helpless.

Germany knows. She has said that if she can only starve England she will win.

If our allies have to yield to Germany because of hunger, America alone will have to shoulder the burden of winning the world war.

And so to save our allies and their liberty and our own, we have pledged our youth, our wealth, our all.

But we are not prepared to throw millions of soldiers into the field at once. Our money can not buy bread and meat in Europe for our allies. There is little there to buy.

We must give them food—real food! They need wheat, meat, canned foods, fats. And though thousands of tons of it will be sunk by submarines, still we must ship, ship, ship, until we have saved democracy with food.

But how can we do this and feed ourselves when we must send our allies 220,000,000 bushels of wheat this year instead of the usual 88,000,000 bushels, when we are already sending them three times as much meat as we have sent them before? Moreover, corn meal, of which we have more than enough, can not readily be shipped to Europe now because it spoils.

Women of America, even as the women of France are guarding the fields day and night, your country calls to you to stand guard over the world's commissary. That commissary is the food supply of America. There is enough in it if you will guard it.

Your task in this war is to guard food for the soldiers and home workers of our allies. They are fighting for you!

You can release shiploads of wheat for these fighters and workers by using less wheat flour in your homes and by using more corn meal, by wasting not a crust or crumb of wheat bread.

Three times a day—at each meal—think of America's glorious privilege: To feed the world while it fights its way to freedom. Then remember that you are standing guard; that the opportunity to win this war for humanity is yours!

Patriotic Press Comment

A subscriber asks us what our position is, regarding the war. We are glad to state it. "We are for America, first, last and all the time." Our country faces a serious situation and we—each one of us—must help determine whether America is to be a free country or not. This may appear far-fetched to some. It is not. We have staked our freedom, our form of government, our very existence, our all on this war, and if we lose, we lose all. It will not be a question of ruling ourselves but of being ruled. It will not be a question of how much we will pay, but how much we must pay.—Alexandria (Ind.) Press.

Newspapers and the War.

One of the marked features of the war movement is the almost universal attitude of the newspapers, which not only have placed voluntarily upon themselves the most stringent and effective censorship ever known in any country, but have given millions of columns of space to the appeals of the administration, and have neither asked nor received any compensation therefor.

The individual, not familiar with the newspaper business, is prone to entertain the notion that space-reading matter does not cost anything and that this matter can be used to "fill up" the columns. There is nothing wider from truth, for in the first place no paper worthy of the name ever has any trouble about "filling up" space. We doubt if any of the major papers in the cities of Indiana, even to those in towns of less than ten thousand inhabitants, has at any time been able to use all of the "copy" available for a single issue. And the cost of setting up, making up, stereotyping and printing a column of reading matter often brings the outlay for the publicity free to the government far above any other single form of news matter.

The newspapers have witnessed the payment of thousands upon thousands of dollars to poster and lithographic concerns, and have printed, literally speaking, miles of columns free of charge, without a single complaint. Expensive investigations have been made by the newspapers in the interest of the various phases of the government's propaganda, and all of this has been done to aid in the great cause of the war.

Nor is this article written as a complaint, but is suggested by the statements now and then heard, which indicate that there are some people who imagine that there is some profit in the war to the newspapers, and who now and then express the idea that in addition to the great volume of reading matter, the space advertisements ought to be without cost.

There is no industry in the nation which has suffered so much from the war as the newspapers, and we take it as a distinct pride that apparently without exception, there is unstinted space given to the administration. It is this which causes the ire of the newspaper man to rise when he is told that a "man has a right to charge what he likes or what he can get for his commodities." If every form of industry gave as much to the nation as the newspapers there would be a distinct lowering of cost of the war movement.—Kokomo Dispatch.

Watch Your Tongue.

Be careful of your language when discussing the war. You may be surprised to learn that within the last week two persons in Henry county have been reported to the United States authorities by the Council of Defense. This is a free country, but loyal people are not free to help the kaiser and hurt Uncle Sam either in words or actions, and those that are not loyal will be placed in a different class. Persons who are entirely loyal sometimes say thoughtless things. In times like these it is well to carefully guard one's remarks.—New Castle Times.

A Story With a Moral.

Eager to arouse college students to their patriotic duty, Captain H. E. Mitchell, of Purdue University, runs a daily military column in the college paper. He publishes news, notices and general information about military affairs. This story is one that will impress many who are outside of the college world:

"About nine years ago, near the end of the college year, a student applied at the Commandant's office and learned that he had two unexcused absences, making his grade 80. He decided to cut another drill, making his grade a bare passing of 70. He acted accordingly. He had forgotten that two points had been deducted for soiled gloves, making, with his last, absence, a grade of 68. He was conditioned in drill and the next year was required to take substitute work. Thus, he drilled but one year. He now applies for an appointment to the Third Officers' Training Camp and finds that he is ineligible, in that he did not complete the two years drill at Purdue."

Saw Buck Clubs to Combat Fuel Famine

Federal State Director of United States Boys' Working Reserve Makes Practical Suggestions.

County Councils of Defense, Directors of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, high school superintendents, principals and teachers have been urged to organize "Saw Buck Clubs," as a means of combating the fuel shortage that exists in Indiana. The following is from a letter sent to them by Federal State Director Isaac D. Straus, of the Reserve:

"Please see that your local newspapers give the utmost publicity to the enclosed Bulletin No. 68. As soon as possible have a conference with your school board, your mayor, several large farmers and others interested and put into execution the plan proposed.

"If Indiana keeps warm this winter—if Indiana school schedules are maintained—if Indiana churches are heated—if Indiana's Essential Industries get sufficient coal to work night and day to supply with guns and ammunition Indiana's boys at the front—THEN wood must be burned in large quantities and this plan must succeed.

* * * *

"KEEP THE HOME FIRES BURNING WITH WOOD"

"Kindly advise this office of your activities—your problems and their solution.

"Big headlines everywhere warn us that the STATE COAL FAMINE WILL BE SERIOUS."

Evans Woolen, State Fuel Administrator, advises that careful investigation reveals the startling fact that even with Indiana mines producing a maximum of coal there will not be enough to meet local demands and that, undoubtedly, there will be a serious shortage of coal in every locality of the State before the winter is over.

Officials in Washington advise that the shortage of coal for the entire United States this winter will be 50,000,000 tons. The reason is obvious—modern warfare demands the production of such huge supplies for armies and navies that the capacity of all "Essential Industries" must be doubled and in many instances trebled and quadrupled. To generate energy to run these industries, to reduce iron ore to steel and steel to guns and ammunition, heat must be produced. To produce sufficient heat we must have mountains of coal. To have mountains of coal, every solitary one of us must economize in the consumption of coal at home, and in the school, churches, etc., for domestic heating.

A most practical form of economy is that suggested by Richard Lieber, Secretary of the Indiana State Board of Forestry, and endorsed by the Indiana State Council of Defense.

In the wood-lots and forests on Indiana farms there are millions of feet of dead and fallen timber, which can and should be cut into suitable lengths for stove wood as a substitute for coal. However, labor is the limiting element which controls the availability of this timber. Most farmers are too busy in their preparations for increased crops next season to permit their cutting more timber than they need for home consumption. Others have not the time to cut enough for their own use. Therefore the State of Indiana looks to its high school and college boys to devote their spare hours after school and on Saturdays to this work.

A SAW BUCK CLUB FOR EACH HIGH SCHOOL

The high school is the natural clearing house for work of this nature, and all school superintendents and high school principals are urged to immediately interest boys under their supervision in this work, and to make proper arrangements with farmers having this timber available. County Councils of Defense, mayors of cities, school boards, churches and fraternal organizations will gladly co-operate.

LABOR MUST BE FREE.

While we are fighting for freedom we must see, among other things, that labor is free, and that means a number of interesting things. It means not only that we must do what we have declared our purpose to do, see that the conditions of labor are not rendered more onerous by the war, but also that we shall see to it that the instrumentalities by which the conditions of labor are improved, are not blocked or checked. That we must do.

* * *

Now, to stand together means that nobody must interrupt the processes of our energy if the interruption can possibly be avoided without the absolute invasion of freedom. To put it concretely, that means this: Nobody has a right to stop the processes of labor until all the methods of conciliation and settlement have been exhausted. And I might as well say right here that I am not talking to you alone. You sometimes stop the courses of labor, but there are others who do the same, and I believe that I am speaking from my own experience not only, but from the experience of others when I say that you are reasonable in a larger number of cases than the capitalists. I am not saying these things to them personally yet, because I have not had a chance, but they have to be said, not in any spirit of criticism, but in order to clear the atmosphere and come down to business. Everybody on both sides has now got to transact business, and a settlement is never impossible when both sides want to do the square and right thing.—President Woodrow Wilson.

SOUTH BEND BOYS HUSK CORN

Working on the Green Mountain farm of Mr. C. A. Carlisle near South Bend, nineteen high school boys husked 855 bushels of corn on Friday afternoon and Saturday, November 9 and 10. Practically speaking, these boys did the work of twelve men. This incident is typical of the many practical ways in which members of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve are doing their bit toward winning the war.

L. R. Fair, principal of the Glenn high school in Vigo county reports that the boys in his school, having organized two "Corn Husking Clubs," are working on neighboring farms after school and on Saturdays, and the patriotic motive which prompts them to engage in this work is evidenced by the enthusiasm with which they tackle the tasks assigned them.

FLORA SCHOOLS SAW WOOD

State Council of Defense:

Sirs:—Yours in regard to cutting wood, received. You are right; there are numerous wood lots around here with down timber going to waste. We have organized a Boys' Working Reserve; the boys have taken the physical examination and have been sworn in. They are enthusiastic over the wood cutting idea. We shall go forth Saturday, armed with suitable tools, and do our best to make a wood cutting record. I have had much experience, so it will be a real job. Our high school contributed $36.85 for the Y. M. C. A. When corn husking starts, we shall get into the game whenever we find we are needed. I wish to heartily commend the movement. It is the right thing, in the right place, at the right time. You may count on my active, loyal support.

Yours very truly,
L. BENJ. REBER,
Principal.

Declaration of Independence Brought Down to Year 1917

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the bands which have connected them with another, and to take arms in the defense of the rights to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect for the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to that action.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. When a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce the world under an absolute military despotism, it is the right, it is the duty of mankind to resist such a government, and to provide new guards for the future security of mankind.

The history of the present imperial German government is a history of repeated injuries and encroachments, all having in direct object the establishment of a military tyranny over other nations.

To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world:

The imperial German government has for fifty years been building a military machine for the extension of its power at the expense of others;

It has robbed its neighbors, Denmark of Schleswig-Holstein and France of Alsace-Lorraine;

It has beaten Austria-Hungary into submission to its selfish policies;

It has allied itself with Turkey, the pitiless harrier of Christian and Jewish populations;

It has poisoned the mind of a once liberty-loving people by glorifying "blood and iron";

It has violated sworn treaties as "scraps of paper";

It has waged war with unprecedented barbarity, employing weapons and methods hitherto unknown among civilized nations;

It has ravished, enslaved, plundered and starved the non-combatant populations of Belgium, Poland and northern France with an efficiency of heartlessness unknown since Attila the Hun;

It has bombarded defenseless towns from the air, and its pirate submarines have ruthlessly done to death multitudes of unoffending men, women and children;

These heinous crimes have been committed against other nations, and against that common humanity of whose rights and feelings we cannot be unmindful. But the imperial German government has not hesitated to invade our own right as a sovereign people;

It has sunk our ships without warning and unlawfully destroyed the lives of our peaceful citizens on the high seas;

It is carrying on against us operations to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy a civilized nation;

It has filled our land with spies and excited domestic insurrections and disorders among us;

It has intrigued with Mexico and Japan to attack us, and has partitioned our territory among them, at a time when we were still assured of its unshaken friendliness!

In every stage of these oppressions we have protested and petitioned for redress in the most respectful, if not humble, terms. Our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A government whose character is marked by every act which may define tyranny is unsafe to exist longer among the democracies of mankind.

Nor have we been wanting in our attentions to our German brethren. We have appealed to their old-time love of freedom and justice, to the ancient and unruined friendship and the ties of blood which exist between them and millions of our most useful citizens. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice. We must therefore acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace, friends.

Appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, we, the people of the United States of America, have in 1917, like our ancestors on July 4, 1776, through our representatives in Congress assembled, declared that the action of the imperial German government has created a state of war, and to the successful prosecution of that just and holy war, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we have pledged to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

And may God speed the Right!

United States Fuel Administration

County Administrators have been furnished with forms for dealers to report the amount of coal each has handled in the past, of all kinds. Also for the amount on hand November 1. This information is wanted at once.

Requests for emergency coal should reach the office of the Federal administrator for Indiana every Monday morning. Failure to receive amount requested will be understood to mean that a general reduction on all requests has been forced on account of absence of supply.

Coal sold at a mine to be delivered direct to the consumer by wagon or truck may be sold at a price f. o. b. mines to be fixed by the fuel administrator for the county in which the coal is delivered for consumption, subject to the approval of the Federal Fuel Administrator for the State. Such county fuel administrator shall also in such cases fix the haulage rates to be charged where the coal is delivered by the mine operator.

Paul S. Poynter, of Sullivan, has been added to the staff of the Federal Administrator for Indiana, to have supervision over wagon mines.

The conservation department of the fuel administration is about to issue a lithographed poster, for general distribution, urging conservation of coal at the furnace door. County administrators are charged with the proper distribution of these posters, to the end that they be of the greatest possible service in preventing waste.

Wood-Chopping Coming Into Style Again in Indiana

Patriotic citizens of many Indiana communities are organizing gangs of wood-choppers and are reviving the physical culture and useful pursuits of other days as a war measure and to meet the coal shortage.

War industries and navies in active service, with huge transport fleets working for America's allies and for the United States, have created a huge demand for coal and a shortage has resulted in many communities. The Indiana State Council of Defense, the State authorities, and the Fuel Administration, all working through County Councils of Defense, urge the use of wood for fuel in place of coal.

Down timber and tree-tops in neglected woodlots are to be cut for firewood in Fulton county by business men in the cities and towns. At Rochester Sol Allman started a movement for the organization of the business men into a wood-cutting battalion for a trip to the tall timber. It is planned to close the stores for an afternoon each week while the men spend the time getting in firewood for the community.

At Clarksburg, Decatur county, men of the Methodist church took up ax and saw and "made the church safe for the winter" by laying by a huge supply of wood.

Industry in Indiana is adjusting itself to war conditions and to the war demand for coal and for cars to haul coal. Much building and road work have been postponed because of the shortage of cars for hauling material, and because of the lack of coal to keep furnaces going in industries which are not essential to the war.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 69.

November 16, 1917.

—State Militia—

To County Organizers of Militia:

Of the militia companies organized by this department, the following named have been taken over by the Adjutant General of the State of Indiana, and are being, or will soon be, converted into Militia of the State, to wit:

The companies at Elkhart, Ellettsburg, Madison, Shelbyville, Cambridge City, Evansville, Terre Haute, Hobart, Gary, Indianapolis.

Other companies will be accepted by the Adjutant General, as soon as they have shown strength and efficiency, until at least fifteen companies of Militia are organized.

At the present time the State of Indiana will only be able to equip fifteen companies, and these perhaps not fully. It is hoped, however, that ways and means may be provided for the equipment of the entire Home Guard.

In the meanwhile the companies formed should keep in active training. They should meet at least once a week. If a good drill master is available, his services should be secured and the men should take up the "School of the Soldier" as laid down in the U. S. Manual of Arms. Drilling by squads should follow, and by all means, keep the ranks full by enrolling as many men as possible between the ages of 18 and 45 who have no apparent personal defects. The enrollment of the men may be informal, but enroll them. Try to secure a meeting place, and, if the quarters are not large enough, drill on the streets. On the nights when the weather is bad, have your instructor take up the problem of Interior Guard duty. Get wooden guns and practice the "Manual of Arms." Arrange to make up a non-commissioned staff of those who show proficiency.

The State Council feels gratified at the progress made and knows that great good will follow these activities.

Be good soldiers—keep up the good work.

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

Urges Consumption of Fuel Easiest to Obtain

Grosvenor Dawe, Fulton County Fuel Director, is out with a statement in the press in which he urges consumers to use the fuel that is closest home and easiest obtainable. He asks that Indiana coal be consumed and that all who can do so, use wood for cooking and heating purposes instead of coal. On behalf of the use of Indiana coal Mr. Dawe urges that delivery will be easy, and cars can be used over and over within a short time to increase the supply rapidly and adequately.

It was found on survey that the city of Rochester, Ind., was practically stripped of coal, and County Fuel Director Dawe took quick action to meet the emergency through the State Fuel Administration. At the same time he obtained an agreement by the coal dealers to co-operate by supplying estimates of the needs of the county for the winter.

Patriotic Peppergrams

The time is ripe for all to get right for the flag.

The sugar shortage puts the war in full view on the table of every citizen.

The man who is honestly patriotic between meals will be loyal also at eating time.

Do away with the useless Christmas gift and make your Christmas a war time Christmas in the best sense.

Give your time to war work and do what you can to help your government give its whole time to waging your war.

Committee to Pass on School Soliciting

Educational Section Takes Notice of the Many Requests that Children Contribute to Patriotic Funds.

The State Council of Defense is receiving letters from school superintendents who object to the never ending requests that come to them from various war service organizations desiring the use of schools as a medium for their operations. While many of these organizations are doing a fine service to the nation, it is manifest that there should be some clearing house to which requests for entering the schools should be referred before receiving recognition by the school authorities.

In order to provide for this situation the State Teachers association at its recent meeting in Indianapolis very wisely recognized "the Educational Section of the State Council of Defense as the official committee for guidance and advice on all war service work required of the schools of Indiana."

In order that this section might serve the schools in the best possible manner in this respect a Committee on Approval has been created to study the problems facing the schools and to recommend methods of action.

This committee, consisting of J. J. Collicott, State Vocational Director, City Superintendent T. F. Fitzgibbon, of Columbus, County Superintendent T. T. Martin of Hendricks county, President T. C. Howe, of Butler College, Oscar H. Williams, State High School Inspector, and J. J. Pettijohn, Director of the Extension Division of Indiana University, is now working at this task.

The committee is sending out this week to all superintendents and high school principals of the State a very timely letter which we quote for consideration.

1116 Merchants Bank Building,
Indianapolis, Ind., November 16, 1917.
Superintendent of Schools,
Dear Sir:—

School officials are advised not to permit any person or organization to ask school children to sign a war pledge, either for a financial contribution or for service, without first giving them an opportunity to talk the matter over in their homes.

We believe that any proposition that can not secure the support of our boys and girls with the approval of their parents, should be rejected by the schools.

Very sincerely yours,
J. J. PETTIJOHN,
Secretary Educational Section.
Per R. E. CAVANAUGH, Asst. Sec'y.
Approved: Horace Ellis, Chairman.

The wisdom of the above advice is apparent to all. It seems probable that other organizations may have to take similar steps for their self-protection. The question is not whether we shall aid all commendable war service activities, but rather whether our assistance shall be prudently given. The educators are undoubtedly on the right track.

What a Little Pig Will Do.

A little pig averages 12 pounds. Let it grow two years and it will average 200 pounds. In eating young or suckling pigs, instead of letting them grow, you are directly depriving the market of 21 pounds of bacon; 25 pounds of ham; 32 pounds of lard, and 2 pounds of skin (used for leather in boots and saddles), all of which is needed by your country and its allies.

Educate those who do not yet understand why America is in the war. Germany's proved crimes make it easy to line up all classes against brutal military autocracy, and make it easy also to discredit those who hesitate to take a stand for civilization and right against piracy and brute force.

Give that boy his chance to do his part for his country by helping him get into the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

The Apple Is Foremost

By H. J. Reed, Assistant Director of the Purdue Agricultural Experiment Station.

Interest in apple growing in Indiana has increased steadily in the last 10 years and the State is now recognized as one of the important apple producing states in the country. Growers are giving expert attention to the production of a first-class product, large commercial orchards have been reclaimed and extensive tracts have been set out in young orchards. These give promise of increasing still further the production and the popularity of Indiana apples.

Compared with other fruit growing localities, Indiana enjoys many advantages that make the industry particularly attractive. The center of population is in the south-central part of the State and many millions of people are within twenty-four hours by rail of Indianapolis. The large number of trunk lines and interurbans form a network of railroads, which give unsurpassed transportation facilities to the large markets which are at our borders. The price of land in our fruit growing districts is comparatively low, ranging from $20.00 to $150.00 per acre, and this is an important factor in the original investment as well as the cost of production. The home markets are not adequately supplied throughout the year with Indiana apples and the demand for good apples is rapidly increasing everywhere. In view of these advantages, there is no doubt that commercial apple growing offers attractive possibilities to farmers and fruit growers, especially to those having rolling land that is not so well adapted to grain farming.

COST OF ESTABLISHING AN ORCHARD.

The farmer who is interested in growing an orchard on his farm and who is in position to do a great deal of the work himself, can set out an orchard without a large cash expense, his principal expense being for the trees and the tree protectors, which would amount to $8.00 to $10.00 per acre.

One Indiana grower has kept full and complete records of his home orchard which is 30 years old. His books show that the general expense per tree for that period has been $6.00 and the total value of fruit produced since the trees have come into bearing has averaged $64.00 per tree. During the last 15 years, this orchard has produced an average of more than $100.00 worth of apples per acre per year. Another Indiana farmer who is operating a general farm, reports an average net profit of $168.00 per acre per year for five years from his twenty-two year old orchard, consisting of 10 acres.

Every farm should have a small home orchard because it is an asset in many ways and very little time is required annually to care for it.

The Commercial Orchard.—A large number of farmers in this State have been interested in the establishment of a small commercial orchard on their farms that can be operated along with the other work.

Many farms in good fruit growing sections have a few acres of ground that is better adapted to fruit growing than general farming and it is the opinion of the writers that a commercial orchard of from five to 50 acres in size, managed as a part of the farm business which includes other agricultural interests, affords the soundest business basis for economical and profitable fruit production. Many Indiana growers have found that the business of growing fruit can be carried on successfully in conjunction with the other farm work and the annual net returns, in many cases, have been much greater than the original cost of the land and trees. The overhead charges against fruit production, such as taxes, interest on investment, deterioration on general farm equipment, barns, buildings and live stock are greatly reduced and the labor problem is more easily solved when fruit growing is carried on as a part of a well organized farm business, in which other agricultural interests are represented, than where the growing of fruit is an exclusive specialty.

When contemplating the planting of a commercial orchard, the success of the undertaking will depend upon a number of factors which must be carefully weighed and considered before arriving at a final decision.

Location.—The orchard should be located near a good shipping point or within easy reach of a town or city that will afford a good local market or cold storage. Preference is given to a location providing an outlet to more than one good market. Transportation facilities should be investigated with reference to convenience of service, time en route from loading station to probable markets, frequency of service, rates, etc. The matter of good roads from the farm to loading station or local market must be given very careful attention, because bad roads will greatly increase the cost of production and marketing. The size of the load that can be hauled, as well as the distance it must be hauled, are important factors in location, since the cost of getting fruit from the orchard to the shipping station is often one of the principal items in the total cost of production. The availability of labor supply is supremely important if the orchard is very large. The presence of other commercial orchards in the neighborhood is an advantage in many ways.

Soil.—The apple thrives well on a large variety of soils varying from a light loam to a heavy clay loam. Nearly any good farming soil is a satisfactory apple soil. The orchard soil should not be depleted of its natural supply of plant food or organic matter; it should be well drained and fairly deep. The flat, poorly drained, white clay lands and the level, black muck soils are not adapted to orcharding. The very light soils which dry out easily, shallow soils where unbroken rock comes very near the surface, and soils underlaid with an impervious hardpan, should be avoided.

Site.—After finding the soil conditions satisfactory, consideration should be given to the question of air drainage. The ground upon which the trees are to be planted should be elevated above the surrounding country to insure the drainage of cold air, which flows away from the higher ground to lower levels. For this reason, "pockets" or depressions from which air cannot escape should be avoided.

In selecting varieties for the home orchard the object is to provide apples that ripen successively from mid-summer until late fall.

There are a large number of varieties which can be grown satisfactorily in the home or commercial orchard and the following list should be considered as suggestive only. It may be supplemented when personal taste dictates.

For the Commercial Orchard.—The commercial grower should know the demands of the markets he expects to supply, and select his varieties accordingly. The variety should be adapted to the locality, as well as being productive and fairly resistant to disease. The varieties must also be considered from the standpoint of quality, regularity of bearing, shipping quality, hardiness and vigor of tree.

Among the varieties recommended for Indiana planting are mentioned the Benoni, Oldenburg, Wealthy, Maiden Blush, Jonathan, Grimes Delicious, Rome, Stazanaris and Winesap.

When buying nursery stock it is important to deal with a reliable firm. Do not buy trees of poor quality, because it is false economy. Insist that no substitutions be made without your consent, and make such a note on the face of your order. Place an order early for all nursery stock that will be needed and specify date of delivery.

The appearance of the trees should indicate that they are healthy and well grown. The limbs should not be shriveled and the bark should be smooth and of good color. The orchardist must trust to the integrity of the nurseryman for trees that are true to name.

One year old stock is usually recommended for planting because the trees suffer less shock in transplanting and are more easily trained. Either one year or two year old trees may be used, if well grown, but older trees should not be accepted.

Every cellar of vegetables is a trench of food preparedness.

Serve your country by saving food.

Sacrifice and service must come from every class, every profession, every party, every race, every creed, every section.—PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

Conference to Save Frosted Corn Crop

Prof. Christie Urges Growers to Feed Their Crop to Live Stock Where It Is Available.

Corn was considered as a munition of war in a war conference of corn growers, food conservationists, Defense Council workers, grain dealers, grain feeders and distillers in the chamber of the House of Representatives, November 28.

The soft corn problem was discussed from every angle by authorities from several States, including experts from Illinois and Kentucky as well as crop students from all parts of Indiana.

Indiana's federal food administrator, Dr. H. E. Barnard, presided at the "war council" on corn and declared that in the view of the Hoover national food administration the part to be taken by the United States in the war depended on corn.

"Corn is the answer in the war," said Dr. Barnard, "and the big problem is frosted, or soft corn." It was stated that Mr. Hoover would anxiously await the report from the corn conference.

Professor G. I. Christie, head of the food production and conservation committee of the State Council of Defense, told of the actual conditions in the soft corn belt, informing the conference that the corn growers of southern Indiana were not in a position to feed the soft corn to live stock, but that the frosted corn in central and northern Indiana could be used for feed.

Mr. Christie urged that the farmers be informed without delay that the soft corn can be fed to hogs as a growing feed, and that the story that the corn was not wholesome should be refuted. He suggested further that the conference ought to work on the problem involved in getting the distilleries to use in making alcohol only soft corn from territory where such corn could not be fed to stock.

"The government is as much interested in having stock fed as it is in saving corn for future use. The big call is for meat," said Mr. Christie. "With the corn crop in prospect and high prices prevailing the farmers were all set to market their corn. When the frost came and the crop turned out soft it was necessary to change the plan and to feed the crop in large part. The demand for feed animals at this time is immense.

"At best the distilleries can handle only a small part of the soft corn, and 15,000,000 bushels used throughout the year for making alcohol is not a large item when compared with the total of soft corn to be handled. Help is needed right now to take care of the soft corn situation. This means the farmer ought to feed the corn wherever he can do so. In southern Indiana, where there are no fences, in the bottom lands, and no storage or drying facilities, the corn must be got out and handled by the distilleries."

Mr. Christie pointed out that a large part of the soft corn must be fed and that when the government gives contracts for alcohol to distilleries there should be some assurance that the soft corn used by the alcohol makers did not come from northern and central Indiana, where it ought to be fed.

H. M. Paynter of the H. W. Rogers Company, Chicago, told of the corn situation in many States from the standpoint of the grain buyer. He said large quantities of bad corn reached the Chicago market and that only a small part of the soft corn was handled by the distillers.

Crabb, of Crabb & Fittin, New Harmony,

Ind., told of the efforts thus far made to get contracts from the government for alcohol to be made from the soft corn crop and to be stored for future use. Contracts for 1918 have largely been made, and it is understood the alcohol is being made largely from Cuban molasses, and not from corn.

To substitute corn for the Cuban molasses in alcohol-making, and to try to make use of the Cuban product as food, was accepted as one of the problems to be discussed.

It was reported that the distillers might be able to get alcohol contracts from France and Italy and thus be enabled to operate and use soft corn in their business.

It was reported by one speaker that Indiana and Illinois alone have on hand 100,000,000 bushels of soft corn. Missouri, Ohio and Kentucky, it was stated, were in a position to handle their own frosted crop problem. It was shown that distilleries at Peoria, Terre Haute and Louisville now are using the soft corn to make alcohol. It was also reported that the Terre Haute concern was buying corn in the Indianapolis market, and one speaker declared it to be his belief the corn was from northern Indiana, from the territory where it should be fed to stock.

It was found that the railroads as a rule are doing their part in expediting the handling of the bad corn. It was reported that concerns manufacturing corn-drying plants are rushed with orders and are not able to accept any additional orders because of the lack of material.

L. H. Wright, of Columbus, Ind., master of the Indiana State Grange, reported that he had been successful in feeding soft corn in Bartholomew county, but that large quantities of the corn could not be fed, but must be handled otherwise.

Leonard B. Clore, president of the Indiana State Board of Agriculture, the "Corn King," offered practical suggestions for cribbing corn in such a way as to protect and dry the crop, on the farm.

Among the speakers on various phases of the crop problem were: Charles B. Riley, secretary of the Indiana Grain Dealers' association; Edward Andrew, of the Board of Trade, Chicago; John E. Fitzgerald, secretary and general manager of the Hammond Distilling Company, Hammond, Ind., and others.

War's Drain On Food Resources of France

The drain on the resources of France made by the war is shown in figures recently received by the United States Food Administration.

Using the production of 1913 as a basis, the 1917 wheat crop of France is short 53.3 per cent. or 176,000,000 bushels; the potato crop is short 33.1 per cent. or 165,000,000 bushels; the sugar beet crop is short 67.9 per cent. or 148,000,000 bushels; the number of cattle has declined 18.5 per cent. or 2,435,000 head; the number of sheep has declined 36.6 per cent. or 5,535,000 head; the number of hogs has been lessened 40.2 per cent. or 2,825,000 head.

Measures adopted in France for the conservation of wheat flour consist in the use of bread made of 80 per cent. wheat flour with an admixture of other cereals such as rice, barley, oats, rye, maize, beans, and ground nuts. Rice flour is the most practicable of these admixtures. This rice is now being obtained from the French colonies of Indo-China, Tunis and Algeria, where there is an exportable surplus.

State Council Plans Great War Session

First Big Gathering of Second Line Defense Will be Held in This State December 13 and 14.

Negotiations are on between the Indiana State Council of Defense and the Council of National Defense at Washington for the assignment of a cabinet member as the "headliner" for the first of a series of war conferences to be held in Indianapolis, December 13 and 14.

The plan as adopted by the Indiana State Council calls for a general meeting of all engaged in war business in the State, in Tomlinson Hall, on the afternoon of the first day, November 13. This meeting will be preceded by organization routine on the part of each section, including a statement of the purposes in mind in connection with the conferences. The meeting will be followed by a mass meeting in the evening, at which a speaker of national reputation will bring an authoritative message from Washington and the Council of National Defense as to the present war situation and what the national government expects of the commonwealth as the war progresses.

The second day of the conference will be given over to sectional meetings. Each section will be charged with having a full representation of its membership present and to provide the necessary instruction and inspiration from official sources. There are seventeen or more sections and they will hold separate sessions through the entire second day.

Details of the meeting necessarily are awaiting definite information from Washington as to the principal speaker. The National Council desires especially to be represented at the sectional meetings, which are expected to provide the definite program essential for the further development of patriotic activities in Indiana.

Henry VanDyke, former United States minister to Holland, and Bishop Williams, of Detroit, prominent in the Federal Red Cross organization, Arthur C. Bestor, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the National Committee on Public Information, already have been definitely engaged to address the conference.

Housekeepers Warned Against Persons Posing as "Food Collectors"

This statement was made today by Herbert Hoover, United States Food Administrator:

We have reports from various parts of the country of crooks, thieves, and confidence operators who are going from house to house purporting to be authorized by the Food Administration and other departments of the government to collect or commandeer food-stuffs for the government or the army.

I wish to say emphatically that no department of the government has or will ever make such demands on house-holders, and that all such people are petty frauds and should be held for the police. The government agencies are investigating various cases and information is sought of all such persons by this department.

The Food Administration is protecting the patriot against the slacker in business.

Patriotism in Indiana

Madison County.—Pendleton women have organized the Fall Creek branch of the women's section of the Madison County Council of Defense, with Miss Evangeline Lewis president, Mrs. George Kinnard vice-president, and Mrs. T. M. Hardy secretary-treasurer. The executive committee includes the following: Mrs. Charles McCabe, Mrs. Allen Swain and Mrs. Ora Ford. The organization, which was started by Mrs. J. W. Sandberry, Mrs. J. M. Larmore and others of Anderson, will give its time to knitting socks for soldiers.

Elwood citizens of Welsh descent have raised money to be sent to Wales for the relief of war victims in that country. The Welsh population was canvassed by women. The response was generous.

A local Council of Defense is being organized in Elwood to co-operate with the Madison County Council of Defense and the State Council of Defense in war work.

Marion County.—Stanley Wyckoff, Marion county food administrator, asked the people to apply the golden rule to the sugar shortage and divide with their unfortunate neighbors in cases where even a small surplus was on hand. Mr. Wyckoff explained that many people had been without sugar for many days. The shortage has been met by big sugar shipments in recent days, and patriotic citizens, by going "fifty-fifty" with their neighbors, helped greatly in adjusting the matter.

The Marion County Council of Defense has succeeded in removing from circulation certain treasonable pro-German books in the Indianapolis public library.

Acting on the suggestion of the Marion County Council of Defense Mayor Joseph E. Bell of Indianapolis notified Ona B. Talbott that Fritz Kreisler, Austrian army officer and violinist, would not be permitted to appear in Indianapolis. Kreisler is understood to use the proceeds of his concerts in America for the cause of Germany and her allies against the United States.

Marshall County.—At Culver the C. C. Club, through Mrs. O. T. Goss, president, has paid the rent for the Red Cross shop at Culver.

War work headquarters has been established for Marshall county in rooms in the State Bank building at Plymouth, offices of the County Council of Defense. The organization is being pushed in the townships.

Z. M. Tanner of Plymouth is president of a new chapter of the Patriot League in Marshall county. Mayor J. C. Whitesell is first vice-president, Prosecuting Attorney R. V. Shakes second vice-president and Deputy County Clerk Glenn L. Underwood secretary.

Martin County.—Much of the work of getting Hoover food conservation cards signed in Martin county was done through the schools. The teachers have been asked to report to the County Council of Defense through the county school superintendent.

Miami County.—The Miami county chapter of the Patriot League plans to make a patriotic census of the citizens of the county—a card index of Americanism. Dr. W. R. Meeker, acting for the County Council of Defense, took the lead in forming the Patriot League in the county. Omer Holman was the temporary secretary.

Peru people celebrated in a patriotic way the completion of Miami county's quota for the Y. M. C. A. war fund. The parade and meeting aroused general patriotic enthusiasm.

Monroe County.—A War Service Committee has been formed in Monroe county to take charge, as a permanent and always ready organization, of future campaigns for funds for war purposes. On the committee are the following: Ed. Showers, chairman; Roy Pike, Alec Hirsch, W. T. Blair, Charles Rawles, Fred Matthews and U. H. Smith. The organization has named a publicity committee made up of Professor J. W. Percy, Otto Rott and Robert Hamilton. Captains of teams are being named for permanent duty in wards and townships. The committee will centralize solicitations and keep records of contributions so as to prevent waste of energy and make it possible to see all citizens without fail when there is a call for donations for any war purpose.

Montgomery County.—Crawfordsville's special Red Cross committee on "comfort kits" for soldiers has sent 131 of the "kits" forward, and $25 in money also was sent to Indianapolis to pay for additional "kits." The outfits cost from $2 to $4 each. The work was done in six days. On the special committee were: Mrs. A. A. McCain, chairman; Mrs. Barcus, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Ireland, Mrs. Crane and Mrs. Utterback.

A Crawfordsville patriot, unknown, contributed a lot to be sold at auction for the Y. M. C. A. war fund. The ground brought $65 and was bought by Dr. J. F. Davidson.

The Wabash College library is being closed six nights out of the week to save fuel.

A government school in telegraphy has been opened in Crawfordsville under the charge of the managers of the two local telegraph offices, assisted by Dr. J. R. Etter, all volunteers. The following have signed for the course: Ralph N. Irwin, R. C. Keeling, J. H. Robinson of Crawfordsville, R. W. Bayless of Brown's Valley, R. H. Glikley of Waynetown and J. C. and W. O. Knox of Whitesville. Instruments are set up in the high school building.

Newton County.—The Brook branch of the Red Cross has sent a complete outfit of knitted garments to Ted Sell, the first man from Brook to reach the firing line in France. Other Brook soldiers are to be fitted out as fast as they reach the front.

With appropriate services, the U. B. and M. E. churches of Brook recently dedicated "Rolls of Honor" in the churches, the rolls carrying the names of members of the churches who are in the military service. On the roll at the M. E. church are the following names: Edward D. Sell, Ralph Kemper, Dorsey Merchant, Harry Sunderland, Alva Hoover, Jasper Shear, Harry Conn and Herbert Albertson. At the U. B. church the roll includes: Wesley Light, Verne Snyder, Earl L. Sell and William Brunton.

The Newton County Council of Defense has delegated Miss Cecil Burton, deputy county recorder, to maintain a record of men from the county in military service. In preparing the record Miss Burton is assisted by Miss Pauline Cook of Goodland, Miss Mildred Schlitz of Brook, Miss Mollie Johnson of Mt. Ayr, and Miss Mildred Hale of Morocco.

Noble County.—After five attempts Fred Baughman of Kendallville has succeeded in getting into the army. He was a member of the Indiana National Guard, but was rejected when the guard was federalized. Three times he tried to enlist, but was thrice refused. Finally he succeeded in getting a place in the quartermaster's corps.

Under the direction of the Noble County Council of Defense a series of meetings have been held at Noble county points to stimulate hog production. The campaign has been under the direct management of Clarence Henry and E. M. Johnson, with W. F. Martindale as chief speaker.

Ohio County.—Real patriotic fervor has developed in Ohio county as a result of the series of patriotic meetings organized and held under the direction of the Ohio County Council of Defense, co-operating with the Y. M. C. A. War Fund organization and the patriotic citizenship. While the county was asked for only $1,000, the five mass meetings and the red hot organization work obtained more than $2,300. The work of the Ohio county patriots attracted notice away from home and they were asked to tour Switzerland county communities, with the result that they added $1,800 to the Y. M. C. A. subscriptions taken in Switzerland. The Ohio county workers make a specialty of straight American talk with the bark on. William Green, Jr., chairman of the committee, reports that the educational effect of the five mass meetings held in the county has been truly marvelous and decidedly beneficial. He says the German-American, as a rule, is anxious to prove his Americanism and that the frequent drives for war funds give the opportunity to get right and stay right for the flag.

Orange County.—Rev. Mark L. Harris of Orleans was at the head of Orange county's Y. M. C. A. War Fund campaign for $4,000, and the drive proved to be a splendid success, well organized and energetically and efficiently pushed. Norman B. Mavly of French Lick was treasurer of the fund for the county, and chairmen were active in every community and township.

Owen County.—Mrs. Willis Hickam of Spencer is at the head of the Owen county "Soldiers' Comfort Kit" organization. Money is being contributed to provide a "comfort kit" for each Owen county soldier, the "kits" to be presented at Christmas time. The outfits cost $2.25 each.

The Red Cross Shop in Spencer, open every afternoon and Monday and Thursday nights, shows an average attendance of twenty workers. In two weeks these women, led by Mrs. Duane Beach, were able to send forward 1,000 surgical dressings.

Parke County.—Rockville women, led by the home economics section of the Woman's Club, held a Hoover meeting recently at which food substitution and conservation were discussed and demonstrations were given on practical lines. Miss Martha McMullin, Parke county home demonstrator, was assisted by Miss Ruth Glasco, domestic science teacher in the Rockville schools. Others who assisted were: Mrs. Bonner Swain and Mrs. Guy Collings.

Perry County.—Women of Cannellton and Dexter, Perry county, contributed 130 quarts of jams and jellies to a committee of the Red Cross, to be sent to the soldiers who have gone from Perry county.

The Cannellton Red Cross Shop, the first in Perry county, was opened July 31. In September other shops were started in Tell City and Branchville. Another shop opened in Anderson township in October, while Bristow and Troy established shops in November, making six shops in Perry, all working enthusiastically and all turning out excellent work and lots of it. Cannellton Red Cross workers alone have raised more than $225 for materials.

The women of the county knitted 104 pairs of socks in six weeks for Indiana soldiers and are now knitting socks for the Red Cross as fast as yarn can be secured. The Council of Defense meets at the court house once a week. It has made all appointments requested up to date and, through its publicity committee, keeps the people of the county informed of Council of Defense activities. It has an active team of "four-minute men," and the members of the council have made several talks out in the rural districts. Through the Council a sum of $350.00 is being raised (most of it is already in the hands of the treasurer) for a company fund for Perry county boys at Camp Taylor.

Pike County.—Mrs. Daisy Boonshot of Petersburg is in charge of the women's branch of the Pike County Council of Defense, working under Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle of the State Council of Defense. Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson has been named to have charge of the women's end of the next drive for the Liberty loan, and is also at the head of the organization on child welfare. Miss Edna Bell, in charge of the Hoover food conservation pledge card work, is to make another campaign for signers. Mrs. Anna Abell, woman member of the County Council of Defense, has been working on the women's organization, selecting the heads of departments. She has made good selections, as results prove.

The Boone township Red Cross, under Miss Elsie Frank and Mrs. Homer Wineinger, is working for the soldiers, a knitting campaign now being in full swing.

One of the best patriotic speeches of the war period in Pike county was that at Ottwell by Rev. M. Braune-reuther, who was born in Germany, and who declared: "My dislike for the German Pharaohs dates back to my childhood days." Bomar Traylor of Jasper appeared at the meeting in place of Congressman W. B. Cox, who spoke at Petersburg. The rally was intended for local Red Cross stimulus, but the Y. M. C. A. scouts took possession and raised $172.50.

Porter County.—Led by Mrs. W. H. Williams of Valparaiso, chairman of the department of hospital supplies and supplies for fighting men in Red Cross work, the women of the various communities of Porter county are doing an important work. Mrs. Albert Swanson writes of the beginnings of the work last July when six women met to start the first unit at Chesterton, and of the progress made and the huge quantity of finished work. School girls are being permitted to give Monday afternoons to making surgical dressings.

In northern Porter county a register of soldiers from that section is being compiled at the Chesterton bank, and each man thus registered gets two pairs of socks, while sweaters also are being made for the boys in the army. The yarn is supplied by the County Council of Defense and the work is done by the women in their homes. Sarah Morgan, chairman in charge of the work, has asked relatives of soldiers to get their boys in line for the socks and sweaters.

In Boone township, Porter county, farmers have stored frosted corn in cellars and later have boiled the corn before feeding it to hogs. It is reported good results have been obtained from the feeding of the boiled corn.

Porter county's Council has appropriated $1,000 for the war work being done by the Porter County Council of Defense. This is in addition to $500 formerly set aside for war activities.

Posey County.—In Posey county the organization for the Y. M. C. A. war fund campaign set a limit of $50 on the individual subscription, but found it was not possible to keep the contributions down to that figure. A. B. Hart presided at the organization meeting at Mt. Vernon. One of the strong speakers was William Maurer, a Posey county soldier, who told of the work being done in camp by the "Y. M."

Putnam County.—Roachdale branch of the Red Cross has reorganized with the following officers: President, Charles Edwards; vice-president, Ella Walsh; secretary, Julia Tobin; treasurer, Margaret Hanna. Mrs. G. W. Irwin and Miss Lola Wilson have taken charge of a new class for the making of surgical dressings.

Roachdale men are organizing a home guard company in the community. Some seventy-five had signed the rolls before the organization was called for its first meeting. The company was launched with a big patriotic meeting at Roachdale hall.

Randolph County.—Colonel James Patchell of Union City, now eighty-five, who rose from the rank of private to command a regiment in the Union army in the Civil war, has presented his army saddle and halter to Captain James Patchell, his grandson, who is on duty with the national army at Camp Taylor, Kentucky. Captain Patchell reported a shortage of saddles and Colonel Patchell at once forwarded the historic relic which saw such notable service in a former great war.

Professor Reno Welbourne of Union City has been chosen by the government to deliver a series of scientific lectures in the army camps.

Ripley County.—Batesville women in charge of the Hoover campaign for food conservation pledges reported only six women in that city who had failed to sign. With 554 signers obtained in the first drive, the women are continuing to work to make it "unanimous" in Batesville. Ripley county Red Cross workers have just shipped to headquarters at Indianapolis 1,148 articles made in the county.

W. D. Robinson, chairman of the Y. M. C. A. War Fund drive in Ripley county, reports that in Delaware township, a community made up largely of citizens of German extraction, fewer than half a dozen "slackers" were found. Adams township, a very strong German settlement, was first in the list of townships to obtain its quota. D. E. McCoy of Versailles was secretary of the drive organization and C. L. Hyatt was treasurer.

Ripley county patriots are working on a permanent War Relief Association to centralize solicitations for war funds. A canvass is being made for 1,000 members, each to pay 50 cents a month to a central fund, the central fund to be drawn on for Ripley county's part of each fund as it is to be raised. The following are reported as having signed an agreement to give a stated sum each month into the common war fund:

J. Francis Lochard, Ida R. Lochard, D. C. Yater, G. B. Ashton, Harry W. Thompson, Howard L. Akers, Frank F. Wildman, J. P. Day, Geo. T. Beckett, Otto C. Buschins, Frank F. Talbott, F. M. Thompson, John Bronnenberg.

Charles L. Hyatt, John A. Spencer, Frank M. Laws, Charles H. Willson, Mrs. Chas. H. Willson, A. H. Beer, Ira W. McCoy, O. P. M. Wycoff, Wm. J. Helderman, Silas H. Pratt, Wm. Hunter, R. H. Hunter, J. A. Hunter, B. F. Jackson, William Smith, Rowland H. Jackson, Dalley E. McCoy, W. E. Henderson, F. N. Myers, Chas. H. Thompson, W. H. Smith.

Rush County.—The Rush County Council of Defense recently found and dismantled three wireless outfits in Rush county. The farmer boys who owned the wireless plants did not fully understand the government's war order dismantling such stations.

Ryon Cowing of Rushville is working on a platoon for one of the batteries in the new Second Indiana artillery. The Rushville city council has provided for signal lights to be placed in Rushville to guide night flights of aviators en route between Dayton, O., and Rantoul, Ill.

Earl H. Payne, banker, of Rushville, has taken the lead in the work of co-operating with a Louisville newspaper to provide a Christmas celebration for the Indiana men at Camp Taylor. The Rushville Republican has taken the matter in hand for Rush county.

Shelby County.—More than sixty Shelbyville high school boys responded to the call of Rev. F. Z. Burkette of Greensburg for volunteers who would agree to earn $10 each for the Y. M. C. A. war fund. Shelby county's quota was set at fifty and it is expected fully 100 boys will take up the work and carry out the pledge.

Frank W. Fagel of Shelbyville has been recommended to John H. Willis to serve as county chairman of the drive for the war camp recreation fund. The Shelbyville Chamber of Commerce has gone on record as favorable to the movement. Shelby county is raising $1,200 for this fund.

Spencer County.—The protection activities of the Spencer County Council of Defense have been demanded recently in the north part of the county. A committee was sent by the Defense Council to warn certain persons who had been uttering disloyal sentiments. The committee was headed by Postmaster Charles Salm of Rockport. Evidence was taken in five specific cases and in each case the man reported for disloyal conduct accepted the ruling of the committee and announced that he would henceforth be loyal and circumspect. Each of the men investigated pledged a monthly contribution to the Red Cross for the term of the war, agreed to display the American flag and to help put a stop to disloyal talk in the community. The committee on protection and for the stamping out of disloyalty expects to report to the federal authorities all who are proved to be disloyal in speech or act. The committee was made up of Mr. Salm, John Baker of Luce township, Joseph Forsythe of Grandview and John Rimstidt and James Hargis of Rockport.

Starke County.—The boys of Starke county have responded nobly to the Y. M. C. A. fund and one hundred boys have pledged $10 each. This is a remarkable piece of patriotism when one considers that this county has no manufacturing industry and it becomes necessary for these boys to work on farms at odd times in order to secure their amounts. Some of the boys are going to cut timber and saw wood and what other work they can find.

There have been 1,000 food conservation cards signed by patriotic housewives.

The Boy Scouts of North Judson again responded to the nation's call and during the second Liberty Loan campaign sold $7,000 worth of bonds.

Stauben County.—The County Council of Defense, through its chairman, R. E. Willis, supplied patriotic speakers for a series of farmers' meetings for the discussion of the war problems involved in the production of foodstuffs, notably the desired large increase in pork production and the use of soft corn for feed for growing hogs. Silken "badges of honor" are being worn by Steuben county people who have relatives in the military service. The badge is equivalent to the service flag displayed at the home. L. C. Stiefel of Angola has been giving these badges to those who are entitled to wear them.

Fred A. Emerson, Steuben county fuel director, has named advisers in the county as follows: Dr. T. J. Creel, Daniel Shank and William Elston, Angola; I. N. Cox, Ashley; Charles Gier, Fremont; O. P. Brown, Hamilton; W. J. Case, Orland, and C. J. Kirkland, Hudson.

The Steuben County Council of Defense has taken in hand the investigation of reports that farmers in certain parts of the county were feeding wheat to hogs in place of corn. It is the purpose to compel the offenders to understand the food situation and the need for wheat to be sent abroad while corn is used in America in increased quantities, both as feed and food.

St. Joseph County.—Mrs. Victor F. Jones of South Bend, in charge of a campaign for a fund with which to provide Christmas boxes for Indiana soldiers in the camps, was successful in raising a large sum, and the amount is growing steadily. The campaign closed December 10 and the boxes go forward December 16. Mrs. C. E. Crockett has been receiving the contributions. Mrs. Gilbert A. Elliott and Mrs. Forrest Hillier have been prominent in this work.

Victor F. Jones, secretary of the South Bend Chamber of Commerce, has resigned to take service with the engineer corps of the army. He will serve in France.

South Bend Red Cross workers have been doing their war work in prominent display windows with a view to stimulating interest in the tasks they are called on to do for the country in war time.

Sullivan County.—Gilbert Gambill, chairman of the Sullivan County Council of Defense, is making a census of chronic loafers in the county and the names will be put on file with the State Council of Defense to be used by that organization in its drive which is to put the parasites at work to help win the war.

Movies of Sullivan county soldiers in Camp Taylor have been shown in a picture theater at Sullivan under the auspices of the County Council of Defense, proceeds going for the purchase of supplies for knitters who are working on garments for the soldiers. The pictures were taken by Clarence Johnson of Vincennes, Ind. Women who are working on the winter garments for the soldiers were aided by Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls in selling tickets for the benefit.

Switzerland County.—Boys and girls in Switzerland county are doing practical war work on a large scale. They have sent several barrels of apples and nuts to army camps. Twenty-three boys of the high schools have pledged themselves to earn $10 each for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund. All but twenty Vevay homes have enlisted in the Hoover food conservation movement.

The Sammy Pen Club has been organized to write to soldiers and to provide comforts and useful garments to the men in the camps. The young women and girls in this club raised $100 for war work by giving a market. The home economics classes are working along similar lines.

Vevay school buildings have been adorned with rolls of honor bearing the names of thirty-one graduates now in the military service. Friday mornings in the schools are given to community singing of patriotic songs and to discussion of the causes and motives of the war.

Tipton County.—Community buying by farmers is being adopted in Tipton county as a war measure. Samuel Smith and E. Harper of Liberty township have bought "hominy hearts" in large quantities, eight farmers being associated in the feed deal. Other supplies are to be bought co-operatively.

Tippecanoe County.—James Westfall, Tippecanoe county fuel director, is doing systematic educational work to demonstrate to coal consumers the urgent need for the saving of fuel everywhere. In a signed appeal in the press Mr. Westfall asks all citizens to form the habit of using fuel sparingly.

An old hominy mill at Lafayette has been reopened, and is to operate full blast, turning out corn products to meet food demands of the war emergency. Corn flour, meal and grits are to be made.

Patriotic firms have contributed equipment of various sorts to the mechanical engineering department of Purdue University for testing purposes to aid the students in the working out of war plane and war motor ideas.

The executive committee of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense has constituted itself a "protection" committee for the county to root out and suppress disloyalty and to report seditious utterances and treasonable acts.

The work of the "four-minute men" in Tippecanoe county has been put in the hands of the speakers' bureau, W. V. Stuart, Geo. P. Haywood and J. O. Beck.

R. W. Levering has been made temporary head of the new Patriot League in Tippecanoe county, an adjunct of the County Defense Council.

R. N. Sample has been made treasurer of the Tippecanoe County Council of Defense.

Mrs. Stanley Coultter of Lafayette has reported 5,124 Hoover pledge card signers among Tippecanoe county women in addition to hundreds signed and sent directly to the State Food Administration at Indianapolis. The conservation pledge campaign is being continued.

The Tippecanoe County Council has appropriated $4,000 for the war work of the County Council of Defense.

Students and faculty of Purdue University subscribed approximately $20,000 to the Y. M. C. A. War Fund. Purdue is planning to fit out one and perhaps two army ambulances. Purdue students in large numbers have placed themselves subject to call for farm work under the direction of County Agent Otis Crane.

Vanderburg County.—Under the direction of the Vanderburg County Council of Defense stenographers and clerks volunteered to do the compilation demanded by the local exemption board in connection with the first draft. Fifteen persons were employed without pay.

Evansville is trying out a plan suggested by Mrs. F. H. Hostetter for a "beerless Saturday" for men. Moderate drinkers are asked to abstain on "beerless Saturday" and others are asked to "take one less than usual."

When it was suggested that Evansville people build a memorial home for Mrs. Alice Dodd, mother of Corporal James Bethel Gresham, the first Indiana soldier to be killed in battle in this war, the Carpenters and Joiners' Local No. 99 and the Painters and Decorators Local No. 156 officially volunteered their services for the work.

Joseph Rottmayer, Evansville, reported as having said he would rather bury his money than invest it in Liberty Loan bonds, was induced to sign and file with Postmaster J. J. Nolan the following statement:

"I apologize to the United States government for remarks made by me which, if taken seriously, might result in charges of disloyalty against me. I agree to fly from my home the American flag. I also agree to purchase a Liberty bond of the next issue."

Vermillion County.—Bert F. Chastain of Clinton has been named for fuel director in Vermillion county by the County Council of Defense, the recommendation going to State Fuel Administrator Evans Woolen.

The following women have been named to serve in the women's branch of the Vermillion County Council of Defense:

Enrollment and Woman's Service—Mrs. F. L. Swinehart, Miss Jessie Robinson, Mrs. H. M. Ferguson, Miss Zoe Sharp and Mrs. W. H. Bonner of Clinton, Mrs. O. B. Zell, Mrs. S. C. Darroch and Mrs. U. J. Ashley of Cayuga, Miss Lillie Malone, Mrs. Joe Grimes and Mrs. Tom Clark of Dana, Mrs. Q. A. Myers, Mrs. Charlie Sanders of Perrysville, Mrs. M. L. Hall, Miss Grace Rheuby and Mrs. Edgar R. Stephens of Newport.

Home Economics—Mrs. C. N. Fultz of Newport.

Child Welfare—Mrs. H. H. Conley of Newport.

Health and Recreation—Miss Alice J. Higgins of Clinton.

Food Conservation—Mrs. Frank Harvey of Newport.

Liberty Loan—Mrs. Lenore Johnston, Mrs. John Wright and Mrs. J. D. Todd of Cayuga, Mrs. F. L. Swinehart, Miss

Callie McMechan and Mrs. U. G. Wright of Clinton; Mrs. O. A. Myers of Perrysville, Mrs. Cora B. Nixon and

Miss Grace Rheuby of Newport, Mrs. William Collier, Mrs. Samuel Elder and Mrs. John Bilsard of Dana, Mrs. Floyd

W. Reed and Mrs. J. P. Hartsook of St. Bernice.

Red Cross and Allied Relief—Mrs. Willard Ashley of Clinton.

Publicity—Mrs. H. B. Davis of Newport, Miss Ethel Devine of Clinton, Mrs. T. J. Wright of Dana, Mrs. Carrie McMurty of Cayuga.

War Mother—Mrs. H. V. Nixon of Newport.

Vigo County.—A service flag has been presented to the First M. E. church by the Epworth League of the church. The flag carries a star for each member of the church who is in the military service.

A. E. Mogie has been investigating charges of extortion or over-charging for sugar. It was reported that in certain stores sugar was not being sold by the pound, but was sold by the "10 cents' worth" or "15 cents' worth." Mr. Mogie sought to buy sugar and when he met this sort of trickery issued a solemn warning to the tricksters.

The Indiana State Normal raised $2,040 for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund, the goal being $2,000.

The Fairbanks Library, Terre Haute, is especially effective in advancing the American war propaganda of patriotism. A recent food conservation poster display was a popular feature. The library is pushing to public notice the government's documents and bulletins, prominent among them being the Indiana Bulletin put out by the State Council of Defense.

Wabash County.—The Christmas packets for soldiers' fund in this county was filled to overflowing some time ago, and late offerings to the fund were diverted to the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and other war funds. North Manchester folk completed the Christmas cheer fund with $67.10 in a lump.

More than 100 Wabash county farmers are actively at work in an organization whose object is a campaign to bring about a large increase in the production of pork in the county to meet the war demand for more meat. This work is undertaken at the suggestion of the National and State Food Administrations, under the direction of the Councils of Defense. One farmer was reported as refusing to help in the food campaign, and his case is being looked after by the Wabash County Council of Defense.

The students and faculty at Manchester college, North Manchester, Wabash county, subscribed more than $1,300 to the $10,000 quota of the county for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund. Prof. V. F. Schwalm of the college led the drive in the institution, citing his own knowledge of the Y. M. C. A. work being done at Camp Taylor as argument for the cause.

The Wabash Commercial Club bought a carload of coal and sold it in half-ton lots to those who needed coal in the recent emergency, the work being done by G. L. Baker, secretary of the club, co-operating with Charles Latchem, the new Wabash county fuel director. Mr. Latchem was recommended by the County Council of Defense and Commercial Club.

Warrick County.—In Warrick county the Boonville Standard is deputy Santa Claus to Henry Watterson and the Louisville Courier-Journal in the movement to see that a Christmas offering goes from the county to each Warrick county soldier now serving at Camp Taylor.

Yarn has been distributed all over Warrick county by the Red Cross, according to Mrs. Earl Scales. A new class in surgical dressings has been started, and an increasing number of knitters has been enlisted. Corporal Leslie H. Hendrickson has written to thank the Red Cross society for a "comfort kit." The auxiliary to the Boonville Presbyterian church gave $50 to the Red Cross kit fund. The Woman's club meets at the Red Cross shop and gives its time to Red Cross work. The Methodist Ladies' Aid of Boonville is making bed shirts. The Queen Esther Circle gives its meeting time to war work. Home department work is being done by the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid.

The W. C. T. U. gave a food sale, the proceeds going to the "soldiers and sailors' department.

W. J. Veck, of Boonville, served as county chairman in Warrick county for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund campaign. Henry Raber, C. H. Ayers, Herbert Bass, E. C. Hargrave and C. E. Powell were his chief helpers throughout the county.

Wayne County.—Fred S. Bates, of Richmond, new Wayne county fuel director and member of the Wayne County Council of Defense, has issued a statement to the public urging the saving of coal and the use of wood for fuel where it can be done.

Working with the Wayne County Council of Defense, Postmaster Charles B. Beck of Richmond and other Federal authorities have been busy recently tracing reports of treasonable activities of pro-German propagandists in the county. A deputy United States Marshal is to be named in Richmond to have special charge of the task of stamping out disloyalty and bringing traitors to punishment. The pro-German forces, though not numerous, have been active in their attempts to obstruct war work being done by the Council of Defense.

Walter Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Davis of Richmond, is the first man from the city to get a commission in the flying corps of the United States army. Young Davis now is a first lieutenant. Earl Spangler

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

ANOTHER GERMAN LIE.

A new variation of the enemy propaganda which seeks to discredit Red Cross work and hamper the activities of patriotic Americans, has appeared in Indianapolis, where the report is circulated that a mysterious woman whose name is not given knit a sweater for the Red Cross and sewed a $2 bill in the sweater pocket for the soldier to whom the sweater was to be presented. The story goes on to say this woman later saw the aforesaid sweater worn by a woman, the wearer saying she "bought" the garment of the Red Cross. The enemy lie goes on to say the woman who had knitted the sweater demanded and received the $2 bill she had sewed in the pocket of the sweater.

This false rumor, industriously circulated by both innocent and designing persons, has been traced in an effort to get at its source and inspiration, but all, as usual, without result.

All citizens must take it on themselves as a public and patriotic duty not only to contradict the falsehoods spread by the pro-kaiser agents, but are expected and required under the law to report all anti-American propaganda to the Federal authorities and to the Councils of Defense.

This particular sweater story is peculiarly flimsy, as the patriotic woman readily notes. In the first place, the sweater has no pocket. In the second place the woman knitter could not identify the particular garment she had made simply by seeing it worn by another on a street car. Further, it is not at all likely a $2 bill sewn into such a garment,—granting it had a pocket,—would remain long in said pocket.

Yet this sort of ridiculous stuff is being passed on thoughtlessly by people who ought to know better.

A SILENT CHURCH BELL.

In the recent drive for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund the patriotic workers in Ohio county arranged to be present at the Sunday morning services in a German church in the heart of a German community. The day before the day set for the presentation of the Red Cross appeal in that German church, the janitor of the church reported to the patriotic workers that there would be no services in the church the next morning.

For the first time in fifty-eight years church services were "called off" in that particular church and this at a time when a patriotic appeal was to be made from the pulpit for help to be given to America and her soldiers in a righteous war.

The effect of this misplay by pro-kaiser influences was electrical in that community. The American spirit was thoroughly aroused, and the result of the Y. M. C. A. drive was a sum more than double the quota set for Ohio county.

Patriotic citizens of Ohio county insist that the pro-German poison can be eradicated, and that this remedial work can be done by educating the slackers and secessionists. The "bad" Germans who sought to obstruct the Y. M. C. A. drive for funds can be induced to become "good" Germans, according to men who know the situation, and it is proposed to drive home the whole truth about the war to every uncertain or shirking citizen.

As the war goes on and Germany's crimes are proved beyond dispute, it becomes easy for the one-time pro-German to get right for America, and it becomes increasingly difficult for anybody to live in this country and continue to condone and uphold the atrocities and brutalities that mark Germany's military policy.

Patriotic thrift and usefulness, combined with the habit of working and earning and the pride that goes with fine achievement, are the blessings that attend the boy who signs a pledge to earn $10 for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund by April 1 next. The United States Boys' Working Reserve, which induces high school boys to take up corn-husking and wood-cutting and shop work in the places of men who have gone to the colors, opens several fields wherein the young men may find it comparatively easy to earn the $10 and much more between now and spring. If 1,000,000 high school boys are induced to go into this movement for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund the whole country will derive inestimable future benefits from the schooling and discipline and training in patriotic endeavor thus given to a huge army of potential citizens. There is fundamental common sense as well as helpful patriotism in the movement to put the high school boys into the work of raising Y. M. C. A. War Funds.

Under suggestions offered by the Public Morals committee of the State Council of Defense, acting through Rev. A. B. Storms, chairman of the committee, measures have been taken by the military authorities at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, and by the authorities of the city of Indianapolis, to stamp out immorality in and around the camps of the regulars stationed at the post. Col. E. A. Root, commandant at the fort, has issued a general order restricting visitors to Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and barring from the post all girls and young women who are without escorts. The law against peddling liquor in the post is being strictly enforced and entering autos are being searched for illegal cargoes.

How States, Communities and Individuals Can Help Eliminate Rats and Mice—Measures Suggested By Biologists of U. S. Department of Agriculture.

By requiring that all new buildings, wharves and other structures be rat proof; that existing buildings of rat-proof construction be further protected by having basement windows and drains covered with screens, gratings, etc., and that existing buildings that are not rat proof be made so by remodeling.

By constructing sewers and drains so that they will not provide entrance and retreat for rats.

By insisting on greater cleanliness about markets, stores and generally throughout cities, villages, and the country districts.

By threshing and marketing grain early so that stacks will not furnish harboring places and food for rats.

By removing piles of straw, trash, and lumber which harbor rats in fields and vacant lots.

By protecting the hawks, owls and other natural enemies of rats which are not so destructive to poultry as rats themselves.

By keeping well-trained rat dogs on farms and about city warehouses.

By keeping provisions which rats and mice will attack in rat-proof and mouse-proof containers.

By destroying rats and mice systematically by poisoning, trapping, and by organized systematic hunting.

By arousing public opinion to the realization of the importance of exterminating rats and mice.

The total pack of canned corn this year is expected to reach 11,000,000 cases, the largest since 1912.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 70

November 21, 1917.

To the County Councils of Defense:

The Indiana Ice Dealers' Association has appointed a delegate in each county of the State, and these delegates have been instructed to immediately communicate with their County Councils of Defense and to offer to them their cooperation in regard to measures of economy especially where they affect the ice and storage plants.

This Association represents a large amount of business in this State, and its co-operation with our organizations ought to be much desired and appreciated by us. It is therefore the opinion of the State Council that you should make use of the services offered by this delegate by placing him on an appropriate committee of your County Council. STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 72

November 28, 1917.

—War Work Conference—

To County Councils of Defense:

A State wide War Conference will be held in Indianapolis on December 13th and 14th. This is in pursuance to suggestions originating in the Council of National Defense and the Committee on Public Information at Washington.

It will be a most important occasion. The program is being completed and will consist of a mass meeting at Tomlinson Hall at 2 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, December 13th, which will be addressed by a speaker of the very highest national reputation direct from the front. At this meeting also a member of the National Council will speak who will be able to give in detail the defense program. Late that afternoon there will probably be Sectional meetings. At 8 o'clock that night (Thursday) there will be another mass meeting for which we have been promised as a speaker a member of the cabinet.

All day Friday, December 14, Sectional meetings will be held of each department in the war work, including Food Production and Conservation, Fuel, Medical, Red Cross, etc. At these Sectional meetings there will be representatives of the Council of National Defense, any one of whom would be of sufficient force to have addressed the joint mass meetings of the day previous.

The occasion will be epochal in the history of the State, and direct first hand information will be given all war workers and the entire defense program of State and nation discussed in detail.

It is necessary that each County Council take steps immediately to have as large a membership as possible present on these two days. The entire County Council should be in attendance; also you should arrange that all committees and the war workers generally attend from your county. It is really most essential that all the leaders of every community in all of these war activities be present. Nothing in the immediate future is as important as a large attendance of the war workers at these sessions.

The announcement of the speakers will be made in a few days. Suggestions received include Dr. Henry VanDyke, former American Minister to Holland, Bishop Williams of Detroit, who was sent to Europe by the Red Cross and has just returned, et al. Other and exact announcements will be very soon forwarded.

If each County Council will forward immediately a list of names to whom special invitations should be sent, we will be glad to forward the letters direct from here. These names ought to come to us by return mail.

According to an English dispatch, bacon is not procurable in many butcher shops in London. In shops able to secure supplies, the price ranges as high as 60 cents per pound for grades of bacon that before the war sold for 18 cents.

Committee's Report Calls for Observation of Solicitation on Part of County Councils.

The special committee of the Indiana State Council of defense appointed to consider the question of censoring and co-ordinating the solicitation of funds for war purposes, submitted at the meeting, November 28, the following report, which hereafter will constitute the policy of the Council on this subject. In addition the committee's suggestion that the National Council be requested to consider the matter of co-ordinating and consolidating nation-wide campaigns for funds, was indorsed and acted upon.

"The special committee appointed at the meeting of November 14, 1917, to consider the matter of licensing or otherwise regulating the solicitation of war funds report as follows:

"We believe that the appeals to the people of our State for funds or property to aid in or to alleviate the consequences of the war should receive some form of official or quasi-official approval before being regarded as entitled to public support and confidence.

"In the case of the broader movements, such as the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and the Camp Recreation Fund, approval is given by the President, the Secretary of War, or the Secretary of the Navy. In those cases no other approval is of course required. In the case of solicitations by churches, lodges, clubs, and other like bodies of established standing, the appeal is primarily to their own members or adherents, and approval from without the organization would seem to be unnecessary and uncalled for.

"There is, however, another large class of appeals for direct contributions, or for the support of enterprises, the proceeds of which are partly or wholly to be devoted to war purposes, which are now almost altogether unsupervised. These appeals are of different grades of worthiness and wisdom. The average citizen has little opportunity to ascertain the merits and the needs of all these demands upon his purse and time, but hesitates to refuse to respond to any. The attempt should be made to separate those solicitations which are clearly both worthy and wise from the questionable ones, so that our citizens may have some means of guidance among the manifold calls for war contribution.

"The plan of centralizing all contributions by forming an organization in each community to which all gifts should be made, the organization through a representative board to distribute the funds collected among the various activities as the board might deem proper, has been suggested. Your committee does not, however, recommend that plan for general adoption although in some communities it might work satisfactorily. Your committee fears that that plan would have a tendency in most communities to render giving for war purposes mechanical, and to chill the spirit of benevolence on the part of that numerous class to whom one cause appeals strongly while another evokes no enthusiasm.

"Your committee recommends the adoption of the following plan:

"The creation by the Council of a committee consisting of, say, five members, the duty of which shall be to ascertain the merits and wisdom of any appeal to the public for war contributions, particularly those of a State wide character, not including, however, those publicly approved by the President, the Secretary of War, or the Secretary of the Navy, or those by churches, fraternities, clubs, or other similar bodies of recognized standing. The inquiry of the committee should be made on application of the activity proposing to solicit, or, if the committee saw fit, without application. To any activity which it approves, the committee should issue a certificate of approval, and in other cases the committee should give such publicity to its investigation and determination as it deems proper.

"In addition to the committee representing the State Council, a committee of, say, five members should be appointed by each County Council of Defense. The State committee should keep the county committees informed of the results of its

LOYALTY

"Loyalty is the first duty of the citizen, and the supreme test of allegiance. That government which does not inspire in its best citizenship the fullest measure of loyalty, deserves to fall; and the citizen who gives not to his government the fullest measure of allegiance, deserves none of its protection.

"There can be no middle ground between loyalty and treason. They are terms of absolutism in every known language, whatever their translation, for they describe conditions of the human mind so diametrically opposed that harmony is unthinkable.

"Our constitutional guaranties of free speech and free press are the foundation stones of our government, but they furnish no warrant for treasonable expression when our nation is at war."

examinations. The county committees should take the proper steps to advise the public in their respective counties of the action thus taken. Proposed solicitations not passed on by the State committee should be examined into and approved or disapproved by the county committees, which should have the same functions to perform with respect thereto in their respective counties as the State Committee has within its field.

"Due publicity should be given to the plan herein outlined.

"The plan thus proposed is purely voluntary in character, thus differing from that in use in Illinois. No plan other than a voluntary one can be made effective in Indiana under the present law, but we see no reason why a voluntary plan should not in its practical operation be reasonably effective.

"Respectfully submitted,

RESOLUTION BY MR. STRAUS.

The following resolution, presented by Isaac D. Straus, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Whereas, It appears that the four major forms of activity essential to the successful prosecution of this war are

- (a) Shipbuilding,
- (b) Raising of military forces,
- (c) Manufacture of munitions,
- (d) Food production,

and

Whereas, If shipbuilding under private direction does not proceed with sufficient speed, the federal government can, because of the nature of the industry, elect to take over the shipyards and conduct shipbuilding operations under its own direction, and

Whereas, The army is already provided for by conscription and, when called, those of the proper age and qualifications must come forward, and

Whereas, If the production of munitions of war under private direction does not proceed with sufficient speed the federal government can, because of the nature of the industry, elect to take over munition plants and operate same on its own account, and

Whereas, The increased production of food can be increased only in proportion to the willingness of farmers to volunteer to increase their production and in proportion to the labor available for this increased production, it being self-evident that it will be impossible for the federal government to take over the farms of the country as it would shipyards or munition plants for the purpose of increasing production under its own direction and on its own account, and

Whereas, In a number of instances brought to the attention of the State Council of Defense, farmers' sons have been drafted because they had no dependents, little consideration being given to their value from a utilitarian standpoint, in many instances these boys being key men on the farms and bearing the same relation to the production of food in their respective neighborhoods as superintendents and foremen of shipyards or munition factories bear to production in those industries, and

Whereas, The continuation of this practice will defeat the theory of "selective draft," put a damper on voluntary effort and will discourage many farmers, particularly those who are too old for much active work, and must of necessity shift the responsibility for increased food production to the shoulders of their sons; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the State Council of Defense earnestly urge that the National Council of Defense lay these facts before the Provost Marshal-General, E. H. Crowder, with the urgent request that instructions be sent out to all districts exemption boards advising them to resolve every doubt in favor of farmers who are producing essential agricultural products; also those farmers who are endeavoring to increase their crops by their own labor or through labor which they themselves employ and superintend, and also farmers who are giving particular evidence of loyalty by their support of voluntary war measures.

THE INDIANA WAR CONFERENCE.

The Council approved the report of the committee named to arrange the big war conference in Indianapolis on December 13 and 14.

Henry Van Dyke, United States Minister to Holland; Bishop Williams of Detroit, who has just returned from a trip to the Western battle front as a representative of the Red Cross; F. C. Walcott, personal aid to Herbert Hoover, federal food administrator, and Arthur C. Bestor, chairman of the speakers' bureau of the federal committee on public information, have been definitely engaged to address the conference.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw of the National Women's Council; George Creel, chairman of the committee on public information, and other celebrities are said by Professor J. J. Pettijohn, chairman of the Indianapolis speakers' bureau, to be trying to arrange to be present at this conference, the first of a national series arranged under the direction of the Council of National Defense.

The National Council has agreed to send a member of President Wilson's war cabinet to Indianapolis for the meeting. Secretary of War Newton D. Baker having found it impossible to be here, it is expected that either Secretary of State Robert Lansing or Secretary of the Interior Franklin Lane will come.

The conference will be featured by a mass meeting to be addressed by Minister Van Dyke on the afternoon of the 13th and by the cabinet member the same evening. Governor James P. Goodrich, under whose general direction all Indiana work is now being done, will issue invitations to war workers in every county in the State to be present both for the mass meetings and the sectional institute meetings which will be held all day December 14, the latter to be addressed by national figures with authoritative messages from Washington.

A resolution deferring final action on the endorsement of the patriotic text book prepared under the direction of the educational section until it had been endorsed by the Council of National Defense, or some one designated by it, was tabled. A committee consisting of Horace Ellis, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; President George Grose of DePauw, and Ernest Graff, superintendent of schools, Indianapolis, are editing the copy for the printer.

Evans Woollen, fuel administrator, and his advisory committee, to which was referred the suggestion that the attorney-general of the State be asked to place a new interpretation on the miners' permit law, reported that the committee had decided against asking such action by the attorney-general. However, the committee said it would recommend to the coal operators and miners' organizations that permits be issued at any time, the permit law fixing but three days in the month for sessions of the permit board. The change is intended to encourage the employment of itinerant miners in a general plan to stimulate coal production to meet the extraordinary demands.

Directors and Enrolling Officers United States Boys' Working Reserve

Department of Labor, Washington

ISAAC D. STRAUS,
Federal State Director.

WILLIAM E. HALL,
National Director.

You are cordially invited to attend the Second National Conference of Directors of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, United States Department of Labor, to be held in the Auditorium of the State Council of Defense Building, 120 West Adams Street, Chicago, on Friday and Saturday, December seventh and eighth, 1917.

Please extend this invitation to all those in your vicinity who are interested in the mobilization of boy workers in the war emergency, including State and county officials, teachers, vocational directors, workers among boys, boys' camp leaders, editors, industrial executives, welfare managers and farmers. Sessions daily. Ten o'clock morning; two o'clock afternoon.

BOYS WRITE ESSAYS.

Recently the high school students of Michigan City were invited by the principal to write essays on the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, credit being given for these essays in English classes. M. C. Murray, principal, advises that this literary effort on the part of the students has stimulated enrollment in the Reserve. Other high school principals might adopt a similar plan.

SOUTH BEND SETS THE PACE.

Dr. Carl Stoltz, member of the advisory committee of the Reserve, has taken a particular interest in arousing enthusiasm among South Bend high school boys and advises that for the past month, on every Saturday, from twenty-five to thirty boys have been out on different farms husking corn. Other boys have been digging potatoes. These boys have earned good money, have had the kind of exercise that builds big appetites and makes the rich, warm red blood course through the veins and, best of all, the farmers report their work as being entirely satisfactory.

PRACTICAL PATRIOTIC WORK.

Several reports have come to the State Council of Defense of the skeptical manner in which some people, often those who occupy positions of responsibility, have received different suggestions that are given out by the National and State Councils of Defense as to how they can help win the war. One of the most recent things criticized has been the proposed organization of a Saw Buck Club in each high school. The attention of such persons is called to the following:

USE WOOD FOR COAL, PLEA OF FUEL ADMINISTRATOR.

Washington, Nov. 29.—To help meet the shortage of 50,000,000 tons in the country's coal supply, the fuel administrator, in co-operation with the Department of Agriculture, has inaugurated an intensive campaign for the substitution of wood for coal.

"One cord of hard wood is equal to a ton of coal," said an announcement by the fuel administrator. "One ton of coal is released for use in war work for every cord of wood substituted. Statistics show that there is a vast amount of dead wood in many sections of the country and that the supply of wood in many communities is sufficient for domestic purposes in those parts."

Much of the wood in communities is destroyed as waste, it was pointed out, and its conservation not only would conserve coal, but would prove a measure of economy to the users.

FARMERS' QUESTIONNAIRE.

The State Council of Defense, in co-operation with the United States Boys' Working Reserve, is sending out questionnaires to 50,000 farmers, asking them to take a survey of their labor conditions and advise as soon as possible how much additional labor will be necessary next spring in order to aid in the early planting season. The first reply to this questionnaire is given below:

"Lafayette, Ind., November 26, 1917.

"I. D. Straus, Federal State Director, Indiana State Council of Defense, Indianapolis, Ind.:

"Dear Sir—I am filling out and sending you enclosed one of the Boys' Working Reserve cards and am taking the liberty of writing you in order to explain fully my needs.

"I handle considerable live stock and require a lad of a rather dependable nature and with a liking toward live stock farming. I have taken one such lad and, by encouraging him to save his money and to take the farmers' short course at Purdue University, am preparing him for a herdsman.

"I am offering the right kind of a boy $30.00 per month straight time and board to begin with, and if he can manage the work, will give him a man's wages.

"I can wait as late as April 1 for this help, but would rather have it February 1 if it can be arranged.

Very truly yours,

"OSCAR A. SWANK."

GOOD WORK IN DEARBORN COUNTY.

Ray F. Sopher of Lawrenceburg, county director of the Boys' Working Reserve in Dearborn county, reports that on Saturday, November 24, of the forty eligible boys in the Aurora high school, twenty-eight of them were engaged in productive labor. Sixteen boys under the direction of Professor H. E. Driver cut and saved stove wood all day, and twelve other boys did miscellaneous work on neighboring farms. This is a most commendable showing, and undoubtedly is just the beginning of Reserve activity that will never cease as long as the war lasts.

To Co-ordinate Patriotic Activity

The following resolution was adopted by the Council of National Defense at its meeting of November 2, 1917:

Whereas, It appears that there are many voluntary organizations and committees engaged in patriotic service throughout the country, and

Whereas, in the opinion of the Council of National Defense such organizations and committees can render the most effective service if properly co-ordinated, and

Whereas, A State Council of Defense has been organized in each State to co-ordinate the war activities within the State and to co-operate with the Council of National Defense; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Council of National Defense strongly urges that wherever practicable voluntary patriotic organizations and committees in each State work through and under the guidance of the State Council of Defense so that the State Council of Defense may be the central, co-ordinating agency for all voluntary patriotic work within the State directed toward assisting in the prosecution of the war.

About 100,000 manufacturers, wholesalers and other distributors of staple foods are now under the licensing provisions of the Food Control Act.

and Chalmers Mutchener, the latter a former newspaper man of Richmond, have gone in for commissions in the flying outfit.

Team work resulted in 607 signatures in one day in the Hoover pledge card campaign in Richmond. Mrs. H. L. Monarch was one of the leaders in the work. Factory employes in large numbers have been signing the food pledge cards.

Wells County.—The State Fuel Administration, the Wells county fuel director, J. J. Miller, co-operating with the Council of Defense, has worked out a solution of the fuel problem for the Bluffton city light plant. Street lights, however, are to be turned off at 10 p. m. in order to help the campaign to save fuel.

Bluffton city schools are to help sell Red Cross Christmas seals this year, on behalf of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society. This is accepted as essential war work along with the general Red Cross activities of the war emergency period.

A "mess fund" raised in Wells county for the eighty-seven selected soldiers from the city of Bluffton, provided $4.48 for each of the men. The money was collected at the time the men left for the training camp. The committee in charge of the fund included George L. Saunders, William Welsell and Fred I. Bell.

A reception was given at Zanesville, Wells county, in honor of Miss Frances F. Keyser, prior to her departure for Ft. Worth, Tex., where she has entered on her duties with the Red Cross.

Recruits are being examined at Bluffton for the battery being organized by Captain Charles Brunn to be a unit in the new Second Indiana Artillery. Sheriff J. A. Johnston has tendered the use of his office as a recruiting station and Dr. Fred A. Metts is the medical examiner.

The Wells County Council has appropriated $1,100 for the use of the County Council of Defense in war work, $1,000 being for 1918.

* * * * *

White County.—Felix Coleman, accused of using seditious and treasonable language on a Monon train, was drubbed by soldiers, arrested and fined for disorderly conduct and later was taken in hand by Wright J. Hinkle, chairman of the White County Council of Defense, who found Coleman was registered for the draft, first call, at Toledo, O. The man has been returned to Ohio.

The people of Chalmers and contiguous township gathered in a patriotic meeting and raised $548 in an hour for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund, the quota being $700 for the township. The chief appeal was made by J. M. Horner of Lafayette.

* * * * *

Whitley County.—It is reported that thousands of bushels of potatoes are being hoarded in Whitley county, and the County Council of Defense is taking action to warn the growers against the evils and disappointments of holding potatoes for higher prices. It is being explained through County Agent B. L. Hummel that spring will see lower prices for potatoes with the government fixing the market price.

Columbia City grocers are united in assisting the Food Administration in meeting the sugar shortage emergency. In two days Columbia City and Whitley county raised more than their quota for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund and turned to other war work. Rev. L. A. Luckenbill was county chairman in the campaign. More than $6,000 was raised.

Whitley county women are working on the proposition of a woman home demonstrator for duty in the county to instruct the patriotic housewives in war economics and conservation.

Those who peddle criminal libels against the Red Cross in Whitley county are to be run down and punished. H. D. McAllen, county chairman of the Red Cross, has offered a reward of $100 for information that will lead to the conviction of persons who slander the society by circulating pro-German falsehoods as to its work.

Illustrated Honor Roll.

In addition to using moving picture theaters as speaking places for Four-Minute men and women and for the showing of films depicting battle and training camp scenes, one of the movie houses at Greensburg, Ind., has introduced a plan for throwing on the screen the pictures of soldier boys from Decatur county who are in camp or at the front.

Joseph Welsh, who formerly was employed at the K. of P. theater in Greensburg, sent his picture, in uniform, to his old employer, and Manager Dunn had a plate made from the photograph, and flashed the likeness for the benefit of the Greensburg folk who know Private Welsh.

This incident suggests another means by which the home folk may be brought in closer touch with the war, with the men who are out to fight the home folk's battles, and with the concrete benefits of military training as clearly demonstrated in the cases of the men in khaki.

The Roll of Honor in the community might well be "illustrated" most effectively by means of photographs of the members of the Roll of Honor thrown on the movie screen.

Seed Corn Campaign of Greatest Moment

Estimates Are That Fifty Per Cent. of the Indiana Farmers Will be Forced to Buy Supply.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation and the Indiana State Council of Defense are still urging the selection and storage of seed corn. The poor condition of the corn crop from Pennsylvania to Colorado only emphasizes the need for further action in Indiana. The high per cent. of moisture contained in even the best of seed makes careful selection and proper storage of paramount importance. The problem can be solved by Indiana farmers, but not without assistance. It is estimated that 50 per cent. of the farmers of the State will have to buy their seed in the spring.

The Food Committee has proposed to give assistance by encouraging community corn rooms where seed corn can be stored and dried in large quantities. In order to accomplish this undertaking it is necessary to seek the cooperation of the grain dealers and bankers.

Wells County: Mel Swallow reports that the leaders in this county have equipped the upper story of the court house for the drying of seed corn. This has been done in a very thorough manner and will take care of several thousand bushels of corn. He further reports that he has been able to locate 1,600 bushels of corn suitable for seed. He estimates that 50 per cent. of the farmers will have to buy seed corn and that the county will not be able to supply a surplus.

Lagrange County: R. L. Thompson reports a shortage of seed in Lagrange county. He was able to locate in four days' time 700 bushels of corn suitable for seed. He also reports that much of the seed corn which was selected early by farmers has moulded and been rendered worthless. Some kiln drying has been attempted in the county. Much of this has been spoiled owing to the fact that it was dried at too high a temperature.

Steuben County: E. B. Moore reports many fields of corn will not furnish a single ear that is suitable for seed. He was able to locate a few fields in the county which contain approximately 70 per cent. solid corn. Several hundred bushels of old corn were located of which 50 to 60 per cent. will make good feed.

Marshall County: Roscoe A. Fields reports the southern Indiana will have an abundance of fine seed if cared for properly." He states that 50 per cent. of the farmers, however, will have to buy seed for next year's crop.

Elkhart County: Calvin Perdue estimates 80 per cent. of the farmers will be without seed. He says: "The seed corn committee of the better farming associations will not stop until every ear of corn in Elkhart county suitable for seed has been found, properly stored and advertised."

Vigo County: W. S. Taylor reports 3,000 bushels of mature seed corn selected to date. One-half of the farmers have no seed at all.

Wabash County: V. A. Place, the agricultural agent, is making a very thorough canvass of the county. After this census is completed an exact record of the amount of corn needed and the surplus in the county will be had. Similar action is being taken by other county agents.

Boone County: Sixteen farmers have reported through Hugh Woody of Thorntown, that they have selected 2,570 bushels of mature corn.

The importance of the proper storage was emphasized at a meeting held November 20 at Reynolds. One farmer who had selected 49 bushels of seed early in September tested a representative sample and found that none of it would grow. This not only emphasizes the need for

At a meeting of the grain dealers, bankers and farmers called by the county agent, at the Board of Trade Building, Indianapolis, November 23, this situation was discussed. C. B. Riley, Secretary of the Grain Dealers' Association, presided at the meeting. Mr. Riley said: "The selection of seed corn for next year's planting is one of the most important problems facing the farmers, bankers and grain dealers because of the tremendous loss suffered through the early frost which stopped the maturing of the 1917 crop before the corn had an opportunity to dry out and harden. W. Q. Fitch, Secretary to State Food Director G. I. Christie, said that the task before Indiana was to select 1,500,000 bushels of high class seed corn and that this situation could only be met by the cooperation of the farmers, bankers and grain dealers. Andrew Smith, Secretary of the State Bankers' association, said that he would do everything within his power to advance the movement to save seed corn for next year's crop. He endorsed the scheme proposed for drying seed corn in the community corn rooms.

J. A. McCarty of the Soils and Crop department, Purdue university, says that the reports from the county agents at large from twenty counties indicate the condition of the seed corn in northern and central Indiana to be most serious. The reports all urge the necessity for proper storage. Reports from the county agents at large from the various counties are as follows:

seed corn condition to be very serious, 75 per cent. of the corn on the stalk molding and at least 50 per cent. of the standing corn will be a total loss for feeding purposes. However 90 per cent. of the corn in the county is in the shock. He estimates that 65 per cent. of the farmers will be in the market for seed for spring planting.

Allen County: C. E. Troyer reports several thousand bushels of seed can be had provided it can be stored before a hard freeze. He further states that 50 per cent. of the farmers will have to buy seed.

Adams County: C. E. Troyer also assisted in the work in Adams county and reports the farmers are cooperating in a very fine way. A man has been assigned to each four square miles of the county and a representative interested in the campaign will see personally every farmer in the county. At the present time 15,000 bushels of seed have been located in the fields. The principal problem is that of storing.

Warren County: Fred Palin reports that there is not more than one bushel of mature seed corn per acre for the corn crop of the county. He states that a large per cent. of the corn is in the roasting ear stage. The problem of drying is the most serious confronting the farmers.

Vermilion County: Fred Palin assisted in the work in Vermilion county and reports there will be no surplus seed corn and if the seed which will be selected can be properly cared for the county will take care of its needs.

Sullivan County: W. S. Taylor says: "I think proper storage but the need for a greater number of bushels to be selected than is actually needed for the 1918 crop, as the corn germinator will cause thousands of bushels to be discarded next spring.

POTATO SEED INSPECTION.

Under the direction of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation a two days' conference was held at Purdue University, November 22 and 23, relative to the seed potato situation in Indiana for 1918. The meeting was attended by the State Food Director, the members of the Horticultural and Botanical Departments of Purdue University; Professor William Stuart, potato specialist, United States Department of Agriculture, and the following seed inspectors appointed by the United States government: Henry Paulus, Rensselaer, Ind.; C. C. Osborne, Irvington, Ind.; W. S. Roebuck, Fort Wayne, Ind.; W. A. Withrow, New Richmond, Ind.; Oliver Kline, Huntington, Ind.; D. B. Johnson, Mooresville, Ind., and J. G. Boyle, Buchanan, Mich. Professor Greene of the Horticultural Department acted as chairman of the meeting. Food Director Christie and T. A. Coleman took part in the discussions and gave valuable information concerning the matters under discussion.

The object of the conference was to complete plans for conducting a potato seed inspection campaign in Indiana. Methods of inspections were carefully presented to the inspectors by Professor Stuart and the identification and importance of potato diseases were discussed by Professors Stuart and Jackson of the Botanical Department. An inspection of the potato supply in Lafayette proved interesting and instructive to the men in attendance at the conference. Diseased and frozen potatoes were found in abundance.

The plan of procedure adopted was to locate potatoes in various parts of the State that are suitable for seed purposes. The most important potato-growing counties are to be covered by the inspectors through the aid of the respective county agents. The inspections are to be made at the individual farms and the general condition of the stock examined carefully. These growers, who have a supply of tubers that are true to type and free from disease, are to be urged to store the same for seed purposes. The names of these parties will be placed on file at Purdue and with the local county agent so that those who desire first-class seed can be put in touch with growers who have it for sale.

The necessity of potato seed inspection is of the utmost importance in the light of the fact that 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels are planted every year in Indiana. When it is further considered that large amounts of poor and diseased seed are planted each year inspection becomes still more important. With thorough inspection the quality and yield of potatoes can be greatly improved during the ensuing year and everyone is to be urged to plant only the best seed obtainable. It will take at least a month to complete the survey.

INDIANA APPLE SHOW.

The seventh Indiana Apple Show was held at Washington, Daviess county, November 21-27. The Indiana apple show is one of the largest held this side of the Rocky mountains. Indiana is an apple state, ranking seventh for a ten-year average in production, being exceeded only by New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Missouri. Indiana this year is producing more apples than the great State of California. It is conservatively estimated that the apple crop this year has a value of $7,500,000.

An elaborate program is arranged by the Indiana Horticultural Society which is given each year in connection with the apple show. Many expert horticulturists and prominent speakers were secured to assist this year. The out of state men were: James R. Duncan, of the United States Bureau of Crop Estimates; Dr. J. B. Stewart of the State College of Pennsylvania; Dr. Donald Reddick, of Cornell University; Prof. C. I. Lewis, of the Oregon Agricultural College; Prof. W. H. Alderman, of West Virginia University; S. H. Fulton, manager of Sleepy Creek Orchard, West Virginia; Prof. W. H. Hutt, of North Carolina, and Dr. Wm. Stuart, United States Department of Agriculture.

The largest crowd of the show heard the address given by G. I. Christie, State Food Director on "Our Food Problems." He urged the co-operation of the apple growers in the food saving campaign. "Apples are no longer considered a luxury but a necessity," he declared. "One bushel of apples properly utilized will take the place of so much bread or meat. The call today is just as much for apples as it is for wheat or corn."

"If you can not afford to take care of your fruit trees take an axe and cut them down and devote the space to other crops. Every bit of soil must be brought into a state of production."

"The apple show," declared the director, "has done more to advance the apple growing industry in Indiana than any other one thing."

SEED CORN ROOMS PROPOSED.

The Indiana Grain Dealers' Association is urging the grain men of the State to assist in storing a large amount of seed corn for 1918. The need for this action is apparent in view of the serious condition of this year's corn crop.

The following letter has been prepared by C. B. Riley, Secretary of the Grain Dealers' Association, and the work proposed has the endorsement of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation of the State Council of Defense.

SEED CORN FAILURE ALMOST A CALAMITY

"Do you know that the question of seed corn for next year's planting is of greatest concern? Nothing of greater importance is now staring the people in the face. All the corn states, from Pennsylvania to Colorado, are in desperate condition in so far as seed and merchantable corn is concerned. Indiana alone, has less than 20% of its crop available for seed selections, much of which will not do now and if not properly selected, housed and cared for so as to prevent freezing, will be a failure, then what will we do?"

"A few farmers are getting corn for their own use, but a very large per cent. of them will not make the effort, but depend on getting it from the cribs and pens next spring or will be supplied by seed sellers with seed from states farther south and it will not grow and ripen in this and other northern states."

"The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Agricultural Extension Department of Purdue are working hard with the farmers to gather and save seed now and their work is accomplishing quite a little with many, but a great per cent. are doing practically nothing, hence some of the corn now being fed and marketed should be saved by someone for seed."

"This association is so greatly interested, we have developed plans to submit for the grain dealers and millers to adopt and get into this at once, providing facilities recommended for saving the corn. Accompanying this letter you will find a sketch of equipment that can be quickly installed, where one or more rooms can be secured. We recommend to you to get your bankers, newspaper men, your County Council of Defense and county agent, into a conference with a view to a co-operative movement to secure and equip one or more rooms, then get out and induce farmers to bring their corn in to be cared for, they to bring in at least double the amount required for their own use."

"Your combination can and should add to this effort by direct purchase of all the good, old or new, corn that will do for seed. Fill your space even to the amount of thousands of bushels, select such as will do to put upon the racks for seed and keep the temperature in the rooms at a minimum of 35 and from that to 110 degrees with good ventilation which must at all times be had by natural or mechanical means. Next spring count the cost and spread it over the entire amount and sell the seed to your trade locally at a moderate profit and let us know the amount you will have for shipment beyond the locality and we will endeavor to have it taken by other counties at a good profit. Now, without further explanation, let us urge you in your own interest and in the spirit of patriotic conservation, to start this immediately. Your corn business this year is so badly shot to pieces you must look forward to another year. Let us hear from you as to what you are doing and what your community will undertake to do, right now."

Eat 1 Ounce of Meat Less Daily; Help Feed Allies

The United States Food Administration issues the following:

One year a country of rich lands, plenty of food, and a contented people. The next a desolate waste with starvation rising from it. That is Belgium, part of France, and thousands of miles of other country—our allies' country.

Since the war began 33,000,000 meat animals of our allies have been slaughtered because there was no feed for them in the war-torn fields. Neither are there men to grow feed on the lands that have not been ruined. The men are waging war.

The allies look to America for help. They must have meat in ever-increasing quantities. The men who are fighting for you and me must have meat and lots of it. Fighting is the hardest work in the world.

We are going to send them that meat, you and I, by the million of us.

All we have got to do is to eat 1 ounce less—1 cubic inch less—of meat a day. This, multiplied by 100,000,000, will make good the need.

We will eat beef, mutton, and pork, but not so often. If we eat any one of these kinds of meat only once a day, and then not so much as we have been eating—that will be the solution.

Instead of our usual share of these, we will eat more fish and poultry and perishable fruits and vegetables. Beans are a splendid meat substitute. Eat more soup. It is nourishing and heat giving.

By using all left-over meat each of us at home is going to give two soldiers their meat rations without our ever noticing the sacrifice.

Vice-President to Address Meeting

Plans for State-Wide War Conference December 13 and 14 Approved by Council of Defense.

Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall was announced as the headliner for one of the big patriotic mass meetings connected with the Indiana State-wide war conference set for December 13 and 14, and details were handled by the State Council of Defense at its regular meeting, Wednesday, December 5. Lieut. Paul Perigord of the French army, who has made a wonderful impression in a speaking tour of the State, is to be on the program for the night meeting, December 13, when the vice-president is to bring to Indiana a message straight from the National War Administration at Washington. Another big feature is to be Sousa's famous band of 350 pieces, sent by the government.

Chairman Will H. Hays informed the State Council of Defense that the complete program for the big war conference would be sent out immediately. The program includes addresses by Medill McCormick, congressman-at-large for Illinois, who has been at the battle front, Bishop Charles D. Williams and others, including Dr. J. A. B. Scherer, who will speak officially for the Council of National Defense.

Ex-Governor Samuel M. Ralston will preside at the opening session of the war conference, December 13, at Tomlinson hall in the afternoon. Vice-President Marshall will speak at the night meeting December 13. The second day of the conference will be given to sectional meetings with distinguished speakers, including George Creel, head of the committee on public information, who will bring a message direct from President Wilson to the editors of the State, and who will carry back to the president the impression he gets of Indiana's attitude and activities in the war.

It was announced that Ex-Governor Ralston had agreed to serve as chairman of a general reception committee to care for the chief speakers for the war conference, and that Gov. Ralston would name twenty citizens to serve with him.

A movement was started in co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade and the Indianapolis Merchants' association to provide for the cost of bringing the Sousa band of 350 men to the war conference for two days' service. Chairman Hays was empowered to meet the expenses incident to handling the matter of a band and battalion to be sent to Indianapolis from Ft. Benjamin Harrison to participate in the patriotic demonstration.

Plans were outlined for caring for defense workers attending the war conference by reserving certain sections of the auditorium for their use.

Mrs. J. F. Barnhill, Miss Julia Landers, Mrs. Henry Jameson and Dr. Amelia R. Keller, all of the Indiana Franchise League, appeared to ask the Indiana State Council of Defense, as a war measure, to urge the National Congress to pass the Federal suffrage amendment. The matter was referred to the committee on public policy, with the suggestion that the committee be organized to consider and pass on the question.

A resolution urging that the Provost Marshal General exempt productive farm labor from military duty, was referred to a special committee composed of A. W. Brady, Frank Wampler and Dr. Charles P. Emerson, to report at the next meeting of the Council, a copy of the report to be sent in advance to each member of the Council.

A resolution was passed asking Governor James P. Goodrich, by proclamation, to call into action the sedentary militia of the State.

On the suggestion of Willis S. Thompson, Chairman Hays was empowered to incur the expense necessary to get verbatim reports of the speeches to be made at the State war conference for the purpose of using the addresses and the report of the conference as propaganda through the press of the State.

C. W. Fairbanks, of the committee on public policy, by letter reported that the complaint from Marion against a newspaper, in which complaint the newspaper was charged with slandering a patriotic community, was not a matter with which the State Council of Defense is called on to deal.

The Council approved George Ade's plan for interesting newspapers over the State in a system of newspaper letters from home to the soldiers in camp and at the front, the letters to be signed by the editor or authorized by him, and to carry to the soldiers the facts as to what the home folks are doing to back up the army and navy and support the flag. Mr. Ade's plan is to see to it that every Indiana soldier gets his home paper and that he will find in the home paper a newsy letter addressed especially to soldiers. Mr. Ade said the Ligonier Leader already had inaugurated the plan and had put forty-four soldiers on its free mailing list for the period of the war.

N. E. Squibb, who has been working on the soft corn problem, made a statement to the Defense Council in which he declared that if plans now working out were successful the distillers of the country would be able to handle in the next ten months 25,000,000 bushels of rotten corn such as is appearing in increasing quantities on various markets. He estimated that this would mean some 195,000 tons of dairy feed, or rations for 50,000 cows a day.

He reported progress in the project for inducing the United States government to contract for alcohol to be made from frosted corn, the alcohol to be stored as a reserve supply, and said that bonded warehouses now in existence could be used for storing the supply. He said the rotten corn ought to bring the farmer 45 cents a bushel, and that frosted corn which could be used to make glucose and the like ought to be marketed for even more.

Men and Women of America:

On December 17, 1917, the American Red Cross will launch a campaign—its Christmas Membership Drive—for ten million new members. By January 1, 1918, the American Red Cross will have ten million new members. It will have them because, lacking them, it cannot do all that the world, from out this agony of war against war, is crying upon it to do, and do quickly. Now, if never before, all should belong to the American Red Cross. There should be not ten million, but twenty million, forty million new members!

The Big Question.

If a man says, "My wages before my country" or "My balance sheet before my country" or "My class or creed or association before my country," he is not an American. America is in peril. No question is worthy of consideration until we settle the question of whether democracy shall live. Democracy hangs by a thread. Its existence depends on the union and utmost determination of the United States of America."—Charles Edward Russell.

Education of Boys Must Be Protected

Teacher and Superintendent Will Govern Activities Outside of School in Emergency Cases.

Every school boy desiring to serve his country to the best of his ability, will enroll in the Reserve, but after enrolling, no boy should leave his studies to go to work unless he has been so advised by his teacher and by his school superintendent.

Agreeable to the recommendation of the National Director of the Reserve and to safeguard the education of the youth of Indiana, every high school superintendent and principal has been appointed to the office of High School Director in the United States Boys' Working Reserve and authorized to exercise his own judgment in releasing boys from school for emergency work with the following understanding:

- The emergency must be genuine.
- To be eligible for release without prejudice to scholarship, the boy must have maintained a certain standard in his studies.
- The High School Director must have absolute proof that the boy is actually engaged in emergency work.
- The boy must return to school as soon as the emergency is over.

ONE HUNDRED BOYS ENROLLED IN ONE WEEK.

With fifty Enrolling Officers under the direction of Benjamin Blumberg, City Director for Terre Haute, competing for honors in the enrollment of boys, the three highest records of Enrolling Officers are as follows:

C. W. West, 15 boys enrolled; Ralph Williamson, 14 boys; Mark Gantz, 11 boys.

The quota for Terre Haute is 1200 boys, and the City Director hopes to reach that number by the end of the month.

Through the co-operation of the County Council of Defense and the Terre Haute Rotary Club, plans are being made to secure the donation of a fully equipped farm of about 100 acres on which to establish an agricultural training camp for as many as fifty Terre Haute boys. W. R. McKeen, president of the Rotary Club, has appointed a "Rotary Farm Plattsburg" committee to thoroughly investigate the practicability of the establishment of such an agricultural training camp.

Mr. Blumberg advises that the press of Terre Haute has been exceedingly liberal in its support of the Boys' Working Reserve, and that Miss Clara Junker has donated her services and is devoting all of her time to the clerical work at the headquarters.

To avert famine and labor shortage the United States Boys' Working Reserve has been organized, and plans for giving adequate agricultural training to those town and city boys who have never been on a farm, are now being perfected.

The National Conference of the Boys' Working Reserve directors which holds its session in Chicago December 7 and 8 will devise plans, to thus increase the production of food. The primary function of the Reserve is to supply farm labor.

"Thirteen to one" and a bumper corn crop should make the American pig's tail curl tighter than ever.

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—Three shifts of high school pupils, four in a squad, volunteers enlisted for the work by the Adams County Council of Defense, helped compile necessary data for the use of the local conscription board at Decatur. R. D. Myers was active in lining up the voluntary workers to assist E. B. Adams of the conscription board in his monumental and urgent task.

French Quinn of Decatur, active in the Adams County Red Cross, worked out a plan under which all Adams county soldiers at Camp Shelby, in Mississippi, were supplied with sweaters, helmet, socks and wristlets.

The public library at Decatur is the center of Red Cross activities. Miss Mona Butler, nine years old, works at the side of her mother, Mrs. William Butler of Decatur, making surgical dressings for the Red Cross.

Allen County.—Thanksgiving day at Fort Wayne was given largely to the plowing of vacant lots for those who plan to put out gardens next spring.

The Allen County Council of Defense is helping Major John E. Miller in the formation of a company of State militia in Fort Wayne. W. H. Scheiman, chairman of the Defense Council, has been named as a committee of one to provide an armory for the new unit.

Because of the call of Red Cross work and other war activities, Mrs. George P. Evans has resigned her place on the Allen County Council of Defense.

The matter of organizing high school boys in "Saw-luck Clubs" to help supply firewood in place of coal in Allen county, has been taken up by the County Council of Defense, and has been referred to the following committee: Henry Bevell, Allen county fuel director; R. W. Hineswick, superintendent of Fort Wayne schools; L. C. Ward, principal of the Fort Wayne high school; D. O. McComb, county superintendent, and A. L. McDonald, director of the Boys' Working Reserve for Allen county.

Bartholomew County.—Acting in conjunction with women's organizations in Bartholomew county, and with the County Council of Defense, County Agent C. M. Job is trying to get a home demonstrator, one of twenty to work in Indiana under the department of agriculture to show housekeepers what is meant by the wartime, governmental program of conservation and substitution of foods.

Blackford County.—Headquarters have been opened in the court house at Hartford City by the Blackford County Council of Defense, and ten women's councillors connected with the women's section of the organization are taking turns serving at the offices of the Defense Council in order that it may be open at all times. Mrs. L. W. Burk was the first woman to act as office manager. The Defense Council has expanded until at this time there are twenty-six committees reaching into all corners of the county. The Council now is working on a census of slackers and disloyalists.

Boone County.—Recent reports show more than $1,000 articles shipped from Lebanon by Red Cross workers since the war work began in Boone county. Mrs. R. N. C. Cook and Mrs. Claude D. McKee have been working especially on a local campaign to increase the force of workers on surgical dressings.

Mrs. Harry Darnall has been acting as custodian for a fund for providing comfort kits for Boone county soldiers. Mrs. Nancy Gilmore has had charge of a fund to be used as a "mess fund" for Company H, a Boone county outfit now in the service.

The Industrial Society of the First Presbyterian Church, Lebanon, has presented the church with a service flag bearing thirteen stars for the following soldiers who belong to the church: Lieutenant William Burns, Roy C. Conley, B. Scarle Conley, Leon Chumlea, Lieutenant Archie Gilmore, Roscoe Jacobell, John Lovings, Julian Ralston, Eliza Rogers, Rush Robinson, Lieutenant Benjamin Seifres, Bayard Shumate and Lyle Stephenson.

Carroll County.—Service flags bearing the Red Cross emblem are to be placed in the windows of the homes of Red Cross members at the time of the big Christmas drive for additional members in Carroll county. The flags are to be transparent, and on Christmas eve it is the purpose to place lighted candles behind the flags for illuminating purposes.

H. S. Case & Son of Camden are supplying fertilizer free to patriotic gardeners for use on their 1918 garden plots.

Cass County.—George B. Forgy, Cass county food administrator, is compiling a record of persons in the county who have refused or failed to sign the Hoover food conservation war pledge cards. As a result of this activity on Mr. Forgy's part many persons have called on the county food administrator, and on W. H. Porter, his helper, and have signed pledge cards.

Employees of the Pennsylvania railroad, Logansport division, bought $120,000 of Liberty loan bonds, second issue, the work being done under the leadership of F. C. Murphy. The men are organized for the next loan and expect to surpass their former record.

County Agent Gast of Cass county has been busy helping apple growers in the county to dispose of their crops and to prevent waste and loss. In this work he has been co-operating with the food administration and the County and State Councils of Defense.

While the Logansport women slackers are few, according to Mrs. Pearl Wright, who has been in charge of the Hoover food card campaign, a local newspaper severely arraigns Logansport women for not taking active and general part in the work of the Red Cross. It is pointed out that Cass county has thirty men in France and 500 in the army, and that the home women have a duty to perform in connection with the Red Cross service due these men. It is reported that since the women's attention was called to the situation the Red Cross work has been taken in hand with enthusiasm.

Clark County.—Registration of Clark county women for war work has been started in a formal way in a meeting of women at Jeffersonville, under the leadership of Mrs. Nathan Sparks of the women's section of the County Council of Defense. Reports were made by township chairmen of their recent experiences in getting signers for the Hoover food pledge cards. A speaker at the meeting was Mrs. Fred Kurfess of New Albany. Mrs. John Sauer urged the creation of a county home demonstrator to work with County Agent Hugh A. Stevens in the campaign for food production, conservation and substitution of foods under the Hoover plan. Mr. Stevens also spoke in favor of the home demonstration work. Others taking active parts at the meeting were: Mrs. Kathryn Coleman, Mrs. H. M. Frank, Mrs. Jean Dunham and Mrs. John Worrell.

Clay County.—John A. Krider, a township trustee, who served on the election board at the recent Brazil city election, turned over his fees for that service to the Red Cross.

A recent report on the work done by the Clay county chapter of the Red Cross showed more than 5,800 separate articles made and sent forward. W. E. Carpenter of Brazil, president, and the other officers have been re-elected.

A pound of home-made candy for each man in Company H of Brazil, now at Camp Shelby, is the contribution of the domestic science department of the Brazil high school, the materials being donated by citizens.

Davies County.—Registration of women for patriotic helpfulness, with a close census of slackers or disloyal housewives, is now on the way for Davies county. Mrs. Frances Rodarmel of the women's section of the Davies County Council of Defense has been informed that the campaign for signatures to the Hoover patriotic pledge cards is to be pushed by the national authorities on a registration basis, with a record kept of those persons who fail or refuse to sign the war pledge of patriotism and conservation. For the registration work a women's organization now is being formed by Mrs. Rodarmel in every precinct of the county.

Decatur County.—A woman home demonstrator is to be obtained for Decatur county to co-operate with other agencies for the conservation of food in the kitchens of the county and for the instruction of housewives in the substitution of other good foods for wheat and meats.

G. A. R. men, the D. A. R. and the W. R. C. at Greensburg have passed resolutions protesting against the promiscuous and improper use of military titles in connection with the names of civilians. The custom of calling the auctioneer "Colonel," for example, is pointed out as improper and as a disrespectful misuse of the honored title, which, in time of war, should be protected against ridicule.

DeKalb County.—Butler made a recent community singing bee, or "big sing," the occasion for "Tag Day" activities for the Red Cross, getting $85 for the cause. Besides the singing of patriotic songs, the gathering was regaled with patriotic speeches and with reports on war work being done in the community, State and nation. Butler people plan another "big sing" for an early day.

Delaware County.—The big sensation of the Y. M. C. A. war fund campaign in Delaware county was caused by a $20,000 contribution made by Ball Bros. The organization formed in the county for the Y. M. C. A. drive is said to have been the most compact ever made for a public welfare purpose in the community.

High school boys and Boy Scouts used a new idea in Delaware county in the "Y. M. C. A." drive by showering the city of Muncie with "Y" war certificates in denominations of $5 down to 25 cents. Big returns were obtained by the sale of these certificates.

Recent reports indicate almost 10,000 Muncie signers of Hoover patriotic food pledge cards. Dr. C. G. Rea, who has charge of the Hoover campaign, says that in one precinct more than 115 persons had signed the cards where formerly but seventy-one had complied. In this precinct there were thirteen refusals to sign. Those who refused to sign are being put on record and will be interviewed later by the County Council of Defense.

Dubois County.—Teachers in Dubois county, led by County Superintendent Robert E. Eckert, have demonstrated effort that can be done by organized and concentrated work. Mr. Eckert wrote to the teachers, asking each to give $2 to the Red Cross. The response has been remarkable. Practically every teacher has sent in the contribution suggested. One teacher in Jackson township sent in $8, the amount being raised by the pupils of the schools. Patoka township came forward with a $10 donation, part of the proceeds of a box social. One teacher's letter not only sent money, but proffered personal services, in France or elsewhere.

Jasper lays claim to the first Junior Red Cross chapter in Indiana. Miss Margaret Wilson, superintendent of the Jasper schools, started the organization within a few days after President Wilson suggested that Junior chapters be formed. The chapter was organized October 1, and it is believed it antedates all other such organizations in Indiana. The committee in charge of the chapter is as follows: Margaret Wilson, president; Joseph Fromme, vice-president; R. M. Cunningham, treasurer, and Edna Swendell, secretary. The chapter is made up of boys and girls of the high school and of the seventh and eighth grades. The membership is increasing daily. In addition to the sewing and knitted work the members gather magazines to be sent to the soldiers in the camps and at the front.

Fayette County.—The Fayette County Council of Defense is investigating a recent report to the effect that a treason ring exists in Connersville. Treasonable literature was circulated in the county some time ago and reports are being made to the State Council of Defense and to the federal authorities. Warnings are to be sent to those who are found to be lending aid and comfort to the foe.

Floyd County.—The Alpha Club of New Albany has become the Alpha Service Club and will do Red Cross work and other war work. Mrs. Walter B. Bullett and Mrs. S. B. Lynd have taken the lead in changing the nature of the club's activities, and a committee has been appointed to put the war-time program in operation. On this committee are: Mrs. Walter B. Creed, Mrs. John L. Scott and Miss Lydia Roberts. The club was fortunate in the fact that several of its members already were skilled in Red Cross work and capable of directing the movement. Miss Josephine Reed, Miss Roe Roberts and Miss Lydia Roberts are giving instructions, and the work is being done in co-operation with the Red Cross shop.

A big feature of New Albany's Y. M. C. A. war fund drive was the record made by the Church Women's Battalion, with Mrs. J. Fred Kurfess as "Major," and the following "Captains," representing various churches: Mrs. Harry Pearce, Miss Florence Green, Mrs. T. J. Wilson, Mrs. Lee Stephens, Mrs. Frank Baker, Mrs. William Brooks, Mrs. Ben Rowe, Miss Anita Deffenbach, Miss Irma Zinsmeister, Mrs. Arthur Shrader, Mrs. W. H. Todd and Mrs. Will Gwin.

Fountain County.—The Attien Ledger recently called attention to the fact that the Fountain County Council thus far has provided only $200 for the use of the County Council of Defense. Most of the fund has been used to buy yarn and for sending knitted garments and other supplies to Fountain county soldiers. The Ledger says: "In matters of this kind we should not be penurious and more funds should be available."

The Royal Neighbors of Attica gave a box social and raised $21 for the yarn fund of the Fountain County Council of Defense.

Cashier Hardy Dice of the Farmers' State Bank at Veedsburg declares that he demonstrated the value of advertising in the second drive for the Liberty loan. As a result of newspaper advertising Mr. Dice's bank disposed of $27,350 of bonds, while two other banks, which did not advertise, sold, combined, $19,250.

Harry Gardner of Wingate is president and L. P. Brown of New Richmond is secretary-treasurer of an organization of business men in Fountain county, the members coming from Newtown, Odell, Hillsboro, Melott, Wingate, West Point, Romney, Waynetown and New Richmond. To work with the food administration, to establish rules for early closing and the saving of fuel, and to co-operate with the Defense Council in war service, are the objects of the new association.

Fountain county passed her minimum quota for the Liberty loan by $13,975, raising $229,500. More than $10,000 was subscribed for the Y. M. C. A. war fund, where $7,500 had been set as the county's quota.

At Veedsburg a permanent organization has been formed for Van Buren township, Fountain county, to make future campaigns for Y. M. C. A. war funds. Dr. E. W. Kirk is president, Hardy Songer vice-president, Marvin Cook secretary and Elmer Glover treasurer.

Patriotic Press Comment

Resolutions.

When a man between the ages of 21 and 31 resists the draft, we proceed to handle him without gloves. When a man past 31 works his jaw overtime resisting not only the draft but every other measure of self-preservation the government has enacted, we pass a resolution to "investigate" his loyalty. We don't like the word and "copperhead" but it's the only word that fits, and everybody knows the fate decreed for the serpent.—Rushville Republican.

The Three B's.

A two-line report of a Kentucky county agent to the United States Department of Agriculture speaks volumes. This is his succinct account of his work:

"Had a meeting at the courthouse. I talked on whipping Germany with three B's—bread, bacon, and beans."

Keep the Boys and Girls on the Farm

J. M. Studebaker, who was honorary president of the Studebaker Corporation, South Bend, Indiana, and one of Indiana's pioneer manufacturers, presented in a forceful way his views on the country life problem in a letter to Prof. G. I. Christie, Director of the State Committee on Food Production and Conservation, as follows:

"Although I have been a manufacturer all my life, the subject of agriculture has never failed to claim my attention. My leading diversion, indeed, has been to oversee the cultivation of my farm lying adjacent to my city home.

"Successful farming in the future I am satisfied is bound up with the elucidation and application of the principles of intensive agriculture. The rule of thumb must give way to the lessons learned in the laboratory. Tests of soil and of seed, the value of fertilizers, the succession of crops as an influence on increased production, adaptation of crops to soil; the relative value of the various breeds of stock and questions relating to the purity of strain—these and a multitude of other questions must find scientific solution through such sources as that over which you have superintendence.

"One of the great problems of the day is how best to have the farmer bring up his family so that they will find country life attractive and be content to stay on the farm. His girls should marry country boys, and his boys marry country girls, and country homes, as they might easily be made, should be the most delightful centers on earth. Those boys who are inclined to be lured from the farm to the city by the big wages of the shops should remember that a big percentage of the mechanical wage-earners spend all they get, however much they earn, and form anti-saving habits that they never get over. The farmer's wife ought to have better household conveniences, especially in the kitchen, and assistance at her work enabling her to avoid being a mere drudge. She should have her own bank account, with means enough at her command to dress herself in a comely fashion without begging for it. Remember one thing, if the farmer gives his wife a well arranged chicken house, she will, as a rule, make her own bank account to a large extent. The farmer who has wit enough to keep 'mother' well dressed and happy will offer one of the most convincing arguments to his children to remain on the farm, and not forsake it for the city. But when 'mother' lives the life of a slave and a dowdy, her sons and daughters can't get away from the farm into the city fast enough.

"With a farm, let it be small or large, all a young man has to do is to keep out of debt, and he can live the most independent and happy life on earth. He doesn't have to eat cold-storage food, or sleep in a hall bedroom, or miss the blue sky, the songs of the birds, or the sense of freedom that he ought to prize and that can be found nowhere so surely as in a country home. Carry this message to the farmer boys and girls of Indiana. It will be worth their while to heed it."

Farmers who chop wood to save coal this winter will be making the chips fly for freedom.

Buckwheat cakes should taste better this winter when cooked over a wood fire.

Housewives are once more warned against persons who, it is reported, have attempted to buy, tax or carry away home-canned products, claiming that they are representatives of the Food Administration. These persons are impostors.

An Ideal War Mother

Giving a 17-year-old son for service in France, after having seen the boy's father go to the Philippines to fight for liberty and humanity, Mrs. Samuel Cummings of New Lebanon, Gill township, Sullivan county, has accepted service as a "War Mother" in the women's branch of the Council of Defense, and in a letter to Mrs. James M. Lang of Sullivan county "War Mother" for Sullivan county, has set out in terms of pure patriotism her own theory of duty in war time. In part her letter follows:

Your notice appointing me war mother of Gill township to hand. Allow me to thank you for remembering me. I assure you that I shall try to fill this office with as much motherly affection as my limited time and ability will permit.

Let me say that this honor comes to me at a fitting time in life. It's this way: When my son, Earl Cummings, seventeen years old, now in France in active service, was but 3 weeks old, his father was called to the colors in U. S. A. Signal Corps, went to Philippines, leaving me with 4 children to care for, 2 small boys—ages 7 years and 3 weeks old, respectively,—2 small girls, 5 and 3 years, respectively; with no money, home or other property. Mr. Cummings supported me with all his salary, which at no time was above $24.00 per month. He paid his own incidental expense, sending me all he could, which would be about $17 per month, on an average. With this small amount I schooled my children and today I have this baby in France to defend me and what my home represents.

Mrs. Lang, I want to assure you that I fully appreciate the office you have given me. I understand it's only honorary, yet I am free to say to you that it's only this class that will in the end save the day.

You see slackers everywhere, claiming to be in sympathy with the war—I do not mean the love of war, but the love of peace. Only by a united effort can we win peace. They are honest enough to admit it. The pacifists have not the real organization or force enough to present their demands.

The 100th article of war reads: "Those that are not with us are against us." And are against the real liberty of humanity. I have stood by a husband to fight for the liberty of Cuba and the Philippines; how much more important for our own country?

Again thanking you, I remain,

Yours to win,

MRS. SAM CUMMINGS,
"War-Mother" Gill Twp.

State Conference on Mental Health

It has been found advisable to change the date of the State Conference on Mental Health, in Indianapolis, previously announced for December 13, to December 14, one day later. This is done in order to co-operate with the State Council of Defense, which is arranging a series of meetings for December 13 and 14. Those of December 14 will take the form of section meetings for discussion of special topics and the Conference on Mental Health will constitute one of these groups.

There will be three sessions. All will be held in the Assembly Room of the Claypool Hotel. The presiding officers will be Mr. Will H. Hays, chairman of the State Council of Defense, Professor T. F. Fitzgibbon of Columbus, vice-president of the Indiana Society for Mental Hygiene, and President William L. Bryan of Indiana University.

Mental defectiveness as a war problem, as it affects the home and the school and as it is related to community welfare, will be discussed. All the meetings will be open to the public. The conference is called by Professor T. F. Fitzgibbon, acting for the Indiana Society for Mental Hygiene, and Reverend Francis H. Gavisk, chairman of the State Committee on Mental Defectives.

It is far better to sign the food pledge card late than not at all.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 17

Editorial Comment

ONE FORM OF SNIPING.

When you peddle pro-German falsehoods about the selling of Red Cross sweaters, and about soldiers being compelled to "pay" for knitted goods sent to them through the Red Cross, you are deliberately and criminally libeling and falsely slandering the good men and women engaged in Red Cross work. For this slander and libel you are liable to punishment. No punishment, however, could be compared with the shame and humiliation that must go with a realization that you have been helping an enemy and hindering the war work of your own country. Idle gossip which is intended by its originators to obstruct patriotic activities in this country is as deadly in its effect on the American cause in the war as sniping from the rear would be deadly in its effect on American fighting men. This is the lesson the Councils of Defense everywhere seek to impress on men and women who have been so thoughtless as to assist pro-German propagandists in spreading poison, sedition and treason. Those who have been knowingly guilty of enemy propaganda are being warned for the last time. Drastic action is coming, and that without delay. Protection committees are being put on duty in all Indiana counties and the Patriot League is co-operating with Councils of Defense and with federal, State and local authorities everywhere to stamp out disloyalty. The responsible gossip who repeats slanders against the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and other war agencies need not be surprised if he or she is suddenly called up for examination and governmental action.

Meeting a War Demand.

More wool with which to meet the war's huge demands is one important item with which patriotic farmers in Indiana and other states are now engaged. The national movement to increase wool production is headed by George W. Perkins of New York. In Indiana William Holton Dye, of Noblesville, has had an active part as a promoter of the more wool campaign, co-operating with the State Council of Defense, Purdue, the food production section, local bankers and county agricultural agents.

In line with this movement Madison county, for example, has formed a "Liberty Lamb Club." This has been done under the direction of W. R. Butler, the county agricultural agent. Business men have subscribed $75 each to the fund which is being used to buy thirty ewes for the club. The money thus subscribed is lent to the organization for three years at 6 per cent.

The ewes bought are being lent to boys and girls in Madison county, the father or guardian going security for the boy or girl. All lambs raised are to be the property of the members of the "Liberty Lamb Club." Besides increasing the number of wool-bearing animals in the county, the purpose is to inculcate business ideas and thrift in the young.

Subscribers to the Liberty Lamb club fund included: E. M. Wilson, Arthur W. Brady, G. W. Gates, R. H. Brunt, B. L. Bing's Sons, Schuster Bros., E. A. Smith, T. G. Neely, Fair Store of Anderson, W. C. Wood of Pendleton, J. C. Andrew, West Point, and R. H. Brunt, Alexandria.

The Normal Family and Its Relationship to the War

(By Miss Edna G. Henry of Indiana University)

One of the biggest social problems that confront the world today is the broken family. This will be an even greater difficulty after the war. Families are broken for various reasons. Sometimes for death, separation by divorce or by desertion. The world thinks of the normal family as being composed of a father and a mother and children. Merely being married does not constitute a family—it is nothing more than folks living. But the great need that is coming, not only goes after the war, but from the time that the men commence to come home wounded until the world at large recovers itself from this world-wide clash, is going to be a time when home service and relief workers of all kinds will be needed.

A lot of problems are going to come up within the near future in connection with the caring for and relief of these families whose living will be affected by the taking of some one or members who have been essential to the even support of those families. At all times and in all places the standard of living varies, but the time is at hand when all care should be taken that the families who are temporarily distressed do not slip back in their standard of living.

MUST BE KEPT BUSY.

There is going to be great need for these people to be kept busy. Being busy does not only mean being occupied in some fashion or other, but being occupied in a manner that will amount to something. In addition to the various activities in which these people may be engaged, there must be an interest provided for them so that their minds and hearts may be kept alive and their thoughts be kept from their sorrow, if sorrow comes to them.

There must be, mainly, a safeguarding against sickness and disease. Within the last half-century medical authorities have proven the worth of prevention over cure and that is the system which must be employed at this time. Families must be taught how to live most consistently, both from a physical and a mental and a spiritual viewpoint.

When the soldiers and the sailors return from the war the families entrusted to the care of the Red Cross should be found to have maintained, as far as it is humanly possible, the essential standards of the home life as they were before the war. The object of the home service workers is to help when help is needed, to safeguard the normal development of these families in general health, in education, in employment, and in ideals of self-help and self-reliance.

This means that to the home that has had little or no opportunity for self-advancement such opportunity must be offered, and moreover, that in a time when living is more difficult for everyone, no pressure of circumstances or stress of temptation must be allowed to overcome the home into which the Red Cross worker has been called.

RE-EDUCATION BIG PROBLEM.

There is going to be the problem of re-education of the crippled soldier in order that he may come back and rightly claim his position as a unit of society. Plans are afoot for the establishment of official reconstruction hospitals wherein these men will be held and not discharged until they are not only fully recovered, but taught a trade that will enable them to earn a living, in the event that in their service during the war they have become disabled to the extent that their occupations in life previous to the war would be out of the question now.

Another difficulty that is going to be encountered is the danger of the child labor problem. With the fathers and older brothers gone it is going to be a task to educate the people to the fact that the keeping of the children in school is the best solution, and even in extreme cases where it will be found absolutely necessary for the younger children to work in some fashion or other, even though that may be unavoidable for the time being, there is going to be a great danger of slipping back into the old methods again.

NO PROFESSIONAL LOAFERS.

Employment—is another stumbling-block. However, it is certain that there is one good thing that the war is bringing and that is that it is going to do away with the professional loafers—both rich and poor. There are going to be found ways and means for all classes of people to be kept busy as they have never been kept busy before in their lives, and it is going to be one of the services of the Red Cross Home Service workers to show these people how they can best serve.

Recreation must be provided for the people whom the home service workers are seeking to aid. And the recreation must be of the kind that is going to keep and hold the family close together.

The spiritual welfare of the people who are to be helped must not be overlooked. There are various reasons why this should be looked after, mainly because it is more than possible that a better influence can be exercised on all conditions if the worker knows the religious inclinations of the one being helped.

Why Use Corn

We ship wheat to our soldiers and our allies abroad and we keep corn at home and use corn here as a substitute for wheat for the simple reasons that:

(1). European mills are not equipped to grind corn.

(2). Corn meal shipped from America to Europe will not keep long enough to be used for food after it gets there.

(3). Corn bread will not keep long enough to permit it to be carried from central army bakeries back of the lines to the men in the trenches.

(4). The people of Europe to whom we must send food supplies are not acquainted with corn as a food and can not hastily readjust their lives and dietary scheme to accept corn.

These are the reasons why it is up to Americans to use corn, with which they are already familiar, while shipping wheat abroad, where wheat can be used and where corn absolutely can not be made useful as a food.

Wheat has all the qualities demanded of a staple food for use in the European war zone, and corn lacks the qualities needed for that purpose.

America easily can substitute corn for wheat as food, and Europe absolutely can not make the substitution.

Remember, substitution of corn for wheat and substitution of other good foods for meats is the first and last war demand being made in this country. Substitution, conservation, production, distribution,—and the greatest of these, the most vital war measure of all, is substitution.

We must eat corn and consume substitutes for meat in order that our allies and our armies may have food. If we withhold wheat and meat we force starvation on our comrades and on our own fighting men.

Smith Joins Marine Corps.

Asa J. Smith, of Wabash, Indiana, who since September 20 has been State High School Organizer for the Boys' Working Reserve in Indiana, has enlisted in the United States Marine Corps. During the two months which Mr. Smith was engaged in this work he toured 64 counties, visited 196 high schools and made 211 speeches which were heard by over 10,000 boys who are eligible to join the Boys' Working Reserve.

Price of English Bread.

The price of English bread is now 4½ cents per pound "cash and carry." This bread contains 25% of other cereals or potatoes and furthermore it is subsidized by the government, an appropriation of $200,000,000 having been made to finance the operation.

Hog men who complain that the "13 to one" arrangement does not leave them any profit will do well to study their own methods more closely.

Possibilities of Home Saving

(Experts from address on "Food Conservation," by Mrs. William Severin, chairman of the National Advisory Council of the Woman's Association of Commerce of U. S. A., before the Women's Association of Commerce of U. S. A.)

"If in each home in the United States there is saved one ounce of meat a day in one year we save 465,000,000 pounds. One slice of bread saved daily saves 365,000,000 loaves annually. One pat of butter less a day means 114,000,000 pounds a year saved. A half cup of milk less per day saves 912,000,000 quarts of milk, or the product of 400,000 cows. These figures prove that it behooves us to Hooverize.

"We are asked to observe wheatless days. Let us carry it further. Let us discover the real wastes of wheat in our homes. The home-baked loaf of bread, time-hallowed though it be, is our worst offender. The women in France no longer bake their own bread. We must adopt similar measures here.

"One to three ounces of dough-wheat, in other words, is wasted in every home baking. The dough on your fingers that you or your maid wash off in the sink, the dough that clings to the bread-board, the flour that spills while you are kneading, are wastes you cannot prevent. The only recourse is to stop baking your bread at home.

"The Red Cross and other war relief organizations are begging for your help. You can't respond when you are chained to the kitchen, nervous over whether your dough is rising properly, and then watching it in the oven. It takes five hours to produce two loaves of bread in your kitchen—and then perhaps it is a soggy, unpalatable mess, undigestible and really a waste. Home baking is a triple waste—first, of wheat; second, of time; third, of your family's digestion.

"Hundreds of thousands of barrels of flour can be saved by housewives if they will buy bakers' bread. In up-to-date bake shops the correct temperature is maintained while the dough is rising. In home kitchens this is impossible. The door opens, a cold draught enters and the dough falls. Then it is a case of Humpty Dumpty. Nothing can save that batch of dough from becoming soggy bread.

"Bake shops, by modern contrivances, avoid wastes of dough. They can produce more bread per barrel of flour than housewives can. And bakers' bread is light. It toasts. Home-made bread won't. The crusts of bakers' bread can be easily dried, rolled and used. Your home-made crusts are too heavy for this.

"Women must therefore do less home baking. Then they can begin today to save meat. Wheat will help win the war. Now is the time to act. The government is supervising the bake shops. Each bake shop is to be licensed. But don't wait for the government to point out the wastes of home baking. Let us resolve now to save these thousands upon thousands of barrels of flour that we are literally washing down our sinks.

"For years I have been an exponent of home baking. I have baked bread, rolls, pies, cakes by the thousands. I've taught scores of maids and girls to do the same. In my home today baking is barred. I consider this action to be in accordance with the spirit of my Hoover pledge. If every woman in this country will do likewise I venture to say that 1,000,000 barrels of flour will be annually saved for our allies. This saving will far exceed that made by having wheatless days. Let's do both."

Uncle Sam does not want you to starve now. He only wants you to keep from going hungry later on when he asks you to sign and to keep the food pledge.

No Middle Ground for Loyalty

When nations stand at grips of death, amidst the battle's pall;
When valiant soldiers pray for aid, and suffering peoples call;
When Hate and Crime usurp the place of Human Virtues grand;
There isn't any middle ground where Loyalty may stand.

When Fear and Famine stalk abroad, like monsters of the night;
When mothers, horror stricken, weep at War's appalling sight;
When Innocence is common prey, and Murder foully planned;
There isn't any middle ground where Loyalty may stand.

When Virtue falls like broken reed, and famished children moan;
When Mercy leaves the human breast, and Malice reigns alone;
When breaking hearts beat unison in every martyred land;
There isn't any middle ground where Loyalty may stand.

When Reason, on her broken throne, gives way to Lust and Greed;
When Avarice, with power mad, makes helpless nations bleed;
When Passion, with its iron rule, is riding in command;
There isn't any middle ground where Loyalty may stand.

When Nation's Manhood marches forth to cope with craven foe;
When Womanhood gives up its all, and freely bids them go;
When Sacrifice exacts its toll, from us on every hand;
There isn't any middle ground where Loyalty may stand.

When Honor bids the nations arm, and save the human race;
When Treason from her slimy lair begins to show her face;
When Patriotism only, stands against her brigand band;
There isn't any middle ground where Loyalty may stand.

How Marshall County Women May Help Win the War

(By Mrs. S. E. Boys, in the Plymouth Republican.)

(Editor's Note.—What applies to Marshall county applies with equal force to every county in Indiana, to which Mrs. Boys' message may as well have been addressed.)

In our eager desire to help win the war, we are apt to adopt the first thing which presents itself without taking a broad view of the field and deciding where we can be of the most use, considering the needs and our fitness to serve. Of course we may all help some in all lines, but this is not enough in most cases. Most of us should have a definite task into which we can throw our energies with enthusiasm and efficiency. Here are some ways in which Marshall county women can help:

CONSERVE FOOD.

President Wilson says the MOST VITAL PART AMERICAN WOMEN CAN PLAY is to CO-OPERATE WITH THE FOOD ADMINISTRATION. He adds that if they fail to do this part it will be "their first failure."

If you have not yet signed a Food Card and want to do so, you may get one of Mrs. E. N. Cook.

SIGN SERVICE CARD.

A Service Card is to be put out by the Woman's Committee of the Council of Defense. You should sign this card. It is not a draft nor an enlisting to "go to France." It is merely an inventory or survey of the woman power of the country; that those who have ability in particular lines may be enabled to serve in those lines and all the rest of us may be helped to find out what we can do best, and put in touch with that work.

HELP THE RED CROSS.

The Red Cross has eyes on all the battlefields and behind all lines, in all the hospitals and in the homes whence a man has gone. It is continually studying needs and methods and when it tells us what to do and how to do it, it knows what it is talking about. Whatever energy a woman spends under the direction of the Red Cross, she can be pretty sure will be of direct and much-needed use. There are classes on Thursday evenings and on Saturdays in Red Cross headquarters for the folding of surgical dressings. This work is directed by Mrs. Stevens and Miss Milner. These surgical dressings are sent by the thousands to the front and it is especially desired right now that there be an enormous supply to be sent over ahead of the boys that they may not interfere with the transportation of troops and other supplies later. There are various committees of the Red Cross who are making garments and supplies needed in the Red Cross work. If you want to help do this sewing and cannot come to the headquarters to work, phone Mrs. E. N. Cook and she will put you in touch with the committee with which you can work. Or if you belong to a society which will be able to do Red Cross work at some of its meetings, ask Mrs. Cook about it. She will direct you how to go about it.

KNIT.

The papers have recently spent some space and our War and Navy Secretaries have nearly "gotten in bad" by raising a question as to the necessity of supplying sweaters and knit garments for soldiers. As far as we can make out, the conclusion of the whole matter is: A sweater is not an absolute "necessity," else the high officials "would ask Congress to make an appropriation" and buy these for the boys, but it is a great "comfort" during this cold weather, upon the high seas, in the trenches, or keeping watch these cold nights in France. Women want the boys who are offering to give their lives for the protection of our homes to have this "comfort," hence the knitting.

If you want direction in this work, write or telephone to Mrs. Auer, who has charge of the knitting committee.

HELP RAISE FUNDS.

Funds for the Red Cross are always in demand. Whatever you can do to help swell the finances is good service. In these times of special "drives" you may enlist. There will be more Liberty Loans and "Y" campaigns. You can help prepare for these by talking about them favorably to your neighbors. Giving is so much a matter of knowledge of the need. Those who understand it best are most willing to give. You can be helping prepare in advance by taking it up intelligently now.

KEEP UP SPIRIT.

There is an indefinable something called "morale," for the lack of a better name. This is made up of "pep," courage, a fighting spirit, enthusiasm, a vision of the need and a devotion to the cause, a spirit of self-sacrifice, a just anger at inhumanities being practiced by the Teutons and a desire to avenge and rehabilitate those who have been despoiled. This spirit is much a matter of cultivation about the tables and hearthstones, and can be inflamed or depressed by woman's attitude. Be sure that you are helping your husband and your boy to be heroic.

THE "HOME FIRES."

Bishop John Hazen White, in a recent address before the Civic club and Franchise League, of South Bend, spoke on the text, "This ought ye to have done and not to have left the other undone." He pointed out the necessity of keeping up all the home and welfare work; keeping our "house in order" as it were, caring for the poor, looking out for civic welfare and integrity, seeing that the children have the best development, providing comforts for the old, the depressed, the ill; taking pains that criminality does not increase at home; that proper medical help is given where needed; that all our institutions are made the most efficient for the training of a noble race. This is what is meant by, "keeping the home fires burning." England made the mistake of overlooking this necessity at first and now feels the dire effects of it. If we are not wise enough to maintain the present welfare institutions and make needed reforms at home we shall find ourselves a retrograde and degenerate people at the end of the war.

These are only some of the ways Marshall county women may help. Do these and "others shall be added unto you," for the Council of Defense and Red Cross and numerous other patriotic societies are alert to make use of all who are eager to help.

Essential Industries Are Affected by Coal Shortage

The fuel shortage temporarily has affected some essential industries. For example, the Wayne Knitting Mills at Ft. Wayne, makers of hosiery, have been threatened by a fuel shortage.

Stone quarries are closing down here and there as war work absorbs both cars and fuel. Restrictions on non-essentials enforced by the priority agencies of the National War Administration, have caused the Baltes Stone quarries at Montpelier to close for the winter. Cars could not be had to haul the company's product. Coal delivered to the company has been used by E. R. Coleman, manager of the company, to help meet the fuel needs of the people of Montpelier. As the stone company's coal deliveries are received in car lots, the cars are to be set on an uptown switch and the coal is to be sold to the people in ton lots.

J. A. Hendricks, highway superintendent of Adams county, announces that road-building is to stop because of the closing of stone-quarries and the inability of the material concerns to get cars to use in shipping road supplies.

The Sandusky Cement Company's plant at Syracuse, Kosciusko county, has been closed because of the coal shortage.

At Albany a projected church revival has been postponed because of the failure of the church to obtain a supply of coal.

In attempting to work out the wood-for-fuel problems in Boone county, a landowner was found who declared he would rather pay $20 a ton for coal than cut wood to be used as a substitute. The matter was reported to the County Council of Defense, according to the Lebanon Pioneer. That paper reports vast quantities of down timber in Boone county waiting to be cut into firewood, all being unfit for other use.

Something of Germany's Tragedy

"IN SPITE OF THE CENSOR."

"Ladies' chemises. Were $1, now $16.
 "Cloth, pure worsted and gabardine. Was 72 cents a yard, now $9.60.
 "Half-wool stuff. Was 38 cents a yard, now $5.76.
 "Velvets. Were $1.44, now $12.
 "Sateen. Was 20 cents, now $2.88.
 "Wash voile. Was 13 cents, now $2.88.
 "Sewing silk. Was 13 cents per 'reel,' now 15 cents.
 "Machine cotton. Was 4 cents per large reel, now 22 cents.
 "Cotton socks for infants. Were 72 cents per dozen, now $11.52.
 "Ladies' woolen stockings. Were 66 cents, now $3.60.
 "Shoe laces. Price twenty times higher than before the war."

There is little of Germany's tragedy leaking out to the outside world now. Her censors resemble "dead men" in that they "tell no tales." There is one source of news, however, that the censor cannot bottle up, and that is the market reports. These constitute a vivid chronicle of The Rise and Fall of Mitteleuropa.

A little analysis and attention to such news as exists will reveal reasons behind these high prices in addition to the mere high cost of raw materials. For one thing, Germany has cut terrible holes in her textile industries by taking men from them for munitions work; for another, she has seemingly allowed prices on such things as dry goods to climb without restriction, probably on the theory that this will act as the greatest check on the use of these commodities. Even high prices, however, cannot check all demand, and the price report above quoted adds that "many articles for which customers would gladly pay the high prices demanded, especially sewing cotton, are scarcely obtainable any more."

Such price announcements over here would make American women think that we had gone back to Civil war times, when calico went from 12½ to 50 cents a yard; lonsdale shirting from 19 to 85 cents; broadcloth from $2.45 to $5.50, and matches from 62 cents to $2.37 a gross.

Indeed, there are people here who have made the statement that some prices actually are higher now than they were in Civil war times. But a little analysis shows this to be a mistaken statement. Beef, cheese, bacon and corn did reach a higher dollar and cents notch in 1917 than at any time during the Civil war. But they started higher, our whole scale of living having risen. As a matter of fact, not one of these commodities has had a rise proportionate to the increase of those days. A commodity that starts at $5 and goes up to $10 in one era has really not suffered as great a price disturbance as the same commodity starting at $3 and going up to $7 in another era, though the actual final price is higher.

It is not chance that has kept our commodities from soaring to the same extent as the German goods above listed. If ever speculators had a rich field to mow it was when we entered this war. Not only were production, distribution and labor conditions disturbed, but Europe's money was over here for the purchase of her supplies. So, without any of the terrific pressure of war that Germany has felt, even worse price conditions could easily have prevailed here had there not been some restraining power.

This power has been one of the greatest demonstrations of efficiency that democracy has yet had opportunity to show. Not only have the people's legislators passed such legislation as was necessary to enable a great democracy to organize for a special task, but the country's great business men have shown remarkable readiness to start voluntarily from the place where legislation stopped and carry the whole war-service program to a successful conclusion. This has been especially true in the matter of foods. Dealers representing virtually all of this country's food commodities have gone to Washington to attend conferences with the food administration, and the result is accomplishing what Germany said could never be achieved by a democracy—practical and prompt food control through democratic administration.

War time prices must be higher than peace prices, because labor and distribution are disturbed, the demand is abnormal, and production must be stimulated. So we sometimes forget that we have really been greatly blessed by constructive administration till some such striking fact as this German stock report comes before us.

A Woman's War Pictures

She had been looking at a collection of war photographs, and was telling a friend about them.

"They are terrible," she said. "But I have to look at them, I have to remind myself that the war is real, and not just a horrible nightmare. I want to do my best in every way—especially in food saving. And it is hard to put forth one's best efforts for the sake of what seems a bad dream."

The other one shook her head. "I understand," she replied. "I began that way, but I found that the impression needed constant renewing—their very horror caused them to fade. So I started a picture gallery of my own that would be permanent, and that would enlist my deepest sympathies with the task of conserving food."

To the other's questioning look she explained. "I made a list—fats, meat, sugar, wheat, fuel. Those are, roughly, the things we are asked to conserve by wise use and substitution. It used to be easy for me to eat a lot of butter just because I am so fond of it; to take two meat and wheat-bread sandwiches to the office for lunch, and then throw one away and eat some candy instead; so easy to leave the electric light burning in the dining room at home while I was in the sitting room, or the steam heat turned on all day while I was at the office; and above all—so easy to think that each tiny bit of waste couldn't make any difference at all in that limitless, titanic turmoil in Europe. All this was so easy that I started my mental picture gallery to make it hard—too hard—even to consider wasting an atom of possible war material.

"I fixed it this way: 'Fats,' I said. 'Of course I know that fats must be had for a wide array of needs. But, because fat includes milk, cream, butter—the foods without which children cannot grow up—I choose to make "save the fats" an imperative demand to me by the symbol of a baby.'

"This baby is really the future—the future of France, of England, of Belgium, or any allied country. For it is on this baby that each country depends for its continuance in history—and this baby depends on the fats you and I can save for its continuance.

"So, with the picture of that baby in my mind, holding out its hands to me for its necessary food, putting it up to me whether it shall grow up a sturdy citizen, or whether it shall be wasted, weak, its life, if it lives, a burden—with that picture in my heart do you think I dare waste a drop of milk or a morsel of fat?"

"Then meats—because of the phrase 'strong meat' I associate meat with the strong, and visualize the soldier, the man who is fighting the war that shall decide forever whether men shall be captains of their own destinies or not. I see this soldier, toiling beyond human belief, living under the most terrific stress, hesitating at no risk, tossing his life gladly 'over the top' when that alone will save the day. And then I see his incredible sacrifice brought to nothing by lack of food—by lack of mere strength to sustain his greatness.

"Well—do you think I can waste meat now?"

"Then comes sugar. One thinks of youngsters and their inevitable 'sweet tooth' that is not mere taste but nature's demand for necessary energy. And though I know that the sugar is needed for all, I choose to think of it as being for these little men-and-women-to-be, whose youth has been devoured by the Giant War. They must, almost alone, take prematurely on their shoulders a burden greater than has ever been piled up in this world before; their hands must take over this ruined world. Shall they have the sugar they need for energy?—or shall I gratify this moment's craving instead?"

"Wheat—why, one thinks of Ceres—of Mother Nature—of the world's matrons, administering their households, nurturing mankind from infancy on through life. And so I picture a woman, a brave woman, never faltering at her responsibility of feeding the world simply because the dragons of war are trying to snatch the food from her hands. Why—this symbol-woman of mine is like Mother Earth herself, who, with her breast rent and bleeding, still gives fruitage to the hand that sows.

"Shall I help her—or the war dragon?"

"Fuel? That is simple. One thinks instantly of the aged, bending for comfort over the hearthstone where they have reared the world's children. I picture an ancient couple who, having sacrificed their sons on the altar of freedom, would gladly stay no longer here themselves were it not that they long to keep at least some embers aglow for those who may return at last, that mankind may not forget that the world was once its peaceful home.

"That is my gallery of symbols. Do you wonder that 'Save the fat,' 'Save the meat,' 'Save the wheat,' 'Save the sugar,' 'Save the fuel,' are to me the 'new Commandment' that shall save the world for brotherhood and love?"

Illinois Licenses War Relief Plans

All Illinois war benefit solicitations must be licensed under a State law. The plan of protecting the public from impostors and to eliminate the waste of duplication was the subject of an official notice sent forward to every county defense organization, as follows:

"Under the regulation recently adopted all licensees are required to place upon all printed matter issued by them and intended for circulation or use in Illinois in connection with solicitation, a statement informing the public that the solicitation has been authorized. The statement should be in the following form: 'A license authorizing this solicitation has been issued by the State Council of Defense of Illinois.' It is believed that this statement, so used, in addition to being of great advantage to the licensee, will serve as a protection and convenience to the public. If a form of statement shorter than the form given above is more practicable for use in some instances, as for example, upon tickets of admission, the following may be used: 'Licensed by State Council of Defense of Illinois.' It is understood that you will observe this regulation. If you have printed matter now on hand, intended for circulation, we suggest that you place the statement upon such printed matter by the use of a rubber stamp. Yours very truly,
 "The State Council of Defense, License Committee War Aid and War Charity.

(Signed) "RICHARD MUELLER,
 "Assistant Secretary."

Patriotic Peppergrams

Food pledge cards in the windows of ten million American homes bespeak a mighty, concerted effort that will be felt beyond the seas.

You bought your Liberty Bond in order to provide the boys with the proper sinews of war. You signed the food pledge in order that your child may not later cry for bread. The day may come when you will rejoice at the loyal decision which you have made in each case.

Only a pro-German or a misinformed American will scoff at the efforts of the government to conserve the food supply of the nation.

Our three billion-bushel corn crop puts a larger crown than ever on the king of cereals. And, if used right, it will help to put the Kaiser in the discard.

Food in the mouths of our Allies is ammunition no less important than the shells in their siege guns.

He who proposes peace now, either does not see the stake for which the Allies are fighting, or wishes the German military autocracy still to control the destinies of us all as to peace or war.—WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

Four-Minute Men's Work Wins Tribute

President Wilson Expresses Warm Appreciation of Campaign Made in Moving Picture Houses.

President Wilson has written the following letter to the speakers of the division of Four-Minute Men of the Committee on Public Information: To the Fifteen Thousand Four-Minute Men of the United States:

May I not express my very real interest in the vigorous and intelligent work your organization is doing in connection with the Committee on Public Information? It is surely a matter worthy of sincere appreciation that a body of thoughtful citizens, with the hearty co-operation of the managers of moving-picture theaters, are engaged in the presentation and discussion of the purposes and measures of these critical days.

Men and nations are at their worst or at their best in any great struggle. The spoken word may light the fires of passion and unreason or it may inspire to highest action and noblest sacrifice a nation of freemen.

Upon you Four-Minute Men, who are charged with a special duty and enjoy a special privilege in the command of your audiences, will rest in a considerable degree the task of arousing and informing the great body of our people, so that when the record of these days is complete we shall read page for page with the deeds of army and navy the story of the unity, the spirit of sacrifice, the unceasing labors, the high courage of the men and women at home who held unbroken the inner lines.

My best wishes and continuing interest are with you in your work as part of the Reserve Officer Corps in a nation thrice armed because through your efforts it knows better the justice of its cause and the value of what it defends.

Cordially and sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

The division of Four-Minute Men of the Committee on Public Information is a governmental agency consisting of 15,000 volunteer speakers. Its purpose is to present to the American people messages from their Government, the topics being selected in Washington. The facts for the development of each subject are carefully prepared at the national headquarters.

Donald Ryerson, of Chicago, vice president of Ryerson Sons, now a lieutenant in the navy, conceived the idea from which the organization has been developed. When in response to the call to the colors he laid aside direction of the work, William McCormick Blair, another Chicagoan, became director.

In its infancy the organization consisted simply of a small group of men, working as a purely voluntary body without official recognition under an inspiration to impress every American with the fact that he has a part to perform in promoting the success of the war. The Committee on Public Information, recognizing the possibilities of reaching the public through these verbal messages carried into every community, gave official sanction to the activities of the Four-Minute Men.

The Four-Minute Men do not appear at mass meetings where the individuals who congregate come with opinions formed. They go into motion-picture theaters, where they find mixed audiences with open minds. The 15,000 speakers are organized under the direction of local chairmen. The organization is represented today in the ma-

PROCLAMATION

In order that all the patriotic forces and energies of the State shall be co-ordinated for the performance of the great war task now confronting the Nation, and in order that full freedom and efficiency may be imparted to every effort, to supplement the effective work now being done in Indiana by the citizens in their voluntary labors for the organizing of the State's man and woman power and all other resources of the commonwealth, the following proclamation is made and its provisions will be effective from and after this date:

WHEREAS, On account of the state of war existing between the United States and the Central Empires, our people are intensively employed in war activities required by both State and Nation, which activities are made the more strenuous and necessary by the absence of more than thirty-five thousand of the young men of the State who have gone to the firing line, or who are now in the camps of instruction preliminary to going to the front, thus shifting the increasing home burdens to fewer hands, and

WHEREAS, In order that treason shall more certainly be stamped out in its inception; that disloyalty shall be discovered and punished; that prompt succor may be rendered in event of storms, floods, fire or other common disasters; that continuous and permanent efficiency shall be maintained for all who are engaged in the multiplied and necessary home activities of the extraordinary war crisis, an emergency is hereby declared, and under the authority vested in the Executive of the State, under the Constitution and under the laws of the State, I, James P. Goodrich, Governor of the State of Indiana, hereby call to action, under the rules now prescribed, the sedentary militia of the State.

1. That the sedentary militia to distinguish it from other branches of the military service of the State and Nation, shall be called "The Liberty Guard of Indiana."

2. That the membership of the Liberty Guard shall be the male citizens of the State between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, who are now bearing arms for the Nation or State and who by reason of occupation and environment should not give of their whole time to strictly military duty, but who are imbued with a patriotic desire to aid in maintaining peace and order in our State which is now a great workshop for the production of that which is so important in winning the war, and to be ready to strike quick and effective blows in the event of treasonable or disloyal outbreaks in any part of the commonwealth.

3. Upon receipt of the petition of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred fifty of the citizens of a community that they desire to form a unit of the Liberty Guard of the State, and after being assured that such organization will maintain an interest in the work for the period of the war, that proper officers for instruction and training are present or can be secured, and that the membership is composed of persons physically fit for the service, I will cause said organization to be enrolled a charter will be issued and later it will be assigned a letter or number in the State's organization of the Liberty Guard.

4. It will be the duty of the members of such organization to perfect themselves in military training and knowledge of arms and to hold stated meetings for drill and instructions. That said drilling and all other military forms will be governed by the regulations, manuals and orders of the United States Army.

5. In addition to their military activities, the members of the Liberty Guards are urged to take part in all civic activities in the community that are calculated to kindle and keep burning the patriotic fires; to maintain due vigilance in ferreting out disloyalty and treason and to report the same through proper channels.

6. Membership and service in the Liberty Guard does not, of course, relieve the men of conscription age from service in the National Army, but all are urged to join the Guard and to receive the military training it affords, and in the event of their being called to the service of the nation, they are automatically discharged from the Liberty Guard and the membership of the local company is asked to give appropriate and appreciative recognition of the fact that one of their members has thus been promoted.

7. The said Liberty Guard will be under the command and direction of the Adjutant-General of the State who will issue all orders governing the activities of the same. The membership is hereby charged to obey such orders and to take no action in any case not strictly conforming to the said Adjutant-General.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great Seal of Indiana to be affixed thereto, this the 12th day of December, 1917.

Patriotism in Indiana

Fulton County.—Speaking under the auspices of the Fulton County Council of Defense, Mayor J. O. Batchelor of Marlon, Ind., recently delivered a very effective war address on "Patriotism" to a large meeting at Rochester. The meeting was productive of much enthusiasm and inspiration. Recent patriotic rallies at Rochester and Fulton, addressed by Prof. Sherman Davis of Indiana University, have been highly successful.

Secret service men have been at work in Fulton county, warning seditious talkers as to the serious nature of treasonable offenses. The visits of Federal agents followed reports sent in to the State Council of Defense by the protection organization of the Fulton County Council of Defense.

Gibson County.—Pupils of the Princeton high school are at work earning more than $600 to be given to the Y. M. C. A. War Fund, the money to be earned, $10 by each pupil before April 1, 1918.

At a patriotic meeting at the First Presbyterian church, Princeton, a service flag, bearing fifteen stars, was dedicated by the congregation in honor of the men who have gone from the church into military service.

The Elizabeth Stanley W. C. T. U. of King Station is doing Red Cross work under the direction of Mrs. Hatlie Robinson, Mrs. Robert McCurdy, Mrs. Ora Endicott and others.

A systematic drive was made recently in Princeton among fraternal organizations, societies and other organizations, for contributions to the Y. M. C. A. War Fund. The returns were large. The committee assigned to this particular drive was headed by John Shubart as chairman.

Chester A. Rumble of Oakland City is in charge of a movement to organize thirty high school boys of that city who are to do farm work to earn $10 each for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund. Mr. Rumble is getting in touch with farmers who can make use of the young volunteers.

Grant County.—Comfort kits for soldiers are being made in large numbers by the Home and Foreign Missionary Society of Oak Chapel church east of Marlon. Mrs. Emma Baker is president, Mrs. Viola Nelson, vice president, and Mrs. Lulu Nelson, secretary. At a recent all-day session at the home of Mrs. Sally E. Stont, the following gave their time to war work: Mrs. Dora E. Whitely, Sadie B. Harvey, Mrs. Anna Winslow and Mrs. William M. Jones of Little Ridge, Mrs. Barnaby Boyce and Miss Martha Rathier of Fairmount, Mrs. Frank Havens, Mrs. Carl Barney and Mrs. Helen Loop of Marlon, Mrs. Viola Nelson, Mrs. Viola Thompson, Mrs. Victor Stout, Mrs. Emma Baker, Mrs. Hazel King, Miss Lucile Jones, Mary Delight Loop, Winifred Barney, Hillis and Max Barney, Walter and Harry Loop, Mrs. Mary Baker and Jennie Baker.

Cash Dolan, labor member of the Grant County Council of Defense, has resigned.

A strong effort is to be made by patriotic citizens to induce the Grant County Council to appropriate money for the use of the Grant County Council of Defense. The county's war work has been handicapped and impeded by the failure of the authorities to provide funds.

Greene County.—Work has been started by the Greene County Council of Defense on the organization of idle men for war work, on the perfection of the local Boys' Working Reserve, and on the formation of an organization to reach all citizens to command war contributions and loyalty.

The Bloomfield News is performing a patriotic service by printing from time to time a "Roll of Honor," the names and addresses of soldiers from Greene county, for the use of the home folk who wish to keep in communication with the soldiers.

Hamilton County.—C. C. Carson of Noblesville, chairman of the Hamilton County Council of Defense suggests the inauguration of "Autoless Sundays" as a war measure to save gasoline and as a thrift step. Mr. Carson argues that in view of the fact England has cut out joy-riding altogether, Americans ought to be willing to give up a joy-ride once in a while and do away with extravagance in that way.

Flags have been presented to the Westfield schools—Eight grade and First grade, the presentations being made by the Fairfax W. R. C., through Mrs. Emory and Mrs. Moore, as part of the patriotic work of the organization.

Harrison County.—Thomas S. Jones, chairman of the Harrison County Council of Defense, has appointed a "Protection" committee in compliance with the request of the State Council of Defense, and from this time on reports on seditious chatter or treasonable conduct will be made to the County Defense Council, and will be handed to the "Protection" committee for investigation, the results of such activity to be forwarded to the State Council of Defense and the Federal authorities for drastic action.

Hendricks County.—Chronic loafers in Hendricks county are to be catalogued by the County Council of Defense, and will be asked to show cause why they toll not in war time.

Mrs. T. J. Christie of Danville, head of the women's section of the County Council of Defense, reports that more than 6,000 food pledge cards were signed in the recent Hoover campaign in Hendricks.

A committee of the County Council of Defense has been assigned to investigate reports of sugar hoarding in the county by women.

Inquiry throughout Hendricks county has failed to uncover any copies of the notorious pro-German book, "The

Patriotic High School Boys

Senior class boys in the Crawfordsville high school, without an exception, are pledged to help the Y. M. C. A. War Fund. Each young man is working to earn $10 for the fund.

Immediately after making the pledge the boys set to work, their first venture being a cider-making project at the farm of Sherman Trout near Crawfordsville. Mr. Trout offered the boys a part of his apple crop, and from the apples the young men made 100 gallons of cider, the product being sold in Crawfordsville and the proceeds being applied to the amount to be raised under the pledge.

While adding to the Y. M. C. A. War Fund the boys prevented waste and helped the food conservation movement.

Book of Truth and Facts," which book recently was withdrawn from circulation in Indianapolis.

Theodore T. Martin of Danville, chairman of the Hendricks County Council of Defense, has announced that speakers for patriotic meetings can be engaged through him, the speakers to be sent to the county by the speakers' bureau of the State Council of Defense. It is planned to start in the near future a series of patriotic rallies in Hendricks county. Z. E. Dougan, head of the Four-Minute Men of the county, plans a school house campaign in all parts of the county.

Dr. W. T. Lawson, food administrator in Hendricks county, has named the following deputies: Dr. Wisheart, North Salem; Dr. J. D. Hendricks, Elston; Dr. O. T. Scamahorn, Pittsboro; Dr. T. G. Smith, Brownsburg; Dr. Amos Carter, Plainfield; Dr. Rillus E. Jones, Clayton; Dr. L. F. Hicks, Amo; Dr. Chas. F. Shartie, Stilesville; Otto Lakin, Coatesville.

Henry County.—The Food Administration is reported to be on the trail of a large number of sugar hoarders in Henry county. It has been reported to the County Council of Defense that literally hundreds of families in the county have stored from 25 to 500 pounds of sugar each.

Knightstown has a Calf Club backed by the Citizens' National bank, with thirty-six boys as members. Each boy has obtained a registered calf and is given three years in which to pay for the animal, the work being part of the war campaign to stimulate production of foodstuffs. The Henry County Council of Defense has issued a warning to citizens asking them to investigate thoroughly before trading their Liberty Loan Bonds for securities offered in lieu of the war bonds.

Howard County.—The first of a series of patriotic services has been held at the First Presbyterian church, Kokomo, under Rev. Otis A. Smith. Community singing of patriotic songs was a big feature.

The Kokomo Red Cross Shop entertainment committee staged "Alabama," with local talent, as a benefit for the Red Cross. The entertainment committee includes Mrs. E. E. Russell, Mrs. H. A. Bruner, Mrs. A. H. Hunt, Mrs. Eugene Laymon and Miss Jessamine Armstrong.

Mrs. W. C. Purdum, Casper Butler, Ida M. Mix, Howard Cottey and M. O. March are active, with many others, in a movement for the registration of Howard county women for war service.

Huntington County.—John Myers, a Huntington county farmer, offered to sell beef at 16 cents a pound, pork shoulder and sides at 22 cents and hams at 25, and the Huntington County Council of Defense co-operated with Mr. Myers in placing his products, receiving orders for his wares.

Sawbuck Clubs of school boys are being formed in the larger schools of Huntington county under J. A. Kramien, at the request of the State Council of Defense, the boys to cut wood to be used in place of coal for fuel.

Porter County.—The women of Hebron and vicinity have turned in ninety-five pairs of socks for the Council of Defense.

In the above picture the senior class men appear, with the exception of Okla Shelley, the names, reading from left to right being as follows: Front row, Byford Lemon, Hubert Whitson, Clarence Lowe, John Harding, Clarice Hobson, Jasper Crawwall. Second, John Moseley, Joe Davis, Harold Clements, Paul Deere, Will Goltra, Herman Whitson, John Canine, Howard Conover. Third, Freeman Hybarger, George Laurimore, Carlton Gauld, Merle Davis, Earl Yount, Porter Dunbar, Manly Dice, Floyd Davidson, Carl Hose.

One hundred pupils of this high school pledged $10 each to the Y. M. C. A. Fund.

Besides these one hundred and one pairs of socks, twenty scarfs, twenty-five sweaters, fourteen pairs of wristlets and three helmets have been turned into the Red Cross and the knitting still continues.

Many Hoover Pledge Cards have been signed—our Boys and girls in High School donated $52 in the late Y. M. C. A. drive and five boys raised $88.10 for the War Library Fund which was in excess of the call made. A football game between home teams on Thanksgiving Day netted $50 for the Red Cross.

Sewing on hospital shirts and surgical supplies is being done four afternoons of each week by the women and girls.

A good light room on Main street donated by J. M. Morrow and heated by George W. Gidley is open to all Red Cross activities.

Use Home Products

Now comes Mr. Hoover, who urges the use of home manufactured products, wherever possible.

There is food for thought in his suggestion, which, while it has been advocated by a devoted band known as "home boosters" for time immemorial, has waited for war conditions to press the lesson home.

We raise the raw product in our fields, haul it to the nearest market, where it is sold and shipped to distant centers of population where it is manufactured, shuttled from one dealer to another, until it comes back to its native fields in the manufactured stage, in fancy packages, under highly advertised trade marks and purchased by those who raised the raw material, at fancy prices or at prices way above what it should be or would be, if the consumer were content to raise at home, manufacture at home and finally consume it at home.

It is a popular pastime to blame some "corporation," "baron of industry," etc., etc., for inflated prices, when in the last analysis the trouble has been with our own fancies and prejudices for goods that are manufactured somewhere else—the "common stuff," right at our doors, which will do just as well and without a doubt, fully as good as that imported from other points.

The inflation of prices in the "cost of high living" has largely been the result of such conditions and terrific expense in making the public believe that it is getting something "extra fine" and satisfying its craving for show and luxury.

Plant Food Needs for Indiana in 1918

Important Meeting Develops Necessity of Very Generous Use of Fertilizer for Crops Needed Next Year.

Plant food needs of Indiana soils for 1918 and how these needs could be met by the various fertilizer companies were considered at an important meeting held at the State House, December 6, under the direction of G. I. Christie, State Food Director.

The meeting was attended by representatives of all the fertilizer companies selling fertilizer in Indiana, representatives of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, the Indiana Cannery's association, the Indiana Agricultural associations and Purdue university.

An abundance of plant food for crop production is the greatest need for a war-time program. If Indiana is to increase its agricultural production, the 225,000 tons of fertilizer used in the state annually must not be reduced. At the present time the most serious problem confronting the plant food situation in Indiana is supplying transportation for fertilizers. It was the purpose of the meeting to consider such action as would help this situation and see that a large amount of plant food is placed on Indiana soils the coming year.

The meeting was opened by a brief address by Governor James P. Goodrich.

"Indiana," declared the Governor, "must increase her food production in the face of a shortage of labor. This can be effected largely through increased yields per acre rather than increased acreage. Fertilizer will play an important part in this increase. The fertilizer men," he said, "are engaged in a patriotic enterprise. The forces of the state are back of them, appealing not only to their patriotism but to their sound business sense as well."

G. I. Christie stated that permanent systems of agriculture are not to be discouraged, but the one thing needed at the present time is more food. An increase in the food supply can be provided in an effective way through the application of commercial plant food.

W. D. Huntington of Baltimore, Maryland, a member of a sub-committee on fertilizer of the National Council of Defense and president of the National Fertilizer association, presented data to show the difficulties with which fertilizer manufacturers are confronted. "One of the difficulties," said Mr. Huntington, "is shortage of raw materials, due to the fact that immense quantities of fertilizer ingredients are used in the manufacture of munitions. Another difficulty is that the shipping tonnage has been commandeered by the government and it is impossible to get raw materials from foreign ports. A labor shortage exists. The development of coal mines is drawing a large amount of labor away from the rock phosphate mines. The biggest question, however," he said, "is that of transportation—transportation of not only raw materials but the mixed fertilizer which the manufacturers now have on hand and which they will manufacture between now and next fall." He suggested as a solution of this difficulty that an effort be made to have fertilizers and the raw materials going into the manufacture of fertilizers placed on a preferred list of freight shipments along with food. Fertilizer companies recognize the need of Indiana soils and will do everything possible to supply the phosphates needed.

D. S. Myer, Assistant County Agent Leader, stated that Indiana would need, as a conservative estimate, at least 70,000 tons of acid phosphate for 1918. In most cases the acid phosphate asked for was double the amount formerly used.

The following resolution was adopted unanimously:—

Whereas, the transportation of the raw materials entering into the manufacture of fertilizer and the delivery of the finished product to the farmers is a vital factor in the production of food supplies, therefore, be it RESOLVED,

First: That we urge the placing of such raw materials and manufactured fertilizers along with food on the preferred list of freight shipments.

Second: That we urge the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation to take such steps as will impress the federal authorities with the necessity for such action.

G. I. Christie was authorized to present the points contained in the resolution to the State Council of Defense, to the other State Food Committees and to the Governor of Indiana in order that they too might impress the federal authorities with the necessity for such action.

Failure to provide Indiana farmers with the necessary plant food in 1918 will not only result in a loss of millions of dollars to the farmers, but a reduction of millions of bushels of grain to the food supply of the world.

CANNING CROPS FOR 1918.

A special meeting was held at the State House, December 6th, under the direction of the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, to formulate plans for putting on a state-wide campaign to increase the production of canning crops for 1918.

The meeting was attended by representatives of the Indiana Cannery's Association, Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation and Purdue University. Those attending the meeting were: G. I. Christie, Food Director, Chairman; Harry McCartney, President of the Cannery's Association; W. M. Swain, Vice-President of the Cannery's Association; Paul Fishbach, Secretary of the Cannery's Association; Prof. L. Green, Chief of the Horticultural Dept., Purdue University; Prof. C. G. Woodbury, Director Agricultural Experiment Station; T. A. Coleman, County Agent Leader; D. S. Myer, Assistant County Agent Leader; Dr. H. E. Barnard, State Food Administrator; W. P. Haggood, Columbus Conserve Company; H. G. Lowe, Greencastle; Mr. Grovenor, Paoli, and W. Q. Fitch, Assistant Secretary, Food Committee.

It was proposed at the meeting to secure a specialist to take care of the state-wide campaign. The United States Bureau of Plant Industry, the Cannery's Association and Purdue University will co-operate with the Food Committee in putting on this state-wide campaign.

Harry McCartney, President of the Cannery's Association, stated that the government will want 30 per cent. to 40 per cent. of the output of the tomato pack of 1918. This means that in order to meet the demand of the government that the present acreage of 36,000 acres must be increased to 50,000 acres during 1918; 150,000,000 tomato plants will be required to plant this area. It is of the greatest importance that proper varieties be used and that the plants be started in hotbeds early in order to secure a large yield.

The cannerys of the state propose to hold local meetings with their growers for the purpose of discussing the questions of better varieties, early planting, hotbed construction and increased acreage. Purdue University will give assistance at these meetings, furnishing definite information relative to these points.

The government is being asked to make a statement relative to the acreage of tomatoes and other canning crops needed in Indiana in order to meet home consumption and war demand. As soon as this is secured, a campaign will be launched to meet the requirements.

How to Conserve Agriculture's Artillery.

- (1) Orders for new equipment and repair parts should be placed as soon as possible.
- (2) To produce maximum results with a minimum of labor, new and modern machinery in large sizes should be used wherever possible.
- (3) Serviceable equipment, not needed, should be sold or made available to others.
- (4) Useless machinery should be returned to the channels of trade as junk.
- (5) Thorough lubrication and proper care when in use will materially lengthen the period of service of farm equipment.
- (6) More care should be given to protecting farm implements from the weather.

Send your magazines to the front—all it costs is a one-cent stamp. Uncle Sam does the rest.

Council Gratified With Proclamation

No Action Taken on Proposed Request
That Embargo on Corn Shipments Be Lifted.

At the regular meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense, December 12, the council "heard with gratification" the reading of the proclamation of Governor James P. Goodrich calling into existence "The Liberty Guard of Indiana." The proclamation appears elsewhere in the Indiana Bulletin.

The suggestion of Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Indiana food administrator, that the council join with him in a message to Herbert Hoover, federal food administrator, setting forth the importance of lifting the embargo against the shipment of corn eastward of the Illinois-Indiana State line, provoked a lively discussion. The council disposed of the question by suggesting that Dr. Barnard and A. E. Reynolds of the shipping committee give the federal food administration such facts relative to the matter as they possess, without involving the council as a body.

Dr. Barnard stated that a delegation of farmers from Delaware county had notified him that they would be unable to continue feeding their hogs unless they were permitted to ship corn from western States.

Mr. Reynolds stated that "the embargo is greatly to the detriment of the movement of free grain just when such movement is needed, and it can't be traced to the railroads."

Evans Woollen objected to "action with insufficient information" and expressed the belief that the question of transportation had entered into the embargo. Mr. Woollen quoted "an experienced railroad operator" as saying "the manifestation of disorganization and inefficiency on the railroads of Indiana had been equalled only once in his experience, and that was during the 1913 floods."

The council heard the detailed plans for the State-wide war conference to be held in Indianapolis December 13 and 14 and voted the entire approval of the program.

How To Render Service

The following ways in which non-combatants may render service to their country have been adopted by Dr. Robert J. Aley, A. B., Indiana University, 1888, formerly head of the mathematics department of Indiana University, later state superintendent of public instruction, now president of the University of Maine, and approved by the students of that institution:

- "1. I will keep myself so well informed on the causes and progress of the world war that I may be a source of information and influence to others.
- "2. I appreciate so thoroughly the danger of internal enemies, that I will report to the proper authorities the name and location of every native or alien citizens whose conduct or utterances indicate enmity to our country or lack of sympathy with our allies.
- "3. I will do all in my power to encourage increased production of food materials, both animal and vegetable.
- "4. I will cheerfully change my habits of eating, so as to help conserve wheat, meat, animal fats, dairy products and sugar.
- "5. I will assist in every possible way to make the second and all succeeding Liberty Loans a success.
- "6. I will practice economy and deny myself luxuries so that I may contribute large sums to the various necessary war philanthropies.
- "7. I will help to stabilize public opinion by showing the reasonableness and necessity of the government's demands, and the baselessness of the unfounded rumors relating to the war.
- "8. I will be a friend and comforter to the families of soldiers and minister to their needs in every possible way.
- "9. I will try to meet all the varied events of the war with patience, calmness and optimism.
- "10. I will work harder and more earnestly so that I may contribute my part to make up the loss due to the withdrawals from industry of large numbers of men for the army."

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Vol. I INDIANAPOLIS, IND. No. 18

WAR WORK AT HOME

Indiana men of military age who are physically fit for service in army or navy have maintained in splendid style the Indiana standard of wartime patriotism,—that sort of patriotism which has distinguished Indiana in former wars.

When the Federal government called last April for 5,400 Indiana men for the regular army, and for 800 Hoosiers for the navy, the response was prompt, and from the first Indiana led all the States, in proportion to population in the number of enlistments in army and navy. But one or two of the largest States surpassed Indiana even in the actual number of volunteers sent into military service.

Before November 1 Indiana had more than doubled her quota for the regular army as well as for the navy, and enlistments were still coming steadily and increasingly everywhere in the State. In the meantime five regiments of the National Guard have been filled and two regiments of Home Guards are forming and in prospect.

The wonderful record of voluntary enlistments for military service and the fine spirit shown by the selected soldiers from Indiana offer a plain lesson in patriotism and war-time sacrifice to every citizen who remains at home.

While the soldiers are training for the fight, for the battle and the victory that are to make the home folk permanently safe and for all time secure in liberty and American standards, it is up to the home folk to do their parts in every possible way. It is up to each person to ask himself whether he is doing his share at home. Thoughtful patriotism will work out a line of duty and honest patriotism will act in accord with that plain duty.

WE ARE LEARNING

Figures gathered by the United States food administration show in 83 cities of the United States, with a total population of more than 22,000,000, that the volume of garbage collected has been reduced 10 per cent. as compared with the figures for September and October, 1916. In this reduced volume there has been a shrinkage of 36 per cent. in the "richness" or grease taken from the garbage.

These are significant figures. They indicate an appreciation by the American people of the importance and wisdom of thrift. They tell, more eloquently than any other facts, of a patriotic attempt to conform to the suggestions and directions of the food administration, to eliminate waste and particularly to save fats.

The present voluntary regulation of food distribution is an economic experiment, the result of which may have far-reaching significance. For truthfully it has been asserted that food will win the war, and the war must be won. This truth does not detract from the interest economists feel in the undertaking of Mr. Hoover and his assistants to effectively organize for conservation, wholly as a voluntary patriotic movement. Its success ought to weigh heavily in the discussion as to the fitness of a democracy to survive.

Liberty bonds make excellent gifts. What wiser or more useful Christmas present than a United States government pledge bearing four per cent. interest?

The Menace We Failed to Anticipate.

(By State Senator H. E. Negley.)

"Our former Ambassador to Turkey, Mr. Henry Morganthau, who was occupying that post when the war began, reports to our government that in a conversation with the German Ambassador to Turkey shortly after the mobilization of troops by Germany, he was blandly informed by the German that early in July of 1914 a "Grand Council" was called and met in Berlin, composed of the heads of the German Army and Navy and the great financiers of the Empire, and attended by the Kaiser. That at that time it was decided that the long expected "world war" must commence at once. And that at the urgent request of the financiers it was delayed a few weeks so that they might get their financial affairs in proper order to meet the great expenditures which would be necessary. And further, that it was then agreed that after the rest of the world had been subjugated, then the United States of America should be called upon to pay an indemnity of Fifty Billion Dollars. The tax with which to meet this indemnity would have been a fine inheritance for us to leave to our children and our children's children, wouldn't it?"

After the Battle of Manila, and while Admiral Dewey was still in Manila Bay with his fleet, he was visited by a German naval officer by the name of Captain von Goetz. During that visit this German captain said to Admiral Dewey: "In about fifteen years Germany will begin a world war. We shall first attack France, and shall conquer her within six weeks. Russia will be compelled to go in to aid France and she can not mobilize within three months, and in the meantime we will have disposed of France and can whip Russia at our leisure. England can not form an army inside of a year, and we will attend to her after we have finished with Russia. We shall then come to America, not for territory, but we shall probably take Washington, Philadelphia and New York, and exact an indemnity worth while." This is the definite substance of his words, and the war began in just sixteen years from that time.

Do we need any better explanation of why that band of brigands and pirates of both land and sea inaugurated a system of annoyances which they knew must in the end result in our declaring war on them? That is why the Lusitania was sunk with its load of women and children. That is why Bernstorff violated every letter of the code of ethical diplomacy, and deliberately stabbed us in the back while he smiled in our face. That is why Captain von Papen, while accredited to our government as a military attache of the German Embassy, conspired with hundreds of spies, cut-throats and murderers to destroy our railroads, our canals, our factories and our steamships. That is why every insult that could be devised for the baiting of a patient government was indulged in at the expense of the United States. And yet they claim that we are in this war for commercial reasons."

Uncle Sam's Movies.

Among other things that are more or less new to him, your Uncle Sam has gone into the motion picture business. He is doing pretty well at it already, and he is going to be in it big before the war is over.

In order to exercise close censorship over the news of movements and activities of the army and the navy, the government has retained to itself a monopoly of the pictures taken of those forces. It has a number of films all ready for exhibition, and it rents them at a very moderate price. Among those that are now ready to be used for patriotic meetings and the like are:

- "In a Southern Camp."
- "An Officer in the Making."
- "Hoover's Army."
- "Labor's Part in Democracy's War."
- "The Conquest of the Air."

The government films are available for use at patriotic meetings or any sort of gathering at which it is sought to inform the people what the nation is doing in the great war. They are distributed by the Division of Films of the Council of National Defense, of which Louis W. Mack is director. His address is 10 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C.

"America First" in Service to Mankind

Meaning of Work Done By Committee of One Hundred Is Summarized By Mrs. Frank H. Bliss.

"America First" is the slogan of the Committee of One Hundred, which organization assigned Mrs. Frank H. Bliss, assistant to its chairman to represent the body at the great State-wide war conference in Indiana. Mrs. Bliss was asked to speak before the Women's Department Club of Indianapolis while attending the war conference, women's section for Americanization work.

The national committee of one hundred is headed by John Price Jackson; Mrs. Harry M. Bremer is vice chairman and W. W. Spaid, treasurer, with headquarters at the national capital. Harrison H. Wheaton of the United States Bureau of Education is chairman of the executive committee, with which Mrs. Bliss is identified.

The slogan of the national committee of one hundred, "America first," means:

1. First in allegiance of all citizens.
  2. First in common use of the English language.
  3. First in the intelligent conception of the principles upon which our government is founded.
  4. First in the popular appreciation of American standards, ideals and responsibilities of citizenship.
  5. First in the mutual understanding of the many nationalities residing in this country.
  6. First in the efficiency of its citizens in national service.
  7. First in co-operation and unity of action as a nation.
  8. First in righting wrongs; first in liberty without license; first in service to humanity.
- "America first" will help—
1. Instill a genuine allegiance to the United States.
  2. Make English the common language of the country.
  3. Encourage popular appreciation of American standards, ideals, and responsibilities of citizenship.
  4. Promote mutual understanding among the many races residing within our boundaries.
  5. Inspire universal co-operation in national service.
  6. Make a united country.
  7. Make "America first" in a real sense.

Prominent national figures included in the national committee of one hundred include Mary Antin, Jane Addams, Frances Kellogg, Mrs. William C. Storey, Dr. John H. Finley, commissioner of education of the State of New York; Calvin N. Kendall, commissioner of education in New Jersey; Bernard Rothwell, a representative of industry; J. B. Forbes, of the Chicago Association of Commerce; Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Reviews; Louis Hammerling, of the American Association of Foreign Language newspapers.

Greenwood Boys Form Active Sawbuck Club

Six Squads Are Making Fuel of Timber on Farms as a War Emergency Measure.

Thirty Greenwood school boys are enrolled in a Sawbuck club in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, under the supervision of the Indiana State Council of Defense, the purpose being to cut firewood to take the place of coal, thus helping to conserve the fuel supply in the war emergency when the demand for coal in war industries and for war use is in excess of the supply.

On the farm of D. E. DeMott, near Greenwood, a squad of the Sawbuck boys recently spent a Saturday doing their first war work as woodcutters. Ten cords of wood were cut, and six cords were split and corded.

Farmers and woodlot owners who have down timber, tops and timber to be cut into stove-wood are reporting to Superintendent Marshall of the Greenwood schools, and the boys are organized into squads and ready to respond to the war call and make good on their declared purpose. The boys are taking the work on shares or are working for cash pay, the charges being reasonable. Farmers are being asked to supply cross-cut saws and buck saws, the boys providing axes.

The Sawbuck boys get credits for work done in the fuel field toward the acquisition of a United States medal for war service in line of duty with the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

Greenwood boys are formed in six squads, as follows:

First Squad: Raymond Vanarsdale, captain; Robert Spillman, Allen Fisk, Dwaine Law and Maurice Richardson.

Second Squad: Arlington Pitcher, captain; Justin Marshall, Kyle Eccles, Beryl Fisher and Lee Park.

Third Squad: Ray Richey, captain; Arnold Peek, Roscoe Bowen, Lawrence McCool and Marley Roberts.

Fourth Squad: Donald Craft, captain; Phillip Dwyre, Maurice Caple, Albert Adams and Russell Moore.

Fifth Squad: Clarence Watson, captain; Carroll Pitcher, Robert Cring, Arnold Smith and Estle Wilcox.

Sixth Squad: Noble Lyons, captain; Ronald Stanton, David Craft, Leo Conner and Fred Surface.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE WELL ATTENDED.

Over two hundred directors and organizers attended the National Conference of the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve held in Chicago Friday and Saturday, December 7 and 8. The Indiana delegation probably led all other States in number, the following being present:

Dr. George L. MacIntosh, Crawfordsville; J. J. Pettijohn, Indiana University; A. S. Hurrell, Indianapolis; Isaac D. Straus, Ligonier; Frank Heighway, Crown Point; S. G. Engle, George M. Pinneo and R. M. Ladd of Gary; Benjamin Blumberg, Terre Haute; J. C. Brunk and R. L. Donnon, representing the State Y. M. C. A.; and C. B. Fritsche, Indianapolis.

Among those on the program were W. E. Hall, National Director; H. W. Wells, Assistant National Director; Samuel Insull, Chairman, Illinois State Council of Defense; Dean Louis E. Reber, University of Wisconsin; Dr. G. L. MacIntosh, Wabash College; Jefferson C. Smith, Federal State Director of Maine; W. J. Spillman, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture; and E. M. Robinson, International Sec'y Boys' Dept. Y. M. C. A.

Much emphasis was placed on the necessity for giving town and city boys a short intensive course in the rudiments of agriculture before sending them out on farms. Agricultural Training Camps were recommended as offering the best solution to this problem of education.

Reports from the various States offer a splendid endorsement of the Reserve and forecast a big success during the coming season.

Burridge D. Butler, Federal State Director for Illinois, told of how 600 Chicago high school boys, most of whom had never been on a farm before, engaged in agricultural work early last spring, and returned to school again in the fall after having earned over $39,000.00 in wages in addition to their board. Less than three per cent. of the boys sent out failed to make good.

Samuel Insull of Chicago, who farms 3,500 acres, advised the conference that he had instructed his farm manager to fire all his hobo labor, keep only the married men, and that fifty Hyde Park high school boys would supply the additional labor necessary next spring and summer.

Every state director present at the conference praised the splendid performance of boys who worked on farms last summer, and many examples were related of how one group of boys saved a $20,000.00 peach crop; another planted, cultivated and harvested a $25,000.00 potato crop; another picked 15,000 bushels of apples; and of how thousands of boys living in the homes of farmers proved equal to the demands of the hour by supplying the labor necessary to increase production.

A resolution was passed asking President Wilson to proclaim a National Enrollment Week between January 1 and February 17, during which time all States in the Union will compete with each other for honors. According to reports received at the conference, Indiana still leads in point of the number of boys actually enrolled for service.

NEW DIRECTORS APPOINTED.

Replacing directors who have resigned, the following have been appointed:

Dr. Fred Patterson of Decatur, County Director for Adams county.

Milton Richmond of Rising Sun, Director for Ohio county.

A. B. Oswalt, Director for Wabash county.

All county directors are urged to secure the full co-operation of all school authorities, appointing each school superintendent and principal as high school director, and each teacher as Enrolling Officer.

* * * * *

NEW COUNTY DIRECTORS.

Arthur R. Huyette of Bluffton, County Superintendent of schools of Wells county, has been appointed County Director for the Boys' Working Reserve, succeeding O. E. Lesh, who, owing to the press of other business, has resigned.

H. W. Fitting of Monticello has accepted the appointment as County Director for the Reserve in White County, in place of O. E. Ackerson, who has moved to Greene county.

CUT WOOD ON SHARES.

Putnam county farmers are helping to conserve the coal supply by burning wood, and are permitting Greencastle school boys to cut dead and fallen timber for them on shares.

Saw Buck Clubs have been organized in many high schools in the State, and reports indicate that with proper instructions and a little practice boys soon learn the knack of pulling a cross-cut saw through a knotty log. In some sections, wood cutting is almost a lost art, but before the winter is over, the woods in Indiana will echo with the ring of the woodman's axe. As one boy wrote, "Every time I go to the woods, I cannot help think of the old school book picture of Abraham Lincoln splitting fence rails in the pioneer days."

Sacrifice and service must come from every class, creed, party and section.

How about the folks of the boys who volunteered or were called to the colors, left behind them? Inaugurate a calling week in your county and let them feel you appreciate the sacrifice made. Be a soldier pal.

Every man who attempts to obstruct the work of the government, federal or State, in this time of national peril, stands with a bayonet at the back of each boy who is preparing to fight for his country.

Ripley County Has Relief Association

Effort Being Made to Secure One Thousand Monthly Subscriptions to Central Fund.

Several Indiana counties are working on plans for creating and maintaining a central war fund by regular monthly subscriptions paid by citizens of the community who sign an agreement providing for such payments.

It is the purpose in this way to provide for the lesser war relief calls, such as company "mess" funds, comfort kit funds, Belgian, Polish, Armenian and other relief movements, army camp recreational work, the War Library Fund and the like, and to assist in meeting also the periodical calls of the Liberty Loan forces, the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. War Fund.

The undoubted educational and inspirational value of big, red hot, patriotic drives such as those which bring about the wonderful successes attending the sales of war bonds, and the raising of money for Red Cross war work and for the camp activities of the Y. M. C. A. is so plain that most persons in war work agree the campaigns should continue to be made with increasing intensity and effectiveness. These activities are made more than ever necessary by the persistent secret work of enemy agents and propagandists who spread falsehoods and seek by every possible underhand method to hamper and obstruct American war work.

Ripley county citizens are organizing the Ripley County War Relief Association, the movement having been started at Versailles. A drive is now being made to get 1,000 citizens to sign an agreement to give 50 cents a month to a central or county war fund. Ripley county folk plan to maintain such a war chest as can be drawn on at any time for any amount demanded as the county's quota. After 1,000 names have been obtained a mass meeting will be held for organization purposes and the membership will be boosted to 2,000.

Red Cross Fake Traced to Citizen Near Bremen

Slandering gossip attacking the Red Cross is reported by the Culver Citizen as being traced to an individual near Bremen, Ind. According to the story which now is being investigated by the Marshall County Council of Defense and the Federal officers, as well as by the Red Cross Society agents, the suspect peddled a foolish and false story of a mysterious and unnamed woman who had "sewed a $5 gold piece in the collar" of a Red Cross sweater, the sweater being intended for her own son in the army," the said unknown and undiscovered knitter later being asked by still another mystery female to buy the very sweater she, herself, had turned in to the Red Cross.

The absurd falsehood went on to relate that the knitter "turned back the collar of the sweater and there found the $5 gold piece she had knitted into the garment for her son."

For several weeks efforts have been made to trace this ridiculous untruth to some person who could be held to accountability for the slanderous libel on the splendid workers who are in the Red Cross movement. It is understood the suspect in question has been definitely connected with the distribution of the pro-German matter and that he will be asked for the source of the story.

The Red Cross sweaters do not have collars, but are cut low at the neck. Red Cross sweaters are not made for individuals, but go into boxes indiscriminately after careful counting, are sent to headquarters in Indiana, forwarded to Cleveland and on to the eastern headquarters, to be stored, by thousands, later to go forward to camps where they are distributed just as so many bags of sugar would be distributed.

The State Council of Defense is determined to put an end to the treasonable activities of those who traduce war workers.

How about the FOOD PLEDGE you signed? Are you keeping it?

How New War-Savings Stamps Will Help the Thrifty to Save and at the Same Time Lend Assistance to the U. S. Government

The war-savings plan provided for in the last bond act, of September 24, 1917, has been formulated and announced by the Treasury Department and went into operation on Monday, December 3.

The plan puts it easily in reach of every American citizen to save money and at the same time aid the government by supplying it with the sinews of war.

Stamps, which are the government's certificates of indebtedness, are to be sold in two denominations—thrift stamps, which cost 25 cents each, and war-savings stamps, which cost from $4.12 to $4.23 each, according to the month in which they are purchased.

CARD GIVEN EACH PURCHASER.

With the first thrift stamp the purchaser is given a thrift card with spaces for 16 stamps. When 16 thrift stamps have been purchased and affixed the thrift card can be exchanged for a war-saving stamp by paying the difference between the $4 the thrift stamps represent and the current value of a war-savings stamp, which in December, 1917, and January, 1918, will be $4.12, and thereafter 1 cent for each succeeding month during the year 1918.

With the first war-savings stamp obtained by purchase or exchange the owner is given a war-savings certificate containing spaces for 20 war-savings stamps. If the 20 spaces are filled during December, 1917, or January, 1918, the cost to the purchaser will be $4.12 for each stamp, or $82.40 for the full certificate, and on the 1st day of January, 1923, the government will redeem the certificate at $100, giving the holder a net profit of $17.60 for the use of his money.

MAY BE REDEEMED ANY TIME.

Although these investments do not mature until January 1, 1923, provision is made whereby upon 10 days' written notice after January 1, 1918, such certificates will be redeemed by postmasters at their cost to the purchasers plus 1 cent a month on each war-savings stamp on the certificate.

The thrift stamps do not bear interest, but the war-savings stamps bear 4 per cent., compounded quarterly. The certificates will be dated January 2, 1918, and mature January 1, 1923.

Under the plan an amount as small as 25 cents can be invested in a government security, and as soon as $4 has been thus invested an interest-bearing certificate of the United States government can be secured.

ON SALE AT MANY PLACES.

The stamps and certificates can be obtained from post offices, banks, or trust companies, at most railroad stations, stores, factories, and many other public places.

Having the entire wealth of the United States back of them, and being redeemable as above stated, there is no danger of any depreciation in value of the certificates.

Joseph D. Oliver, of South Bend, Ind., has been named chairman of the war-saving movement for Indiana. He will establish headquarters with the Indiana State Council of Defense, at the State House. Every county council in Indiana is asked to nominate a representative citizen to head the movement in the county. Indiana is expected to raise approximately $58,000,000 by this plan, which is in no sense a donation, but a practical saving.

The executive committee with Mr. Oliver in the work includes Will H. Hays of the Indiana State Council of Defense, and Frank E. Hering of South Bend. Mr. Hering, as secretary, has as his helpers R. M. Hutchinson, W. K. Lampport, and F. L. Sims, in charge of speakers, advertising and publicity, as well as the work of organizing the movement in the public schools.

Mr. Oliver has named district chairmen for the State as follows: First, R. B. Enlow, Evansville; Second, R. W. Aiken, Sullivan; Third, Samuel Elsley, New Albany; Fourth, W.

H. O'Brien, Lawrenceburg; Fifth, James S. Royle, Terre Haute; Sixth, E. P. Hawkins, Connersville; Seventh, Stoughton Fletcher, Indianapolis; Frank Ball, Muncie; Ninth, George Dinwiddie, Franfort; Tenth, Walter J. Riley, East Chicago; Eleventh, Frank M. Kistler, Logansport; Twelfth, Samuel Foster, Fort Wayne; Thirteenth, Rome C. Stephenson, South Bend.

The district chairmen, with eight others, form an advisory committee for the State. Dr. Horace Ellis, State superintendent of public instruction, is one member of the advisory committee. Each county is to have a chairman and each county leader is to have his local advisory committee, including the chairman of the County Council of Defense, the county agricultural agent, the county school superintendent, a banker and in the larger counties, city school heads.

The Thirteenth district already is thoroughly organized. The work is spreading rapidly all over the State, the purpose being to raise for war purposes in 1918, through the thrift movement, the sum of $58,000,000 in Indiana. The children especially are interested in the $5 certificates and in the 25-cent thrift stamps.

Prepare Next Year's Garden

Better Success Will Be Had If It Is Plowed and Fertilized Now.

By Mrs. Frank I. Mann, Women's Food Production Committee.

A large part of the success of next year's garden will depend on the preparation given this fall. An ideal location for next year's garden is clover or alfalfa sod, fall plowed. This soil will be loose and mellow and comparatively free from weeds. Garden crops will root deeply in such soil, and so will be injured less by dry weather.

If the garden space is large enough, it pays to rotate the garden, raising clover on half the space for two years, then plowing up the clover on the old garden spot.

If the old garden spot is to be used an application of from ten to twenty loads of manure per acre will be needed to supply fertility. The manure should be fairly well rotted, and should be plowed under in the fall, so that it will be ready for the plants to use early in the spring. Manure is somewhat lacking in phosphorus, and it will pay to add this element in some form—one or two tons of rock phosphate, 1,000 pounds of bone meal, or 500 pounds of acid phosphate per acre.

Old gardens need lime, too. This is best added in the form of ground limestone, four or more tons per acre. Lime is especially needed for beans, peas, spinach and like crops.

The garden should always be plowed in the fall, leaving the ground rough through the winter.

President's Order to Food Administrator Authorizing Fixing of Profit Margins.

The President has issued the following executive order:

I hereby authorize and direct the United States Food Administrator, in prescribing regulations for licenses under section 5 of the act of Congress approved August 10, 1917, entitled "An act to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products and fuel," and in enforcing and carrying into effect, so far as it relates to foods, feeds, and their derivative products, that part of section 5 which reads as follows:

"Whenever the President shall find that any storage charge, commission, profit, or practice of any licensee is unjust, or unreasonable, or discriminatory and unfair, or wasteful, and shall order such licensee, within a reasonable time fixed in the order, to discontinue the same, unless such order, which shall recite the facts found, is revoked or suspended, such licensee shall, within the time prescribed in the order, discontinue such unjust, unreasonable, discriminatory, and unfair storage charge, commission, profit, or practice. The President may, in lieu of any such unjust, unreasonable, discriminatory, and unfair storage charge, commission, profit, or practice, find what is a just, reasonable, nondiscriminatory, and fair storage charge, commission, profit, or practice, and in any proceeding brought in any court such order of the President shall be prima facie evidence."

to find that a just, reasonable, and fair profit is the normal average profit which persons engaged in the same business and place obtained prior to July 1, 1914, under free competitive conditions; to indicate, if he shall see fit to do so, what margin over cost will return such a just, reasonable, and fair profit; and to take such legal steps as are authorized by said act to prohibit the taking of any greater profit. WOODROW WILSON.

Cut Out Senseless "Refreshment" Idea

Straight Three Meals a Day During War Period With Frills Eliminated, is One Saving Scheme.

Food conservation is being religiously preached, and we are being taught that it is a sin to waste even a cabbage leaf. This is all well and good, but nobody seems yet to have organized a systematic attempt to effect a tremendous saving in food by the simple expedient of abolishing a custom of fashion of "serving refreshments" on any and every occasion, in season and out of season.

Whenever a handful of people get together, either for business or pleasure, refreshments have to be brought out and passed around.

In most cases the consumption of food and drink on these occasions is superfluous and a waste, pure and simple. Nobody needs the refreshments—all too often the persons indulging in them are full to repletion already.

A lot of this unnecessary eating is encouraged or practiced for sociability's sake. "People won't come unless you give them something to eat," is the plea, and the magic word "refreshments" will draw some persons to anything.

Well, then, folk who have to be bribed with gustatorial tidbits to perform their duties, social, civic or otherwise, should not be cultivated till they see the error of their ways! Such people are not, cannot be, valuable acquisitions to any social affair or business meeting.

Think of how many tons of flour, sugar, fats and other valuable foods could be saved in six months by the simple expedient of making it a misdemeanor to serve refreshments at receptions, bridge parties and other social functions. And think, too, of the indigestion, temper, crankiness and wasted hours which would be eliminated at the same time.

Every patriotic woman interested in food conservation and thrift should consider this matter and appoint herself a committee of one to make this overdone, wicked and unnecessary practice unfashionable.

Why not make it a matter of social ethics to eat only three meals a day during the war, and make it unfashionable or a breach of etiquette to waste food by serving refreshments at purely social functions?

Entertaining friends at regular and established meals is not, of course, meant to be abolished, but merely superfluous, unnecessary and senseless eating and drinking.—Woman's Home Companion.

Reports indicate that the new winter wheat crop, just planted, is nearly one-fourth larger in area than that planted a year ago.

The visible supply of rye in the United States on October 20, 1917, was 3,454,000 bushels, an increase of more than 90 per cent. over last year.

Exempted Men Join Patriotic Movement

Warrick County Offers Other Counties of Indiana a Practical Course of Procedure.

Warrick county's Council of Defense, Judge Roscoe Kiper, chairman, offers to the other counties of Indiana a suggestion on constructive patriotic lines, for the creation of county organizations of exempted men for work back of the lines.

The idea originated with the exempted men themselves, and was presented to the Warrick Defense Council by George X. Reed, himself an exempted man. Mr. Reed, who is Warrick county agricultural agent, has been made president of the new organization.

The County Council of Defense sent out a call for a meeting of the exempted men of the county, and this meeting was held November 28 at Boonville. The Defense Council's letter, which sets out the reasons for the existence of the exempted men's organization, is as follows.

"You have been TEMPORARILY exempted from military service. This order of exemption does not, in any way, relieve you from the responsibilities and service required of a patriotic citizen by his country.

"While you are not compelled to stand in the trenches with the soldiers of the Republic and fight for the preservation of American ideals and institutions, you are, for that reason, under greater obligation to perform the services required of you at home.

"You have been exempted from only one kind of service which a patriot must perform for his country and as to all the other duties which our common country demands, you are expected to respond with promptness, courage and determination.

"While our soldiers are at the front laying the foundation for a lasting peace, a greater number of soldiers in private life must furnish the weapons and sinews of war. We must be loyal to our country, speak loyalty at all times and compel others to be loyal. Let us all co-operate and lend our very best services to every movement which is being pushed in the interest of a successful war. Every one can do something, can produce something and can say something to help our country's cause and prevent their blood being spilled in vain.

"Sincerely yours,
"Warrick County Council of Defense,
"ROSCOE KIPER, Chairman,
"JOHN B. REED, Secretary."

The following call was sent out by a committee of exempted men along with the letter of the Defense Council:

"We, as exempted men feel that since we have been exempted from direct military services, that we, more so, perhaps, than anyone else, owe every service that we can render to our government here at home. We also feel that if much is to be accomplished it must be through concerted action and this can only be obtained through some sort of organization. The County Council of Defense has asked us to assist in organizing the exempted men in some sort of working unit. A meeting of all exempted men is called to discuss our obligations and duties and take steps toward such an organization Monday, 10:00 o'clock, Nov. 26th.

"We must ever bear in mind that service in this war is of many different kinds and that we are only exempted from carrying a gun, and that only temporarily. Our fullest co-operation in and our sincerest loyalty to any part of the war program here at home is the least that we can give. Of course we realize, too, that any disloyalty on the part of exempted men will not be tolerated. Every exempted man owes it to himself to be present at this meeting and show his loyalty and willingness to help.

Signed:

"GEORGE X. REED,
"MYRL WEBB,
"W. H. WITTMER,
"G. C. WRIGHT,
"R. R. WILSON."

In addition to President Reed, Herbert Bass, a bank cashier of Lynnville, has been made vice president, and Albert Derr of Boonville is secretary. The organization was affected at a big patriotic demonstration, and work on township organizations was immediately started. The exempted men have set out the objects of their organization in the following:

"1. To bring about a closer relationship between the men who have been called for military service and have been exempted for any and all reasons.

"2. To form organizations in each township whereby a wholesome spirit of patriotism will be cultivated and manifested in each community of the county and disloyal and treasonable statements and conduct be discouraged and absolutely prevented.

"3. To form organizations whereby the collection of funds for war and other patriotic service may be accomplished without the unnecessary loss of energy.

"4. To assist in bringing about the conservation of our food supplies.

"5. To encourage a greater production of fuel and food products in the county.

"6. To form organizations by which every necessary work and service for the purpose of winning the war can be accomplished.

"7. To form organizations which will do everything necessary in the several localities of Warrick County to bring about a successful end of the war."

Warmly Housed in Great Army Camps

American Soldiers Defy Winter and Go Ahead With Hardest Military Training.

The beginning of winter finds the work of military training going on at full blast in a hundred camps and stations.

Not far from half of the total number of men training are encamped in the big national army cantonments. In these the United States has sixteen new cities, each as large as Sacramento or New Britain, or Davenport or Macon. Sixteen camps, nearly as big as the cantonments, but not built so durably, are housing the National Guard divisions. More than 250,000 men have joined the regulars since the war broke out. There are seventeen regular army stations and camps being used for the training of these recruits. Seventeen stations are engaged in training men for the navy, and marines are being turned out in three more.

Not all the aviation fields have been finished—but in a dozen of them cool-headed young men are being taught to fight in the air. Nine camps have just rounded off the second increment of officers for the reserve corps. Five medical camps are in operation, and three camps for engineers.

All of the larger camps have been built in the last six months. The biggest of them, the national army cantonments, were built in three months at a total cost of $150,000,000. Only a little over twice as much was required to build the Panama canal—and that took ten years. Something between 600,000,000 and 700,000,000 feet of lumber went into the national army cantonments. The figure for all the army camps is about 1,000,000,000 feet.

In population the camps range from 300 to 47,000. The men in a flying camp may know one another as men know one another in a small college. One of the larger cantonments, on the other hand, contains more men than can be crowded into the Polo grounds or Comiskey park. A good average crowd for a world's series game is 30,000. Such a crowd is enough to swamp a half dozen car lines. All the men in one of the national army cantonments would make a crowd half again as large.

It can be said that no large army of soldiers was ever housed so comfortably before. Four of the cantonments situated farthest north have steam heat. The rest have to put up with hot air systems. But an American army spent a winter at Valley Forge once without even a hot air system.

The sugar that goes to waste in the bottom of American teacups would help to sweeten the life of many a French home.

Christmas candy that requires little or no sugar is a gift to our Allies as well as to the receiver.

"One man at home for every one who goes." Make it your duty to send the one shouldering a musket news of the home community.

The draft is a necessary part of America's war organization. It is essential to the safety of the nation. The man who opposes it is a traitor. In time of war, treason is punishable by death.

Move to Cut Deliveries

Retail Stores Throughout Nation To Be Limited To One Delivery a Day During War.

The following statement is authorized by the Council of National Defense:

One regular delivery a day as a maximum for retail stores throughout the United States, and co-operative delivery systems in all the smaller cities and towns, are now direct objectives of the delivery campaign started some time ago by the commercial economy board of the Council of National Defense. This announcement was made after a conference between the board and representatives of several of the State Councils of Defense.

The board's recommendations have been adopted as a whole or in part in cities with a total population of approximately 16,000,000, and as a result at least 15,000 men called for war service have not had to be replaced from the limited labor supply available for the essential industries. All this, however, has been preliminary. Agents of the State councils and other representatives of the board are now to go over the country town by town and press for the adoption of the entire program.

"We have been content to let the changes proceed by easy stages, because experience was needed," said A. W. Shaw, chairman of the board. "At the outset we were able only to say it was evident that these changes would produce important savings of labor. But now we have actual results to show it. One store, for instance, has saved 24 out of 167 men by adopting the recommendations.

"The savings from co-operative delivery systems are even greater. An agent of the board has made a careful, first-hand study of twenty-one of these systems. They require a total of 207 men, as compared with 659 men required for the individual systems replaced—a saving of 452 men, or 68 per cent.—and the service to the customer is practically everywhere as good as it was before, and in some places better.

"It is now plain that in these two ways—by co-operative systems in the smaller communities and one delivery a day throughout the country—more than 150,000 men can be released to meet the increasing need of workers in agriculture, shipbuilding, munitions making, mining, railroad and the other vital work."

In pursuance of the campaign the board and the section on co-operation with States of the Council of National Defense have arranged to hold conferences here with representatives of all the forty-eight State Councils of Defense. The following State Councils were represented at the first of these conferences: Connecticut, by A. T. Miner, of New London; New York, by Frederic E. Foster, of Albany; Indiana, by F. M. Ayres, of Indianapolis; Missouri, by M. L. Wilkinson, of St. Louis; New Jersey, by Claude H. Anderson, of Newark; District of Columbia, by William H. Baldwin.

McAdoo Urges War Thrift

Secretary McAdoo has issued the following statement:

War savings is an epoch in our national life. Every man, woman and child can now join the growing army that provides the sinews of war, for war-savings stamps make it possible for every loyal citizen to do his part, no matter how small that part may be.

The American people have accepted the challenge of autocracy and have resolved to make the world safe for freedom and democracy. The days of autocracy are numbered, and our men, our industries and our money are marching forward with irresistible force to accomplish that purpose.

Let us remember that dollars buy the finished article that is the product of American labor and American materials, and that American labor and materials are today essential for the making of supplies of all kinds for our army and navy, and that every dollar diverted from the purchase of articles not needed for our health and efficiency helps the Government to that extent to procure things that are essential to win this war.

The war-savings campaign marks the beginning of a new and, I hope, permanent evolution of American life. Self-sacrifice and self-denial have always made real men, and real men are basis of strong nations.

Those of us who help to lay the foundation stone of thrift will be the builders of a structure that will survive through all time, and will be rendering a service of the utmost importance to our flag and country.

Campaign Brings Results

Replies received from the County Councils of Defense in answer to an inquiry sent out by the State Council concerning the condition of the corn crop, indicate that the selection of seed corn has been pushed rapidly:

PIKE COUNTY—"In this county we have been active in bringing the importance of this question to the attention of our farmers who were so fortunate as to have good matured corn. We have had with us representatives from Purdue and have aided them in getting in touch with the proper parties.

"Notwithstanding a loss of a great deal of our river bottom corn, we shall be able not only to supply our people but to assist other counties with good seed."—A. H. Taylor, Chairman, County Council of Defense.

RUSH COUNTY—"Our county has been thoroughly canvassed on the subject of seed corn and our farmers are selecting an unusually large amount for next year's planting on the theory that what is not needed for their own use will be needed in other parts of the country next spring.

"While our crop is not as mature as usual, yet our county can well furnish 5,000 bushels of seed corn beyond our own need for next year. We are urging that this amount at least be saved in excess of our own needs."—A. L. Gray, Chairman, County Council of Defense.

HUNTINGTON COUNTY—"In regard to the corn crop, will say that the matter has been taken care of with reference to the seed corn, and the preserving of the little corn there is for this year through our agent, Mr. Loew."—Peter Maitin, Chairman, County Council of Defense.

CLAY COUNTY—"Our County Agent, Mr. Crow, has written to almost all the corn growers in Clay County, giving the names and addresses of parties in this county having good seed corn."—M. H. Johnson, Chairman, County Council of Defense.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY—"This county has a regularly employed County Agricultural Agent. Several weeks ago a public meeting was held in this city to consider a way of caring for the corn crop and the selection of seed for next year. The County Council of Defense took part in the meeting. Following this, meetings were held at different points over the county and steps taken to care for the corn crop in the best possible manner.

"A great amount of seed has been selected and will be available next year. This crop has been injured considerably by dampness, but the best care of it that is possible is being taken."—Byron R. Russell, Chairman, County Council of Defense.

"Godmothering" of Soldiers Not Officially Sanctioned

"Neither the War Department nor the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense is furnishing names of soldiers for godmothering," says Mrs. Philip Moore, chairman of the health and recreation department of the woman's committee. She says that this practice has not been found to be practicable.

"MORE HARM THAN GOOD."

"While the War Department appreciates deeply the fine spirit in which the women are offering to write to soldiers at the front," says Mrs. Moore, "the experiences of France and England have proven that the plan ultimately works more harm than good. General Siebert has recently issued a statement from France to this effect, showing his marked disapproval of the idea. We receive so many letters asking for the names of soldiers that a statement should be made through the press stating that we are not indorsing the plan. We have sent out to all our State committees a plan of organized work which is being done under the direction of the commission on training camp activities.

"This commission, I understand, has authorized only two agencies to take charge of such questions concerning camp activities at that of 'godmothering.' These are the subcommittees on protective work for girls of the New York Probation and Protective Association, Miss Maud Miner, director, and the 'hostess houses' committee, under proper chaperonage for girls, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York, Miss Catherine Scott, director. Any information concerning this work may be received from either of these sources."

Poultrymen Meet to Increase Product

Indiana One of the Great States of the Union in This Particular, Producing $40,000,000 Worth Annually.

The Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation has called a meeting of Indiana poultrymen for December 20 at 10:30 a. m., State House.

The object of the conference will be to study the needs for a greater egg and poultry production and to outline a program for a state-wide increase drive.

Indiana is one of the few great poultry states of the union, producing $40,000,000 worth of poultry and eggs annually. The demand for meat will be met in a big way if Indiana poultry raisers hatch and rear a large number of chickens this coming year. With little care and attention it will be easy to increase the production of poultry in Indiana 10,000,000 pounds. Every effort should be made to secure this increase and thus enlarge Indiana's contribution toward the food supply of the world.

CAMP RAISING OF VEGETABLES.

The Committee of Food Production and Conservation of the State Council of Defense has received information from Secretary D. F. Houston of the United States Department of Agriculture that the plan advocating the raising of vegetables by the government near divisional camps and cantonments for the national guard and army does not seem feasible to the Department because of the expense of growing such crops when all the equipment and supplies must be purchased and all the work done by hired labor.

It has, therefore, been decided by the War Department to purchase vegetables from those now engaged in the business of vegetable growing. The Quartermaster's office has written each Camp Quartermaster to furnish the growers in the vicinity of the camp the approximate quantity of vegetables that will be required during a given period, and inform them that the government will purchase vegetables after sending out circular proposals and that the award will be given to the grower or firm that offers the vegetables at the lowest prices.

It is believed that this plan will stimulate, during the coming season, the production of the crops most desired in the region of the cantonments.

SALTING SOFT CORN.

"Salting soft corn as a method of saving it has not been thoroughly investigated," said G. I. Christie, State Food Director, "but indications point to the fact that the practice is sound. It is certainly worth a fair trial, and costs but little.

"The Illinois Experiment Station encourages the application of six to eight quarts of salt over every five bushels of corn when placed in the crib.

"Soft corn should be harvested as late as practicable. In harvesting soft corn, the husks and silks should be removed with care and the mouldy and immature ears should be discarded. Good ventilation must be provided. Practice would indicate that cross ventilators should be provided about four feet apart.

"The practice of salting soft corn has not been thoroughly established, but the present emergency will justify a thorough trial."

"The wrongs against which we now array ourselves are no common wrongs. They cut to the very roots of human life.—PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

War Conferences in Every Part of Indiana

Government Requests County and Township Gatherings to Further the Ends of War Program.

Echoes of the successful state-wide war conference of December 13-14 reached the weekly meeting of the Indiana State Council of Defense December 19, when the members of the Council, on motion of Evans Woollen, offered a vote of felicitation and thanks to Chairman Will H. Hays and to the workers who helped make the war conference memorably and notably successful.

Further felicitations followed the word that the Indiana war conference, first of a series of State conferences, was to be the model, in method and organization and in handling, for other state-wide war conferences to follow in other states.

Mr. Hays informed the Defense Council that George Creel of the Committee on Public Information, Washington, had asserted that Indiana war far and away in better shape for organized and effective war work than any other state, and that it was for this reason Mr. Creel made a special effort to break his rule and visit Indiana for the War Conference.

Special thanks were voted by the Defense Council on motion of Frank Wampler to Charles A. Bookwalter and Charles J. Murphy of Indianapolis, who gave their entire time for two days to the handling of the Sousa band, one of the big features of the War Conference.

Mr. Hays said he had sent letters of thanks to many workers who had helped make the big meeting a success, and at his suggestion the names of donors to the Sousa band fund were entered on the records of the Defense Council and of the War Conference. It was announced that copies of the complete report of the War Conference would be ready at the next meeting.

Mrs. Emma Ferguson Ellis of Indianapolis explained to the Council an organization called the Mothers' Correspondence Club, the members of which write to motherless soldiers and sailors. The matter of encouraging the movement in an official way will be the subject of a committee report later to be made.

Chairman Hays announced that following the state-wide War Conference, and acting under the program laid down at Washington, County War Conferences are to be held in Indiana, with speakers sent out from Washington, and with dates arranged and plans supervised by the State Council of Defense. Township War Conferences still later are to be held, the idea being to carry the war message to every corner of the state.

A request from Washington for the co-operation of labor employment agencies of all sorts in supplying man power for war work was referred to the labor section.

The Council took action by resolution calling on the city of Indianapolis and the heads of railroads entering Indianapolis to confer with a view to postponing nonessential work on track elevation until after the war. H. R. Kurrie offered the resolution, and pointed out that track elevation meant the borrowing by roads of $2,000,000, the use of 200 to 300 open cars which are needed for coal, and the employment of 250 to 300 men who might be employed on war work. The open cars, it was suggested, might carry 12,500 tons of coal a week to relieve the fuel shortage.

Full publicity was ordered to be given a warning issued by the National Food Administration to railroad presidents, that I. W. W. agencies were plotting to destroy livestock by mixing chemicals with feed so as to produce symptoms of foot and mouth disease and hog cholera.

Arthur W. Brady was made an advisory explosive inspector, without salary, to serve with the salaried state explosive inspector. This appointment was made at the suggestion of the Council of National Defense.

Employers and workers engaged on government work are to be asked to appear before the State Council of Defense to discuss the question of alleged discrimination against organized skilled workmen.

It was reported by A. E. Reynolds of the shipping committee that Dr. H. E. Barnard of the food administration had been able to get results in connection with the effort to lift the corn and oats embargo, and that it was expected that within a few days the state would be relieved from the evil effects of the embargo which prevents corn shipments into the state from the west. It was shown that stock-feeders must have immediate relief. This embargo was lifted at the direction of the Washington officials the same day.

James L. Keach addressed the Council on the subject of war prices, suggesting that the time had come for the Defense Council members to give serious thought to equalization of prices, with the distributors, public utilities and manufacturers in mind. He referred to the general impression among the people that everything should be cheaper, and declared that the people should be educated to understand that all must share the war burden and cost, with excess war profits taken by the government. Mr. Keach said food prices had been reduced in some cases 25 per cent. Dr. H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator, replied that he was glad to hear of these reductions, as food price reduction was one of the purposes of the Food Administration.

A campaign of education to stimulate and increase coal production was reported to have been projected by the committee on coal production under Will J. Freeman. In his discussion of the plan Mr. Freeman said Indiana coal miners had been losing 14 to 35 per cent. of their time, thus curtailing seriously the coal output.

Through the Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, a message was transmitted urging Indiana hog feeders and farmers to hold their hogs and prevent or relieve a congestion at the Chicago market. The telegram, sent by J. P. Cotton of the meat division of the National Food Administration, reiterated the policy under which the food administration maintains hogs at $15.50.

Fresh hams are to be withheld from the domestic market by Indianapolis packers, according to an agreement reported by Dr. Barnard, the food administrator. Hams are to be cured for export, and are listed with bacon and other fats among the prohibited foods.

Mrs. Carlisle On Conservation.

The Indiana Chairman of the Woman's Section, Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle, advises conservation workers to lay more emphasis on the following points:

"Why corn cannot be shipped."

"Why we must not use lamb and veal but substitute chicken and fish."

Mrs. Carlisle maintains that the question of bacon is one the public does not yet fully understand, namely, that there is a scarcity of pork at the present time in the country. She feels everyone must be reminded that the lambs in a year will be mutton, which we can ship, after they have given us a good crop of wool, which we are so much in need of in this country, and also after an increase in the flock of sheep for next year is assured; and that we must not forget that veal in a short time makes beef.

A Christmas Message to American Women

By Anna Howard Shaw.

As the holiday season approaches the question which confronts us all is "What shall I do about Christmas? Shall I follow my usual plan and present to each of my friends such gifts as I have been in the habit of bestowing; or shall I refrain from doing so this year and expend all that I can afford upon our soldiers and the needy ones across the sea?"

It occurs to me that there are two ways in which we may keep Christmas fresh and green in the memories of our children, and that this, of all the years of our lives, should be a children's Christmas year.

It is our duty not only to "keep the home fires burning," but also to keep the hearts of our household cheerful and drive gloom and depression as far as possible from those who surround our hearth-fires.

The custom of promiscuous Christmas giving as practiced in past years has become a burden to many people who were unable to bear it, and no better time than this will ever present itself for the inauguration of a reform in this direction.

May we not adopt the plainly patriotic as well as common sense position that no adult person should give or receive presents of any sort which are not a real necessity, and that all exchanging should be rigorously discontinued?

In recent years we have robbed Christmas of its true significance, and substituted for the great gift and sacrifice of Him in whose name we observe the day as sacred the unworthy attitude of selfish seeking and receiving.

Shall we not use this Holiday season of 1917 to teach the older and better lesson?

My experience with children since the beginning of the war has revealed the existence of a deep and even passionate patriotism, which longs to manifest itself in service and sacrifice; and there could be no greater use made of this Christmas time than to teach these little ones the sublime lesson of the wonderful joy of giving, which is far greater than that of receiving. Instead of dwelling upon the thought of gifts to be received, we should instill into their open minds the desire to make this season a time when they can serve their country and its Allies and aid in the successful winning of a world peace by uniting with their parents in unselfishly bestowing upon others the gifts (or their equivalent), which in times of peace they have themselves received.

Orphan children, suffering from hunger and cold, who are helpless and homeless in our own and foreign lands, are calling to us for this sacrifice for love of Him who said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

Our children, I know, will respond to this appeal, which is made not only for the sake of those who may be made glad through this sacrifice, but for their own sake.

In the midst of the turmoil and the stress of war, of the discontent and distrust, the hatreds and bitterness, we must use every opportunity to hold sacred the deeper things of the spirit and to keep our children in the atmosphere of the real forces which will ultimately save humanity, and these are Faith, Hope and Love, the only sure foundation upon which rests the permanent peace of individuals or nations.

Then let our committees everywhere throughout the Union do all in their power to aid in teaching the sublime lesson of the Master, that it is better to give than to receive.

Patriotism in Indiana

Jackson County.—Reports recently made on the work of the agricultural classes of the Seymour city schools show that twenty-six school boys in home project work last summer netted more than $3,000 over and above expenses. Arthur Phillips cleared $77.85 from his gardens.

Mrs. Lynn Faulkner has been made chairman and Mrs. T. A. Mott is chairman for publicity of the women's organization which is to enroll the women power of Jackson county for war work. These appointments were made by the County Council of Defense. Mrs. D. A. Kochenour, secretary of the Defense Council, is working on the project for interesting women in government work as stenographers and typists.

Mrs. James Clements of Brownstown is chairman of the Jackson county committee on child welfare named by the Defense Council. A committee for educational propaganda has been formed with Albert L. Walters as chairman, the purpose being to devise special courses for training the young people for useful service in the war.

Jasper County.—Agents of the Jasper County Council of Defense, Protection section, are working on the case of a pastor of a church near Rensselaer, the charge being made that the minister declined to permit workers for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund to address meetings in the church. It is alleged he asserted that his congregation opposed the patriotic meetings, and he worked against the war fund among his people.

J. M. Sausser of the Jasper County Council of Defense has been active in the recruiting of a military company, serving in this work absolutely without pay. A report that Mr. Sausser was being paid for his services in connection with the military organization has been officially refuted by the defense council. Steps were taken at the last meeting of the defense council to give publicity to the facts as to the purposes for which money can be spent by the County Council of Defense, and to make it plain that no money set aside by the county is paid in salary or in any other way to any member of the Defense Council. The men and women of the State and County Councils of Defense serve absolutely without pay and also pay their own expenses while doing war work.

The Jasper County Council of Defense has appropriated $50 for a home economics demonstration. To work in co-operation with the Home Economics Club of Rensselaer Chairman Frank Walsh of the County Defense Council has named the following committee: Ora T. Ross, J. Budman Fleming and George H. McLean. County Agent Learning also was asked to assist in the home demonstration work.

Jay County.—W. T. Metzner of Portland, being reported to the Protection organization of the Jay County Council of Defense for disloyal utterances, was interviewed by John Weller, a representative of the Defense Council, and immediately recanted his former statements and gave out for publication a signed declaration of loyalty to the United States.

T. W. Shimp, chairman of the Jay County Council of Defense, presided at and had an active part in a highly successful corn and hog meeting in Portland, where an organization was formed to stimulate hog production and to handle the corn problem. Committees were named as follows: Brood Sow Committee—W. A. Jones, Pennville; S. R. Claycomb, L. G. Holmes. Pig Committee—A. F. Stultz, S. E. Hudson, C. G. Detamore. Feeds Committee—Charles Baird, H. Spahr, Guy Godfrey, E. N. Haynes.

Jennings County.—The sum of $182.21 was raised by means of a benefit, home talent entertainment at the Jennings theater, North Vernon, to provide a mess fund for the soldiers who have gone to the training camps and into the service from Jennings county. The amount was slightly in excess of the quota asked of Jennings county by the State Council of Defense for the "mess" fund.

The Ramblers' club of North Vernon women has done away with luncheons at social affairs and will knit for soldiers and do Red Cross work in the hours which have been set aside in the season's club program for literary work. The Tuesday club is credited with taking the lead in this patriotic movement.

The Jennings County Council of Defense is working on its Protection organization under instructions from the State Council of Defense, the purpose being to run down pro-German falsehoods and trace to their sources the various treasonable slanders that from time to time are circulated.

Johnson County.—Center Grove high school, one of the first to buy Liberty Loan bonds, used a surplus fund over the cost of the war bonds to buy a flag, the flag being raised with appropriate patriotic ceremonies. Township Trustee Wryck supplied the flag-pole, and the occasion was a great outpouring of the people and a patriotic demonstration.

The Methodist church at Greenwood now displays a service flag bearing nine stars to indicate that nine young men of the congregation are in the military service. The flag was presented to the church by Rev. E. L. Hutchens, pastor. The names of the boys who are with the colors follow: Lawrence Brannaman, Floyd Fisher, John Paul Jones, B. F. Kinnick, Jr., Basil McCartney, Dwight Park, Elmer Parkhurst, Lieut. Oscar Strauss and T. A. Williams.

Knox County.—War Mothers of Knox county sent off Christmas packets to all Knox county soldiers in ample time, the boxes for the men abroad being mailed in mid-November. Eighty comfort kits were sent to those soldiers who have no mothers. More than 800 Christmas boxes were sent forward. Mrs. Jud Robbins baked 2,000 cookies for the Christmas boxes. In this work she was aided by Mrs. Lyle, Mrs. Bruner and Mrs. Henry Hall. December 14 the War Mothers, under the social committee, headed by Mrs. J. L. Bayard, gave a benefit community dance for the Christmas fund.

The Knox County Council of Defense has opened headquarters in Vincennes at 420 Main street. A Red Cross bazaar was held in the headquarters two days last week.

The Vincennes High School Military company has been organized with G. C. Alkman captain, Reynold Judah first lieutenant, Donald Utery second lieutenant, Melvin Schwartz first sergeant, Noble Hedden and Robert Balce sergeants, Maurice Beckes right guide, and Howard Knapp left guide.

Bicknell women of the Red Cross, thirty strong, recently made their second trip to the corn fields, husked corn and put the grain on the market at auction, selling a wagon-load at $1.42 a bushel, or $72 in all. Chickens contributed by farmers were sold for $13.55, all for the Red Cross. One farmer who had agreed to permit the women to husk and take corn from his field, gave the Red Cross a check for $25 in place of the corn. The corn sold was obtained in the field of Judley DeLay and W. T. S. Mason.

Kosciusko County.—Syracuse Red Cross workers recently were highly praised for the quantity and quality of their work in a letter from Charlotte L. Sale at the Fort Wayne headquarters to Mrs. J. H. Bowser, chairman of the Syracuse organization.

Women of the Red Cross in Syracuse gave a big public dinner recently to raise money for the cause, most of the provisions being contributed. The Theatorium recently gave a benefit performance at 8 cents admission and turned over the proceeds, $5.30, to the Red Cross.

The Piercetown Red Cross now has its shop in the public library. Washington township women have taken the lead in knitting for the Kosciusko County Council of Defense. Mrs. Niel Hackett of Piercetown has made a remarkable record as a knitter, delivering two pairs of army socks each week. At the end of November Mrs. Hackett had made 168 pieces of knit goods.

Lagrange County.—Red Cross units at Howe and Lagrange sent fifty Christmas packages to Lagrange county soldiers in France. Mrs. F. J. Duntan has been in charge of the work of providing Christmas boxes for all Lagrange county men in the army and navy.

Young people of Lagrange are to give a dance and card party as the big event of the holiday season, for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Miss Jane Williams, head of the Red Cross work in Lagrange county, recently received from Marietta Fauve at Fort Wayne a letter strongly commending the work of Lagrange county women sent forward to the Red Cross receiving station.

Lake County.—Gary, Hobart, East Chicago and Lowell have been organizing companies of State Militia to take up the duties and emergency functions of the National Guard, which latter organization now is in the Federal service for the war period.

With one war contract amounting to $50,000,000 and calling for a veritable city to house the men employed, steps have been taken to provide adequate and sanitary housing for the new population. The Chamber of Commerce has named on a committee on housing Judge V. S. Reiter, W. J. Whinery and Jesse Wilson.

Hammond has formed a Soldiers and Sailors' Aid Association. Mrs. Thomas Jordan presided at a recent meeting where "Al" Gavit, son of ex-Senator Frank Gavit, was the chief speaker. Young Mr. Gavit has been driving an ambulance in France, and he says he is going back to the front with the American forces. Mr. Gavit is especially urgent in asking that Americans contribute heavily to the Y. M. C. A. for its very important war work.

Jesse Wilson of Hammond has taken charge of the formation of a Patriot League in Lake county to co-operate with the County Council of Defense in stamping out sedition and suppressing disloyalty.

Laporte County.—Preliminary work is being done in Laporte county, at Michigan City, under A. A. Boyd, to push the big thrift campaign,—a movement which is to mean in Indiana war certificate subscriptions amounting to more than $58,500,000 to the war loan, and the enlistment as thrift certificate and thrift stamp purchasers of all patriotic Indiana children. Mr. Boyd started his work with a committee on organization including Judge H. B. Tuthill, Postmaster Henry P. Schaaf, Deputy Postmaster G. R. Hull and Sup't. L. W. Keeler of the Michigan City schools. Mr. Keeler is in charge of publicity for the thrift campaign in his city. The committee is being expanded to take in a large territory.

Seven stars on the service flag of Westville high school tell the story of that school's contribution to the colors. Two additional students have recently enlisted in the Laporte battery in the new Second Indiana Artillery. The Roll of Honor reported by Prof. S. C. Knoll is as follows: James Flood, Ward Wines, Vern Loomis, Dewey Williams, Howard Davidson, John Gill, Harry Keel, Roy Keel and Thomas Keel.

Miami County.—Under the authority of the Miami County Council of Defense and in furtherance of the protection plans of the Indiana State Council of Defense, the Miami County branch of the Indiana Patriot League has been organized with the following officers: President, Dr. W. R. Meeker; first vice-president, H. B. Fox; second vice-president, L. D. Lamm; secretary-treasurer, C. W. J. M. Doyle, Carl Schumeyer, L. D. Chalkley and A. F. King. Cards now are being signed all over the county, the card being a pledge of loyalty to country as well as a declaration of membership in the league.

William Iliff has been put in charge of rounding up the wasted man power or chronic loafer element in Miami county, the work being done under the direction of the Miami County Council of Defense.

Monroe County.—Four football stars, regulars on the Indiana university team, have gone to the colors recently. Lynn Howard, famous fullback, together with Ewert, Risley and Bowser, have responded to the country's call for fighters.

An important patriotic and instructive address was delivered recently by Joseph E. Henley, chairman of the Monroe County Council of Defense in an open meeting under the auspices of the Men's Class of the First Presbyterian church of Bloomington. Mr. Henley dealt with "Germany's Violations of International Law."

Montgomery County.—Under the leadership of Mrs. Mayme Jones, Mrs. Maude Herring and Mrs. Zora Arnold, colored women of Crawfordsville are meeting in an organization of their own and are giving an afternoon each week to Red Cross work.

A recent very successful and stirring patriotic rally at Waynetown was addressed by Capt. Ed. Jackson who recently resigned as secretary of state of Indiana to take a course at the officers' training camp at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, where he received a commission. Captain Jackson aroused tremendous enthusiasm in Montgomery county.

At the suggestion of William Endicott of Crawfordsville, food administrator for Montgomery county, the bakers of Crawfordsville unanimously agreed to observe the war time wheatless and meatless schedule fixed by the National and State Food Administrations.

What Is the Greatest Crime of World War?

The question, "What is the greatest crime committed during the war?" was put by the Spanish review, L'America Latina, to conspicuous men in Europe.

"The torpeding of hospital ships," is the reply of Field Marshal Lord French of Great Britain.

"The declaration of war itself," says Stephen Pichon, French minister of foreign affairs. "Among so many iniquities that have been perpetrated since," he adds, "I renounce making a choice."

"The great crime of Rheims, the abominable destruction of the cathedral, is the one that makes bleed most my heart of a Frenchman and an artist, but can one establish a hierarchy of crimes of the barbarians?" replied Auguste Rodin, the sculptor.

"The murder of sailors whose vessels had been torpedoed is the most atrocious act committed during the war," in the opinion of Sir W. H. Dunn, formerly lord mayor of London.

"Politically, the greatest crime committed during the war is the violation of the neutrality of Belgium by those who had sworn to defend it," says Mgr. Baudrillart, vicar general of the Catholic Institute of Paris. "Morally, one is embarrassed to choose among so many atrocities," he adds. "The worst crime in my eyes is the re-establishing of slavery by the Germans."

Signor Vicente Blasco Ibanez replied: "The greater crime of intellectual Germany consisted in the troubling of the course of human thought and the proclaiming of the superiority of war over justice. All the atrocities of the Germans against men and things are only the material consequence of scientific barbarity."

The massacre and deportation of hundreds of thousands of innocent Armenians while Germany, protector and ally of Turkey, gave a tacit consent by its attitude, is considered as "the most gigantic crime of the war" by Viscount James Bryce, while he says "the most abject crime of the war thus far is that of the German government carrying off into slavery hundreds of young French and Belgian girls and thousands of Belgian laborers, obliging them to work against their own unfortunate country ruined by the invasion."

Alfred Capus, editor of the Figaro, is also of opinion that "the most execrable crime of the Germans was the deportation of French families from Lille."

Maitre Edouard Clunet, the French authority on international law, regards as the greatest of Germany's crimes "the ruin of the moral foundation of international relations by setting up as a principle the right of the strongest to violate pledged faith as may accord with his interest."

"The war itself is the most atrocious act," says Signor Gomez Carillo, the Spanish writer and journalist. "No one can forget that it is a German war, prepared by the Germans. Every one says so and the horror, the cruelty, the murder, the pillage, and assassination say so also."

2,000,000 Boys for Working Reserve

Directors and Others Hear Authoritative Message on Need of This Labor to Win War.

Directors attending the war conference in Indianapolis last week, who were fortunate enough to hear the message brought from Washington by H. W. Wells, Associate National Director of the United States Boys' Working Reserves, left impressed with the serious importance of the service they are rendering and of the tremendous responsibility involved.

Pointing out that with Germany and Austria making war more vigorously than ever and with America and the allies determined to accept no peace until Germany gives up her ambitions to become dictator of the world, Mr. Wells said we are confronted with the inevitable conclusion that we are up against a long war and will find it necessary to use every ounce of power we possess and draw on our last resource.

"To fight this war successfully means that we, who remain at home, must organize every single resource, man-power, woman-power, boy-power and material power and bring all to the point most vitally needed in order that our agricultural forces, industrial plants and transportation organizations may produce, transport and deliver food, munitions and equipment, cargo vessels, battleships and torpedo boat destroyers, aeroplanes, guns and shells, ambulances, Red Cross supplies and hospital units, when and where needed, instantly on demand, by our army and navy, by the armies of our allies and by the suffering, destitute civilians of Europe.

TEN MILLION MEN IN WAR WORK.

"The first step in this organization means that before we will have been at war many months ten million men will have been withdrawn from their usual pursuits in life, either for military service, or to engage in the production of the millions of tons of munitions of war, equipment, aeroplanes, cargo and naval vessels, etc. It further means that the higher wages offered by factories in cities will prove irresistible to large numbers of men engaged in agricultural pursuits. Somebody must replace this labor which will be withdrawn, and with the exception of women, the only available supply, particularly for work on farms, is to be derived from the boys 16 to 21 years of age who are not already employed permanently in productive work.

"The national census reveals that there are five million boys between the ages of 16 and 21 years in the United States. About two million of these boys are not permanently employed, that is, attend school in winter, and therefore are available for productive work in the summer. This is the present goal of the Reserve. Indiana's quota is 60,000. To date less than 10,000 have been enrolled in this state. Therefore, to enroll these boys for service on farms or in essential industries is a serious problem, but it must be done, for the slogan from now on is "not an idle boy in America."

TREMENDOUS RESPONSIBILITY.

"On you men rests a tremendous responsibility. How you mobilize these boys, how you direct their efforts, may determine whether we will win this war. It may be that the thousands of tons of food more that these boys produce may turn the tide in favor of the allies; it may be that by reason of the fact that these boys are replacing the men who leave their normal activities to work on ships, that these very same ships may carry the last rounds of ammunition to Europe that may win the last battle for American troops; it may be that by releasing men, these boys may indirectly construct enough aeroplanes to enable American troops to achieve ultimate victory. Therefore this conference, which is attended by Reserve officers, educators and others in close touch with these boys, is tremendously important.

"The quality of your plans, the wisdom of your decisions and the spirit in which you go forth from this conference to your respective communities may determine whether or not America of the future is to be independent, and it may determine whether our flag continues to be truly the emblem of democracy."

EDUCATION MUST BE SAFEGUARDED.

Mr. Wells emphasized the necessity for safeguarding the education of boys who are attending school, but stated that it is apparent to those who have made a careful study of the situation, that during the planting and harvest seasons, it will be necessary, possibly this year and surely next year, to release boys from school for short periods of time for emergency service. However, such release from school should be limited to boys who have maintained a high standing in their studies, and it is insisted that such boys return to school as soon as the emergency is over. To provide special instruction for such boys to enable them to keep up with their classes is a serious problem and demands the full co-operation of all educators.

In conclusion, Mr. Wells said that the Reserve is to be congratulated on having as its National Director in the United States Department of Labor in Washington, W. E. Hall, who is president of the National Federation of Boys' Clubs, and is perhaps as much interested in boy welfare as any man in the country. Mr. Hall and those connected with the National Headquarters and the state directors as well, appreciate fully that the education of the youth of America must not be neglected, and that the activities of the Reserve must be so controlled as to interfere with the regular school program as little as possible.

CHICAGO BOYS MAKE FINE RECORD.

Dudley G. Hays, of the Chicago Board of Education, related how 700 Chicago High School boys, who are members of the Boys' Working Reserve, were placed on farms last spring, and gave the following statistics:

Incomplete reports from over 600 boys show that each boy, on an average, worked ninety days.

Average wages $25.00 per month and board.

Total earnings, over $42,000 and board.

Most of the farmers for whom the boys worked requested them to come back next season and bring more boys with them. In almost every instance, boys made themselves a part of the social organization in the community in which they worked. These boys were placed with farmers through the co-operation of bankers, mayors and county agricultural agents, all of whom aided in looking after the welfare of the boys after they were placed. The following suggestions were made:

"Send only hand-picked boys to farmers. Don't send weak boys. Cigarette smokers are objectionable, because of the antipathy of the average farmer toward a cigarette smoker, and because the carelessness of one boy might cause a fire which might destroy thousands of dollars' worth of property and crops. Impress on boys that farm work is hard, and that the employment in which they are about to engage is a real test of patriotism. They must not give up when tired, but must catch their second wind and keep plugging at the job."

Mr. Hays concluded by stating that the average high school boy from the city, because of his varied experience in human affairs, can be relied upon to stand up for himself, and look after his own rights. Not a single Chicago boy, so far as he knew, who worked on a farm last summer failed to be benefited both physically and spiritually.

THE CALL FOR RETIRED FARMERS.

George L. MacIntosh, President of Wabash College, offered the suggestion that not only must our boys work next summer, but they must have instruction and direction by competent persons. This is a responsibility which must be borne in part by retired farmers, many of whom are found in every county seat and small city. It will be fashionable next summer for these retired farmers to get a "patriotic color" on their hands, arms and faces.

The farmer who, because his son has left to join the military forces, throws up his hands and says he will raise only enough for himself and quit, will be looked on with suspicion. We must create such a strong public sentiment against the farmer who will not make an honest effort to increase his production, that he will feel uncomfortable in the presence of his neighbors, who, having made as big a sacrifice as he has, add to their patriotic effort by training college and high school boys to replace the older men who have gone to war, and by utilizing this labor, increase food production.

AGRICULTURAL CLASSES PROPOSED.

Taking up the problem of training the town and city boy for agricultural service, Dean Stanley Coulter of Purdue University proposed that through the co-operation of county agents, county superintendents of schools, trained agricultural teachers, retired farmers and local active farmers, agricultural classes should be established in each county of the state during the month of January. These classes would serve to teach the boys the nomenclature of farm life, and the following practical instructions could be given:

1. How to manage a team and take care of horses.
2. How to adjust harness, and pad a collar on a sore neck.
3. Through the co-operation of a local implement dealer, get the use of warehouse and familiarize boys with farm implements and machinery.
4. How to feed and milk cows.
5. Familiarize them with small farm tools, such as axe, saw, hammer, mattock, hoe, etc.
6. In some instances instruction in the care and use of farm motors and tractors.
7. Selection and preparation of seeds.
8. Attitude of the boy toward the farmer.

Professor Coulter said that it should be made the duty of each County Council of Defense and County Director of the Reserve to secure a real live man full of energy to gather together the various men who can contribute toward the success of such an agricultural class, and furnish instruction at least one night a week and all day each Saturday.

SERVICE THE MEASURE OF A MAN.

In discussing the problem of the County Director, Edgar D. Maple, County Director for Sullivan county, stated that the Kaiser's best help-mates today are those who sit around and have nothing to do but criticize the government and discuss how it ought to run the war. We must render service and sacrifice—first, because we love our country, and second and above all, because today "service is the only measure of a man." It is easy to enroll the boy if you are willing to work, and if you select enrolling officers who understand and are interested in boys. It is the duty of directors and enrolling officers to neutralize all false reports regarding the plan and purpose of the Reserve by personally calling on those parents who refuse to consent to their sons' enrollment.

MORAL WELFARE OF BOYS.

Following a discussion of plans for placing town and city boys in homes of farmers, it was unanimously agreed by those present that the homes of all farmers applying for these boys should be recommended by some competent local citizen or committee before the boy is placed. It was suggested that it might be well to appoint in each township a committee of three or more on "Inspection, Placement and Welfare," such committee to be selected from any of the following—a physician, an educator, a mother of boys, a boy leader, a local banker, a county agricultural agent.

The chairman appointed the following committee to suggest proper county and township committees on Inspection, Placement and Welfare:

Charles R. Lane, Fort Wayne, Ind., chairman; Edgar D. Maple, Sullivan, Ind.; Paul Turk, Terre Haute, Ind.

SCHOOL AUTHORITIES ACTIVE.

In conclusion Mr. Straus called attention to the fact that much of the success of the Reserve in Indiana so far is directly due to the enthusiastic support rendered by the educators of the State and that it is hoped that each school superintendent and high school principal will accept the

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

INDIANA VETERAN FUND.

Indiana was forehanded in the work of crop stimulation in advance of the great war emergency. Governor Goodrich urged the people of the State to provide a larger acreage of essential cereals together with intensive farming for largely enhanced yields, all with a view to providing more and more adequately to meet the extraordinary needs of the world at war.

The wisdom of this counsel and of the action that ensued has been proved every day since the United States has been in the war. The entire nation came to Indiana for an example and all have profited by that early and timely example.

Indiana continues to be foresighted and forehanded in other war work. In enlistments, in support of all war campaigns for funds, in organizing the selected army, and in every other way, Indiana leads and persists in leading. This leadership includes the organization work necessary to the advancement of war activities and to the stamping out of enemy influences.

Governor Goodrich now has well under way what is known as the Governor's Indiana Veteran Fund. This fund is being raised under the direction of the Governor's military staff. It is to be used for the benefit of Indiana soldiers who return from the battle front to be restored to civil life and usefulness. The plan is based on the experience of the British and French and the work is to be done along lines indicated by facts now being gathered out of French and British experience.

SOLDIERS SET AN EXAMPLE.

American soldiers set a fine example of practical loyalty to the flag. Not only do they give their bodies and their every energy to the American cause in the war, but they do their part intelligently and patriotically in many other ways.

Subscriptions to the second Liberty loan in the military establishment of the United States reached a total of $89,903,300. Think of the personal sacrifice already being made by the soldier and then consider this fact: The American army took $76.86 per man of the war loan, the soldiers giving their incomes as readily as they offer their lives.

There is a wonderful stimulus to home patriotism in this proof of whole-hearted devotion given in the training camps and at the front. The showing of the soldiers is a stern rebuke to slackers and shirks behind the lines. When it is shown that almost 70 per cent. of the army helped put over the Liberty loan, it is reasonable to inquire what the civilian population did for the same war enterprise. Nothing the home folk can do can surpass the double duty performed with such unselfishness by those soldiers who have bought war bonds while at the same time going forward to the fight with the nation's colors flying gloriously overhead. It is up to the civil population to exert every energy in order that the home showing shall be a proper subject for pride and gratification. Those who remain behind the lines must strive with all their might to keep pace with the men who have gone out to fight the country's battles.

That great good will follow the State-wide war conference was the unanimous opinion of the members of the Indiana State Council of Defense, who staged the affair. The success of the conference has been published abroad and requests have come into the headquarters of the State Council for copies of the program and reports of the mass and sectional meetings which were arranged for furthering the war program. Other States are arranging conferences to be held during the next two months and, according to representatives of the federal food and fuel administrations and the Council of National Defense, Indiana has set a high mark for an example.

"Loyal and Disloyal Restaurants" is the title of a conspicuous box heading over an article in the Ft. Wayne News, which gives the names and locations of restaurants that are and are not observing the regulations of the United States food administration. The Indiana State Council of Defense commends the plan and believes that the pressure of public opinion as created by such publicity will do more than anything else to effect the economies the government finds essential to a successful prosecution of the war.

Rushville Public Schools
Making Patriotic Record

Rushville school girls and boys are making a remarkable record for patriotic activities, according to Hortense Tapp Moore of Rockville, who has had occasion to observe war work in homes and schools in the course of her service as an Emergency Home Demonstrating Agent for the women's section of the State Council of Defense.

Thirty-seven Rushville high school boys are pledged each to raise $10 by his own efforts for the Y. M. C. A. War Fund. The sophomores bought a large flag for the assembly room. A class of girls knits sweaters and scarfs for soldiers and sailors, remaining after school hours to do the work.

One hundred girls have organized as "Y. M. C. A. Backers," and all are doing war work. The girls in the Junior High School knit during the boys' manual training period. Cooking classes are larger than usual, and the grades are demanding domestic science. Domestic science teachers in Rushville and elsewhere over the state are becoming the most important of all the school forces, and instead of being assigned to teach other branches in their spare time, they now are being overworked in an attempt to handle the large increase in the number of girls who demand instruction in conservation and on practical lines of home work.

Pleasure as Usual
Handicaps the ArmyFrank A. Vanderlip Voices Protest Against Spending of Money for Non-Essentials.

"We are tampering with the equipment of the American army when we go on with 'pleasure as usual,'" declares Frank A. Vanderlip, chairman of the National War Savings Committee.

"We must realize our personal responsibility in expenditures," said Mr. Vanderlip. "It is no longer a question of our buying the things we can afford, but it is that the nation can't afford to have us buy the things we want. Every dollar we spend for non-essentials hires labor and consumes materials, gets in the way of the government, slows down progress and is an ally of the enemy."

"The government has been planning to spend money on a basis of one billion a month. In October it could spend only $475,000,000 and in November only a little over half a billion. The money is there and the contracts are let but the man-power—the industrial force—couldn't be commanded because you and I had commanded it to do something else. Our dollars were competing with the government to buy labor and to buy materials."

"There is more to be accomplished by the sale of war savings certificates than the raising of two billions of dollars. Thirty million people will own the certificates and the plan, if successful, will teach thrift—will teach a lesson of personal economy that America has greatly needed. We are a spendthrift people sadly in need of such a lesson. And with it will come a lesson in patriotism—a lesson that would have come in any event and might have come in ways more distressing."

"The thrift propaganda has in it the means of letting everyone win the war. Victory is not up to the army. It is not up to the government. It is up to you and me through our personal responsibility for our expenditures. The war savings plan is not designed simply to carry the lesson of economy to people of humble means. It is for the people of great means who have even more need of learning the lesson of economy."

"If we can show Germany that 30 million people are prompt and willing to sacrifice to win it will be your victory, and a victory that, through its weakening influence on the enemy, will save thousands of lives in battle. And it will make 30 million of us better citizens."

America's Purposes in Waging Battle
Stated by President Wilson.

"I believe that I speak for the people when I say two things: First, that this intolerable thing of which the masters of Germany have shown us the ugly face, this menace of combined intrigue and force which we now see so clearly as the German power, a thing without conscience or honor or capacity for covenanted peace, must be crushed, and, if it not be utterly brought to an end, at least shut out from the friendly intercourse of the nations; and, second, that when this thing and its power are indeed defeated and the time comes that we can discuss peace—when the German people have spokesmen whose word we can believe and when those spokesmen are ready in the name of their people to accept the common judgment of the nations as to what shall henceforth be the basis of law and of covenant for the life of the world—we shall be willing and glad to pay the full price of peace and pay it ungrudgingly. We know what that price will be. It will be full, impartial justice—justice done at every point and to every nation that the final settlement must affect, our enemies as well as our friends."

Entire Defense Program Covered in Big State War Conference

"Pray extend my warmest greetings to the conference and express to them my confidence that it will redound to the benefit of the whole nation."
—Woodrow Wilson."

The above telegram, although received too late to be read to either of the mass meetings during the Indiana State-wide conference, December 13 and 14, came to Will H. Hays as an indication of the President's interest in the great gathering of war workers in the Hoosier capital.

Representatives of the federal administration, including Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States; George Creel, chairman of the committee on public information; Arthur E. Bestor, Dr. J. A. B. Sherer and others shared with Governor James P. Goodrich and the members of the Indiana State Council the satisfaction that attended a successful two days' meeting.

The Indiana conference was the first in the country. Those in charge of the sectional activities of the Council of National Defense with one accord declared the conference had served as a model for all other States and the general plan will be recommended to the Councils of the nation.

The conference opened with a mass meeting in Tomlinson Hall, following a patriotic concert by the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Marine Band of 300 pieces, directed by John Philip Sousa himself, the greatest bandmaster of the world. This feature served to arouse a deep sense of patriotism that was sustained until the close of the conference late Friday night. Every County Council in Indiana was represented, some by more than forty active war workers and all of them returned with a fuller knowledge of what is expected of them by the federal government, and a broader conception of the duties of the civilian population in the struggle against the central empires of Europe for the freedom of the world.

CONGRESSMAN MEDILL McCORMICK AND BISHOP WILLIAMS FROM BATTLE FRONT.

Governor James P. Goodrich presided at the opening session of the conference, a mass meeting in Tomlinson Hall at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Governor Goodrich stated the purpose of the conference and called upon the Rev. John Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame University, to invoke Divine blessing.

Medill McCormick, congressman-at-large of Illinois, who has just returned from the French battle front, spoke at the opening mass meeting in part as follows:

"There is a great deal which you must want to know that I cannot tell you. There are many things important, of intense human interest of which I am ignorant, because I traveled from capital to capital, and from front to front; because I went from statesman to general and from general to statesman with one pre-occupation: 'What must we do to win this war in the shortest possible time and with the smallest possible loss of life?' There are not many men, even in Europe, I found, who have thought of this, to me the whole problem, in terms at once general and definite. But among the few most responsible statesmen, among the few generals of real distinction which the war has produced, I found a general agreement that CANNON AND COALITION are essential to success; that time is the essence of victory."

"Heavy guns in this war are what the steam shovel was to Panama. When the French company under DeLesseps sought to pierce the Isthmus with picks, shovels and petty machinery, men died by thousands beside the scratched tropic hillsides. So died the men who fought at Verdun and on the Marne, because they had no weapons equal to the task before them. Now we know advances can be made and victories can be won with little loss when the armies advancing have their ways blazed for them by the fire of thousands of cannon."

"Lloyd George has spoken of the cavalry of the air. I would not underestimate the significance of air craft, but they are only the servants of the great guns, guns which are the masters of modern battles, and the Germans are unable to summon reserves to hold the French or the British. As yet they have been able to bring from the Russian front only enough to drive into Italy. They preferred that use of their forces to an effort to stop the resistless advance of the British and French armies."

"The tide has turned. By ever so little, perhaps, but the tide has turned. There may be back washes when the Germans bring still more divisions and more guns from the Russian front, when they add to their batteries in France and Flanders the cannon which they bought from Russian traitors during the period of fraternization. The tide has turned. It rests with us to see that it does not ebb again, but flows resistlessly to the full flood of victory."

"Men we must send, but still more urgently must we send guns, weapons to our friends, that they may defend themselves; that they may win victories while they await our coming."

"If we would do our part we must call to the Councils of the nation the greatest men in the Union, without reference to past rancors, without regard to differences of faith or faction."

RED CROSS IMPORTANT, TOO.

Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Episcopal diocese of Michigan, who represented the American Red Cross Society in an inspection of the French front, followed Congressman McCormick.

Bishop Williams told in detail the great work the Red Cross has done and is doing and asserted that the presence of the organization on the field of war is as essential to the success of the allies against the central empires as are big cannon and munition of war.

"The service of the Red Cross is absolutely vital to the winning of the war," said Bishop Williams. "It is as necessary as guns. The wounded and the helpless must be cared for. France must be relieved of the burden of economic refuse which the Germans have thrust back upon them to break the nation. Because of what we have done there has been a reversal of attitude toward us in France. When we were neutral they could not understand that political neutrality had any bearing on a fight for everlasting right."

"The Red Cross stands for the service of holding up the spirit and the heart of France as she bends but never breaks under the greatest burden any nation has ever known."

"Who can estimate the value to the morale of an army the departure of soldiers back to the trenches, warmed, clean and with a friendly hand-clasp?"

Owing to the delay in the arrival of the Washington representative of the Council of National Defense, John H. Witherbotham, chief of the Western division of the section of co-operation with States, voiced the following expression:

"It is my pleasure to say for the National Council that we appreciate the efforts of the splendid body of men and women in your State Council of Defense. They are surpassed by none in the Union. I beseech you, in the name of the national government, to stand behind them to back up their efforts in order that they may carry out the great work they have begun—and only begun in your State."

CONSERVATION OF FOOD.

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford University, chief of the conservation work of the national food administration, said in part:

"The whole burden of supplying the defenders on the western German front is upon our shoulders and if we fail there will be a new battle line from Portland, Maine, to Savannah."

"Twelve million American families have signed cards pledging observance of conservation regulations. If they all do it we will have whipped our enemies. We must send both bread and blood and the more bread the less blood."

FORMER GOVERNOR RALSTON DECLARES MEN NOT IN ACCORD MUST GO.

Samuel M. Ralston, former Governor, presided at the night meeting of the conference and said:

"Indiana assures all the world beyond its borders that its citizens propose to do their share toward making the world safe for democracy. The man who is not in accord with us must go. Let us then complete our might to make public opinion so strong that no man dare to raise a whisper against the flag of our nation. It is your duty and my duty to see that no man is long at large in this country who favors firing upon our boys from the rear. We are not going to take any half way ground and the man who is not with us in this fight had better be out of the nation's borders and the sooner he gets out the better it will be for his health."

Portraits of distinguished citizens in the history of Indiana were projected upon a screen at this juncture, adding to the historic and patriotic significance of the meeting.

Lieutenant Paul Perigord of the French army said in part:

"Your land has been invaded. You have been told absolutely that you could raise an army of one million men by snapping your fingers. You could raise ten million men, but ten million men are a crowd, not an army, and crowds are quickly mowed down with machine guns. Had you not come into this war you could no longer have taught your children that this is the land of the free and the home of the brave. Be proud you have been called to share this burden with us. You are not only fighting for your own honor and independence, but for the great principle that right shall control might, and I call upon Germans in this country not to be slackers, but to volunteer at the first chance if they love their brothers and would help ultimately to bring salvation and honor to the German people."

COUNCIL'S EFFECT BENEFICIAL.

County Councils of Defense heard a statement from Dr. J. A. B. Sherer, representing the Council of National Defense, telling chairmen and other members of County Councils of Defense of the work that is being done over the country at the suggestion of the National Council.

"I believe the State Council will have an effect for splendid good far beyond the war," he said.

"The encouragement of thrift, conservation and personal sacrifice is noticeable and will become more so as the plans work out."

"The greatest problem," Mr. Sherer said, "is the emergency employment. County Councils everywhere must assist in supplying the skilled labor for emergency war industries if they would be most effective."

TO SILENCE TRAITORS.

Will H. Hays, chairman of the State Council, urged the County Councils to endeavor particularly to silence traitorous utterances and point out to regularly constituted officers of the law those found guilty of any unpatriotic action.

Franklin W. Fort of the Federal Food Administration described the need of conserving food, told of the shortage in Europe and impressed the Council of the importance of their observing all food regulations.

TO HELP BOYS' RESERVE.

At the meeting of the educational section of the Indiana State Council a resolution was adopted pledging the educators to the support of the purpose of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which is to supply in part the labor necessary for adequate crop production and industrial efficiency, jeopardized by the withdrawal of men for service in the army.

The section also endorsed the junior Red Cross and the sale of war certificates and high school patriotic leagues, all intended for the organized support of war activity.

D. B. Waldo, president of the Michigan State Normal School, and W. H. Wells, associate national director of the Boys' Reserve, spoke at this section.

TRANSPORTATION AND FUEL.

E. B. Leach, deputy fuel administrator of Ohio, and Earl Dean Howard, deputy administrator for Illinois, join with E. I. Lewis, chairman of the Indiana State Public Service Commission, in the opinion that transportation almost exclusively is the key of the solution of the fuel situation.

Fifty fuel administrators join in the resolution pledging support to the national administration in co-operating to meet the present demands.

CARING FOR THE DISABLED.

The importance of organizing to provide for those who will be mentally and physically disabled as a result of the great war was emphasized by Dr. Frankwood E. Williams, associate medical director national committee for mental hygiene, New York City, who addressed a representative meeting of physicians of Indiana.

Major John D. McLain of the Surgeon-General's office, praised the plan of organizing medical advisory boards, which work in Indiana is under the direction of Dr. J. R. Eastman.

REDUCING FEEBLEMINDEDNESS.

Dr. Sidney D. Wilgus of Rockford, Ill., representing the national committee on mental hygiene, advocated county clinics as one of the methods of reducing the spread of feeble-mindedness, after President W. L. Bryan of Indiana University had declared in favor of a State survey of the feeble-minded in order that plans for their betterment might be intelligently considered. W. C. Duncan of Columbus urged that Indiana make better provision for epileptic girls and women.

DEVELOPMENT OF THRIFT.

The great assistance school children can render the government in the crisis is the development of a spirit of thrift in the purchase of war savings certificates was pointed out by Joseph H. Oliver, Indiana chairman, who will distribute $58,300,000 worth of these "baby bonds" in the State. The certificates, which will be on sale at every postoffice, will be a special opportunity for children and wage earners to do their bit.

CHURCHES ARE ALL LOYAL.

Unqualified loyalty to the government and support in its prosecution were pledged by representative church people of Indiana in a meeting that embraced many sects. Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, president of the Rochester Theological Seminary, Rochester, N. Y., told of how the church has been and will continue to be of service to the men and boys in the service of the nation through the Y. M. C. A., of which work he has been the national head.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"Inasmuch as the present war in its last analysis is a titanic struggle between the champions of right on the one hand and the champions of the philosophy that might makes right on the other, and

"Inasmuch as our government, in its action in prosecuting the war, stands unqualifiedly for the right, and

"Inasmuch as the church is the great agency appointed by God to culture the spirit of allegiance to the right in the world, be it hereby

"Resolved, That the church pledges its unqualified loyalty and support to the government of these United States to the end of the war, agreeing to mobilize and conserve all of its forces, material and spiritual, to the country's aid as it may be called upon to do so.

"That in the present serious shortage of food the church calls upon its members everywhere to co-operate with the government in its plan for food conservation.

"That because the people of this country are handicapped in their fight by that other great enemy of right—strong drink—the church registers its conviction that the prohibition of the liquor traffic now is an imperative necessity for winning the war and most fully endorses the proposed amendment to the national constitution now pending and also advocates immediate war prohibition.

"That the attention of the people be called to the fact that in these days when so many institutions are suffering, the life and activity of the church should itself be strengthened and that as never before the church recognizes its specific mission for the emphasis of spiritual value. And that while we recognize the necessity of economy in the use of fuel and favor such union in services as may seem legitimate, yet we should deplore any curtailment of church services and activities that would tend to lessen the efficiency of the church.

"That we recommend the careful regulation of all amusement places so as to conserve fuel supplies, especially where such places are conducted in violation of the existing law.

"That we believe the service which the churches may give in maintaining correspondence with the boys in the camps and at the front cannot be too strongly emphasized, and we heartily approve of the displaying of service flags in the churches and Sunday-schools and the placing of honor rolls conspicuously, and that we recognize the great value of the organized agencies for the religious and social work among the soldiers.

"That the delegates of this assembly desire to express their sincere appreciation for the use of the Meridian Street M. E. Church for the session of this conference and also to thank the press of the city of Indianapolis for reporting the conference meetings and the State Council of Defense for arranging meetings."

EDITORS PLEDGED TO THE WAR.

Editors of the State, through Harry J. Martin, president of the Republican Editorial Association, and publisher of the Martinsville Reporter, and Henry B. Wilson, president of the Democratic Editorial Association, and publisher of the Delphi Citizen-Times, went on record as ready and willing to support the government to the limit in its efforts to save humanity from a military despotism. More than two hundred publishers and publicists heard George Ade and Will H. Hays, their hosts, appeal to their patriotism, after thanking them for the co-operation they had shown to date. Dr. J. A. B. Sherer paid a high tribute to the effectiveness of Indiana war publicity.

George Creel, chairman of the committee on public information, who arrived too late to participate in the program of the afternoon, later entertained an informal gathering of newspaper workers and friends, saying in part:

"Despite its infancy many legends have sprung up around the committee on public information. Some are due to misunderstanding, some to anger, and others to malice. They have endured because there was not time either to justify or to explain.

"Appointed in the very first days of war, when thought concerned itself with the plan and not the detail, the committee came into being with functions almost as indeterminate as its powers. The job was as little or as large as one chose to make it, and since the hour commanded an extreme of effort from all, it was decided to let national needs govern and direct the work, carrying it where they might.

"Today, after nine months of incessant endeavor, an organization has been perfected that not only reaches into every community in America, but to every country in the world. In this and every other land we are making the fight for public opinion, that great force upon which rests the strength of armies, and which, in the end, decides between victory and defeat in every struggle. If we have seemed to be less than frank, it was because our frankness was compelled to wait upon results rather than that the thing itself should be halted while we boasted or excused.

"Any accounting that I give must first of all be prefaced by the statement that I have never considered myself a censor, nor do I nor will I. The whole question of censorship plays but a small part in the work of the committee, for it is, by its very constitution, in the nature of an automatic device.

"The desires of government with respect to concealment from the enemy of military policies, plans and movements are set forth in certain specific requests. No law stands behind them. Their observance rests upon honor and patriotism and I am proud indeed to be able to bear testimony that the faith has been kept. There have been violations, as a matter of course, and papers holding to the unwritten agreement have suffered injury from papers less careful and less honest, but on the whole the press has responded in the same spirit of unselfish service that animates the firing line."

NEW INDIANA MILITIA PLANNED.

Plans for the new Indiana militia, now being organized, were discussed by representative men from over the State, and Adjutant-General Harry B. Smith. General Smith declared "Indiana is being swept with a wave of patriotism that makes certain the recruiting of sufficient troops to prevent disorder and the destruction of property in the State while the national army is fighting abroad."

PUBLIC SERVICE RESERVE.

Indiana must furnish her share of the skilled emergency war workers as Uncle Sam needs them, and how the State is being organized to do this through the Public Service Reserve was explained by N. E. Squibb, Indiana director. H. W. Wells, appearing for National Director W. E. Hall, approved a plan of voluntary enrollment, through specific intensive drives, as the demands come.

NEEDS OF SOLDIERS' FAMILIES.

American soldiers abroad are comforted by the knowledge that the great Red Cross Society has an organized, systematic means of meeting the needs of their families at home in emergencies. James L. Fesler, director of civilian relief of the Great Lakes division of the American Red Cross Society, announced courses of instruction for local directors of the civilian relief work. The importance of the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals and the membership campaign were made clear to county workers.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES IN LINE.

Fraternal societies of the State are perfecting their co-ordination of patriotic activities and will effect a permanent organization and a definite program as a result of the valuable suggestions received from State leaders for the purpose soon.

MOLDING PUBLIC OPINION.

American public opinion will be crystallized in support of war measures by public speakers, including the four-minute men movie house campaigners. Arthur E. Bestor, president of the National Chautauqua Association, and director of the speakers' bureau of the committee on public information, assured Indiana talkers that it is a function of his bureau to furnish suggestions, materials and special messages and orators to back up the efforts being made to give fullest possible publicity to what official Washington wants the country to do.

OBLIGATIONS ON WOMEN.

"The obligations of the war are on our shoulders as surely as if the fighting was on the banks of the Mississippi," said Mrs. Anne Studebaker Carlisle to women war workers of the State, in impressing them with the seriousness of the task before them. Co-operation with the food, fuel, commercial economy and other war-time thrift organizations was declared absolutely essential to winning the war.

Mrs. Joseph R. Lamar, member and special representative of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense, said in part:

"We are familiar with the role woman has played in former wars. We can do more than ever before. We can do other and additional war work. War has become a business in which the question of supplies—of steel, copper, nitrates, leather, wool, cotton and labor, but most of all, food—may be more vital than men and munitions. "Among these things are many that women buy, whose use women largely control—things for which women often lavishly spend and often carelessly waste.

"America is the storehouse for these supplies, and we have here an economic weapon fitted to every woman's hand. If our government can withhold these supplies from the enemy and provide them for our own armies and our allies, the war is won.

"In the use of this economic weapon the manual of arms is economy—thrift. Not money saving only, and not hoarding—but the economy of self-denial."

U. S. BOYS' WORKING RESERVE.

As an agency to aid in relieving an inevitable labor shortage, in food production especially, Indiana has enrolled 5,500 boys, a record in the Union. The necessity of utilizing this source of labor supply was pointed out unmistakably by H. W. Wells, representative of W. E. Hall, Assistant Secretary of Labor. It is predicted that many additional boys will be called upon to make up the State's working capacity once ten million men are engaged in the business of war.

RESERVE WHEAT SUPPLY GONE.

"All of our reserve wheat supply was shipped by December 1. That we ship now is what we do not eat. Everybody in this country, therefore, can fight the German submarine three times a day." So stated Dr. Ray Layman Wilbur, president of Leland Stanford University, and aide to Herbert Hoover in the federal food administration to the retailers of Indiana. Dr. Wilbur urged that "you make war your main business until peace is declared." He estimated that it will require two and a half years to make up in fighting men for the defections in Italy and Russia. "You cannot keep human beings contented unless their stomachs are moderately full," he said in explaining that the reverses in both Italy and Russia had been preceded with food riots. He declared it our duty and our opportunity to prevent a recurrence of such disasters from the same cause.

The use of pork and wheat must cease wherever it is possible to get along without them or our allies must starve, said Franklin W. Fort of the federal food administration. Thanks to the fact that Americans are beginning to save, it was recently possible to send 10,000,000 pounds of beef to Great Britain and France, not otherwise available. Mr. Fort condemned eating between meals and on social occasions. "We should eat with a consecration to duty," he said.

TEACHING WOMEN TO SAVE.

Many Indiana women must be taught how to save, said Miss Mary L. Matthews of the home economics division of Purdue University, who has been engaged in demonstrating practical kitchen conservation over the State. It is conservation to spend more for substitute foods during war time, Miss Matthews said. She commended this practical patriotism—teaching and preaching food conservation to literary and social club women.

CASH AND CARRY PLAN.

Decreased prices to the consumer are possible under a "cash and carry" plan of merchandizing in saving the expenses of collection and delivery. It was brought out in a discussion of retail grocers, meat dealers and others who heard S. W. Roth of Chicago, editor of "The Retailers' Journal," commend the system. He asserted that increased volume of business resulting therefrom, adds to the retailers' profits.

NO MORE FREE LUNCHES.

Free lunches must be eliminated. Hotels, restaurants and boarding houses must conform strictly to the food conservation regulations, if food rationing is not required by the federal food administration, said George W. June of the Indiana food administrator's force.

DUTY OF FARMERS.

Farmers must increase their acreage and inform themselves on the means of greater production if the nation is to have the food necessary to win the war, said Clarence Ousley, representing the United States Department of Agriculture. He said a German victory in the war will completely stifle American markets.

AMERICANIZATION MEETING.

The importance of educating children to uphold national purposes and ideals is demonstrated by the war, said Mrs. Frank H. Bliss of the National Committee of One Hundred on Americanization. English language must be made the common medium of speech and especially should the children of aliens be made to feel their part of our unified national existence. Women should lay aside all thoughts of social duties, except such as are incident to helping win the war.

Part Indiana Women Must Take in Helping Defeat Prussian Tyrants

Mrs. Joseph R. Lamar, member and special representative of the Woman's Committee of the National Council of Defense, speaking at the afternoon session of the women's sectional meeting, at Hollenbeck hall, Y. W. C. A. building, during the state-wide war conference, said in part:

"We have taken up arms in defense of those rights which in the Declaration of Independence we declared to be inalienable; the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, by which we mean the right peacefully to pursue our legitimate business on land or sea the opportunity to discharge our obligations and fulfill our duties.

"All these rights Germany has ruthlessly invaded. She has set fire to our industries and blown up our factories, destroying the workers with the materials in which they wrought; she has insidiously sought to stir enmity between us and our neighbors; she has offered a bribe to Mexico to take arms against us; she has endeavored to make war between us and Japan; she has attempted to purchase our press and to corrupt our Congress, and she has wantonly murdered on the ocean more citizens of the United States than were killed in battle in the Spanish-American war, none of the murdered being belligerents, all of them innocent bystanders, many being women and children. All this Germany did while we were on friendly terms with her, and while we were representing her interests in those countries with which she was then at war, and while we were protecting her citizens in those rights which Germany was ruthlessly denying to our own people.

"In the last three years we have been aghast at the stories of how Germany prepared and planned in advance for the war. What shall we say of the treachery of that visit years ago made to this country by Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the Kaiser, when, as we now know, he sought to weld to Germany the citizens of America who had fled from the oppression of the Prussian military system, to seek freedom in America? What shall we say of the treachery that aimed and attempted to create a German nation within the United States, so that when the time should be ripe for Prussia to attack us, those Germans who had renounced allegiance to their native country would turn on the land that had opened its doors in welcome to them as they fled from tyranny?

"Because he had faith in the success of this treachery, Foreign Minister Zimmermann of Germany told our ambassador at Berlin that the United States 'would not dare declare war on Germany because there were in America 500,000 German reservists ready to take arms for their fatherland.'

"We are familiar with the role woman has played in former wars. We can do more than ever before. We can do other and additional war work. War has become a business in which the question of supplies,—of steel, copper, nitrates, leather, wool, cotton and labor, but most of all, food,—may be more vital than men and munitions.

"Among these things are many that women buy, whose use women largely control,—things for which women often lavishly spend and often carelessly waste.

"America is the storehouse for these supplies, and we have here an economic weapon fitted to every woman's hand. If our government can withhold these supplies from the enemy and provide them for our own armies and our allies, the war is won.

"In the use of this economic weapon the manual of arms is economy,—thrift. Not money-saving only, and not hoarding,—nothing could be more unpatriotic than hoarding,—but the economy of self-denial.

"Women's organizations have here such an opportunity as never was given. The need is co-operation. Centralization and co-operation has made Germany strong, and the lack of co-operation has lost the allies Gallipoli, Belgium, the north of France, Serbia, Poland, Galicia, Roumania, while the same lack now menaces Russia and Italy.

"Organization has been carried to a high degree of efficiency among American women. Will they be great enough to unite for the duty of the hour? Are the women to try to serve as rivals, competitors, striving for lead or control, or shall they form a great economic army, each seeking to concentrate and combine in an irresistible force behind each war effort, behind each economic drive the government puts forth?

"War was declared April 6, 1917, and in less than four weeks four or five societies had undertaken to lead in the war work of co-ordinating the patriotic activities of the women's organizations. To cure the confusion that resulted the Woman's Committee was created by the Council of National Defense. The committee is to be an advisory body to the Defense Council in the war work of women; to co-ordinate women's organizations and maintain a clearing house of women's activities, and to maintain a direct and speedy channel between the government and the women.

"The Woman's Committee is not a new society, nor does it seek to form a new society. Its purpose is to concentrate, centralize, focus all the women's organizations and the unorganized women as well, so there may be no waste motion, no misdirected effort, no duplication of work.

"It is only through such an agency, authorized and appointed by the government, that this work can be done. It remains to be seen whether the women's societies will help form the patriotic combination needed.

"The women are being organized by states. In each state a temporary chairman was appointed, who called together the heads of state-wide women's societies and women to speak for unorganized forces. This committee named its permanent chairman and officers and selected temporary chairmen in counties, cities and towns, who called together the presidents of all local women's societies, religious, literary, patriotic and fraternal, and other women to represent unorganized women. Thus was the channel created to carry instructions and suggestions from the government to all the women in every locality.

"A simple plan, but does it work? In one large state we were told that a great society of women had 'covered' the state and that no other organization was needed—that they numbered 25,000 members and that all defense work could be left to them. Shortly after, in a much smaller state, the Woman's Committee registered the women and in one week got not 25,000, but 100,000 women who volunteered to serve and help win the war.

"Where the great women's societies are best organized they include about 10 per cent. of the women. In Nebraska we got 66 per cent. for service. This was done through disinterested co-operation of all women of all societies working through the state division. What has been done in Illinois and Nebraska is to be done in all the states, and will be done when the women make up their minds to co-operate.

"One failure in co-operation early in the war was due to the fact we were not fully in touch with the State Councils of Defense then being organized. This error has been corrected. In all or nearly all the states our state divisions are parts of the State Councils of Defense.

"We initiate registration, food production and home economics.

"The Woman's Committee brings the economic drives to the attention of the women and urges their co-operation, and it is able to tell the women authoritatively just where their help is needed and where it is not wanted.

"We get appeals from women asking for war work to do. They seem to feel that unless they fill a government position or engage in some striking, dramatic task, they are not busy about the war. There is scarcely a duty a woman may perform which will not help or hinder in this struggle.

"Turn out for a few minutes a jet of gas or an electric light and you save, say, one lump of coal. Suppose every woman in the country did that same thing, how many tons of coal would they pour into the furnaces of our war industries?

"Each housekeeper could well study her table as a man studies his plant or factory, to produce highest efficiency with least waste."

War Mothers Helping to Whip the Kaiser

Indiana Women Whose Sons Are in the Army Are Doing Their Part to Bring Victory.

"First in the United States" continues to be the Indiana war slogan and rule of conduct. This time it is the Indiana organization of War Mothers that leads the nation.

Every Indiana mother who has a son in the military service can join the war work being done by this remarkable organization, which now extends to every Indiana county and which is being completed in all the townships of the state.

Mrs. Alice M. French is the official Indiana War Mother. Each county has a County War Mother. Each township has a Township War Mother, and these enroll and organize the mothers of soldiers and sailors in the communities.

The State War Mother was named by the State Council of Defense. County War Mothers have been chosen by the County Councils of Defense.

Through the township organizations war activities are being stimulated and co-ordinated in country as well as in town and city to a degree not possible before the mothers of soldiers got into the work as an organization. The personal, mother interest is being aroused everywhere in war relief work.

Mrs. B. W. Gillespie is the official War Mother for Marion County, and the other County War Mothers are: Mrs. Annie McConnell, Decatur, Adams County; Mrs. A. W. Mason, Columbus, Bartholomew; Mrs. Lillian Conley, Lebanon, Boone; Mrs. John F. Bond, Nashville, Brown; Mrs. George Julian, Delphi, Carroll; Mrs. Harry Searight, Logansport, Cass; Mrs. Azro Corwin, Sellersburg, Clark; Mrs. James P. Gaddis, Frankfort, Clinton; Mrs. Simon Grimes, Leavenworth, Crawford; Mrs. Ella Young, Washington, Daviess; Mrs. J. H. Stier, Aurora, Dearborn; Mrs. Edward Kessing, Greensburg, Decatur; Mrs. B. A. Byers, Garrett, Dekalb; Mrs. F. D. Haimbaugh, Muncie, Delaware; Mrs. Edward Dusenbach, Huntingburg, Dubois; Mrs. J. C. Beck, Goshen, Elkhart; Mrs. W. E. Ochiltree, Connersville, Fayette; Mrs. J. J. Helck, New Albany, Floyd; Mrs. Carrie Cheak, Attica, Fountain; Mrs. George Kipple, Brookville, Franklin; Mrs. Frank Sterner, Rochester, Fulton; Mrs. James R. McGregor, Princeton, Gibson; Mrs. W. S. Malott, Marion, Grant; Mrs. Hattie Sherwood, Washington, Greene; Mrs. Elizabeth Cottingham, Noblesville, Hamilton; Mrs. J. R. Laramore, Greenfield, Hancock; Mrs. Nell Hudson Jordan, Corydon, Harrison; Mrs. William King, Danville, Hendricks; Mrs. P. L. Beal, Newcastle, Henry; Mrs. Edgar Apperson, Kokomo, Howard; Mrs. Fred A. Bowers, Huntington, Huntington; Mrs. Edwin Vermilya, Brownstown, Jackson; Mrs. Charles W. Hanley, Rensselaer, Jasper; Mrs. W. E. Breide, Portland, Jay; Mrs. W. W. Miller, Madison, Jefferson; Mrs. A. A. Tripp, North Vernon, Jennings; Mrs. E. E. Finkbiner, Greenwood, Johnson; Mrs. C. B. O'Donnell, Vincennes, Knox; Mrs. David Sessig, Warsaw, Kosciusko; Mrs. H. W. Herbert, Lagrange, Lagrange; Mrs. Mary W. Shick, Laporte, Lake; Mrs. John Owen, Bedford, Lawrence; Mrs. Ernest Hill, Anderson, Madison; Mrs. E. W. Schrock, Plymouth, Marshall; Mrs. L. C. Brooks, Logansport, Martin; Mrs. S. F. Porter, Peru, Miami; Mrs. John O'Harrow, Bloomington, Monroe; Mrs. T. B. Nicholson, Crawfordsville, Montgomery; Mrs. G. M. Eisenhower, Martinsville, Morgan; Mrs. John G. Davis, Kentland, Newton; Mrs. William Saviger, Albion, Noble; Mrs. N. B. Cox, Spencer, Owen; Mrs. George Rohm, Rockville, Parke; Mrs. Philip Schlemmer, Cannelton, Perry; Mrs. Emma Chandler, Petersburg, Pike; Mrs. M. G. Stutchfield, Valparaiso, Porter; Mrs. Frank Suddoth, Mt. Vernon, Posey; Mrs. J. B. Young, Greencastle, Putnam; Mrs. John H. Hitchcock, Winchester, Randolph; Mrs. George Starling, Osgood, Ripley; Mrs. James Blackledge, Rushville, Rush; Mrs. Mary S. Montgomery, Scottsburg, Scott; Mrs. Harvey Morrison, Shelbyville, Shelby; Mrs.

F. S. Morgenthaler, Rockport, Spencer; Mrs. W. S. Daniel, Knox, Starke; Mrs. R. G. Inwood, South Bend, St. Joseph; Mrs. W. D. Wells, Freeport, Steuben; Mrs. James M. Lang, Sullivan, Sullivan; Mrs. Harriet D. Welch, Vevay, Switzerland; Mrs. C. W. Bone, West Lafayette, Tippecanoe; Mrs. Lula Hardy, Tipton, Tipton; Mrs. Aaron Filer, Liberty, Union; Mrs. H. W. McCool, Evansville, Vanderburg; Mrs. H. V. Nixon, Newport, Vermilion; Mrs. E. E. Ford, Wabash, Wabash; Mrs. Jerry Jamison, Salem, Washington; Mrs. A. W. Roach, Richmond, Wayne; Mrs. J. D. French, Bluffton, Wells, and Mrs. George Isay, Churubusco, Whitley.

Planning For Care of Disabled Soldiers

Conferences Being Held Looking to Proper Equipment of Hospitals for the Maimed.

The Surgeon General of the Army authorizes the following:

Conferences are being held under the auspices of the Surgeon General to consider problems involved in caring for soldiers who may be returned from the American Expeditionary Forces unfit for further service. The plans contemplate provisions for the necessary surgical and medical attention by specialists; for reconstruction hospitals and curative workshops; for re-education in the use of injured and artificial limbs; for vocational education or re-education; for occupational studies of industrial and agricultural conditions; and for returning soldiers to employment in civilian life on a self-supporting and useful basis.

EXPERIENCES OF CANADA.

Officers of the Surgeon General's Office were given an explanation of the experiences of Canada in this reconstruction work by Col. Clarence Starr, one of the leading orthopedic surgeons of Canada, who has had several years' military experience in this work in France, England, and Canada.

Colonel Starr stated that Canada, late in 1914, created a civilian body, the Military Hospitals Commission, to have full charge of the care of returned soldiers until they were returned to civil life. Subsequently all matters of medical, surgical, and other curative treatment, and of discipline and pay, were put in charge of the army, leaving the commission only the work of providing and equipping the hospitals and dealing with the civilian agencies through which the soldiers again took their places in civil life. The conferring of further of the commission's duties upon strictly military agencies is still under consideration.

FIVE DIVISIONS REPRESENTED.

Five divisions of the Surgeon General's Office are represented in the conferences to work out details of a plan of organization to be submitted to General Gorgas and, when it has received his approval, to the Secretary of War. These divisions are: The Division of Surgery; the Division of Military Orthopedic Surgery (75 to 80 per cent. of military surgical cases are orthopedic); the Division of Surgery of the Head (eye, ear, nose, throat, and brain); the Division of Neurology and Psychiatry (which deals with mental and nervous functional disorders); and the Division of Special Hospitals and Physical Reconstruction, which will provide 20 hospitals for reconstruction work.

Plans being made must also include provisions for some reconstruction work to be done in France with soldiers to be returned to duty and for others awaiting transportation to the United States, where the special facilities for soldiers not returning to service will be located.

In the United States a returned soldier will go first to a receiving hospital at the port of arrival. There he will receive only such medical attention as he may require until he is transferred to a clearing station. Here he must be classified carefully, first, as to physical limitations which his condition may impose upon his future employment; second, as to mental limitations, either natural or the result of shock or injury; third, as to vocational limitations and possibilities, depending upon the education, special training, industrial or agricultural experience, etc., which he has had; and, fourth, as to his relation to the occupational conditions in the community or section to which he will return to re-enter civil life.

SPECIAL TREATMENT PROVIDED.

Equipment for heat treatments and electro and hydro therapy will be provided; gymnasiums will furnish opportunity for special exercise for re-education in the use of joints, muscles, and nerves which have been affected in service; in curative workshops men will perform useful work which at the same time will bring these parts into activity. While in most cases it will be possible to fit a man to return to employment in an occupation the same as or similar to that from which he was drawn for military service, in other cases new industrial or agricultural training will be needed; in still others further academic or commercial education will be called for, and so on. The aim will be to return every man to civil life able to be self-supporting and useful and not dependent merely upon the pension which he will receive from the government.

CO-OPERATION OF AGENCIES.

The act of Congress approved October 6, 1917, providing for soldiers' and sailors' insurance, etc., states that "nothing in this act shall be construed to affect the necessary military control over any member of the military or naval establishments before he shall have been discharged from the military or naval service." Plans are being drawn up on the theory that governmental responsibility will not have been fully met and the soldier made ready for discharge unless he is fitted to take useful remunerative employment and a job is ready for him to step into. So the plans being studied will take into consideration co-operation of military and civilian agencies to the end that each soldier may be not merely curatively treated and physically re-educated, but thoroughly prepared for professional, commercial, industrial, or agricultural employment and such employment as he has been prepared for be ready to receive him.

Knox County's Record

Vincennes:—Knox County delegation to the War Council at Indianapolis was probably the largest delegation from the State outside Marion County in attendance. There were forty-two members of the Council of Defense, and citizens. The enthusiasm and patriotic zeal was great and every visitor, from here, was stirred to the depths by what they heard and saw. Those who attended were:

Thomas H. Adams, Chairman; Miss Margaret Holland, Secretary; Wm. C. Willmore, Clarence B. Kessinger, Joseph H. Barr, Miss Zelia Slocumb, representing the Red Cross; Joseph H. Jones, representing Fuel Administrator; C. C. Winkler, food administrator; George Glover, of the Public Reserve Board; W. M. Alsop, of the Liberty Loan and Red Cross drive; Judge B. M. Willoughby, John Oliphant, E. O. Maple, Superintendent of the City Schools; Joseph Kimmell, Prosecuting Attorney; D. Frank Culbertson, Senator; Arnold Padgett, Charles Padgett, Ira Schaffer, Mrs. C. B. O'Donnell, of the War Mothers; Mrs. Frank Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lewis, Miss Georgia Scott, Miss Fannie Graeter, Mrs. William A. Cullop, Mrs. B. B. Griffith, Mrs. B. F. Nesbitt and mother, Mrs. Mooney, Richard Cox, of Bicknell; J. B. Cogan, A. B. Nance, Chas. B. O'Donnell, G. L. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Ryder.

The Knox County Council of Defense have opened large headquarters at 420 Main street, Vincennes, Indiana, Thomas H. Adams Chairman and Miss Margaret Holland, Secretary, in charge. These quarters will be used by all the various boards, Red Cross, War Workers, and meetings of every kind and their keep daily in touch with all the activities of war and at the same time look after the welfare of the Knox County soldiers.

Serving Germany.

That man performs a special service to Germany who suggests that Americans sit easy in America and let the allies bear the brunt of the fight, "and just wait until we are invaded before we interfere." The adoption of that policy would mean victory for Germany and in the end probably subjection for America. The agitator deserves an iron cross from the Kaiser's own hands.

"Let every zone be the zone of war. If there must be men who find in their souls impulses of the old times, let us put them aside. All civilized nations are engaged in the same battle against the modern development of ancient barbarity."
—M. CLEMENCEAU, PREMIER OF FRANCE.

Employment Service to Meet War Needs

Department of Labor Promoting Work of Enrolling Men and Women Wanted for Emergencies Arising.

In connection with the matter of creating Labor exchanges for the purpose of rendering the labor supply more liquid, that the needs of the federal government may be met, now in the hands of Charles Fox, chairman of the committee on labor, and Frank Wampler, chairman of the committee on employers' co-operation of the Indiana State Council of Defense, the following statement, authorized by the United States Department of Labor, is of special interest:

"Industrial conditions are changing with kaleidoscopic rapidity. Especially in the great manufacturing States, pressure particularly for skilled artisans and laborers is acute. In other States a considerable surplus of idle men, principally due to the slackening of seasonal trades and to a general slow-up in building, exists. Notably emergent is the demand from large munitions factories, while the call from shipyards potentially for perhaps 400,000 workers, accounting for probable turnover, is now rapidly growing, although yet not large. Transportation companies, now fairly well manned in operating departments, face a serious shortage in maintenance-of-way personnel.

"Probably a well-organized network of employment offices, if speedily improvised and intelligently conducted, can for the ensuing three or four months, and until spring brings about its enlarged demands for workers, find a sufficiency of wage-earners, made idle through industrial changes, to supply the demands of business for augmented personnel. After that time, however, transfers must be systematically promoted from non-essential and less essential to services of immediate national importance. The Department of Labor is now engaged in expanding its employment service in preparation for this necessary transfer.

"It is estimated that from 5,000 to 6,000 workers are needed and that by spring fully 20,000 will be required for shipyards. A very large number of additional workers—perhaps 20,000—are necessary for cutting spruce and other timber, for operating sawmills and transportation of the finished timber to market. While the Seattle office and its branches are being established, other offices will be set up at certain interior points. Offices already established by State and municipal authorities have, with most encouraging patriotic unanimity, agreed to place their resources at the disposal of the federal program.

"It is apprehended that the demand shortly will outrun the supply of skilled workers in many shipyard occupations, who may now be seeking employment and therefore can be reached through such offices. To obtain men having necessary skill, but now employed in other industries, the United States Public Service Reserve, a division of the department's employment service, is coincidentally being expanded throughout the Northwest. A special drive for registration is planned for January to take place in the twelve Northwest and West Central States. This drive will culminate in a special registration week, beginning January 21, 1918. State directors of the reserve will organize their offices of voluntary enrollment agents and solicitors in each State. It is desired that enrolling officers volunteer in every community and obtain active assistants who will canvass for and enroll every available worker.

"At the same time that the employment service and the Public Service Reserve are thus being expanded in the Northwest, the division of women's work is being prepared to care for women seeking employment in industry, as men are shifted from accustomed work to new occupations or transferred to military lines. Miss Muhlhauser will have charge of this work.

"The Boys' Working Reserve has established itself. Over 150,000 boys earned the confidence of their employers on American farms during the past season. They proved it possible to make a useful farmer's helper out of a green city boy. It is expected that perhaps a half-million boys between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one will be placed on farms during the coming season through this national agency."

Woman and War

He was gone, her boy, her little, golden-haired baby, grown to manhood and gone off with a gun on his shoulder, to shoot or—oh, God! Her strained eyes watched the train round the distant curve which took it from her sight. Then she turned and she made her half-blinded way through the crowd, supported on one side by her daughter, a young girl sobbing for the brother just passed from sight; on the other side, clinging to her and sobbing also, that other girl who had been to her a daughter just three short weeks, given to her by the man-child gone to fight his country's battles. Back to the emptied house the three women made their way and for a brief thirty minutes sobbed out their woe together. Then they picked up the scattered possessions left behind, the little luxuries which have no place in a soldier's life, and put them away until he should come again. It was all they could do for him.

Was it? It seemed so then, but in a brief twenty-four hours the mother heart, the wife love, the sister's devotion had found another way. Every avenue of war work was something they could do for him. Every bond bought, every bandage wound, every stocking knitted, every ounce of food saved brought him one day nearer home. They realized it. They knew that every other war mother, war wife or war sister realized it, too. That war mother was a born leader. By her efforts there exists in that little town a thriving society of war women, all working to a common end to shorten the days in the trenches. There is nothing too hard or too irksome for them to do. Their boys will come home the sooner for its doing. The devotion of war women, coined into effort, is going to be a large factor in war accomplishment. The first place to make itself felt is in the food pledge campaign now going on. No other woman can refuse the appeal of one of these courageous wives or mothers who have given their all. What is the pitiful sacrifice of the good things of the table beside their offering?

Those involved in common sorrows naturally take comfort in each other's company. It was the perfectly obvious thing for the women relatives of the soldier boys to band themselves together in every community. Hence, the appeal from Washington to coin the special enthusiasm of the "war women" into results has been obeyed before it was given, in many places, and there are already flourishing little societies very much alive and more than ready to engage in every kind of patriotic effort. Their influence will be felt in the pledge card campaign as it has already been felt in other activities.—Iowa Bulletin.

Scientific Research Work Far-Reaching

Dr. Merriam Tells Section of Indiana State Council of Defense What Has Been Done Elsewhere.

The Scientific Research Committee of the Indiana State Council of Defense, which has held several meetings since its organization, was recently addressed by Dr. Merriam of the National Research Council, who passed through Indianapolis on his way from California to Washington to take the chairmanship of the National Committee on "Relations With State Research Councils."

The purpose of the various State Research Committees is to encourage and co-ordinate the work of investigation now under way that might be useful if placed in possession of the government for use in the war, and in addition to lend some enthusiasm to any research work that will help to build up the industries of Indiana after the war.

As an example the State of Arizona is investigating the otherwise useless rabbit brush of the southwestern deserts, to determine its availability as a source of rubber supply. It has been determined that rubber can be procured from this plentiful plant growing on desert land, but the amount is not sufficient to warrant its manufacture at present prices. All of our rubber is imported however and if the supply were to be cut off as it now is in Germany we might find the rabbit brush an extremely useful plant and any method of rubber extraction well worth while.

The State of California has taken the lead in such investigation. New remedies for tuberculosis have been originated, new methods of treating wounds, new uses for fish as foods, have been discovered, new surveys of the fish supply in the Pacific have been made with a view to determining its permanence and recurrence. Even daylight saving by moving the clock forward has had the consideration of the sub-committee on Mathematics and Astronomy!

In the California Research work some sixteen sub-committees of scientific men were appointed to conduct such investigations and the state supplied an appropriation of $40,000 for the purpose because of its importance to the prosecution of the war.

In Indiana there are numerous similar problems that will be undertaken. The question of motor transport of freight to relieve railway congestion is well worthy of tests that will help to perfect it. The motor truck is already well developed but its roadway is not and the consideration of through lines of hard surfaced roads calls for the consideration also of the State Highway Commission. The problem of quickly loading and unloading railway cars and motor trucks at terminals is another one that merits attention.

The demolition of bridges by high explosives has never been investigated particularly for concrete arches. The application of the microphone to trench warfare, and use of luminous paints for aeroplane instruments, for signals in no-man's-land, and to mark the way for wounded soldiers to hospitals are additional examples of some of the matters that might be investigated and improved.

It isn't whether you can afford to waste that teaspoonful of sugar every morning but rather whether your country can afford to have you do it. One teaspoonful multiplied by something less than one hundred million multiplied by 365 means something in helping to win this war.

Patriotism in Indiana

Madison County.—A service flag in honor of nine soldiers, former pupils of the Industrial school at Anderson, is being prepared for the school under the direction of Paul Plessinger, physical director. The men who have gone to the colors out of the ranks of the student body are: Earl Hoppes, Gordon Bankert, Walter Bagot, Harry Baldwin, William Herron, Wilber Gray, William Schaffer, Francis Ehle and Emerson Moore.

Students of the Anderson High School are at work on a service flag which is to bear a star for each former pupil who is in the military service.

Anderson recently reported a soldiers' comfort kit fund amounting to $187.85. The Betas gave a dance which brought $133.05 for the fund. The Jewish Ladies' Aid Society gave $10. The Red Cross Shop is handling the comfort kit work. In addition many Anderson soldiers and sailors have been fitted out with comfort kits by their relatives and personal friends.

The Anderson Chamber of Commerce, in formal resolutions, recently paid high tribute to the men of Battery D, Second Indiana Artillery, a unit formed in Madison and Hamilton counties for service abroad, and expressed the appreciation of the community for the patriotic action of the men in voluntarily enlisting.

The Research Club of Anderson women has taken on the discussion of war work, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. in army camps, and the activities of the women's section of the Council of Defense putting aside for the period of the war the ordinary program of the club.

Marion County.—Americanization work in Marion county is being pushed with vigor, the women's section of the movement being led by the committee on Americanization of the Department Club, as follows: Mrs. S. E. Perkins, president (ex-officio); Mrs. A. S. Hurrell, chairman; Mrs. H. B. Heywood, vice chairman; Mrs. Rowland Evans, vice chairman; Mrs. T. C. Day, Mrs. J. W. Jordan, Mrs. C. J. Buchanan, Mrs. J. A. Bowden, secretary; Mrs. W. B. Given, Mrs. J. B. Beesie, Mrs. J. E. Cooper, Mrs. E. L. Burnett, Mrs. W. P. Socwell, Mrs. W. F. Shirley, Mrs. A. J. Clark, Mrs. L. A. Poundstone, Mrs. R. A. Buehl, Mrs. Fred Hoffman, Mrs. W. H. Blodgett, Mrs. J. D. Hoss, Mrs. C. E. Pittman, Mrs. A. N. Towles, Mrs. Henry Vawter, Mrs. W. R. Wood, Mrs. J. C. Henley, Mrs. H. M. Wallick, Mrs. L. F. Perkins, Mrs. W. H. Hart, Mrs. J. W. Moore, Mrs. J. G. Greenstreet, Mrs. R. M. VanFleet, Mrs. C. S. Wiltse, Mrs. R. B. Clark, Mrs. Frank Sheffer, Mrs. Barclay Mering, Mrs. J. F. Poe, Mrs. S. D. Spellman, Mrs. W. L. Tomlin, Mrs. A. W. Wynne, Mrs. L. W. Cummins, Mrs. J. J. Reiley, Mrs. J. M. Lee, Mrs. George Rice and Mrs. Charles Elliott.

Ohio County.—Sixty-five Rising Sun boys have pledged themselves to earn $10 each before April 1 for the Red Cross War Fund. The quota for all of Ohio county was only thirty.

The Rising Sun organization, J. O. U. A. M., recently was reported as holding the lead in the number of members in military service, with the following ten men starred on its service flag: Chris Moors, Erwin Ricketts, Ben Elbrecht, Ralph Mapes, Ferrell Neaman, James Bailey, Edgar Pendry, David Humphrey, Lawrence Baker and Carl Searcy. Two additional members soon will go into the service.

Miss Addie Griswold of Rising Sun made a good record as head of the women-workers for the Liberty Loan, selling $8,450 of bonds.

The Women's Club has decided to make comfort kits for soldiers. This is in addition to Red Cross work already being done by the club members. The club holds many of its meetings in the Red Cross Shop.

Perry County.—Four members of the Perry County Council of Defense recently conducted a patriotic meeting at Bristow at the request of the people of that town, the gathering being highly successful and productive of much good. The meeting was held in the school building and Prof. Lase Lasher presided. Similar meetings are being held in all parts of the county.

Pike County.—Superintendent Dunkin of the Petersburg public schools has taken an active hand in organizing Sawabuck clubs among the school boys. Many high school boys are spending most of their Christmas vacation cutting wood to be used for fuel in place of coal as a war measure.

Posey County.—Loyal citizens in the Griffin neighborhood are investigating a recent offense against the United States flag by an unknown person. A flagpole was cut down. Suspicion as to the identity of the offender has been reported to the Federal officers and serious punishment will follow discovery and conviction. All Posey county has been aroused by the dastardly deed.

Putnam County.—Roachdale Red Cross workers have opened a Red Cross Shop, under the supervision of Mrs. Walter McGaughey of Greencastle, superintendent of surgical dressings for Putnam county. The Masons of Roachdale have given the Red Cross the use of their dining room for working purposes. Mrs. J. N. Anderson and Miss Lola Wilson are taking the lead in Roachdale in the active work. Mrs. Bertha Miller, who has taken a course in surgical dressing making at Greencastle, also is prominent. Charles Edwards is chairman of the Roachdale branch, and Ella Walsh has been serving as secretary.

Randolph County.—Deerfield has organized a Red Cross branch of its own. The Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. workers of Ward township recently met and the Red Cross local branch was started under the direction of F. C. Focht, Randolph county head of Red Cross work.

An indoor carnival recently was held at Winchester for the benefit of the Red Cross fund. The affair was a success, an admission fee of 5 cents being charged, the entire proceeds going to the Red Cross.

D. A. R. workers of Winchester carried out a plan for sending Christmas packages to American soldiers. The work was done under Miss Grace Kelley as chairman of a committee of the Winchester D. A. R. chapter. She was assisted by Mrs. Minnie Wilmore, Mrs. Mary Hineshaw, Mrs. Claude Goodrich, Miss Belle Edger and Mrs. Amy A. Moorman, the latter acting as corresponding secretary.

Randolph county women working for the Liberty Loan made a good record, disposing of $70,000 worth of the war bonds. Mrs. G. C. Markle served as president of the Women's Liberty Loan Committee.

Ripley County.—Osgood comes forward with a record knitter in the person of Mrs. G. Herman, who knit a sweater twenty-three inches long and twenty and one-half inches wide in ten hours. It is said this breaks previous speed records reported from elsewhere. A number of Osgood women knit a sock a day, and more than fifty women and girls of the community are knitting regularly.

The Ripley County Council of Defense sent to Camp Taylor 150 pounds of dressed turkey and about one thousand glasses of jelly and preserves, fifty boxes of cigars, apples, candies and nuts and about $50 in cash to buy such things as the soldiers liked to add to their Christmas dinner. This shipment was sent to Company A, 335th Infantry. This company is made up of boys from Ripley and Warrick counties.

The Council of Defense also furnished to each of the Ripley county boys a handsome home-knit sweater. The captain of Company A, 335th Infantry, was also furnished one of the home-knit sweaters at the request of the Ripley county boys.

J. Francis Lechard, chairman of the Council of Defense in Ripley county, his wife, and Mr. George C. Spurling took the sweaters to the camp and delivered them to the boys.

Rush County.—One polley promulgated by the Rush County Council of Defense in line with the sugar conservation campaign, took the form of a suggestion by resolution that it would be an act of patriotism for schools and Sunday-schools to do away with candy at the holiday season. The suggestion was practically unanimously followed.

Shelby County.—Patriotism was the keynote at a recent R. A. M. banquet in Shelbyville, when Z. E. Dougan of the Shelby County Council of Defense spoke on war work and sacrifice, and of the need for food and fuel conservation. It is decided to provide a service flag for the lodge hall to honor the lodge members who have gone into the military service. Walter G. Hadley made a strong appeal for the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. One of the speakers was Lieut. Alvin Hall, who told of life in the army training camps.

Starke County.—Six hundred and fifty Starke county men have joined the Liberty Guards for home protection and patriotic educational propaganda work, and for the pursuit and stamping out of sedition and treason. One unit of the Guards at Knox has 250 members, and the North Judson outfit has 175 men.

James C. Fletcher is chairman of the movement for the promotion of the sales of war savings certificates and thrift stamps in Starke county. The executive committee of the County Council of Defense met recently to start the thrift campaign work.

Chairman L. E. Bernethy of the Starke County Council of Defense reports that much good work has been done and is being done by Fuel Administrator Harry E. Johnson and Food Administrator F. Forrest Whitson. Meatless days are being generally observed according to the reports of dealers and workers.

Steuben County.—A committee on "Soldiers' Welfare" has been named by the Steuben County Council of Defense. The committee will compile and keep a record of every soldier and sailor from the county, will see that the men are properly remembered on special occasions, such as Christmas, and will centralize and direct county activities which seek to work for the benefit of the fighting men in the camps and at the front. The committee, which is representative of various organizations and communities of the county, is made up as follows: Chairman, John Humphreys; secretary, Miss Linda Pence; Dr. Millard Pell, Prof. F. M. Starr, Paul Preston, James C. Hall, Fred Ransburg, E. D. Willis, John Crain, Irvin Metzger, H. L. Shank, Prof. W. A. Fox, Miss Burton Sickles, Miss Mate Ewing, all of Angola; Albert J. Collins and Rev. J. K. Wyandt, Orland; Glen Brown and Miss Grace VanAuken, Fremont; Rev. I. W. Kemper and Mrs. W. D. Wells, Fremont; George Straw, Ray; R. E. Sharp, Fremont; Alton Gilbert, Angola; Grant Syuk, D. C. Oury, Angola; Enos Parsell, Helmer; Charles Liber, Hudson; John O. Matson, S. L. Gilbert, Pleasant Lake; Moses Wolff, C. M. Johnston, Hamilton; Nathan E. Metz, Edon, Ohio; David Aldrich, Hamilton.

St. Joseph County.—The St. Joseph county chapter of the Red Cross, in addition to its other activities, has provided a $25,000 fund with which it is planned to care for the dependents of soldiers who go forward to the colors from St. Joseph county.

The Patron-Teachers' club of the Battell school, Mishawaka, took an active part in its school district in the recent drive for Red Cross members. The Mishawaka Red Cross now has four branches, including a high school unit and an organization formed by the M. E. Ladies' Aid, recently authorized, and the unit of Presbyterian women and the Tri Kappas formerly created.

Plans are being worked out at the suggestion of City Judge Hamerschmidt of South Bend for the equipment and operation of a woolen mill where county prisoners may be employed doing war weaving.

Teachers of St. Joseph county are especially active in the pushing of the sales of war thrift certificates and savings stamps. The county is working on a quota amounting to $2,057,000. One hundred and twenty teachers, in a meeting at the courthouse, received instructions in this line of war work from County Superintendent R. H. Longfield, who has taken the lead in the thrift campaign among the children. Members of the University club of South Bend have gone into the thrift campaign work as volunteers.

Sullivan County.—A recent newspaper report carried the information that Sullivan county women had knit 150 pairs of socks for soldiers from the county. The women's section of the Sullivan County Council of Defense has been supplying yarn for the making of socks and sweaters.

Mr. H. C. Steel, head of the women's section of the Sullivan County Council of Defense, has demonstrated what publicity can do in the local press to boost the women's war activities. She writes informing articles for the papers and keeps the people in touch with the work the women are doing.

A group of Fairbanks township women shucked corn for a day and thus got two wagon loads of corn to be sold for the benefit of the Red Cross. The corn sale brought $63.10. In the party were: Mrs. James Scott, Mrs. Ollie Criss, Mrs. Elmer Harrison, Mrs. Seph Clark, Mrs. Ike Kennett, Mrs. Wash Bosstick, Mrs. Burt Myles, Mrs. Addison Drake, Mrs. Burt Fuller, and Misses Helen Fuller, Marian Fuller, Geneva Bowen and Fern Criss.

To Buy Seed Corn.

As a result of a conference called by Secretary D. F. Houston, Prof. G. I. Christie, State Food Director, has been authorized to draw on the United States Department of Agriculture to the amount of $100,000 to perfect an organization in every county of the State to assist farmers to buy old corn suitable for seed.

The conference was attended by representatives from the large corn-producing States.

The recent zero weather has destroyed much of the new seed corn and the hope of the 1918 corn crop lies in the use of old seed suitable to the various sections.

The old corn must not be fed or used for milling purposes if it is fit for planting. Through the State organization, it is hoped to take possession of this corn and use it for seed.

Wants to be of Service.

John F. Joyce, of Rushville, Ind., writes as follows:

Rushville, Ind., Dec. 20, 1917.

Hon. James P. Goodrich, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir:—Noticing the call for help at many of our State institutions and elsewhere, I hereby tender my services in any capacity, in this emergency, wherever they may be useful.

I taught school 16 years, practiced law about 20 years, and was a first lieutenant in Co. H, 161st Ind. Vol. Inf.

Have fair health and able yet to make good in many places where young men might be relieved for more important duties.

Respectfully,
JOHN F. JOYCE.

What Patrick Henry Said.

"Gentlemen may cry, Peace, Peace, but there is no peace!"

"The war is actually begun!"

"The next gale that sweeps from the north will bring to our ears the crash of resounding arms!"

"Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand ye here idle?"

"What is it that gentlemen wish? Is life so dear and peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery?"

"Forbid it, Almighty God!"

"I care not what others may think, but as for me—give me liberty or give me death!"—Patrick Henry of Virginia before Virginia convention, 1775.

Sugar sent to the bottom of the sea by enemy submarines cannot be prevented by Americans, but sugar waste in the bottom of tea and coffee cups is to be severely condemned in this national crisis.

INDIANA BULLETIN

Published by the

Indiana State Council of Defense

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 80.

December 20, 1917.

To County Councils of Defense:

The Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense has requested that the following information be promptly forwarded to it:

INFORMATION DESIRED AS TO CONDITIONS ON THE FARM.

1. Do the farmers regularly sell their old iron, metals, rubber and rags? Has there been any apparent increase in the disposal of such junk since the first of the year?
2. Is there still any considerable quantity of valuable junk on the farms?
3. Why is such material not sold more rapidly?
4. What means would you suggest for stimulating the sale of waste material or junk by the farmers?

INFORMATION DESIRED AS TO CONDITIONS IN FACTORIES.

1. Is it a general practice among the factories in your State to regularly dispose of their waste material for re-use?
2. Can increased quantities of waste material be reclaimed from factories?
3. In what way, or through what channels, is such waste disposed of? Do the methods used today insure the largest possible quantities being reclaimed from factories?

The State Council requests each County Council to procure for it complete answers to these questions in so far as they apply to their particular county.

Please give this your immediate attention.
INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 81.

December 20, 1917.

To County Councils of Defense:

The experience of the State Council of Defense, where it has sent out bulletins to the County Councils requesting immediate response from them, has been that about thirty Councils have replied in from two to four days, fifty in from one to two weeks, and the balance have either replied several weeks afterward or have failed to reply at all.

If each County Council will please appreciate the fact that a delay on its part delays the whole State, we are sure that a great deal would be done towards justifying the existence of County Councils as the system of organizations to be depended upon for efficient war work.

To County Councils of Defense:

Please advise us at once the name of your chairman on Morals and Religious Forces.

In sending in this information please do not include in the same letter anything regarding other subjects.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 83.

December 26, 1917.

To Chairmen and All Members of County Councils:

It is the very earnest wish of the National Council and the Committee on Public Information that our State-wide War Conference be followed up very soon with County War Conferences in each county. Later township meetings will be held which will take on the nature of old fashioned town meetings; i. e., that the people in a small unit of territory in township or town, etc., shall get together and discuss the war; plan the work; familiarize themselves with everything in connection with the matter; check up the locality as to doing its part, etc.

The immediate task is to arrange for the County War Conferences, and for this we ask your very preferred attention and help.

Three counties have already written in signifying their purpose of going ahead, even before they had this information. They are Johnson county, which has planned its conference for January 11-12, Laporte county, January 17, and DeKalb county, January 2 and 3. We have written DeKalb county, suggesting that their conference be delayed in order that the whole program may be planned.

It should be the purpose of the County Council, in each county, to make the County War Conference as near as possible a replica in organization, program and results of the State-wide War Conference. The County Conference, however, should probably be but one day. It will not be the purpose of the State Council to direct in this regard, but it has occurred to us that a program consisting of a general meeting in the morning, sectional meetings in the afternoon and a big patriotic mass meeting at night, will very well cover the ground. However, the details in a general way must be left to the local authorities who will plan them to meet the needs most efficiently. To all of the sectional meetings the workers in the particular section should be invited and all war workers should be urged to attend the general sessions. Every division and subdivision and all committees and subcommittees should be required to participate in these conferences. It is not enough to have simply patriotic demonstrations. They ought to be real conferences, where real work will be planned, as well as patriotic stimulus given to the whole situation.

We have three men promised from the Federal Food Administration for eighteen days and we will get other speakers from Washington. Speakers will also be furnished from our own speakers' bureau and every aid will be given in this office to make each of the County Conferences successful.

It is necessary, in order that we can most efficiently supply speakers and otherwise aid, that the whole plan—as to dates especially—be in a general way directed here. Otherwise there will be so many set for one day that we probably could not supply speakers. Also we want to keep very closely in touch with the counties in the making of the program for each of the County Conferences, in order that the things which we are advised by the National Council are most important will certainly be discussed in the conferences.

We are going to ask for a great many volunteers who will give their time and pay their own expenses and go about over the State for the State Council and help plan these county conferences. Some one of these men will go into practically every county for this purpose.

The whole defense work must now be made an exact science. There is no longer any excuse for any county not having a complete organization, and the organization must be developed down to the smallest unit. It is the opinion of all now that those members of the County Council who are not in position to give much time to the work should resign, and every county chairman who is not in position to do the work, or have it done thoroughly, regardless of how much time it takes, ought to resign and a new member ought to be put in his place. We are making this suggestion in this general way as we have no one particularly in mind. If we had we would write that county chairman direct, but we do want to make it clear that the situation is very serious and the work so important that we can take no chances about the work being done and any member of any County Council who cannot give the time ought so to indicate.

I do not think there are any such men or women, because I know you will all feel that the emergency is so great that you will all give the time regardless of the sacrifice.

A special department is being inaugurated here which will give particular attention to these County War Conferences and we hope to reply to all inquiries and meet all suggestions and requests in connection with these meetings just as fully as possible.

IMPORTANT NOW: We want each county chairman to advise by return mail exactly the amount of appropriation which has been made by the County Council for each County Council of Defense. If no money has been appropriated in this manner, please advise us what efforts have been made to get the County Council so to do, and why they failed. If no money has been raised in this manner please advise how you are financing the work, and the names of your finance committee.

Also please advise us just what kind of permanent headquarters you have for the County Council of Defense offices.

We need this information right away to check up our records in this regard and we are very earnestly asking that you send it by return mail.

ALSO AT THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY PLEASE INDICATE ABOUT WHEN YOU WOULD LIKE TO HAVE YOUR COUNTY-WIDE WAR CONFERENCE. If possible do not fix an absolute date, as we would like to have it so we can shift some of the dates in order to supply the speakers in the best manner.

We want to most earnestly thank the county workers for the support given the State-wide War Conference. It was a success and will do much good. This is only true because of the loyal and splendid support which you all gave and for this we thank you.

With best wishes for a pleasant holiday season.
Very truly yours,

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE,
WILL H. HAYS, Chairman.

Credentials for Workers

Each defense worker in Indiana is to carry credentials signed by Governor James P. Goodrich and by the judge of the Circuit Court of the worker's district.

Certificates in card form bearing the seal of the State of Indiana have been prepared. These will be issued to members of the ninety-two County Councils of Defense by the Indiana State Council of Defense. On the card is printed the following: "This is to certify that..... is a member of the County Council of Defense of.....county. Signed, Indiana State Council of Defense. Approved, James P. Goodrich, Governor. Approved, ..... Circuit Judge."

The card not only is to be a form of credentials and a letter of authority for the war worker who officially is identified with the County Defense Council, but it will be a record of the holder's freely given patriotic services and activities in the war period.

To Prevent Farm Fires.

A bulletin on "Fire Prevention on the Farm" is in the process of preparation by the United States department of agriculture and may be had by any one interested upon application to the division of publications, care the department, Washington, D. C. The importance of fire prevention is being appreciated more and more every day, by both the government and the farmer. The isolation from ordinary sources of protection make the farmer's duty in preventing fires the more exacting, a fact the government recognizes in this bulletin.

Gary Boys Prove Their Patriotism

Ninety Gary boys have been honored with the federal bronze badge awarded by the Federal Government to boys who engage in productive labor either on farms or in "essential industries," and who enroll in the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

In the above picture, taken at the time a public award of these medals was made in the Gary Y. M. C. A. by Horace Ellis, State superintendent of public instruction and chairman of the Educational Section of the Indiana State Council of Defense, fourteen nationalities are represented, the majority of the boys being employed in the local steel mills. George M. Pinneo is city director for the Reserve in Gary.

Farmers Realize Big Rural Labor Shortage

Boys' Working Reserve Only Source From Which Help in Crop Production Can Be Drawn.

Through the co-operation of Purdue University field workers, who are conducting over five hundred different farmers' institutes this winter, and the Indiana Corn Growers' Association as well as the Indiana Cannery Association, questionnaires covering farm labor needs are being widely distributed among Indiana growers. Farmers are urged to answer these questionnaires as early as possible in order that complete plans may be made for meeting the demand for emergent labor during the planting season in the spring as well as the harvest season later on.

In these questionnaires, which are issued under the name of the Indiana State Council of Defense co-operating with the United States Department of Labor, it is pointed out that practically the only supply of labor for farms now available is that found in boys sixteen to twenty-one years of age who have enrolled in the United States Boys' Working Reserve.

Most of these boys attend either high school or college. Some of them have had agricultural experience before—others have had no such experience whatever—but all of them are big, live fellows, willing and capable. They are all inspired by the patriotic purpose to do their bit for their country during the present crisis, and in this spirit they are capable of more good hard work than under normal conditions.

Although only a few questionnaires have been distributed, applications from individual farmers for boys have been received from the following counties:

Allen county	.....2 boys
Clay county	.....1 boy
Gibson county	.....7 boys
Greene county	.....2 boys
Johnson county	.....
Parke county	.....1 boy
Posey county	.....2 boys
Scott county	.....1 boy
Sullivan county	.....6 boys

LABOR SHORTAGE IN SIGHT.

Commenting editorially on the Boys' Working Reserve's plans for supplying farm labor next season, the Terre Haute Star offers the following practical suggestion:

"A dearth of workers to do the necessary tasks of the farms is among the labor embarrassments of the immediate future that clearly cast their shadows before. Even now farmers in Indiana, and elsewhere, are meeting with serious difficulty in hiring help they require. This shortage, of course, will increase rather than diminish. . . .

"Farmers, naturally, prefer to employ only experienced farm labor. That, however, they cannot do. They will be obliged to make the most of what they can get. Still it is not impossible to assist them to the extent, at least, in training volunteers in some of the rudiments of farm work. Husky boys of high school age, willing to pledge themselves, through the United States Boys' Working Reserve, to do farm labor throughout the summer, could be organized into groups and taught many of the elementary things that it is necessary for them to know in order to be of real and immediate value to their employers.

"Nothing, as a matter of fact, could be more practicable. . . . To this end, under State and city school auspices, young men who are willing to serve their country as 'soldiers of the soil' could be organized, as already suggested, and taught how to harness and hitch and unharness and unhitch horses, feeding them and caring for them, how to milk and how, in brief, to do many of the ordinary farm chores. They could be taught, also, something about farm machinery, how it operates and how to operate it.

"Dealers in agricultural implements, proprietors of stables, dairymen and even farmers themselves would all willingly assist in instructing the volunteers. Facilities for carrying out the suggestion are not lacking; neither are the volunteers. The one thing needed is interest on the part of County Councils of Defense, the State Council of Defense and similar organizations throughout the State. The shortage should be squarely faced and without delay, and everything possible should be done, and done now, to anticipate it and to prepare for it."

RECOGNIZE BOYS' WORK.

James J. Storrow, Chairman of the Public Safety Committee for Massachusetts, advises that the following bulletin was issued on April 27, 1917, by Boston University, and that presidents of all New England colleges were urged to take similar action:

"Candidates for admission to the College of Liberal Arts in 1917, if detained from the June and September examinations because of military or agricultural service, may be admitted on trial for one year if they present, with specific recommendation from their preparatory school principals, transcripts of records satisfactorily covering their entrance requirements up to the time they leave school. Under the rules governing admission these transcripts and recommendations will be accepted in the place of the regular entrance certificates."

Presidents of New England colleges are being requested to adopt a similar ruling for 1918, inasmuch as it is believed that the necessity for farm service by high school boys will be more acute during the coming summer than during the past season. Recognition is asked only for boys actually performing farm work under the direction of the Public Safety Committee and who render faithful and efficient service throughout the season.

Under the direction of the "State Committee on Mobilization of High School Boys for Farm Service," hundreds of Massachusetts boys engaged in food production last spring and summer, living either in the homes of farmers or in "community camps." In summing up the results of this farm labor experiment the manager of one of the largest Massachusetts farms says:

1. It has given a more or less discouraged group of farmers a new view of their own possibilities and the possibilities of their farms.

2. By bringing a supply of seasonal labor when needed, it has enabled the farmer to increase his acreage one-third to one-half, and has insured the proper cultivation of the crops at an expense he can afford.

3. It has been one of the most valuable parts of the city boy's education, in that it has given him a first-hand experience in production which he could get in no other way.

It is interesting to note that town and country have been bound together in a variety of ways. Parents visiting boys have made the acquaintance of boys' employers, in many cases have established marketing relations without any middlemen, and mutual understanding and acquaintance has been established, which is of equal value to the farmers, parents and boys.

BOOSTED BY EDUCATORS.

Increased activity on the part of all school authorities in enrolling boys in the Reserve is anticipated since the adoption by the Educational Section of the State War Conference of the following resolutions, pledging the assistance and co-operation of the schools of the State:

"Whereas, The U. S. Boys' Working Reserve has been organized by the federal government and its plans and purposes have the endorsement of the Indiana State Council of Defense, its educational section and the State Board of Education; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the school authorities of the State assembled in the Educational Division of the Indiana War Conference, pledge their assistance to the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve in enrolling boys of sixteen to twenty, inclusive, in war service work and in placing them in productive employment under direction of and in accordance with the prescribed rules of that organization."

RESERVE IS CUTTING WOOD.

Laporte county reports an enrollment of 150 in the United States Boys' Working Reserve. F. R. Farnam, director in the county of this war movement to replace the men who go to the colors with trained boys who volunteer to do their part in the war emergency, reports that the smaller town boys are taking a more lively interest in the work than are the city boys. Wood cutting, the purpose being to supply fuel to take the place of coal, thus saving coal for war use, is one of the activities in which the boys of the Working Reserve are being enlisted in this and many other counties.

Food Administration

In accordance with the plans suggested at the recent war council, County Food Administrators are asked, if they have not already done so, to call a conference of all the retail grocers in your county. At this conference the organization of the Food Administration should be explained, the purpose of the law and the plan by which it shall be enforced in Indiana set out. The law gives the President and the Food Administration very great powers, but food administrators will use that power with discretion, will co-operate with the grocers rather than compel them. Administrators have no authority to fix prices, but are required to determine whether or not the prices at which food is sold are fair, and whenever the administrator believes too great profits are exacted he is instructed to report the facts to the proper authorities.

Grocers are asked to appoint a representative who will attend a conference at Indianapolis about January 15 with authority to speak for the grocers of your county. It is desired at that conference to formulate plans for regulating prices. The name of the representative selected by the grocers should be sent to H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

It will be necessary in most counties to have special agents in each city or town who will report to county administrators such matters as food prices, violations of the rules and regulations governing licenses, etc. These men may be the deputy food administrators. Since the work of these two deputies is along different lines, there should be no duplication of effort. County administrators have full authority to select their own aides.

THE PRICE OF BREAD.

The loaf of bread baked by licensed bakers by the Food Administration formula sells, in nearly every Indiana city, at the bake shop, unwrapped, for 7 cents. The wrapped loaf sells at wholesale for 7½ cents. The unwrapped loaf retails over the counter on the "cash and carry plan" at 8 cents; wrapped and delivered, 8½ cents. The price of larger units is fixed accordingly. In several Indiana cities bread is retailing at two loaves for 15 cents, three loaves for 20 cents, and in one city at 6 cents a loaf.

No stale bread should be returned or exchanged; no bread shall be destroyed, wasted or used as animal food. The giving of premiums, rebates or bonuses tends to increase the price of bread in some cases and in others to provoke over buying. The giving of premiums, rebates and bonuses is therefore disapproved.

If it becomes apparent that bread prices are too high or too low a new scale of prices will be set, that the consumer may buy bread at the lowest possible cost and the baker make a reasonable profit.

Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

USE LESS SUGAR.

The Food Administration announces that it proposes to provide a sugar supply sufficient to allow a per capita consumption of three pounds per month.

This is a material reduction in the amount now consumed, and can only be secured by the immediate co-operation of every consumer.

Federal Food Administrators for Indiana counties will take such steps as are necessary to limit sugar consumption to three-fourths pound per capita each week.

It is suggested that this may best be done by regulating the supply in the hands of retail grocers and instructing them that they are held responsible for the equitable distribution.

Stanley Wyckoff, Federal Food Administrator for Marion County, and George Haffner, Federal Food Administrator for Allen County, are using methods of distributing supplies and limiting consumption which are practical and successful. They will be glad to assist you in starting this work.

The ability of this country to supply sugar to our associates in this war depends on our willing reduction of our sugar consumption.

H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

SEND IN QUESTIONNAIRES.

Requests covering a great variety of subjects are reaching this office. To answer each inquiry means endless correspondence. Will you therefore send at once a list of questions which you desire answered? These questions will be classified and a general letter issued, which will, it is hoped, cover for each Federal Food Administrator for Indiana counties the many points on which he desires an official opinion.

Send your inquiries AT ONCE.

H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS.

On receipt from the Federal Food Administration of instructions, rulings or information of value to the public, special industries or organizations, County Administrators will give such data wide publicity.

This publicity may be secured through local and county papers, and when advisable by having notices read from pulpits on the Sunday following their receipt, in lodge meetings, in conventions, wherever audiences are available.

All such notices should be issued in the name of the County Administrator as official communications from the Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

All communications with the Administration at Washington should be addressed to the undersigned. In the event special data, not available at this office, is desired, I will secure it and transmit it to you. This action is necessary to avoid varying rulings, and conforms to Mr. Hoover's desire to decentralize the work of administering the law.

H. E. BARNARD,
Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.

Poultrymen Discuss Needs of Industry

Committee Will Make Report and Recommendations—Agricultural Meetings Announced.

Poultrymen representing the various poultry interests of the State met in the office of the State Food Director, December 20, to study the needs of the poultry industry with the view of making definite recommendations to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation for a State-wide campaign to increase production.

The meeting was attended by T. A. Coleman, Purdue University; U. R. Fishel, Hope; W. C. Monahan, Indianapolis; A. G. Greenlee, Indianapolis; Henry Pfeiffer, Rochester; M. A. Kenner (C. E. Bash & Co.), Huntington; S. P. Smyth, Morgantown; S. E. Shirley, Shoals; H. A. McAleer, Indianapolis; Professor A. G. Phillips, Purdue University; L. L. Jones, Purdue University; L. J. Brosmer, Purdue University, and W. Q. Fitch, Assistant Secretary State Food Committee.

The conference resulted in appointing a committee of five, consisting of Messrs. Fishel, Pfeiffer, Phillips, Shirley and Kenner, to draw up a report setting out the needs of the poultry industry and containing recommendations to the Indiana Committee on Food Production and Conservation, urging their prompt action.

The report will be considered by the food committee in the near future.

STATE CORN SHOW.

The annual meeting of the Indiana Corn Growers' Association will be held January 14-18, 1918, at Purdue University, during the Farmers' Short Course.

G. I. Christie, Secretary of the Corn Growers' Association, said that the Farmers' Short Course was the greatest week of the year for men, women, boys and girls interested in agriculture, home making and rural betterment.

The American nation owes its existence to corn! It saved the early settlers from starvation and helped the North to win! Corn will help beat the Kaiser and make the world safe for democracy!

Indiana is not only in the front rank in the production of corn, but she leads the world in the quality of corn produced. This fact is due largely to the work of the Indiana Corn Growers' Association.

The State corn show will be held during Short Course week. Farmers are urged to bring a sample of corn and compare it with corn from other farms. The seed corn situation is serious. Exhibits will aid in locating sources of seed. Two hundred premiums are being offered.

This year, as never before, we shall be called upon to produce corn, for, as never before, corn will be needed for human consumption.

The annual meeting, January 16, promises to be more significant than any meeting ever held. INCREASED ACREAGE AND METHODS OF PRODUCTION will be featured.

BIG MEETINGS ANNOUNCED.

The following associations will meet at Purdue during Short Course week:

Indiana Corn Growers' Assn., Jan. 16, 1918.
Indiana Home Economics Assn., Jan. 17, 1918.
Indiana Live Stock Breeders Assn., Jan. 17, 1918.
Indiana State Dairy Assn., Jan. 17-18, 1918.
Indiana Sheep Breeders and Feeders Assn., Jan. 15, 1918.
Indiana Angus Breeders Assn., Jan. 17, 1918.
Indiana Hereford Breeders Assn., Jan. 17, 1918.
Indiana Shorthorn Breeders Assn., Jan. 17, 1918.
Indiana Guernsey Breeders Assn., Jan. 17, 1918.
Indiana Holstein-Friesian Assn., Jan. 17, 1918.
Indiana Jersey Cattle Club, Jan. 17, 1918.

The County Unit in Food Control

(By H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.)

The United States Food Administration, created by Act of Congress, August 10, 1917, to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply and controlling the distribution of food products, is chiefly a volunteer organization brought into being at a time of great national stress to assist in solving one of the greatest problems presented by the world crisis through which we are passing.

The hopes of the Food Administration are threefold: First, to so guide the trade in the fundamental food commodities as to eliminate vicious speculation, extortion and wasteful practices and to stabilize prices in the essential staples; second, to guard our exports so that against the world's shortage we retain sufficient supplies for our own people and to co-operate with the allies to prevent inflation of prices; and, third, that we stimulate in every manner within our power the production and saving of our food in order that we may increase exports to our allies to a point which will enable them to properly provision their armies and to feed their people during the coming winter.

The Administration proposes to stabilize rather than upset trade conditions; to correct trade abuses and restore the business of producing and distributing food, disturbed by a world-wide war, to a reasonable and normal basis.

The central offices are located at Washington and the Administration has assembled there the best expert advice in the country on home economics, food utilization, trade practices and trade wastes, distribution of food by wholesale and retail merchants, operation of public eating houses and on many other subjects connected with food control.

The control of food exports, such as grains, meats and sugar, will be regulated from Washington. The control and distribution of the internal food supply, with the possible exception of a few great staples, such as wheat and sugar, which must be handled on a national basis, is largely placed in the hands of the Federal Food Administrators of the several States. The Food Control Bill is broad in its scope and almost unlimited in its authority. It contains regulations against hoarding, speculation and the destruction of foodstuffs. It provides that dealers in fundamental staples be licensed and that licensed dealers operate in accordance with the regulations laid down by the Administration.

It is the duty of the Food Administrators in the several States to determine violations of the law and regulations. And yet the Administration hopes to accomplish the desired results by voluntary co-operation rather than by unwilling service, and prosecutions will be started only after careful and extensive investigations.

State organizations are given the immense task of proving to the people that saving is essentially necessary to win the war. The army of helpers which assisted in making the pledge campaign a success in Indiana must not be allowed to disintegrate and it becomes our duty to continue the food conservation propaganda throughout the duration of the war in order that the food supply is conserved and that substitution is practiced so that the surplus of exportable products is increased.

The Central States must assume the immense burden of provisioning this country and to a large extent our allies and our army. We are, therefore, charged with the duty of stimulating production. In this work we should co-operate in every way with the Department of Agriculture and with the many permanent agricultural organizations in the State. Professor G. I. Christie, at the head of the Extension Division of Purdue University, and his corps of county agricultural agents provide the legitimate medium through which to stimulate production.

STATE ORGANIZATION.

Each State is provided with a Food Control organization, at the head of which is a Federal Food Administrator. In the Indiana organization the Federal Food Administrator is assisted by a Director of Home Economics, Mary L. Matthews, Purdue University, Lafayette; Don Herold, Director of Publicity; Meyer Heller, New Castle, State Merchant Representative, and by numerous other organizations which are doing special work, such as the moving picture operators and libraries.

The food conservation work has been carried on in the counties under the direction of the woman member of the County Council of Defense, who in most instances has organized a corps of workers and carried through the campaign to a successful conclusion. It is suggested that you leave for the most part the conservation work to the organizations already in the field. It will be advisable, however, for you to keep in touch with the county chairman and with such other helpers as may be able to give her and you efficient aid.

The State organization has its headquarters at the State House at Indianapolis, where, in conjunction with the State Council of Defense, it proposes to direct and execute the plans of the Federal Food Administration as they may affect food production and distribution in Indiana.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION.

The county organization is headed by the Federal Food Administrator, nominated by the County Council of Defense and appointed by the Federal Food Administrator for the State. The County Food Administrator is a volunteer worker, serving without pay and interested only in doing what he can to further the plans of the government in administering the Food Control law. It is suggested that an office be maintained at which the administrator may be reached by telephone. Upon taking the oath of office, supplies of stationery, together with the franking privilege will be furnished. All other expenses incident to the work of food control in the county must be assumed by the County Administrator or provided for by the County Council of Defense.

DUTIES OF THE FEDERAL FOOD ADMINISTRATOR FOR THE COUNTY.

The representative of the Federal Food Administration in the county is directly responsible to the Federal Food Administrator of the State for the enforcement of the Food Control law within the county and the observance of the regulations and plans of the Federal Food Administration in so far as they apply to the distribution of foods and the conservation of foodstuffs. The Administrator should be in close touch with wholesale and retail merchants, with canners, packers, bakers and all other men in businesses licensed to operate under the Food Control law. He should let it be known that any complaints concerning unfair prices and practices of hoarding will be investigated whenever reported to him.

In the event of local disturbances, such as shortages in the milk and sugar supply, it will be the duty of the County Food Administrator to take such action as may be necessary temporarily to remedy the situation. But any plan which tends to establish permanent conditions should be referred to the Federal Food Administrator at Indianapolis for his approval.

In the furtherance of the conservation of certain staples the Food Administration has proposed the observance of wheatless and meatless days. Plans for the observance of these days have been formulated and are generally understood. Local deputies, in most instances local food officials and health officers, have been asked to represent the Federal Food Administrator for the State in most cities and towns. The County Food Administrator will not take over this work, but he will keep in touch with these local deputies and assist them whenever he may be of help. It will be his duty to encourage the observance of wheatless and meatless days and the willing compliance with the rules of the Food Administration in the homes throughout the county and in this work he should secure the co-operation and assistance of the county press, school officials, churches, fraternal organizations and every other medium which can be utilized for the purpose of creating a proper public sentiment.

GENERAL RULES.

Observe always the desire of the Food Administration to leave the solution of our food problem with the people. We are asking them to organize from the bottom up. We are seeking to impose no organization from the top. Autocracy is strong because of its ability to impose organization by force from the top. Democracy succeeds because each individual acts on his own initiative. If this individualism cannot be so organized as to defend itself, then democracy cannot stand. So guide the people of your county—help them but do not compel them except when all other means of control fail.

Keep in touch with H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator, who can be reached between the hours of 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. at the State House at Indianapolis over the Bell Telephone, Old Phone, Main 6488. When a conference is advisable you are authorized to call this number and have the charge reversed. If personal conferences are necessary you should arrange for them in advance. The rush of work is so great that Dr. Barnard believes this arrangement will save the time both of county administrators and of his own staff.

All problems which affect the general purpose of the Federal or State Food Administration should be handled according to the rules laid down. In the event important matters arise which are not covered by the rules and regulations the matter should be referred to Dr. Barnard for his consideration. In addressing communications to the State Administration all matters concerning price regulation should be marked "Attention, Mr. Bishop." Matters of general interest and those pertaining to the food conservation movement should be marked "Attention, Mr. Stainsby." Matters concerning advertising and publicity should be marked "Attention, Mr. Herold."

I. L. Miller has been asked by Dr. Barnard to act as his personal representative in dealing with matters concerning the County Food Administration. You will understand, however, that Dr. Barnard will be glad to deal with you personally whenever it is possible for him to do so.

Your name has been placed on the mailing list of the Federal Food Administration at Washington and on that of the State Council of Defense. All available material will be forwarded you promptly and special instructions will be sent you as fast as they are received from Washington or issued by the State Administration.

In conclusion I wish to remind you again of the great importance of the work you are to do in your county. You will be looked to by your people to protect them from unfair prices and to provide them with food when supplies run short. And it is your duty above all else to convince them that the Food Administration is working for the perpetuation of the principles on which our democracy stands, both in our own country and the war-scourged lands of Europe.

Mr. Marshall's Message

Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States and formerly Governor of Indiana, who was unable to address the mass meeting held in connection with the State-wide war conference, prepared the following statement for The Indiana Bulletin:

"I have full confidence, not only in the patriotism and intelligence, but also in the sound common sense of the people of the imperial commonwealth of Indiana.

"So far as devotion to duty is concerned, no new springs have been discovered. Under like circumstances conduct is apt to be much the same now as it was fifty-six years ago. It was given me then to hear the views and to grasp, although imperfectly, the great questions which resulted in the war for the preservation of the Union.

"I knew that Mr. Lincoln obtained the electoral votes of Indiana at the hands of a minority of its citizens and that Mr. Douglas agreed, from a theoretical standpoint, with the constitutional views of the South. What the South could not win in constitutional ways it proposed to destroy by the strong arm of force.

"Within a month after Sumter was fired upon Stephen A. Douglas, in a speech at Chicago, fixed the attitude of more than 90 per cent. of his followers and, next to Abraham Lincoln, was, under God, a compelling force which saved the republic. I, as a boy, read what he then said and now in my old age, when confronting another crisis in the history of the republic, I gladly quote from that speech as follows:

"But this is no time for a detail of causes. The conspiracy is now known. Armies have been raised, war is levied to accomplish it. There are only two sides to the question. Every man must be for the United States or against it. There can be no neutrals in this war; only patriots—or traitors." * * *

"The greater our unanimity the speedier the day of peace. We have prejudices to overcome from the few short months since of a fierce party contest. Yet these must be allayed. Let us lay aside all criminations and recriminations as to the origin of these difficulties."

"This speech ended, and ended forever, the hopes of the South to win its fight because of a divided North, with the intention thereafter to conquer the conquerors. It set brother against brother and son against father and there were few Douglas Democrats who did not see clearly their duty to shoulder arms, forget blood and creed, and kill and slay, if need be, members of their own household that the Union might be preserved."

"Now and then I hear some man feebly protesting in a quavering voice that it is a hard, hard thing to ask a man of German blood to shoot at his friends and relatives. For the republic I may say what the Master said of himself: 'He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me. He that loveth son or daughter more than Me is not worthy of Me.'"

"If my people could, as they did—Douglas Democrats though they were—take up arms against their blood relatives of the South, then any American citizen of German birth or German origin can do the same in this sad hour and, failing to do it, he is not worthy of the republic."

"Let us not forget there are now only two grades of citizens, patriots and traitors, and only one party, the Party of the Union."

"Loyalty and devotion must be evinced in conduct as in word and, so unanimous is this sentiment, that if any of us, who in normal times are partisans, shall seek to fool the people with reference to our partisanship by concealing it in a camouflage of patriotism, be sure that the sharpshooters of the republic will bring him down, as they will bring down the open and avowed enemies of our common cause."

Hearing Arranged on Track Elevation

Statement by H. R. Kurrie Relative to Suspension of Work on Big Railroad Project.

Representatives of all parties concerned will meet with the Indiana State Council of Defense at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, January 2, for a hearing on the matter of the proposed postponement of track elevation work in Indianapolis for the period of the war. Citizens of South Indianapolis, through William T. Patten, chairman of a special committee, asked the Defense Council for a hearing, and Chairman Will H. Hays announced that he would ask the Indianapolis city administration, the railroads, the Chamber of Commerce of Indianapolis, and citizens generally, to be present to hear all sides of the war-time discussion of the issue of essential and non-essential public works as affecting war work and war efficiency.

At a previous meeting the Indiana State Council of Defense passed resolutions suggesting that work on track elevation in Indianapolis, so far as practicable, should be put off until after the war, thus releasing railroad equipment, money and labor for use and employment on strictly war work.

H. R. Kurrie, in a formal statement, explained the purpose and meaning of the resolution and told why it should be adhered to. Mr. Kurrie originated the resolution previously adopted, the policy set forth in the resolution being merely a reiteration of a policy laid down in an earlier case, that of a public improvement at Muncie, Ind.

This policy, it was further shown, is merely the application in Indiana and finally in Indianapolis, of the Federal government's own war-time plan of doing away with public work which interferes with war activities.

South Side citizens of Indianapolis who had met and named a committee to discuss the situation, and who had passed resolutions urging that track elevation work be not stopped without good reason, were commended for taking a fair and reasonable open course, and Mr. Patten, spokesman for the South Side people, was assured that a fair hearing would be given, with all concerned represented.

Mr. Kurrie, in his statement discussing the issues raised in the press on the subject of track elevation, presented facts to show that the railroads, including the Monon, of which he is president, had co-operated with the city of Indianapolis since 1914 in track elevation work and refuted press stories which had suggested that the Monon was against track elevation. He presented figures to show that while steel is on the ground to put in three bridges above streets, and while material was on hand to put a floor in the projected Union Station train shed, the steel for bridges at Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia avenue, East, South and Washington streets had not been delivered, and that the steel for the train shed above the floor had not been delivered and could not be delivered.

While steel has been contracted for, it develops that it cannot be made for the use set out in the contract for the reason the United States government has taken over the steel materials for use in building ships.

Mr. Kurrie said the 35,000 tons of steel needed and not yet obtainable would require 700 cars to haul it to Indianapolis, and he urged that these open-top cars should be hauling war supplies such as coal. His statement showed that only 10 to 15 per cent. of the masonry or stone work for the track elevation has been put in and that of the 1,000,000 cubic yards of filling needed only 20,000 cubic yards had been completed. He declared that 50,000 carloads of material would be required to make the fills in the next two years and he asserted that this work could not and would not be done by any but regular railroad equipment, the open cars that otherwise might be and ought to be used to haul war supplies and fuel for the people and for war industries.

He showed further that hundreds of carloads of wooden piling must be hauled from outside the State to be used in the track elevation work, requiring regular railroad equipment. He argued that the effort to go on with track elevation work in view of the government's commandeering of steel and cars for war ends would mean confusion and traffic congestion more serious than now is being experienced.

He further stated that 500 men a day would be required on track elevation work, and he asserted that the Monon Railroad Company would be glad to hire that many men at this time. He declared that he had found the Federal government anxious to hire men to work on steel for ships and on other war materials.

On the financial end of the elevation project Mr. Kurrie pointed out that while his own road would not need to borrow money, other lines would compete against the government for loans with which to go on with the elevation proposition.

James L. Keach suggested that the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce has started the agitation of the question, and that the newspapers probably had published only what they had obtained from the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Keach asked if any representative of the Chamber of Commerce was present to speak to the Defense Council for that organization. There was no response.

The committee on public policy not being ready to report on the question of recommending to Congress the passage of the proposed Federal suffrage amendment, and Charles Warren Fairbanks, chairman of that committee, being absent, Chairman Hays named a special committee to consider the suffrage question as presented by women of the Indiana Franchise League. The special committee, with Rev. A. B. Storms as chairman, includes E. M. Wilson and Frank Wampler. It was asked to report at an early day.

Mr. Keach reported as a special committee on the question of profiteering in yarn as reported from Benton county, where it is said dealers charged $4 for yarn which was supplied through the Red Cross for $2.25. Mr. Keach suggested that the matter was one to be handled in Benton county by the local workers through co-operation with the dealers. He took the position that the dealer who overcharged for yarn probably could be reached on a friendly basis and could be induced to be fair if the thing could be put up to him in a direct way. Chairman Hays announced he would write to Benton county advising the workers to solve their own problem.

Mr. Kurrie called attention to the established governmental policy of using the ordinary channels of trade for distributing purposes.

George Ade, head of the publicity committee of the Council, presented in detail a recent development of the publicity and educational campaign being urged by Washington. The division of films of the Committee on Public Information at Washington recently sent Charles P. Watson to Indiana to ask the Indiana State Council of Defense to create a State division of films and to handle through this new department a series of war films to be supplied by the Council of National Defense, the films to be employed in spreading among the people a fuller knowledge of the war, a realization of what the war means to other nations and to the United States, and a conception of the immense war activities now going on in this country.

It is proposed to sell the State Council of Defense some thirty-six films, these to be used in putting on patriotic benefit performances in large cities on a big scale, the proceeds to go to pay for the thirty-six films and for six films a week to be released later to moving picture theaters in such a way as to avoid entering into competition against the regular film exchanges.

Mr. Ade was asked to go further into the matter and to bring it up at the next meeting.

A. E. Reynolds reported that the corn embargo had been lifted on corn waiting to be shipped to Indiana from the West, and that the feed ordered by Indiana live stock feeders was moving forward.

Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, reported that a shortage of engines on the Evansville & Indianapolis railroad had prevented flour and other shipments, the result being carloads of corn have been held three weeks, or until the corn had rotted.

Mr. Kurrie told of efforts made to get locomotives for the E. & I. Evans Woollen, Federal Fuel Administrator for Indiana, stated that the Indiana Public Service Commission, through its chairman, E. I. Lewis, had been working two months on the problem without results.

The matter was turned over to the transportation committee, headed by Mr. Kurrie, with the suggestion that efforts be continued until locomotives had been obtained for the E. & I.

Nat E. Squibb reported that a bill had been drafted under which it is purposed to direct and empower Herbert C. Hoover, United States Food Administrator, to use the distilleries of the country for the making of industrial alcohol from soft corn and for the making of feed as a by-product. The bill is to be offered in January by Congressman Lincoln Dixon of the Fourth Indiana district and is to carry an appropriation with which to buy alcohol for government use.

War Before Business

"There is not room today in the United States for fighting a war like this one and at the same time supporting a business boom. We have neither the men, materials nor equipment for both."—United States Fuel Administration.

"Let us, then, start the New Year with the consciousness that our cause is just and that we are going to make it win. If we do this there need be no fear as to the future."—GOVERNOR JAMES P. GOODRICH.

Vigo County Offers Farm for Reserve

Training School for Young Agricultural Workers Secured Through Efforts of Rotary Club.

Vigo county is to have and maintain a training farm for members of the United States Boys' Working Reserve. The Rotary Club of Terre Haute has agreed to raise $6,000 to make the enterprise possible. The farm is owned and offered by J. M. Cristy.

A farm has been donated and the owner of the proffered 200 acres has volunteered to take in hand, without pay, the training of boys for farm work. Benjamin Blumberg, who is leading a campaign in Terre Haute for members in the United States Boys' Working Reserve, reports that the man who offers his farm and his own services is thoroughly capable and experienced.

Mr. Blumberg also reports 161 boys enrolled for the reserve in Terre Haute, with the membership campaign only just started.

Dr. Stanley Coulter presented to the Terre Haute Rotary Club the arguments in favor of training an army of high school boys to do farm work in the coming planting and harvesting season. He urged that the city of Terre Haute alone should be intensively training fifty or more high school boys preparatory to the farm work that must be done next season, and done in the absence of a large number of adult workers who have gone to the colors as fighting men.

It was pointed out that the withdrawal of more than a million men for military service had meant a serious lack of labor on farms. Last year many high school boys went to the farms to serve, but did not always measure up to the real needs because they had not been trained for the tasks set out on the farm.

It is the purpose of the Boys' Working Reserve in Indiana to establish a number of training farms. A farm of 640 acres in northern Indiana already has been contributed by the Straus Bros. of Ligonier. It is understood that in addition to the farm now being arranged for by the Terre Haute Rotary Club, at least a third farm is in prospect.

Under the proposed plan boys will train on these farms in lots of 100 or so, each group taking an intensive course of three weeks, to be followed by an advance to actual farm work where the boys are most needed. A new group of student workers will go into camp as each company finishes its training, and the training camps will be kept working constantly, turning out periodically graduates who can be made useful on the land in the production of needed crops. The boys will live in tents and will be under expert supervision, with part time given to military and physical training.

Officers of Terre Haute Rotary Club are: Chas. E. McKean, president, and Fred R. Waldson, secretary.

The farm committee includes Paul Turk, P. E. Allen, Geo. Wycoff, J. H. Clinebell, Wayne Bigwood, Benjamin Blumberg and J. M. Cristy.

FARMERS PRAISE RESERVE.

At the beginning of the summer of 1917 many farmers said that an inexperienced city boy was of no use on the farm. At the end of the summer of 1917 hundreds of farmers wrote to officers of the reserve to say that their judgment of the boys has been mistaken and that many of the young fellows did better work than the men they were accustomed to employ for the harvest season. The farmers are asking that more boys be furnished to them next year so that the planted acreage may be increased.

Farmers' grange societies are passing resolutions commending the work of the reserve and expressing the hope that it will be expanded and continued.

One large fruit grower wrote: "If you can guarantee us a supply of boys every year we will erect comfortable quarters in which to house them. Tell us what you want and we will supply it. We are tired of hobo labor."

EMPLOYMENT FOR EVERY BOY.

The Federal State Director is receiving letters like the following each day, asking for farm help. In many sections of the state it appears that the farm labor situation is serious and the tremendous task ahead of the Boys' Working Reserve next spring and summer is so self-evident that there is no doubt that productive employment will be found for every available boy who enrolls:

"Dear Sir:—Our farmers are interested in the plan of the Boys' Working Reserve and would like to know more about it. We anticipate a heavy shortage in labor for our farms the coming season. Kindly advise what you can do for us. Yours very truly,

"JOHN S. MITCHELL,

"Pres. Peoples State Bank, Windfall, Ind."

"Dear Sir:—Our growers of canning crops are in a quandary with reference to the labor situation for the coming season. We know of no available source of labor except that possible through the Boys' Working Reserve. We would like to know if you can guarantee these growers that this help will be available when needed? Very truly,

"ROYAL PACKING CO., Windfall, Ind."

"Dear Sir:—We are writing you in regard to the labor conditions which will no doubt be serious next season. If you will give us assurance of help from the Boys' Working Reserve when it is needed, we will be able to greatly increase our acreage. Yours very truly,

"GREENFIELD PACKING CO.,
"Greenfield, Ind."

"Dear Sir:—I handle considerable live stock and require a lad of a rather dependable nature and with a liking toward live stock farming. I have taken one such lad, and am encouraging him to save his money and to take the farmers' short course at Purdue University. I am offering the right kind of a boy $30.00 per month straight time and board to begin with, and if he can manage the work will give him a man's wages. Very truly yours,

"OSCAR A. SWANK, Lafayette, Ind."

The Battle Cry of Feed 'Em.

Yes, we'll rally round the farm, boys,
We'll rally once again,
Shouting the battle cry of Feed 'Em.
We've got the ships and money
And the best of fighting men,
Shouting the battle cry of Feed 'Em.

The onion forever, the beans and the corn,
Down with the tater—it's up the next morn—
While we rally round the plow, boys,
And take the hoe again,
Shouting the battle cry of Feed 'Em.

—Fred Emerson Brooks ("Patriotic Toasts").

Wheatless and meatless days here at home mean defeatless days for our "boys" abroad.

Labor Problem Has Effect on Farming

Chairman Moss Regards Response to Appeal for Greater Production Most Gratifying.

Ralph W. Moss, chairman of the Indiana committee on food production and conservation, addressed the Food Production Session of the War Conference, December 14, on the subject, "Increased Production." Mr. Moss showed that the patriotic response for increased production, beginning with the home garden campaign at the outbreak of the war down to the present seed corn campaign, had been most gratifying. He declared that even with the increases effected this year he believed it possible for each acre to produce twice as much as ever before.

"The labor problem," he said, "was serious, of course, but the competition of the industrial wages and the high price now received for farm produce demanded that higher wages be paid to farm hands." He stated that when this was fully realized, the farm labor supply would be more plentiful.

The cry for fats is the greatest need of our enemy and one of the great needs of our country and allies. The Food Committee plans to do its share in helping to supply this need, through the increased hog production campaign; the increased dairy production campaign; and greater production of fat producing feed, as corn; and by the judicious consumption of farm roughages and grains through livestock.

TWO KINDS OF WAR WORK.

Colonel Ousley, assistant to Secretary Houston, was sent from Washington, D. C., to represent the Department of Agriculture at this meeting. Colonel Ousley stated that the necessary war work naturally divided itself into two groups, the popular work and the fundamental work, the popular work being the military, and the fundamental work being such as mining, manufacturing and farming. "Producing the food for the nation is prosaic, but, nevertheless, must be done efficiently if we expect to win the war. From the standpoint of the Department of Agriculture, the problems before the farmers at present are seeds, machinery, fertilizers, and labor. In addition to this, each state is expected to outline immediately a spring planting campaign."

C. B. Riley, secretary of the Grain Dealers' association and a member of the State Food Production and Conservation committee, spoke of the seed corn situation and on the embargo declared against shipping corn and oats into Indiana. It was felt at this meeting that much of the seed corn containing a high per cent. of moisture had been destroyed by the heavy freezes.

It was suggested that Colonel Ousley present the facts of the serious seed corn situation in this state to the United States Department of Agriculture and that Director Christie present them to the National Seed Stocks committee in an effort to get assistance toward relieving the situation. It is hoped to work out some scheme whereby the old seed corn in the state may be located. Undoubtedly close to a million bushels of 1916 corn is scattered about the state at the present time.

The need for saving the old corn is apparent when it is realized that the major part of the new corn contained twenty to thirty per cent. of moisture during the recent zero weather. On December 1 the government men in the state-wide seed corn selection campaign had located 2,291,000 bushels of well-matured new seed corn. Much

Patriotism in Indiana

Adams County.—A. R. Bell, near Decatur, announces through the press that he has on his farm a number of good trees which are free to all who will cut them into stove-wood. Those who are short on coal and who can use wood are taking advantage of the Bell offer, organizers of sawbuck clubs among high school boys being especially and practically interested.

Daniel N. Erwin of Decatur is the enrolling agent for Adams county in the work of the United States Public Service Reserve, a section of the State Council of Defense, which is being established to serve as a clearing house for labor in the war period.

One of the most complete and all-embracing organizations yet developed in any county for any war purpose was the driving agency created for the Red Cross membership campaign under French Quinn, Mrs. John Niblick, Mrs. S. D. Beavers, Mrs. F. Heuer, Mayor C. N. Christen, John T. Myers and G. T. Burk. One interesting feature of the campaign was the activity of school children. Decatur grade pupils wrote compositions devoted entirely to the Red Cross membership campaign during the week the drive was on. Many of these compositions were used with good effect by the publicity committee, which committee included J. H. Heller, chairman, and C. F. Davidson, E. H. Sprunger, John Mayer and J. Lee Mattox.

Allen County.—The St. Karolus Baromaens Benevolent Society has become the St. Charles Benevolent Society, and its sessions are being conducted in English.

S. M. Foster of the German-American National Bank has been named by John D. Oliver to serve as district chairman of the committee on war thrift certificates and war savings stamps in the war thrift campaign being made in the State.

Fish taken by seiners from St. Mary's river are being sold to Ft. Wayne people at 10 cents a pound as part of the war-time food substitution campaign. Sugar cards have been issued to dealers and consumers in the food administration's work of restricting and regulating the handling and use of sugar.

Red Cross work has been taken up in an extensive way in Ft. Wayne schools through the organization of Junior Red Cross Society branches with 16,000 members. The organization of the children has been brought about under a committee made up of the following: L. C. Ward, chairman; Margaret M. McPhail and Francis M. Price. A Junior Red Cross chapter in the Ft. Wayne high school proved a success, and the work is being extended with the idea of enrolling every pupil for war work. Those who can not afford to pay the small fee are to be provided for out of funds raised by teachers and others. The money raised by means of the membership fee of 25 cents is being used to buy materials.

Allen county teachers, under County Superintendent D. O. McComb, have been unusually active in war work, especially exerting themselves in the recent drive for Red Cross members.

The Ft. Wayne Rotary Club, which brought Lieut. Paul Perlgord to Ft. Wayne for a war meeting, recently bought one hundred dollars' worth of tickets for a Red Cross benefit, and is active in all war work in the county.

St. Joseph County.—A service flag has been raised at the St. Joseph Catholic church in South Bend in honor of thirty men of the church who have gone to the colors. The roll of honor includes the following names: Joseph Beckerich, Arthur Burns, George Burns, Clifford Cassidy, Leonard Chausa, Joseph M. Cooper, Edwin Davies, Oriel DeGraff, George D. Donahue, James Frain, James E. Gilroy, William Hanley, Erwin Hubbard, Theodore Keller, Robert Kiesel, William LaFortune, Dr. James E. MacNeel, Leo McNally, Louis Murphy, Edgar Powers, John A. Poulin, Thomas Robinson, John Rothbaler, Michael Rothbaler, Leo Scheibelhut, Chester Sinnott, Jennings Vurpillat, Joseph Williams, Charles M. Diener, Edward LaFortune.

St. Patrick's church recently raised a service flag which carries thirty-six stars.

The gross receipts of the Orpheum theater, South Bend, for the afternoon of December 7 were given to the Red Cross.

John G. Yeagley, county chairman of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, with the personal help of Isaac D. Straus of Ligonier, state director of the work, is renewing the effort to arouse St. Joseph county people to realize the importance of the work for which the Boys' Reserve is being organized by the Federal government. It is found that a large number of boys in the county already are employed, but the reserve is trying to enlist those who are idle and those who are in high schools to give part of their time to farm or shop work or to cutting wood for fuel. The work is being done preparatory to meeting the needs that are sure to rise next spring.

Vanderburg County.—Women of Vanderburg county have been working actively on war organization in the last few weeks and are getting substantial results. Mrs. James Platt of Evansville, chairman of the committee on food conservation, has completed her organization in the county. Mrs. F. M. Hostetter, leader of the women's section of the County Council of Defense, recently held a successful meeting of women workers and discussed with them the various lines of war work in which Indiana women are engaged.

In the Evansville Journal-News "Patriotic Poem" contest five prize winners have been reported as follows: "A Prayer," by Norman Beach; "Our Flag," Mary L. Rikhoft; "Evansville's First Boy," by Ruth Wallace; "The German Kaiser, by Himself," Kathleen Logsdon, and "Old Glory's Her Name," by Bonnie Blue Loder. All the winners are pupils in the Evansville high school.

Under Mrs. William E. Habbe Red Cross work is being done by several women in the Vanderburg county jail.

St. Lucas church of Evansville gave a part of its Christmas fund this year to the movement for the relief of Armenian and Syrian victims of the Turk. Instead of the usual Christmas treat the money was contributed to war relief.

Evansville Boy Scouts are doing nothing but war work and are constantly busy. Recently the boys have been very successful in inducing citizens to adopt the plan of displaying a flag at every home. Red Cross seals sales were handled very largely by the Scouts with good results, a Scout-managed benefit at the Criterion theater being especially productive.

War mothers in Vanderburg county, under Mrs. Boaz Crawford and Mrs. A. R. Schultz, are looking especially after homeless soldiers.

Vigo County.—Captain Samuel D. Royse of Terre Haute, formerly county attorney of Vigo county, recently resigned the latter office to accept a captain's commission, after going through the work of the second officers' training camp at Ft. Benjamin Harrison. Captain Royse now is on duty at Camp Dodge, Iowa.

Anton Hulman, federal food administrator for Vigo county, has issued a warning to women of Terre Haute who have been detected in the practice of sending their children on the rounds of various stores to buy sugar, thus accumulating an excess and depriving their neighbors of a proper share of sugar. The hoarder in Vigo county will be reported to the Federal officers.

More than two hundred Christmas packages for soldiers in France were sent from Terre Haute.

Terre Haute people recently gave a phonograph to the machine gun company sent to camp from that city. Records are now being contributed through the Terre Haute Tribune for use on the musical apparatus.

The Terre Haute Y. M. C. A. is co-operating with the government in training men for endurance and service, and recently has begun regular instruction in self-defense, boxing and the like. Richard Burnett, a featherweight, has been engaged as a boxing teacher.

A notable patriotic meeting in Vigo county was that in which students of the Indiana State Normal School greeted Captain C. Leys Brown of the Canadian Royal Rifles. Captain Brown is in the United States on a recruiting tour. He was gassed and wounded at Ypres.

Vermilion County.—Clinton women are systematically working to provide a comfort kit for every soldier going from Clinton. An organization keeps tab on the names and addresses of the fighting men, and where relatives desire to send the kits, the women's organization supplies the outfits at cost to be forwarded by the families.

Wabash County.—Exempted men in Wabash county are taking orders in true military spirit from the agencies which have war work in charge. In the recent drive for Red Cross members many of the men who have been exempted under the selective enlistment law were active in helping to push the movement. Among those who assisted in the campaign were the following: Gilbert E. Landrum, John F. Rager, Frank Jones, August Kramer, Howard Peters, O. M. Grossnickel, Frank Gaines, L. A. Giver, George Faust, Reuben Sundheimer, Eldon Rager, George W. Bents, Simon P. Pfeil, Dale A. Wood, Lester Eppeley, Hugh Repp, Herbert O'Brien, Joseph Cooper, William Dub, D. W. Cross, Harry Ravenscroft, Lester Simon, M. F. Lutz, Guy Anderson, Roy P. Young, Jesse Johnson, Lutz Rettig, Glen Ellis, Hugh Gill, W. C. Whistler, Ira C. Dawes, George Courtright, Owen Weesner, Ross Hapert, Lee Smith, Sam Handscheg.

The Wabash Franchise League gave a benefit rummage sale and realized $42.50 for the Red Cross.

To help meet a local coal emergency the Wabash Water and Light Company put a carload of coal on sale in half-ton lots at $2.50 a ton. This timely action prevented a large number of people from suffering for lack of fuel.

Mrs. Edward Jaccard, a teacher of French, has opened classes in Wabash as a war activity, and gives half the proceeds to the Red Cross.

Washington County.—Soldiers from Washington county in the various camps were remembered with Christmas packets, the work being done by the Red Cross under the direction of Claude B. Paynter of Salem, who gathered the names and addresses of the soldiers and looked after the matter so thoroughly that none was left out of the reckoning.

Whitley County.—Grace English Lutheran church, Columbia City, recently dedicated two flags presented by Mrs. Henry McLallen. A patriotic sermon was preached by the pastor and a short address was made by Henry H. Lawrence, the oldest civil war veteran of the congregation. A roll of honor, carrying the names of members of the church who are in army and navy, was unveiled with proper ceremonies. On the roll are the following names: Col. Merritt W. Ireland, Maj. George B. Harrison, Lieut. Ray P. Harrison, Lieut. Luther E. Mertz, Lieut. Homer Blinder, first-class private; Kellard F. Dohner, Ph. D.; Lieut. Carl L. Souder, M. D.; Lieut. Otto W. Grieler, M. D.; Lieut. Earl A. Smith, Sergt.-Maj. Keller L. Wheeler, Sergt.-Maj. G. Fred Yontz, Private Franklin J. Hull, Jr.; Private Walter Wetzel, Private Lloyd Stough.

Warwick County.—Women of Warwick county have formed for war work an organization known as the County Federation of Woman's Organizations. Miss Cleve Mellen of Boonville is chairman and Mrs. Earl Scales is secretary. Mrs. Eva Robbick of Wabash assisted in starting the organization, and the purpose is to have represented on the board of directors and coordinated in all federation activities every woman's organization, large or small, in Warwick county. The attempt will be made to centralize energy, to provide a central agency for the quick transmission of information, suggestions and instructions from the national and state war administrations and to prevent waste effort and overlapping of activities carried on by Warwick county women who are doing and who are to do war work.

On thing Warwick county women are working out at this time is a plan for the appointment and assignment of a woman county agent or home demonstrator.

Editor Thomas E. Downs of the Boonville Standard, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, is at the head of a movement for the organization in Warwick county of one or more units of the state militia to take the duties, state service only, formerly performed by the Indiana National Guard. Captain Downs has been urging the movement with great vigor and effectiveness.

Mrs. Esther Hoover Lewis has been appointed as head of the woman's section of the Warwick County Council of Defense in place of Mrs. Florence Scales, who resigned. Mrs. Lewis has been active and successful in getting the women of the county organized for war work in connection with the defense council.

Wells County.—Charles W. Decker of Bluffton has been named as Wells county enrolling agent for the United States Public Service Reserve. The selection was made by Judge C. E. Sturgis, chairman of the County Council of Defense.

A. E. Harbin of the Geneva high school has organized the boys of the community in Sawbuck clubs, and has advertised in local papers offering the services of the boys in helping to cut fallen timber, old tops or available trees for stove wood. The boys work on shares or for cash, charging reasonable wages for the service. This activity comes under the work of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which is a department of the State and County Councils of Defense.

Warren County.—Farmers and grain dealers of Warren county, organized to help in the campaign of the State Council of Defense to make the utmost of the corn crop and to save the soft corn for feed or for other good purposes, distributed a circular in the county setting out instructions for the handling of the corn and urging the use of well-ventilated cribs built on suggestions given by the food distribution section of the defense council.

Frank Goodwin, a Warren county farmer, contributed to the Red Cross all the corn the women of the organization could gather and haul in a day. Mrs. Goodwin, who is an expert driver, took the lead in the work. The women husked the corn and hauled it away, realizing a good sum of money from the sale of the product.

Wayne County.—Mrs. W. A. Roach of Richmond was named as Wayne county's war mother, the selection being made by the County Council of Defense. Mrs. Roach is organizing the county with the help of township war mothers, and in Richmond an organization is being worked out by wards and blocks, and the plan is to use girls as helpers. War mothers are women who have sons in the military service, and they are organized to assist in all sorts of war activities. The Wayne county war mothers gave their earliest organized efforts to the Y. M. C. A. war fund campaign and the Red Cross membership drive.

Boys of the manual training department of the Baxter school, Richmond, have rigged up a loom and are weaving rag rugs to be used in army convalescent hospitals. Girls in this same school are knitting squares for army hospital comfort.

Members of Grace M. E. church, Richmond, have been observing wheatless, meatless and wasteless meals in line with the Hoover food conservation and substitution campaign. In one week the people of this congregation reported 64 wheatless meals, 143 meatless meals and 210 clean-plate meals.

Albert D. Gayle, president of the First National Bank, Richmond, has taken the lead in a movement to increase the number of sheep and the output of wool in Wayne county as a war measure. Mr. Gayle recently bought 420 head of sheep to be used in stocking Wayne county farms. This activity is a part of the general movement to put 35,000 new sheep on Indiana farms—one wool-bearer to each Indiana soldier in the field.

Resolution on Recruiting Aliens.

The Indiana State Council of Defense, at its regular meeting, January 2, adopted the following resolution:

Whereas, The exemption from army service of those in the United States who claim citizenship in or who are subjects of the countries associated with the United States in the prosecution of this war brings about a condition which demands the active cooperation of all citizens and organizations of labor and business; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the State Council of Defense pledges its assistance in the work of getting volunteer recruits for the forces of all countries associated with the United States in the prosecution of this war from among the men exempted from the United States draft by reason of such claims.

Federal Control of Railroads Injected

State Council of Defense Defers Action on Track Elevation—Other Matters Before Session.

Railroad track elevation in Indianapolis and the question of the postponement of nonessential portions of that work for the period of the war formed the basis for a discussion led by citizens of the south side of Indianapolis at the meeting of the State Council of Defense, Wednesday, January 2. John F. White read a statement prepared by a committee of interested citizens setting out the arguments in favor of continuing the track elevation work, the suggestion being that wooden supports might be used in grade separation at dangerous crossings in place of steel, which is being diverted to ship-fabrication for the government's use in winning the war.

In view of the fact that the Federal Government has taken over control of the railroads and of railroad work since the Council of National Defense and the Indiana State Council of Defense advanced the advisory suggestion that only essential work be done in the war emergency period, and in view of the fact that the City of Indianapolis has not appeared officially to take part in the discussion of the track elevation matter, the defense council decided to put the question over for further consideration at the next weekly meeting of the body, Wednesday, January 9. It is expected all parties concerned will be present, including a representative of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce.

The committee of south side Indianapolis citizens, representing the interests of some 70,000 or 80,000 people, according to their statement, was made up as follows: William T. Patten, chairman; John F. White, Rev. George S. Henninger, John B. Downey, Michael J. Shea, William Mackenhorst, Charles R. Yoke, E. E. Heller, George W. Bone and James Matthews. The statement of the citizens' committee was prepared with the aid of B. J. T. Jeup, Indianapolis city civil engineer, and carried arguments to show that many streets leading to the south side of Indianapolis are blockaded or rendered dangerous under existing conditions. The citizens' committee argued that the elevation work ought to be speeded up rather than postponed.

Thomas F. Snyder, speaking, as he said, for transfer men and other interests in Indianapolis, showed a map of the territory affected by the track elevation project and declared that freight congestion had resulted from the blocking of various streets. He urged that the work go on in order that more serious congestion might be prevented.

The statement of citizens carried the assurance that the patriotic motive of the defense council's advisory suggestion was understood and appreciated. The citizens voiced a similar patriotic motive, but urged that postponement of track elevation, in their judgment, would not help in war work.

It was suggested in the citizens' statement that the putting off of track elevation work at Muncie was not a case analogous to the Indianapolis situation. At Muncie the work had not been started. In Indianapolis, it was pointed out, the elevation work had been carried part way to completion. The fear was expressed that postponement at this time might mean several years of delay in the work.

F. C. Lingenfelter, civil engineer in charge of track elevation work in Indianapolis, told of the work done and in prospect. He said most of the work now being done is concrete work.

A. E. Reynolds suggested that under new and changed conditions, with the Federal Government directing railroad operations and activities, it might turn out that any action taken by defense councils, national and state, even advisory suggestions, were superfluous and unnecessary. He moved that the matter be postponed for further hearing to Wednesday, January 9.

Chairman Hays informed the defense council that a report in writing on the track elevation situation had been prepared by the scientific research section of the Indiana State Council of Defense. Copies of this report were ordered to be supplied to those interested.

The defense council passed a resolution recommending and encouraging the recruiting activities in Indiana of Capt. A. Leys Brown of the Canadian forces, who is seeking to enlist British subjects in the armies of Canada and England. The resolution appears elsewhere in this Bulletin.

The special committee on suffrage created to consider the request recently made by the Indiana Franchise League that the Indiana State Council of Defense recommend to the Council of National Defense that votes for women be urged on Congress as a "war measure," reported that it had called on Charles W. Fairbanks, chairman of the council's committee on public policy, that Mr. Fairbanks, while declaring for suffrage as a matter of justice and right, had declined to regard votes for women as a war measure. The committee took the same position. Rev. A. B. Storms made the report for the committee, which included Frank Wampler and E. M. Wilson.

Mr. Fairbanks' telegram follows:

"I have not been advised until the receipt of your dispatch that any such petition as mentioned by you has been presented or that any opinion has been desired. I am not in favor of any legislation upon woman suffrage as a war measure, but I am enthusiastically in favor of it, as I always have been, as a matter of sheer right and common justice."

Volunteer organizers, business and professional men who have offered their services to help in the counties of Indiana to make the ninety-two projected war conferences successful, were named by Chairman Will H. Hays, who announced that the volunteers would meet later in the day to plan their activities. Four county war conferences already are definitely arranged for and a schedule of conferences to be held in all the counties is being made at the State Defense Council headquarters in co-operation with the speakers' bureau, which has the task of providing speakers, including men and women of national repute who are to be sent to Indiana from Washington to help make the county war conference notable.

Chairman Hays announced that a deputation of members of the Iowa State Council of Defense would visit the Indiana Defense Council, Friday, January 4, in search of ideas. The visitors, he said, would come under escort of John H. Winterbotham of the Council of National Defense. Mr. Winterbotham recently studied Indiana's defense organization. Members were asked to be present Friday to greet the Iowa men.

Frank Wampler was asked by Chairman Hays to go to Columbus with the Iowa delegation to make a special study of a labor exchange system being used by the Ohio State Council of Defense.

Action was deferred on a resolution suggesting that the Provost Marshal-General's office and the conscription agencies generally give careful consideration to the demand for "key men on farms" in making exemptions. Frank Wampler, of the labor section, suggested that the Federal Government is on the point of naming a labor director for the state and that the probabilities were that this would amount to a labor dictatorship. It was pointed out that advisory or suggestive resolutions would not affect the labor director's policy, and that farm labor problems might well be left to such dictatorship. Charles Fox, labor man on the council, agreed with Mr. Wampler that no action was necessary.

Isaac D. Straus, George Ade and A. W. Brady were named on a committee to consider plans for calling in the leaders of certain groups of citizens for the purpose of reminding those leaders that the country is at war and that the patriotic service of all citizens must be given to the nation's cause in the war. Mr. Straus reported a case of one leader in an Indiana community who was inactive himself and who systematically and publicly urged and instructed his followers to maintain an attitude of indifference toward the war and a policy of persistent inactivity. Mr. Straus suggested that such leaders ought to be advised by somebody in authority.

George Ade reported progress in the matter of the adoption of a plan for the use of moving picture films in connection with the publicity work of the defense council, in co-operation with the film division of the committee on public information at Washington. He asked for further time in which to arrange details, reporting that it would be the plan to put the work of the film division in the hands of an expert film man.

N. E. Squibb read the bill now being urged for enactment in Congress to provide a $20,000,000 appropriation to carry out the plan under which 20,000,000 bushels of soft corn is to be converted into feed and industrial alcohol in the next ten months, the alcohol to be bought and stored by the government for war use. The following committee will consider the matter of recommending the bill for passage: Storms, Keach, Christie, Wampler, Irwin.

Chairman Hays named W. A. Brady, Evans Woolen, Will G. Irwin, Charles Fox and Rev. A. B. Storms on a committee to consider the formulation and promulgation of a policy in line with that of the National War Administration on the question of the conduct of business, and to make it plain to the people that the slogan "business as usual," can not be applied to the war situation.

Mr. Keach reported that he had heard the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce Bureau seeking war contracts for Indiana manufacturers at Washington had been charging a 3 per cent. brokerage commission. The matter was taken up for investigation as to the truth or falsity of the charge.

The Council of Defense adopted the special committee report that it was deemed inadvisable to take action on the matter of the activities of the Mothers' Correspondence Club. The report, which is expected to constitute a policy of the council on this subject, follows:

"The work of the Mothers' Correspondence Club deserves commendation. It seems to have had results showing benefits to the men of the navy who have been without home influences. Mrs. Ellis and her associates have carried on a work during the recent years before the war that she shows to have resulted in bringing new conceptions of life to many of the homeless boys in the service.

"The following dispatch recently from France is interesting in its bearing on the question:

"With the American Army in France, December 26.—The American Expeditionary Force wishes to discourage the practice of American women in 'adopting' individual soldiers in France for the period of the war. The practice already threatens to choke the congested mail service and result in delay in the transmission of important matter. Moreover, the censorship regulations forbid the men to correspond with strangers, and as this rule is being enforced rigidly it is desired that the people at home refrain from putting men here in an embarrassing position, as they feel under obligation to answer such communications."

"Under the circumstances it would appear inadvisable for this council to take any action on this subject."

Prof. G. I. Christie of the department of food production and distribution, reported a serious shortage of seed corn and a demand for old corn for seed. It was announced that the government was prepared to use $100,000 to buy old corn for Indiana use in planting the crop for 1918. Prof. Christie reported that Michigan buyers are invading Indiana to purchase old corn for seed. He brought up the matter of speedy buying on the part of Indiana planters to prevent outsiders from taking the seed urgently needed in this state.

A Good Slogan.

FORGET HOW THINGS WERE DONE BEFORE THE WAR; ELIMINATE RED TAPE. WE MUST LEARN, WITH GERMANS, THAT "WAR WILL NOT WAIT." DELAY IS THE KAISER'S ALLY.

The above admonition, sent to his bureau chiefs by William Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, has been officially endorsed by President Woodrow Wilson. It is an appropriate war slogan for individuals as well as government bureaus.

The Bulletin is intended altogether as a disseminator of public information and is in no sense a newspaper. Through its publication the State Council of Defense of Indiana seeks to further the organization of the men and materials of the commonwealth on a war basis; to uphold the federal and State governments and generally serve the cause of the nation in its prosecution of the war with Germany.

IT'S UP TO THE HOME.

How long will the homes of our country allow it to be said that the hotels and restaurants are doing far more in proportion than they in saving the foods which we must ship to our associates in the war if we are to win? This is a serious reflection upon the patriotism of our good people, and we do not believe they will willingly rest under it.

What the homes are doing in comparison with the public eating places can not be told as easily. The weekly report cards will show, in part, but the butcher's sales and the grocer's will furnish further figures. The interesting estimate is made by Mr. Bowman, chief of the hotels division of the Food Administration, that if the hotels and restaurants of the whole country save in the same proportion as those of New York, from this source alone the savings will furnish several shiploads of meat and wheat each week for our armies and allies.

What is the basis for comparison of saving in homes and in public eating places? Wholesale and retail dealers. For instance, one firm selling in several states to a great variety of trade reports the following decrease in Tuesday orders since the adoption of meatless days: In hotels, 30 per cent.; in restaurants, hospitals and institutions, 25 per cent.; in schools, 25 per cent.; to retail trade and homes, 12½ per cent. This puts duty up to the homes. Speed up that per cent.

Food conservation was the first great war measure to touch our American homes, but it has not touched them deeply enough yet. How about the meatless and wheatless days in your home?

If every citizen will take a personal interest in food conservation as it applies directly to the individual, a more intelligent and aggressive interest will be taken in the question as it affects the Nation. This will develop a vigorous public sentiment in support of those who favor checking the food speculator and hoarder and placing our food production and food distribution on a scientific basis.

Waste in the army camps will not excuse you from saving in your own home. No excuse will excuse you from doing your part, regardless of what others do. That is one of the first principles of ethics.

HERE AND THERE.

Br-r-r-r-r! Ugh! Br-r-r-r-r-r—
Zero weather. Cold house. Gas pressure short.
Hungry family. Anywhere in Indiana.
Bad—you say?

Well, perhaps it is. But it might be worse. Imagine your house shot full of holes by German guns. Your fuel supply absolutely shut off. No fire to cook with and nothing to cook if you had fire. Hungry family—maybe sick, too.

Anywhere in Belgium and in the devastated north of France you can find the real thing, of which we have not even had a suggestion here, except by the printed or spoken word.

There's only one way to prevent the European tragedy being staged in America. That is by co-operation, patriotic willingness to stand by the rules and regulations of the government, whose sole purpose, both in Indiana and the nation, is to win the war with as little of the sort of thing above referred to as is necessary.

The fellow who is kicking because the government will not let him indulge in extravagances, even though he has plenty of money to pay for them and wants to, is as much an enemy as Von Hindenburg. Snipe him!

ARE YOU DOING YOUR PART?

Tuesday is Meatless!

Wednesday is Wheatless!

Are you aware of the fact, and are you doing your part?

Or do you have a food conservation card in your window merely as camouflage for your patriotic neighbors?

These are pertinent questions. They call for an answer and an honest answer from every patriotic man and woman in Indiana.

Don't indulge in any explanations—for explanations will not keep our soldiers and our associates in the war from starving!

And an explanation only serves to make your position less tenable and more embarrassing.

So if you're not doing your duty on these days, now is the time to begin. And the only way to make amends is by doing it 100 per cent. every day until the stress is past.

Attention—County Councils

GENERAL BULLETIN NO. 84.

December 26, 1917.

To Each Member of the County Councils of Defense:

We are preparing a blank form to be furnished the County Councils on which they are to report weekly all of their activities. Certain of this information to be obtained will be of special interest to each of you and we want the blanks so prepared to be comprehensive enough to cover the ground. To that end, we will appreciate it if you will forward us by return mail any suggestions you care to make as to the blank forms which are now being prepared. Kindly give this preferred attention.

INDIANA STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE.
